S
978.6
H6m
Winter 2000

Montana Post

Montana Historical Society ·
Vol. 38 No. 4 • Winter 2000

From the Director

by Arnie Olsen

Tom Cook, photographer

I am encouraged by evidence of the population's growing passion for history and Montanans' desire to learn about our rich heritage. A recent travel industry survey indicated that 44 percent of the U.S. population participates in visiting historic sites and attractions. This was the number one activity reported! The same figures hold true for Montanans. Given the economic implications of this trend and the struggles of some traditional industries, the time is right to invest in our past, for our future. In Montana we have the "authentic American West," which has broad appeal and the potential to meet this growing demand. However, Montana's invaluable historic resources need attention, preparation to accommodate this growing interest, and a significant investment so that they can be sustained for generations to come. Now is the time for all of us who care for, or care about, preserving our past to speak with one voice supporting this investment.

There are several important new initiatives to watch closely that likely will be introduced in the upcoming Montana legislative session. The first is called "Future of the Past" and uses accommodation and rental car taxes to fund several programs annually: a community heritage grant program administered by the Montana Historical Society; a "Main Street Montana" program administered by the Department of Commerce; base needs of the Montana Heritage Commission (Virginia and Nevada cities), and the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial Commission; the Montana Historical Society, including the Moss Mansion in Billings, the Daly Mansion in Hamilton, and the Original Governor's Mansion; and historic state parks across the state.

Continued on page 6

Statewide Preservation Efforts Honored

The Historical Society's State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) biennially recognizes outstanding efforts of those who have worked to save and honor historic buildings and properties across Montana. It is a special event that draws together those who dedicate their energies to preserving the best of our collective past.

This year SHPO will award five preservation awards. The Governor's Special Award will be awarded to all Montanans in recognition of the completion of the Montana Capitol restoration. The SHPO Special Award will be presented to James R. McDonald, an architect who has worked in the field of historic preservation for over

continued on page 5

Tom Ferris, photographer

Workers place Driving of the Golden Spike in the capitol barrel vault. The painting was removed for conservation as part of the capitol restoration project.

Scriver Bronzes to be Exhibited at Society

The Museum will mount an inaugural exhibit in January celebrating the Society's acquisition of the Robert M. Scriver Collection last spring from the artist's widow, Lorraine Scriver of Browning. Due to the size of the collection (3,000-plus pieces) and the Society's limited temporary exhibit space, this first showing will unveil only a small portion of this outstanding assemblage of western art. Titled A Legacy in Bronze: The Sculpture of Robert M. Scriver, the exhibit will focus on the dynamic works for which the artist is

continued on page 5

Batch scan ID for 1963–2000

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 7494 2

■MONTANA CELEBRATES FIFTY YEARS—In 1951 the Montana Historical Society founded Montana The Magazine of Western History, to preserve, publish, and promote interest in the history of Montana. To commemorate fifty consecutive years of publication, the next four issues of the magazine will include special features commemorating this anniversary, in addition to the regular array of articles.

■SPORTS (AND HISTORY) TV—Montana history has been coming alive on cable TV's weekly state high school and college sports events thanks to Touch America and Omega Television Productions. Our Public Information Office worked with Omega to broadcast "Montana History Minutes," read by the Society's Research Historian Dave Walter and featuring topics from the importance of the railroad to Montana to the the construction of the Helena fire tower. The Society is also receiving statewide publicity for our Museum Store through a giveaway feature on the show.

■BAUMLER FILLS BIG SHOES—When the Society's good friend, historian and author Stephen Ambrose had a conflict and was unable to speak at the Governor's Conference on Civic Engagement in Great Falls, Interpretive Historian Ellen Baumler filled in. With the help of East Helena's Radley Elementary School teacher Karol Gustin, she presented a program on how history and historical signs can bring pride (and tourism) to a local community. The program featured the efforts of Gustin and her students, who had interviewed senior residents, scoured archives, and wrote about historic places in their community. With the help of a Learn and Serve Grant and the Montana Historical Society, ten permanent markers, written by the students, now interpret East Helena's history.

■BANNON RECEIVES GOVERNOR'S AWARD—Governor Marc Racicot named Mary Anne Bannon the Society's recipient of his Award for Excellence for 2000 on September 27, 2000. Mary, a fifteen-year Society veteran, is the agency's Payroll and Benefits Specialist. As he presented her with a plaque, Governor Racicot noted, "No one is more dependable and professional. Mary has maintained her great attitude, a strong service ethic, and her sense of humor despite the pressures of new projects. She epitomizes the ideal hardworking state employee."

Edie Witham, Helena Photography

Governor Marc Racicot presents Mary Anne Bannon (left) an Award for Excellence on September 27.

■SOMMERS SOCIETY INTERN—Erik Sommers, a history graduate of St. Johns University in Collegeville, Minnesota, worked at the Society through December under a special program sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, the national college history honor society. Sommers, who began his internship in June, worked primarily with the Montana Historical Society Press, fact checking a forthcoming biography of Jeannette Rankin and publicizing new releases. Phi Alpha Theta has awarded grants to the Montana Historical Society to support interns since 1996. Sommers is the sixth Phi Alpha Theta intern to work at the Society.

■SHPO OFFERS PROJECT GUIDANCE—The Montana State Historic Preservation Office held a workshop in Helena in August for those involved with helping to protect historic resources impacted by government projects. The workshop focused on recently revised federal regulations implementing Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA). As a follow up to the workshop, the State Historic Preservation Office has issued a new primary guidance document: Consulting with the Montana SHPO, which is available from the Preservation Office by calling (406) 444-7715 or e-mailing <mcarbis@state.mt.us>.

■IMPORTANT COMMUNITY PLACES MARKED—Robinson Park in Helena will soon have an interpretive marker explaining early use of the grounds as the town's first Catholic cemetery. The Montana Historical Society and Helena City Parks will install the marker to educate the public and encourage passive use of the park. At Missoula, Doug Toller and Scout Troup #1903 refurbished a historic railroad signal along a stretch of the old Milwaukee Road. With the approval of Missoula City Parks, the Montana Historical Society will place an interpretive marker at the signal. MHS Interpretive Historian Ellen Baumler assisted interested residents in both cities to promote their local history through signs. Those interested in learning more about interpreting community historic resources around Montana should contact Baumler at 406-444-1687 or via e-mail at ebaumler@state.mt.us.

Society Trustees Honor History Leaders and Educators

The Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees honored the Salish–Pend d'Oreille Cultural Committee and members of its Elders Advisory Committee, and noted Montana historian Michael Malone at the twenty-seventh annual history conference.

The Salish–Pend d'Oreille Cultural Committee was honored for its groundbreaking work to preserve the fabric of the tribes' history, culture, historic sites, and language, explained Society Trustee President Tom Foor.

Faced with the loss of their heritage, the elders recorded more than 700 tapes beginning in 1975, which became the core of one of the finest tribal oral-history archives in the nation. Under the direction of Johnny Arlee, then Clarence Woodcock, and now Tony Incashola, a host of committee members, staff, and advisors have continued to preserve and record their traditions for future generations.

Malone, who died in December 1999, co-authored Montana: A History of Two Centuries, which remains the standard text in the field. He never strayed from his roots in the history of Montana and the American West, explained Foor. As a member of the Board of Trustees and the Montana The Magazine of Western History editorial board, Malone served the Society from 1977 until the time of his death.

Board members also honored Renee Thorness Rasmusen of Chester, and Rose Goyen, Jeff Gruber, and Bob Malyevac of Libby with the Trustees' Education Award. All of the teachers are members of the Montana Heritage Project, sponsored by the Society, with funding support from the Liz Claiborne/Art Ortenberg Foundation.

The Trustees recognized these teachers for their efforts to involve students in the study and preservation of their local heritage.

The Montana Historical Society received nearly 4,700 donations from organizations, businesses, and individuals in 2000. All donations contribute to our understanding of Montana's past—but this year new arrivals were dominated by Lorraine Scriver's donation of her husband Robert's collections of art, artifacts, photographs, and archival materials—on a scale not witnessed by the Society since the F. J. Haynes collection during the late 1970s.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals: Brian Shovers, library (444-2681); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, photograph archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, museum (444-4711).

Abbott, Virginia
American Association of University Women, (Glendive, MT)
American Association of University Women, (Kalispell, MT)
American Association of University Women, Montana Division
American Philosophical Society
Association of Records Managers and Administrators, Big Sky Chapter
Axline, Jon
Baird, Dennis
Ballew Family Association
Bates, Grace
Bayley, Robert T.
Beach, Phil
Beacom, Seward E.
Bell, Ed
Berkman, Jay
Berry, Robert
Beyrau, John
Bigler, David
Binnema, Theodore
Bottomly, Jennifer
Brading, Dorothy
Bradshaw, Glenda and Stan
Brandenburg, David
Brander, Linda
Bruce, Louise
Brust, James
Burdett, Elizabeth B.
Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives
Cadby, John T.
Callant, Marcel
Calvi, Jim
Campbell, James
Cauble, R. S.
Christensen, Bonnie S.
Christiansen, Hattie
Churchill Family Collection: Gift of the descendants of David and Mary Churchill, from the estate of Wilbur W. "Bill" Kitterman
Clark Fork Cattlewomen
Clark, Robert M.
Cockhill, Brian
Collins, Kathy
Combest, Carolyn
Conn, Paul
Coombs, Marjorie
Cope, Leslie F.
Corak, Debbie
Cowboy Miner Productions
Cremer, Mimi McDonnell
Crow, Lynne Dusenberry
Cullen, Don
Current Topic Club (Helena, MT)
Curtis, William
Curtis, William H.
Custer Battlefield Museum
Darrow, Mr. and Mrs. George
Decker, Lynn
Delta Kappa Gamma Society, Alpha Mu
Derks, Donald
DesRosier, Fred
Dibbern, John
Dillin, Joseph M.
Dilworth, Harry B.
Doering, Dr. Walter
Dornbos, Fr. William
Dunn, Gary
Dwyer, Gene
Eastern Montana Historical Society
Edwards, Ernestine R.
Eklund, Linda M.
Erickson, Connie Flaherty
Erskine, Celia
Fehlig, Kathy
Feyhl, Ken
Fischer, Gay and Bob
Fitzmaurice, Donna
Fontes, Barbara A.
Fullerton, William on behalf of Edith Fullerton
Ganahl, Ginny
Garrett, Cecil R.
Gluckstal Colonies Research Association
Good, Jr., Col. and Mrs. W. K.
Graetz, Rick and Susie
Grandstreet Theater
Graves, Daniel W.
Great Falls Genealogy Society
Greene, Rae
Gryczan, Linda
Gustafson, Erik
Gustafson, R. W.
Hansen, Kay Hardin
Hassen, Leona
Heetderks, Dr. A.D.
Helming, Grace
Hill County Library (Havre, MT)
Hill, Arthur Copeland, bequest of, by Jeffrey P. McClanathan, personal representative
Holmes, J. D., by the family
Host, John R.
Howard, Dora
Imhoff, Chris
Independent Order of Odd Fellows/Rebekah Assemblies
Interior Columbia Basin Ecosystem Management Project
Island Landmarks (Burton, WA)
Jackson, Sue
James, Erica
Johnson, Carole
Johnson, Jeffery Alan
Jones, Roderick

---

Authors, Museum Leader Recognized at History Conference

Robert F. "Bob" Morgan, Society Trustee and Curator Emeritus of the Museum Program, was recognized for his lifelong devotion to preserving the history and culture of the Treasure State by the Museums Association of Montana (MAM), which presented Morgan the Yegen Award at the 2000 Montana History Conference in West Yellowstone. This award of achievement—named in honor of Peter Yegen, Jr., of Billings, a founder of the Yellowstone County Museum and MAM—is given in recognition of continued commitment to the museums of Montana.

Also awarded at the conference were the Burlingame-Toole Award for best student essay submitted to Montana The Magazine of Western History and the Paladin Award for best article published the previous year in Montana.

Named for preeminent Montana historians Merrill Burlingame and K. Ross Toole, the Burlingame-Toole Award was presented to Jeffrey Pearson, a master's degree candidate at the University of New Mexico, for his essay "Nelson A. Miles, Crazy Horse, and the Battle of Wolf Mountains."

Liping Zhu, Assistant Professor of History at Eastern Washington University–Cheney, won the Paladin Award, named for former editor of the magazine Vivian Paladin, for his Autumn 1999 article: "No Need to Rush: The Chinese, Placer Mining, and the Western Environment."

Tom Cook, photographer

Bob Morgan accepts the MAM award from Museum Services Director Sue Near.

Jones-Wallace, Roberta
Judge, Thomas
Karlyn, Rita
King, Esmer S.
Kinnick, Dee
Kinucan, Edith and Kenneth
Kleffner, Helen, In memory of, gift from her children
Kockler, Tom and Eloyce
Kohl, David
Kohl, Rebecca M.
Kooken, David R.
LaRock, Ethel
Larson, Louis D. J.
Layeux, Tim
Leahy, Ellen Lebien, Emerson
Lee, Michael H.
Leuthold, John H.
Lewis and Clark Genealogy Society
Lewistown Public Library
Lierson, Barbara
Linderman, Charles R.
Lippman, Lloyd
Long, Jesse
Lytle, Marsha E.
MacKay, Dorothy L.
Madden, Katheryn
Maloughney, Dan
Markell, Virginia
Marshall, Virginia
Maynard, Don
McCaffree, Nancy
McGee, Warren
McKinney, Amy
Meinke, Dorothy
Momberg, Clifton K.
Montana Congress of PTA
Montana Democratic Party
Montana Heritage Project, Broadwater High School (Townsend, MT)
Montana Heritage Project, Chester High School
Montana Heritage Project, Corvallis High School
Montana Heritage Project, Roundup High School
Montana Historic Quilt Project
Montana Heritage Project, Simms High School
Montana Human Rights Network
Montana Power Company
Montana Rural Letter Carrier's Association
Montana Tech College of Technology of The University of Montana, Library
Mooney, Philip E.
Morgan, Robert F. and Genevieve
Morgus, Greg Mulvaney, Tom
Munger, Mary
Museum of History and Industry (Seattle, WA)
Museum of North Idaho
Mutschler, Charles
Near, Susan R.
Ness, Howard
Noble, Bruce
Nolan, Edward O'Connor, Viola
Olson, Mary Jo
Otto, Kathryn
Parenti, Ruth
Paulsen, H. Lee
Pease, Frank
Penrod, Sandra
Perry, Charlotte
Quie, Gretchen
Reinemer, Lois
Richardson, Barbara
Riersgard, Kenneth E.
Riley, Larry and Dianna
Rorvik, Shirley A.
Rossillon, Mitzi
Rustebakke, Dorothy Saarinen, Todd
Sawyer, Stacy
Schwartz, Joe
Scriver, Lorraine
Senn, Barbara
Sensiba, Eric
Shadle, Sharon
Smith, Naomi
Smith, Ruth Cummings
Smith, Stephen
Space, Judith
Spaulding, Charleen
Sperry, Janet
Spiegelman, Charlene L.
Stange, Doug
State Historical Society of Wisconsin
Stenzel, Mrs. Franz
Stephens, Emily Stewart
Stoner, Jon
Strand, Todd
Stubblefield, Ellen
Sullivan, Gerlad D.
Swanberg, Robert
Taylor, Bill and Janice
Taylor, Dolores
Thompson, Jennifer
Tibbott, Sarah
Toler, Virginia
Toomey, David F.
Trask, Hazel
United States Bureau of Reclamation
United States Environmental Protection Association, Region 8
United States Post Office, Warehouse (Billings, MT)
University of Idaho
University of Montana
University of Montana, K. Ross Toole Archives
University of New Mexico, Center for Southwest Research
Van Campen, Bonnie
Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 1087 (Great Falls, MT)
Violette, F. E.
Visborg, Dee
Walter, Dave
Western Rendezvous of Art
Western Security Bank (Helena, MT)
White, Faye
White, Thain,
Wilson, John
Wojcik, Michelle
Wood, Doris
Wyoming Community College
Wyoming State Archives
Yearout, Lewis
Yegan Jr., Peter
Zellick, Anna

Washington Foundation Underwrites Expenses for History Scholars

The Dennis and Phyllis Washington Foundation once again partnered with the Montana Historical Society to promote Montana history research and writing on the college level. At Montana History 2000 the Foundation underwrote two sessions of college-level presentations: "Showcasing Montana History Scholars" and "Showcasing Montana Tribal-College History Scholars."

The Washington Foundation has underwritten all expenses for the college scholars to attend the conference since 1999. In addition, the Foundation grants the "Washington Foundation Award for Historical Excellence" and a $1,000 scholarship to each student-presenter.

News from the Montana Historical Society Press

Nez Perce Summer, 1877: The U.S. Army and the Nee-Me-Poo Crisis, by Jerome A. Greene, published by the Montana Historical Society Press in October 2000, has already attracted national attention. Library Journal has called the book "a comprehensive, well-researched, and well-written study," and both History Book Club and Military Book Club have decided to feature the title as an alternate selection. Nez Perce Summer, 1877, retails for $49.95.

Guide to Historic Hamilton, by Chere Jiusto, the fourth volume of the Montana Mainstreets series, was published in November 2000 with support from the Montana Cultural Trust. The volume reviews Hamilton's history and architecture from the community's origin as an Anaconda Copper Mining Company lumber town through its apple boom years to its role in the battle against Rocky Mountain tick fever. Other communities featured in the series are Virginia City in southwest Montana, Glendive in eastern Montana, and Lewistown in central Montana. Mainstreet guides sell for $6.95.

All MHS Press books are available in bookstores, or from the Museum Store by calling 1-800-243-9900 (shipping charges additional).

Historical Society Hosts Archaeology Week Program

Patricia Spencer, photographer

Helena-area students watch a flint knapping demonstration.

Despite snow and cold weather, more than 125 elementary and middle school students from Montana City and Helena joined the Montana Historical Society's State Historic Preservation staff (SHPO), agency representatives, and volunteers on the Society lawn for a day of archeological demonstrations and exhibits. Steve Platt of the Montana Department of Transportation and Dale Herbort of the Department of Environmental Quality demonstrated flint knapping while Terry Godin (SHPO) explained the contents of Fish, Wildlife and Park's traveling Plains Indian education trunk. Volunteers Troy Helmick, John Stoner, Jim Ray, and others demonstrated use of the atlatl. Patrick Rennie from the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation explained his ongoing study of fire-cracked rock as it occurs during stone boiling or hearth cooking. The biggest hit of the day was Melvin Beattie's primitive fire-starting demonstrations using hand and bow drills under adverse weather conditions. Archaeology Week traditionally is held in the third week of September each year.

Free Archaeology Week 2000 posters, "Explorers, Trappers and Traders," are still available by contacting Marlene Carbis at the State Historic Preservation Office, 406-444-7715 or mcarbis@state.mt.us.

Magazine Editor Heads to Oklahoma

Charles E. Rankin, Director of Publications at the Montana Historical Society since 1989, left the Society to become Assistant Director and Editor-in-Chief at the University of Oklahoma Press in Norman. Before coming to the Society, Rankin taught English, journalism, and history at the University of New Mexico and at Colorado State University. "Chuck made great contributions to the Society and Montana history," Society Director Arnie Olsen said. "We will miss him and wish him well."

During Rankin's tenure as Director of Publications, Montana The Magazine of Western History's excellence was widely acknowledged and received several honors, including the Western Historical Society's Ray A. Billington Award in 1991; Western Heritage Wrangler Awards from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in 1992, 1993, and 1995; the Western Historical Society's Arrell M. Gibson Award in 1999; and a Western Writers of America Spur Award in 2000. In addition, Rankin expanded the Montana Historical Society Press from a press that published only occasional books to one that publishes five books a year.

Preservation continued from page 1

twenty years. The Preservation Volunteer Award recognizes John Stoner, a volunteer with the Helena National Forest and the Broadwater County Museum, for his lifelong dedication to the preservation of historic properties. The Outstanding Preservation Project Award recognizes the owners of the Grand Union Hotel in Fort Benton, Montana, and the 2001 Community Action Award will go to the community of Colstrip, for its efforts to save and restore their oldest existing schoolhouse.

At the awards ceremony, held on January 23, 2001 at 6 p.m. at the Capitol, Governor Judy Martz will also present SHPO certificates of registration to those owners whose properties have been listed in the National Register of Historic Places during the past two years.

Scriver continued from page 1

so well known. The show will feature samples of the three major categories of bronzes Scriver is most readily identified with—Native American life, rodeo cowboys, and Montana wildlife. In addition to the bronzes, the exhibit will include representative samplings of wax and clay models in progress, as well as numerous photographs documenting the artist's life and career. The public premier of the exhibit will be held all day on January 27, 2001, at the Society. Please join us! Call 406-444-4710 for more information.

New Faces at MHS

- The Education Office has hired Delight Sullivan as the new Volunteer Coordinator. For the past year she has served the Society as a tour guide at the Capitol and the Original Governor's Mansion.
- Terrence Godin became the newest member of the Historic Preservation program, taking the place of Phil Melton in the role of SHPO Cultural Records Manager.
- Barbara Maxwell joined the Society in September as the Director's Administrative Assistant and Membership Specialist.
- In September the Society hired Ramona Jacobson as the Museum Store's Assistant Manager. Jacobson continues to work half time in the Centralized Services Division and half time in the store.
- Centralized Services recently hired Laura Hoyt as Accounting Technician and Doreen Boyer, who replaces Dawn Brewer as the Society's Accountant.

History 2000 a Success

Montana History 2000, the Society's twenty-seventh annual history conference, was held in West Yellowstone on October 12–14. "The Lure of the Parks" showcased Montana, regional, and national historians and authors. Yellowstone National Park provided the perfect backdrop to explore the history, literature, and interpretation of our state and national parks. The twenty-eighth annual Montana History Conference will be held in Helena on October 25–27, 2001.

Director continued from page 1

Another initiative to accomplish these same goals will propose a "Trust within a Trust," establishing a permanent trust account for history much like the current coal trusts for state parks and the arts. Another approach considers borrowing a large amount ($40 million) from the Coal Tax Trust Fund to meet historic infrastructure needs for Virginia and Nevada cities, historic state parks, and the various state-owned mansions. It would also fund an initial planning grant to work towards getting a badly needed new Montana Historical Society building. The Society is bulging at the seams, especially with the addition of the Bob Scriver collection and is the only agency in state government still in the same building it has occupied since 1951! This initiative would also fund a one-time amount for local communities' heritage projects including those with a Lewis and Clark emphasis. The same types of funding sources as those proposed for the "Future of the Past" are being considered as payback for the loan. Finally, there is an initiative for a new Montana license plate to benefit the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial efforts.

There are several points of debate that will surface as legislators consider these issues: What is the best way to fund and care for our history and heritage? Who should pay for preserving Montana's history? Should residents pay, or should they get rebates on new taxes so that only nonresidents pay for preserving our history? How much should be free versus paid for by user fees? Should perpetual funding be established, or do we need a large one-time infusion of dollars, or both? How important is heritage and tourism to our economy? Are we willing to invest in it as we have in other industries?

These are exciting times for Montana's history and heritage, and I hope you all get involved and make sure your voice is heard.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Life on the Upper Missouri: The Art of Karl Bodmer," Northeast Gallery, through 2002 |
| | "A Legacy in Bronze: The Sculpture of Robert M. Scriver," Montana Reflections Gallery and Lobby |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art |

Special Events

Friends Lecture Series: Boo Auditorium, 10:30–11:30 A.M.

| | |
|---|---|
| January 17 | Ellen Baumler, "Evolution of the Reeder's Alley Neighborhood" |
| February 21 | Jack Lepley, "Birthplace of Montana: A History of Fort Benton" |
| April 18 | Kim Allen Scott, "Apocalypse Then: The 1864 War against the Sioux" |

March Lecture Series: Boo Auditorium, 12:00–1:00 P.M.

| | |
|---|---|
| March 7 | To be announced |
| March 14 | Mae Nan Ellingson, "Women's Involvement in the Second Constitutional Convention" |
| March 21 | Frederick Allen, "Montana's Vigilantes and the Origins of 3-7-77" |
| March 28 | Mary Murphy, "Picturing Montana: Photographs from the Great Depression" |

---

| | |
|---|---|
| June 24–30 | History Camp for Kids, Virginia City |
| July 8–11 | History Camp for Educators, Virginia City |
| October 25–27 | Montana History Conference, Helena |

Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5, closed Sunday and holidays. |
| Library/Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Open by appointment only January through March. Open April through Memorial Day, Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5.Tours begin on the hour, last tour at 4. |
| Capitol | January to Labor Day, Monday–Friday, 9–5, Saturday & Sunday, 12–5 |

To arrange guided group tours or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • www.montanahistoricalsociety.org
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Martha Kohl; Associate Editor: Patricia Spencer; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620
Address Service Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
P A I D
Permit No. 151
Great Falls, MT 59405

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JAN 1 1 2001
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
Sum/Fall 2000

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0016 2629 3

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 38 No. 2-3 • Summer/Fall 2000

From the Director

by Arnie Olsen

Tom Cook, photographer

Arnie Olsen

A year as director of the Montana Historical Society convinces me: Montanans love their history and our visitors are drawn to it in a powerful way. I stand in awe of this state's curiosity about, and persistence in, wanting to preserve the 13,000-year heritage of this High Plains/Rocky Mountain world, shared by many cultures.

But deep as our love of Montana's past runs, sometimes I think we each get caught up in seeing just a slice of the past or just a slice of the process by which history is understood and saved. Preservation of sites or buildings alone can lead to a hollow history. So, I want to talk a bit about "wholes."

Think for a moment of your own parents, grandparents, or someone else you love whose memory you would like to keep alive. Then think of how someone 100 years from now might be able to appreciate and truly understand the life of the person you cherish. If, by some miracle, everything associated with that person—homes, furniture, clothing, diaries, photographs, video and audio tapes, libraries, correspondence, work records, recipes, jokes, crafts, calendars, "to do" lists—survived, think how well historians and interpreters of the future could present your ancestors. That person could become, in the eyes of listeners or readers, alive and complete.

Montana thankfully and rightfully focuses on its heritage. We need to preserve representations from all the materials—the information, the artifacts, the photographs, the records, as well as the sites—to show our heirs a faithful representation of the past and of our times.

Second, to accomplish the goal of pre-

continued on page 5

West Yellowstone Hosts History 2000

The 27th annual Montana History Conference, "Montana History 2000 'The Lure of the Parks,'" will be held in West Yellowstone on October 12-14. The conference will focus on Yellowstone, our first national park, and on other national and state park resources in Montana. Speakers include Yellowstone National Park archivist Lee Whittlesey, authors Chris Magoc and Diane Smith, Nez Perce historian W. Otis Halfmoon, and William Everhart, former assistant director of the National Park Service.

Thursday will feature a full-day workshop on teaching with historic places and two half-day workshops on photograph management and historical characters.

Friday will feature sessions on: photographic and other images of the park; human adaptation to Yellowstone and park ecology; medicine wheels; Chippewa-Cree and Montana tribal college issues; the status of state heritage resources; Lieutenant

continued on page 4

Tom Ferris, photographer

Among the stunning Bob Scriver sculptures donated to the Montana Historical Society was Symbol of the Pros, which was mounted on the northeast side of the Society building on June 27.

Society Offers New Memberships

This past summer, Society staff analyzed our membership structure and rates in comparison with comparable state historical societies. Based on that analysis, Society Trustees adopted several changes at their July meeting. The changes, due to take effect January 1, 2001, raise basic membership rates from $24 to $29 and increase the first category of special member rates from $48 to $60.

Other increases include:

| | |
|---|---|
| •Friend of the Society | $60.00 |
| •Contributing Explorer | $100.00 |
| •Supporting Prospector | $200.00 |
| •Sponsoring Homesteader | $400.00 |
| •Big Medicine Patron | $800.00 |
| •Heritage Benefactor/ Corporate | $1,000.00 |

The Society will also offer new benefits and premiums to all special member categories as incentives based on the level of generosity.

"We were overdue for revamping our membership framework," said Society Director Arnie Olsen. "Printing and mailing costs have increased substantially in recent years, even while we have improved the quality of Montana The Magazine of Western History." Olsen noted that special member donations support the Society's educa-

continued on page 6

Donor Aids McGee Collection Work

The Northern Pacific Railway Historical Association, during its annual meeting in July, presented $7,500 to the Montana Historical Society. This was the second installment of a $15,000 gift. The money is being used to preserve and catalog the McGee Railroad Collection.

In November 1997, Warren and Bernice McGee donated photographs, printed material, manuscripts, memorabilia, and ephemera, primarily on the Northern Pacific Railroad (and other railways), the Bozeman trail, the history of Livingston, and other historical topics to the Society. Warren McGee worked for the Northern Pacific Railway, and later the Burlington Northern, for forty years during which time he photographed and recorded information about railroads across the United States.

The McGee Collection includes more than 30,000 photographic images, which are being organized by Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, a historical projects consultant from Helena. Thompson is transferring the negatives and prints to archival-quality envelopes and sleeves. She is also cataloging each image and entering the information into an Access database. The photograph collection will be available for use by researchers within two years.

"The McGee Collection is remarkable for many reasons," said Society photo archives supervisor Lory Morrow, "but especially for its sheer volume of material and the itemized documentation for every image, from 1936 to the present."

McGee Collection

Milwaukee Road Engine #164 (above), twelve miles west of Lewistown in 1946

Montana to Feature Joe De Yong, Grinnell

MONTANA
The Magazine of Western History

Montana's cowboy artist Charlie Russell might never have imagined the influence he would have in Hollywood in the years following his death in 1926. Legendary film director Cecil B. DeMille and others produced a number of now classic westerns which, because of Charlie Russell's protégé Joe de Yong, carried the classic Russell "look," from Indian costuming and cowboy gear to boardwalks and street scenes.

How Russell's influence came to life on the silver screen is the subject of an article by historian and Hollywood screenwriter Dan Gagliasso in the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Historian Sherry Smith details the career and contributions of turn-of-the-century writer and historian George Bird Grinnell. Grinnell, whose name today adorns a mountain peak in Glacier National Park, chronicled like few others the history of Indian life and culture at the turn of the century.

In addition, Tomas Jaehn tells of the brief but unique experiences of German prisoners of war as farm laborers in Montana and Idaho during World War II, and Steve Cox illustrates the power of place in the story of his father's work in the oil pipeline business in and around Glendive in the early 1950s. Ken Cox, who had alluring career opportunities from oil giant Texaco, nonetheless preferred the strong community life and friendship he found in what to others was an out-of-the-way place.

Also for Autumn, Michael Harrigan, author of a best-selling novel on the Alamo, considers the role of history in writing fiction, and retired Montana history professor Jeffrey Safford takes a light-hearted look at the names prospectors affixed to their mining lodes.

McFarland Center Now Open

The McFarland Center, completed last fall to care, maintain, and catalog the 400,000 artifacts of Virginia and Nevada Cities, was made possible by a grant from Ruth McFarland in memory of her late husband C. Lee McFarland. The center's exhibit is open to the public seven days a week from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.

Pat Roath, a recently returned third generation Montanan, has taken the position of curator of collections at the McFarland Curatorial Center in Virginia City. She worked with two interns this summer to begin to clean, identify, accession, register, and inventory Virginia City artifacts.

Roath will also work with concessionaires to record historical items in their shops. Roath, who received her bachelor's and master's degrees at North Dakota State University, Fargo, has been curator of costume for the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte and assistant curator with Indiana University's Elizabeth Sage Historic Costume Collection in Bloomington.

To make an appointment to tour the center, call Pat Roath at (406) 843-5441.

Spencer, Hampton, Moritz Join Society

Patricia Spencer, a native Montanan, is the Society's new coordinator for community outreach and Ellen Baumler's assistant with the National Register Sign Program. Spencer holds a bachelor's degree in history and international relations from Carroll College and a master's degree in English literature and twentieth-century social history from Oregon State University.

Kathryn Hampton joined the State Historic Preservation Office as the National Register of Historic Places Program Coordinator in July. She received her master's degree in history from the University of Montana in 1997 and for six years was research historian with a Missoula-based cultural resource consulting firm. Most recently she worked as an archives technician in the K. Ross Toole Archives at the UM Mansfield Library.

Hampton replaces Chere Jiusto, who became State Historic Preservation's Community Historic Surveyor and Liaison with local preservation officers and efforts.

Rick Moritz is the Society's new Education Outreach Coordinator. He holds a bachelor's degree in history and geography from Metropolitan State College, Denver, and a master's degree from the University of Colorado, Denver, in communications. He worked for the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad for twenty-one years and has been an adjunct communication instructor at a number of community colleges. He will be an adjunct instructor at Carroll College in Helena this fall.

New Society Trustees Named

Governor Marc Racicot recently appointed Burton Bosch of Havre and Tim Fox of Helena as new members of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees.

Bosch, a 1955 graduate of the UM School of Law, has spent forty-four years practicing law in Havre. He is senior partner in the law firm Bosch, Kuhr, Dugdale, Martin, and Kaze.

Tim Fox, a 1987 graduate of the UM School of Law, is vice president and counsel of Mountain West Banks and a past administrator of the Montana Department of Environmental Quality.

Bosch and Fox replace Jack Burke of Butte and Jack Hayne of Dupuyer, who both retired, on the fifteen-member board. Tom Foor, a UM anthropology professor, will succeed Burke as board president.

Ana Brenden of Scobey was reappointed to another five-year term. "Jack Burke and Jack Hayne have been mainstays on the board for many years," Society Director Arnie Olsen said. "Their contributions to Montana history and heritage have been enormous, particularly in the efforts to save historic Virginia and Nevada cities for our posterity. They will be greatly missed."

Alive @ 5 in July

The Montana Historical Society participated in Downtown Helena's "Alive @ 5" series in July as part of the "Fabulous '40s on Fuller." Helena's past includes the grim years of a world war and the euphoric peace and prosperity that followed.

Community outreach specialist Patricia Spencer exhibited copies of Helena newspapers and historic photographs from that era. Author Gerald Sullivan talked about and signed copies of his new book, Helena '45: A Collection of Memory Lint. Sullivan, Montana State University professor emeritus and author of thirteen books, said, "Helena '45 is the culmination of a life-long dream to tell the stories about hometown roots."

Downtown Helena offers special entertainment for residents each Wednesday during the summer.

Tom Ferris, photographer

The Lightning Bay Drum Group from Ronan High School (foreground) contributes to the Big Medicine celebration at the Society on May 4.

Society, Elders Honor Big Medicine

The white buffalo known as Big Medicine, one of the Society's most popular and honored exhibits for more than forty years, has a new setting. In May, the Society celebrated Big Medicine's 67th birthday with day-long activities that featured a new exhibit to better interpret the white buffalo's spiritual importance and place in Montana history. A background mural by Helena artist Bob Morgan depicts Big Medicine's home on the National Bison Range on the Flathead Reservation.

The day's events included prayers by elders of the Salish and Kootenai tribes, Vic Charlo, a Bitterroot Salish, discussed the importance of bison to native people and the sacred role of Big Medicine, birthday cake, the Lightning Bay drum group, and dancers from Ronan High School.

After Big Medicine's death, sculptor and taxidermist Bob Scriver of Browning, molded a standing mannequin on which the hide was mounted. Montana Governor Donald Nutter then dedicated the Society's exhibit on July 13, 1961.

Wolle Drawings Donated to Society

The E. V. and Emily Arnaud family has given four original drawings by Muriel Sibell Wolle to the Montana Historical Society Museum in memory of H. T. Buswell. The drawings depict saloons in Marysville, the Parrot Smelter on the Jefferson River, Chico and Emigrant Peak, and Rimini and Red Mountain.

These drawings are from her book Montana Pay Dirt: A Guide to the Mining Camps of the Treasure State.

Wolle was a Brooklyn-born artist/writer with a fascination for ghost towns in the American West. She attended the New York School of Fine and Applied Art and New York University prior to moving to Boulder, Colorado, where she became head of the University of Colorado art department. Wolle, who died in 1977, wrote several books that included her sketches and was considered an expert on western ghost towns.

Archaeology Week to Focus on Prehistoric Technology Sept. 17–23

The Montana Historical Society will join other federal, state, and local agencies to celebrate Archaeology Week September 17-23. The Society will host demonstrations of prehistoric technology and archaeology on the front lawn. All ages are urged to attend, including school groups. Society archaeologists and other professionals from the area will be on hand. For state information contact Steve Platt at (406) 444-0455 or for Helena events, contact Stan Wilmoth at (406) 444-7719.

To receive a free Archaeology Week 2000 poster, "Explorers, Trappers, and Traders" ask to be put on the mailing list by contacting the Montana Historical Society's Historic Preservation Office at (406) 444-7715 or e-mail <mcarbis@ state.mt.us>.

Bozeman Trail Diaries Available from MHS Press

The Montana Historical Society Press has released Journeys to the Land of Gold: Emigrant Diaries from the Bozeman Trail, 1863–1866, edited by Susan Badger Doyle, with a foreword by Charles E. Rankin, and an afterword by Elliott West.

The result of ten long years of research, Journeys to the Land of Gold presents the known eyewitness accounts of the Bozeman's Trail's civilian emigrants: twenty-four diaries written during the journey and nine reminiscences prepared afterward. The accounts, fully reproduced with extensive annotation and detailed maps, describe life on the West's last great emigrant trail—a shortcut from the Platte River Road to the Montana goldfields—from 1863 to 1866, after which the route was closed by "Red Cloud's War." Most of the accounts have never been published, and sixteen of them—almost half—are from the Montana Historical Society's collection.

Doyle will speak in Missoula at the Festival of the Book, and in Helena, Bozeman, Livingston, Billings, Miles City, Hardin, Sheridan, Wyoming, and other communities in mid-September. The lectures are part of the Society's "Authors on the Road" series, which is dedicated to providing public programming and educational events to communities across Montana. Call (406) 444-7721 or e-mail <pspencer@state.mt.us> for a schedule.

Journeys to the Land of Gold—864 oversized pages and cloth-bound in a two-volume, boxed set—will retail for $95.00, at local bookstores or through the Montana Historical Society Museum Store by calling 1-800-243-9900 (shipping additional.)

Two Other Books Also Published

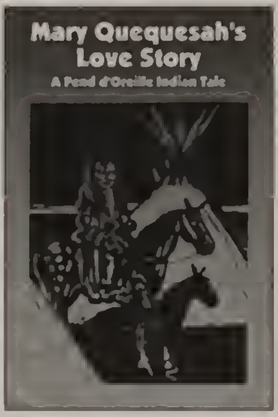
Nez Perce
Summer
1877



Two new books from the Montana Historical Society Press examine life on the nineteenth-century frontier—but from very different perspectives.

Written by one of the foremost experts in frontier military history and reviewed by members of the Nez Perce tribe, Nez Perce Summer, 1877: The U.S. Army and the Nee-Me-Poo Crisis, examines the successive armed encounters between U.S. Army troops and a desperate body of Nez Perces during the long summer of 1877. A meticulously researched narrative, this 576-page, definitive history of the Nez Perce War chronicles a people's epic struggle to survive spiritually, culturally, and physically in the face of unrelenting military force. Sixteen maps detail troop and Indian movements and skirmishes, while forty-nine photographs further illuminate this dramatic conflict.

Mary Quequesah's Love Story: A Pend d'Oreille Indian Tale, told by Pete Beaverhead, is the third title in the children's book series copublished by Montana Historical Society Press and Salish Kootenai College Press. Elegant woodcuts by noted Native American artist Dwight BilleDeaux accompany this intriguing story from the buffalo era, which, while written at a fifth-grade reading level, speaks to readers of all ages.

Both books will be available at local bookstores or through the Montana Historical Society Museum Store by calling 1-800-243-9900.

History Conference continued from page 1

Gustavus Cheyney Doane; evolution of the Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument; and western novels and heros. William Everhart will speak on some colorful characters in the park's history following the annual awards banquet.

Saturday will begin with the Bradley Breakfast and Yogi Bear cartoons and then turn to sessions on: famous dogs in Montana history; jerks in Montana history; the Nez Perce in Yellowstone; stagecoach history; and national park architecture. There will be tours to Quake Lake, Fort Yellowstone, and hydrothermal and historic sites, a walking tour of West Yellowstone, and early movies of Yellowstone. A closing reception will feature President Theodore Roosevelt's travels in Montana.

Call (406) 444-4794 for information or a registration brochure.

Four-horse coach at Old Faithful Inn, 1903

MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

Bradley Fellows Study Metcalf, State Fairs

Dr. Brant Short, Associate Professor at the Northern Arizona University School of Communication, is this year's Senior Bradley Fellowship winner. Dr. Short will examine the political legacy of Senator Lee Metcalf and Metcalf's role in shaping conservation and environmental issues in the 1950s and 1960s.

Douglas M. Edwards received the James H. Bradley Graduate Research Fellowship for this year. Edwards, a doctoral candidate from the University of Maryland, will consider how fairs and exhibitions in Montana reflected the way people reacted to modernization.

After four weeks of research at the Society, Bradley fellows submit articles based on their research for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History and receive $2,500 stipends.

This was the fifteenth year that the Society has made Bradley research fellowships available.

Susan Doyle to Speak on Bozeman Trail in Lecture Series

The Friends of the Society Lecture Series will start again in September and run through May. The Friends meet every third Wednesday of the month at 10:30 in the Boo Auditorium. Susan Badger Doyle, the first of the speakers on September 20, will discuss the use of diaries in history and on her book about the Bozeman Trail emigrants, Journeys to the Land of Gold, newly released from the Montana Historical Society Press.

The October 18 lecture will feature the newly acquired Robert Scriver Collection. Society staff will give tours of Scriver items currently warehoused and explain the significance of the collection.

On November 15, Society archivist and oral historian Jodie Foley will speak of the life of Mary Gleim, Missoula's notorious murderous madam. For information call Kristin Gallas at (406) 444-4794.

Tom Ferris, photographer

Activities at the Montana Historical Society abounded this summer, including a special day for children to hone their painting skills (above on July 6) with Helena artist Bob Morgan.

History Camp Is Summer Success

The second annual Montana History Camp for Kids and the first annual Montana History Camp for Educators were held this summer at Virginia City.

In June, seventh and eighth grade students from across the state plunged into Montana history for six days to experience blacksmithing, gold mining, and preservation. They even restaged the trial of the 1930 Harrison Bank robbers.

In July, educators from across the state gathered in Virginia City to acquire skills and new information for teaching in their communities. They studied architecture, primary sources, cemeteries, and crafts such as blacksmithing.

Next year, History Camp for Kids will be held July 24-30 and History Camp for Educators, July 8-11, 2001. For information call (406) 444-4794.

Missoula District Listed on Register

The residential University Area Historic District is to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The district is made up of 451 main buildings, 351 of which contribute to the neighborhood's historic character.

Built between 1887 and 1940, single homes in the neighborhood range in architecture from Queen Anne to Colonial to Craftsman to Tudor Revival. A number of turn-of-the-twentieth-century row-house apartment buildings also complement what will be Missoula's seventh historic district.

For information on register designation call Kate Hampton at (406) 444-3647.

Website Up and Running

To access the Montana Historical Society website, please use:

montanahistoricalsociety.org,
montanahistoricalsociety.com,
or montanahistory.org

This address was changed earlier this year and is now fully up and running.

The Stewardship of History—from the Director,

continued from page 1

serving our past, we need a "whole" team of people and players. To save a widely representative collection of art, artifacts, photographs, records, books, cultural memories, traditions, buildings, and sites, we need local historical societies, a state historical society, state parks, local preservation officers, federal agency archaeologists, homeowners, businessmen, teachers, county museums, tribal cultural committees, other organizations and people. Each of us can accomplish work that other team members cannot. We need each other to be strong and active.

For instance, there is no way that the Society, the state's official repository of many historic artifacts, records, and books, can save ALL important things from the past. We try to preserve representative "wholes." But we are delighted at the growing and professional efforts of local museums and historical societies that preserve a wide range of artifacts and material. Thank goodness for teachers who tackle the mysteries and ethics of archaeology and tribal cultural committees that preserve oral traditions and promote traditional crafts.

Future funding initiatives must allow for the housing, stewardship, and interpretation of a rich heritage of Montana as a whole without a single focus on sites alone. Our past is too important to remember only the sites or buildings where our history occurred. We need to work hard to keep all our history vibrant, accurate, and "whole."

Society Librarian Bob Clark Retires

Montana Historical Society librarian Bob Clark, who served the Society as librarian for twenty-two years, retired in June.

Born in upstate New York, Clark was raised in Virginia City, Nevada. He received his bachelor's degree from Stanford University with a minor in American history and a major in English. He received his master's degree from the University of Nevada, Reno, and taught freshman composition and English. He also received a master's degree in librarianship from the University of Denver.

In 1973, Clark completed editing begun by his father, Walter Van Tilburg Clark, on the three-volume Journals of Alfred Doren 1894-1902. Prior to coming to the Society, Clark was director of the White Pine County Public Library in Ely, Nevada.

Memberships, continued from page 1

tion and outreach programs. "Our educational services, our tours, school curriculum materials, youth history camps, and lecture series are so important that we must expand our membership and increase member support. In the absence of state revenues for education we need to alert our members to a crisis in our educational funding."

Current members may renew at existing rates until January 1, 2001. "We urge special members to remember that much of their membership fee is a tax-deductible contribution that benefits heritage work powerfully and directly," noted Olsen. "If you are interested in helping to preserve and interpret Montana's historic resources and are not yet a special member, please call (406) 444-4706, e-mail us at <aolsen@state.mt.us> or drop us a line and we will introduce you to the rewards of Society membership."

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Life on the Upper Missouri: The Art of Karl Bodmer," Northeast Gallery, through 2002 |
| | "A Capital Capitol," Montana Reflections Gallery, through December 31, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art |

Special Events

Friends Lectures at 10:30 in the Boo Auditorium, free to public:

| | |
|---|---|
| September 20 | Susan Badger Doyle, "Using Diaries in History" |
| October 18 | Montana Historical Society Staff, Scriver Collection and tour |
| November 15 | Jodie Foley, "Life of Mary Gleim" |

| | |
|---|---|
| September 17-23 | Montana Archaeology Week, events on Society lawn, Helena. For information call (406) 444-7719. |
| September 18 | Larry Lahren, "Anzick Site," 7:00 P.M., Boo Auditorium, in conjunction with Montana Archaeology Week |
| September 20 | Susan Badger Doyle, "Journeys to the Land of Gold," 7:00 P.M., Boo Auditorium |
| October 12–14 | Montana History Conference, West Yellowstone |
| July 24-30, 2001 | History Camp for Kids, Virginia City |
| July 8-11, 2001 | History Camp for Educators, Virginia City |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5, closed Sunday and holidays. |
| Library/Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | September 5–December 31: Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. Closed January through March. |
| Capitol | Tours Saturday and Sunday only, 12–5. Tours begin on the hour. Last tour begins at 4. During Legislature, tours will run 7 days a week. |

To arrange guided group tours or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.montanahistoricalsociety.com
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Service Requested

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

SEP 1 5 2000

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 151
Great Falls, MT 59405

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
Vol.38 no.1
Spring 2000

Montana Post

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAY 2 3 2000
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 38 No. 1 • Spring 2000

From the Director

by Arnie Olsen

Tom Cook, photographer

Arnie Olsen

News of the Montana Historical Society's acquisition of the Bob Scriver collection probably took your breath away—as it certainly did mine. Not since acquisition of the Mackay collection of Charlie Russell art in 1952 has there been so much excitement. With Lorraine Scriver's donation of her husband's collections to the Society, Montanans, the State, and the region have realized a decade-old dream of preserving the work and collections of Robert M. Scriver, an amazing twentieth-century artist, taxidermist, and student of history and cultures. Her gift puts to rest the threat that Montana's historic and artistic treasures will leave the state.

On behalf of the Society, I want most to express heartfelt thanks to Mrs. Scriver. Facing the recent loss of her husband and the enormous responsibility of finding a sound way to preserve his legacy and memory, she had to consider many choices. We are indebted to her for offering this extraordinary donation so generously.

The Scriver collection also came into public ownership because of the commitment of the Provincial Museum of Alberta and the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation to preserving, exhibiting, and interpreting portions of the collection for the Society as part of a new consortium. No single institution could reasonably have handled this whole collection. Together, we can.

I am especially grateful for the leadership and partnership that the Province of Alberta and our counterparts at the Provincial Museum in Edmonton provided. As the Scriver family knew, the history of this region and of the Indian cultures was not historically bound by

continued on page 4

Scriver Collection Comes to Society

Lorraine M. Scriver, wife of the late Montana artist Robert M. Scriver, has donated one of the largest and most valuable collections of artwork, artifacts, carvings, photographs, manuscripts, and books to be given to the Montana Historical Society since the Malcolm Mackay family gave its priceless collection of Charles M. Russell art to the Society almost forty years ago.

The collection, which also includes taxidermy, historic museum diorama scenes, western memorabilia, photographs, and a remarkable bronze collection, will be exhibited and cared for in both Montana and Alberta as a result of a unique consortium consisting of the Society, the Provincial Museum of Alberta, and the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation in Missoula. It is Mrs. Scriver's wish that the collection, previously on display at the Scriver Museum in Browning, Montana, be kept intact and shown in both countries. Its preservation in both Montana and Alberta reflects the family's roots on both sides of the Canadian/United States border.

continued on page 4

Tom Cook, photographer

Robert Scriver is shown in his Browning museum in 1994 with his sculpture "An Honest Try." The bronze is now in the collection of the Montana Historical Society in Helena.

Townsend Students Win Ambassador Honor

Students from Broadwater County High School earned the title of Ambassador Team at this year's Montana Heritage Project Conference held at the Montana Historical Society in March. The students travel next to Washington, D.C., on April 26 to present their winning history of World War II veterans in Broadwater County at nationals held in the Library of Congress.

The Townsend, Montana, students, led by teacher Darlene Beck, interviewed surviving veterans and gathered photographs and other material to create a comprehensive project. The students are: Linda Kitto, Laurie Nugent, Chelsey Evans, Jason Obert, Mallory Fawthrop, Carly Paupore, Bethanie Fetty, Rebekah Peters, Jack Foster, Terri Raisland, Todd Kitto, Teresa Schnur, Jolleen May, Cassie Smith, Leah McGuire, Dan Spatzierath, J. R. Middlemas, Jennifer Spatzierath, Kelly Noyd, Max Updike, Kelsey Nugent, and Greg Welch.

Students from Bigfork, Chester, Corvallis, Fort Benton, Libby, Roundup, Ronan, Simms, and Townsend competed. Governor Marc Racicot accepted the work of all the students into the permanent archives of the Society.

Montana State Library
3 0864 1006 2955 2

Bodmer Art on Exhibit at Society

The work of Swiss artist Karl Bodmer is the focus of a new temporary exhibit at the Montana Historical Society. The exhibit, titled "Life on the Upper Missouri: The Art of Karl Bodmer," is in the Northeast Gallery at the Society in Helena and features more than fifty lithographs, large format images, early aquatints, historic Indian artifacts, and vignettes.

Bodmer, a painter and printmaker from Zurich, accompanied Prince Maximilian of Wied Neuwied to America in 1832. Maximilian, a former Prussian Army officer and experienced field zoologist who had conducted scientific expeditions in South America, hired Bodmer as a draftsman for a North American expedition. Together, they traveled to the fur trade posts of the Upper Missouri region, where Bodmer, considered the best of the early western artists, painted Mandans, Hidatsas, and Blackfeet among other Indians.

The exhibit will be on display until March 15, 2001.

Tom Cook, photographer

Native American Ken Walton dances at Bodmer opening in April.

New Register Listings Announced

Five sites were listed by the National Register of Historic Places as Montana's first National Register listings for 2000. They include:

- The Jack Bartlett House in Bozeman, built in 1939–1940, designed by Fred Willson, and featuring a Tudor-Revival design.
- The Simons Block in Missoula, named after Missoula businessman Louis N. Simons, it housed one of Missoula's earliest gasoline pumps in the 1920s.
- The Lodgepole Hall in Fort Belknap. One of the last log dance halls in a Montana Indian community, the octagonal structure was built for the Fort Belknap Assiniboine people in 1936 by WPA, PWA, and CCC crews.
- The West Quincy Granite Quarry opened in 1914 near Lone Tree. Its dark gray granite was used on the Square Butte jail and Charlie Russell's grave.
- The Lewistown Satellite Airfield Historic District. Used during World War II for B-52 bomber squadrons, the airfield includes a large hangar, officer and crew buildings, and a fortified vault where the top-secret Norden bombsight was stored. This is the last remaining Norden bombsight shelter in the country.

For information on listing a property in the National Register, call Chere Jiusto at (406) 444-7742.

Old Forts Trail, Buffalo Soldiers Honored

In 1996, the Montana Legislature requested that the Montana Historical Society provide interpretive markers noting key Montana segments of the Old Forts Trail, an important early transportation route linking the United States and Canada. In addition to markers placed in 1998 at Forts Benton and Assinniboine in Montana, the Montana Historical Society and Parks Canada joined together in a groundbreaking partnership to create similar markers at Fort Walsh in Saskatchewan. The markers, one in French and one in English, were unveiled last summer. Plans are now underway for the Society, in partnership with Parks Canada, to provide two additional markers at Fort Battlefield in Saskatchewan noting its importance as an extension of the international Old Forts Trail.

Another of the Society's interpretive projects at Fort Assinniboine commemorates the Buffalo Soldiers in Montana. The African American troops, transferred from Arizona to Montana in 1892, were eventually headquartered there. The new marker, to be dedicated at Fort Assinniboine in June, will complement National Register and Old Forts Trail interpretive markers already in place.

New Charlie Russell Sketches Included

A Most Desperate Situation by Walter Cooper, signed, limited edition book with 11 never-before-published Charlie Russell sketches, $125 (only 100 printed). Call 1-800-243-9900.

Lewis & Clark to be Featured in Montana

When Captain William Clark arrived at the Three Forks in south central Montana in July 1805, illness overtook him for several days. Co-captain Meriwether Lewis administered treatment, including what constituted massive doses of Dr. Rush's pills, but Lewis stopped short of using "heroic remedies." Clark recovered largely on his own, but what it was that ailed him has proven illusive to close students of the expedition ever since.

In the Summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, Ronald Loge, a Lewis and Clark historian and doctor from Dillon, Montana, attempts to unravel the mystery. Combining what Lewis and Clark described of Clark's malady with more modern understanding of diseases and their origins, Loge concludes that Lewis and Clark quite likely detailed the first recorded case of Colorado Tick Fever.

Another doctor, Larry Len Peterson of Portland, offers a different sort of story in an excerpt from the reminiscence of Bozeman pioneer Walter Cooper. In it, Cooper details a footrace he ran as a youth amid the cheers of such famed westerners as Jim Bridger. Cooper's tale, accompanied by never-before-published pen and ink drawings by Charles M. Russell, is now available in a book by Peterson and edited by Helena writer Rick Newby, titled A Most Desperate Situation.

In addition, Mark Banker offers comparative history at its best with a look at the unexpected parallels between northern New Mexico and southern Appalachia, and Len Ackland paints a haunting story of plutonium bomb-making at Denver's Rocky Flats nuclear weapons facility. Finally, the Society's own Ellen Baumler details the brief but colorful use of camels during the Montana gold rush of the 1860s.

Art Rendezvous Aug. 17–20

The twenty-second Northwest Rendezvous Group Show will be held in Helena, August 17–20. The show features some of the finest art in the country, including paintings, watercolors, sculptures, oils, and bronzes by well-known artists.

The Montana Historical Society, in cooperation with the Helena Civic Center, U.S. West, and ComNet Cellular, is sponsoring the event for the third year.

To receive a schedule or for information call (406) 444-4710.

Scottish Author to Speak in Helena

James Hunter, author of Scottish Highlanders, Indian Peoples: Thirty Generations of a Montana Family, will speak in Seattle, Helena, Missoula, and Pablo in May, as part of the historical society's "Live from the Society!" initiative.

Hunter, who lives in the Scottish Highlands, will visit Montana to speak on a little-known connection between Scotland and the American West. His book, Scottish Highlanders, Indian Peoples, was published in American edition by the Montana Historical Society Press in 1996. In researching the history of Montana's McDonald family—whose members trace their roots to the chiefs of the Nez Perce tribe and to the chiefs of Scotland's most formidable clan—Hunter uncovered uncanny parallels between the fate of the native Highland clans and that of North American Indians.

See page 4 of the Montana Post for a complete listing of Hunter's May tours.

Paperback copies of Scottish Highlanders, Indian Peoples are available for $18.95 at local bookstores or from the Museum Store by calling 1-800-243-9900 (shipping additional).

Hunter's Seattle presentation is on May 1 at 7:00 P.M. at the Town Hall at 8th and Seneca and is part of Feis Shiatail 2000. Organized by Slighe nan Gaidheal, Feis Shiatail 2000 is a week-long festival celebrating Scottish Gaelic language, music, and culture, April 30 through May 6. For information, contact Slighe nan Gaidheal, P.O. Box 20667, Seattle, WA 98102, (206) 903-9452 or <www.slighe.com>. For information on Hunter's Montana appearances, contact Kristin Gallas at (406) 444-4794.

Smoke Wars Available through Museum Store

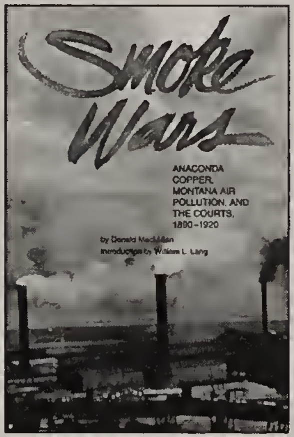
The Montana Historical Society Press will release its latest book in June, Smoke Wars: Anaconda Copper, Montana Air Pollution, and the Courts, 1890–1924 by Donald MacMillan.

Smoke Wars is a history of air pollution in Butte and Anaconda. It is a landmark study that raises issues still hotly contested today, including corporate responsibility, the rights of citizens, costs of industrialization, and the relative value of the environment. For your copy, call the Museum bookstore at 1-800-243-9900.



Smoke Wars
ANACONDA COPPER, MONTANA AIR POLLUTION AND THE COURTS, 1890–1920
by Donald MacMillan

Burlingame-Toole Competition Set

The Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 2000 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award.

The award, named in honor of Montana historians Merrill G. Burlingame and K. Ross Toole, is given to the best article-length manuscript submitted for publication in Montana by an undergraduate or graduate student. Essays must be on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a plaque, cash award, and possible publication of the article in Montana.

To be eligible, students must be enrolled in a college or university and sponsored by a faculty member.

Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 17, 2000. For information, write Burlingame–Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 or e-mail inquiries to ottomhs@aol.com.

NUCMUC to List MHS Archival Material

The Montana Historical Society Archives and the archives at the University of Montana, Missoula, and Montana State University, Bozeman, are contributing to a nationwide listing of manuscript and archival material for libraries and archives around the country.

The three research institutions are sending catalog listings of manuscript material to the Library of Congress to become part of its "National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections." Popularly known as NUCMC (pronounced nuck-muck), the catalog is a nationwide listing of manuscript and archival material and is available on the internet at <http:\\lcweb.loc.gov\coll\nucmc> or by typing "nucmc" on one of several popular search engines.

Volunteers Honored

Montana Historical Society Director Arnold Olsen praised the Society's 80 volunteers for their service during the annual Friends of the Society awards luncheon in April.

The Director's Award went to Jesse Long, and outstanding Docents were Norma Heiman, Florence Jacobson, and Charlotte Sanddal.

Outstanding Muses were Dorothy Carpenter, Teresa Hartzog, Pam Hulbert, and Doris McMurray. Outstanding Department Volunteers were Hariot Van Tine, Peggy Smith, Audrey Levitan, Dora Howard, Doris Hitt, and Mary Brewer.

Volunteers donating at least 100 hours of service to the Society were Arlene Carpenter, Lucille Gordon, Teresa Hartzog, Doris McMurray, Pat McNamer, Bob Morgan, Doris Neu, Sandra Lee Penrod, Charlotte Thomas, and Leoti Waite.

Those donating more than 200 hours of service were Mary Brewer, Doris Hitt, Dora Howard, Audrey Levitan, Peggy Smith, and Hariot Van Tine.

What's New in Education

■ The twenty-seventh annual Montana History Conference will be held in West Yellowstone on October 12–14. This year's conference theme, "Montana History 2000: The Lure of the Parks," will provide a unique view of Yellowstone National Park as well as other national and state park resources in Montana.

Speakers include authors Chris Magoc and award winner Diane Smith, Yellowstone National Park archivist Lee Whittlesey and Nez Perce historian Otis Halfmoon. Sessions include Jerks in Montana History, History of Wildlife Issues in Yellowstone, and Dogs in Montana history. The keynote speaker is Bill Everhart, former Assistant Director of the National Park Service.

Optional activities Saturday afternoon, October 14, include a trip to Quake Lake, tours of Yellowstone National Park historic sites, and a movie marathon. Brochures will be available in July. For information call (406) 444-4794.

■ Join us for the "Under the Tent" series this summer at the Montana Historical Society. At noon on Thursdays in July and August we will offer hands-on, educational, and entertaining activities. For information call (406) 444-4794.

Scriver Collection

continued from page 1

Bob Scriver grew up in Browning, Montana, where his family ran the local mercantile. He first directed his education to music and teaching but after working as a public school music teacher and serving as a military musician during World War II, Scriver made a conscious career change to establish a taxidermy shop in Browning. Within a decade, he was Montana's best known taxidermist—renown for the accuracy of the anatomical shapes he constructed and the beauty and realism of the settings he created for them.

Scriver's taxidermy evolved into the creation and casting of bronze sculptures, and he became known worldwide for his art related to all western subjects—from Indians, wildlife, and the open range to military conflicts and rodeoing.

The Society will assume responsibility for the collection immediately and begin raising money to provide for its care and management.

From the Director

continued from page 1

the 49th parallel.

The assistance of Dr. Phil Stepney, Edmonton Museum Director, was essential. The Honorable Ralph Klein, the Premier of the Province of Alberta, and Montana Governor Marc Racicot offered their full support and assistance, and Society Trustee and artist Bob Morgan donated many hours to help fashion the agreement.

Obtaining the Scriver collection has accentuated the already critical need for a new space for the Society. Our 1950 building and the additional storage facilities we must rent are insufficient. Because we can no longer serve our public adequately or fulfill our statutory stewardship obligations, we have begun the process of seeking a comprehensive planning grant from the next legislative session to lay the groundwork for obtaining new and appropriate space.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Life on the Upper Missouri: The Art of Karl Bodmer," Northeast Gallery, through March 15, 2001 |
| | "A Capital Capitol," Montana Reflections Gallery, through December 31, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| May 9 | James Hunter, "Scottish Highlanders, Indian Peoples: A Flathead Reservation Family's Roots in Scotland's Clans," 7:00 P.M., Boo Auditorium, Montana Historical Society, Helena |
| May 10 | James Hunter, "On the Other Side of Sorrow: The Regeneration of the Scottish Highlands and Its Implications for Another Last Best Place, Montana," 7:30 P.M., Boone & Crockett Club (old Milwaukee Station), Missoula |
| May 11 | James Hunter, "Scottish Highlanders, Indian Peoples: A Flathead Reservation Family's Roots in Scotland's Clans," 7:00 P.M., Salish Kootenai College, Michel Building, Rooms 6 & 7, Pablo |
| May 17 | Mike Korn, "136 Years of Wildlife Conservation in Montana," 10:30 A.M., Boo Auditorium, Montana Historical Society, Helena |
| July/August | "Under the Tent" Activity Days, 12:00-1:00 P.M., Thursdays, Montana Historical Society, West Lawn, Helena |
| September 17–23 | Montana Archaeology Week |
| October 12–14 | Montana History Conference, West Yellowstone |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/Galleries | To May 27: Monday–Friday, 8–5. Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. May 28 through Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8–6, weekends and holidays, 9–5. |
| Library/Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To May 27: Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5, tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4. May 28 through Labor Day: Tuesday–Sunday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour. Last tour begins at 4. |
| Capitol | Open June 12, 9–5: tours begin on the hour. Last tour begins at 4. |

To arrange guided group tours or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.montanahistoricalsociety.com
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Service Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 151
Great Falls, MT 59405

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

MAY 23 2000

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

S
978.6 C.1
H6M
Vol.37,no.4

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 37 No. 4 • Winter 1999

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAR 1 3 2000
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA

From the Director

by Arnie Olsen

It is my pleasure to begin a new feature in the Montana Post. As a new director and entering a new century, I wanted to provide a communication link to our friends and supporters. I also wanted you to have an opportunity to get to know me better as I share my vision and perspectives on the complex and important issues that surround the Society's work. I look forward to hearing from you!

photograph by Tom Cook

Arnie Olsen

How, you might ask, did the Montana Historical Society approach the move forward from 1999 to 2000? The answer is: with gratitude.

We are grateful, first, for Montana's pioneers who, thinking far beyond their 1865 Montana Territory world, established this institution and the basis for our collective memory. They knew they were making history. They figured someone down the road would want to know about it. Thank goodness for their uncommon stewardship ethic and extraordinary foresight.

We are grateful, next, for the Montanans who—over the last 135 years—built the Society's outstanding collection of historic material. Photographs, artifacts, early business records, rare books, and interesting brochures have been collected, one image, one box, one diary, one painting, one quilt, and one letter at a time. The Society rarely has had funds to purchase historic materials or collections, although an endowment for this purpose must eventually be developed. Instead, the treasures now preserved and displayed for future generations exist and are protected and catalogued because of private thoughtfulness and stewardship, which continues the spirit of our founding fathers.

continued on page 4

Bodmer Exhibit Opens April 6

The work of Karl Bodmer will be featured in a new temporary exhibit in the Northeast Gallery at the Society in Helena. Titled "Life on the Upper Missouri: The Art of Karl Bodmer," the exhibit will open on April 6 and will feature more than fifty lithographs, large format images and vignettes printed in London between 1839 and 1849. The lithographs are based on drawings produced by Bodmer while traveling on the Upper Missouri with Prince Maximilian of Wied.

Bodmer, a Swiss artist, set out with Maximilian's expedition in 1832. They traveled the Ohio River to New Harmony, Indiana, and on to St. Louis, Missouri, Fort Union, and finally to Fort McKenzie, completing their journey two years later. Bodmer used his sketches and forty-two watercolors to produce eighty-one etchings to illustrate Maximilian's published account of his travels.

The Bodmer lithograph "Dakota Woman and Assiniboin Girl" is part of the new MHS exhibit opening.

Exploration Highlights Spring Montana

A remarkable part of the story of Lewis and Clark was the fact that they were not interfered with by any foreign power as they trekked across the northern tier of what in 1804–1806 was a region highly contested by imperial powers. No Spanish, English, or even French military contingent intercepted them and brought their "voyage of discovery" to premature halt.

But what if it had? University of Montana history professor Dan Flores considers that question and more in an article for the Spring 2000 issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Flores recounts the fate of what Thomas Jefferson intended to be the southern counterpart to Lewis and Clark. That expedition, attempted in 1806, was led by men named Freeman and Custis up the Red

continued on page 5

Four Society Supporters Pass Away

Four special friends to the Society passed away late last year. Montana State University president Mike Malone died of a heart attack at age 59 on December 20. Bill Mackay, Sr., 88, of Roscoe, Montana, also passed away in December. Ford Bovey, former owner of Virginia City and Nevada City, died at age 54, and Mike Swims Under of Big Badger, who served as a consultant to the Montana Historical Society on the Homeland Exhibit, died at age 85.

Malone, a nationally recognized historian, scholar, author, and teacher, authored or co-authored nine books, including such classic works as Montana: A History of Two Centuries, what has become the state history textbook, and Battle for Butte. His most recent book, Montana Century, a Photojournal of Montana, was released last fall.

Malone, Montana State University's tenth president served on the Montana

continued on page 5

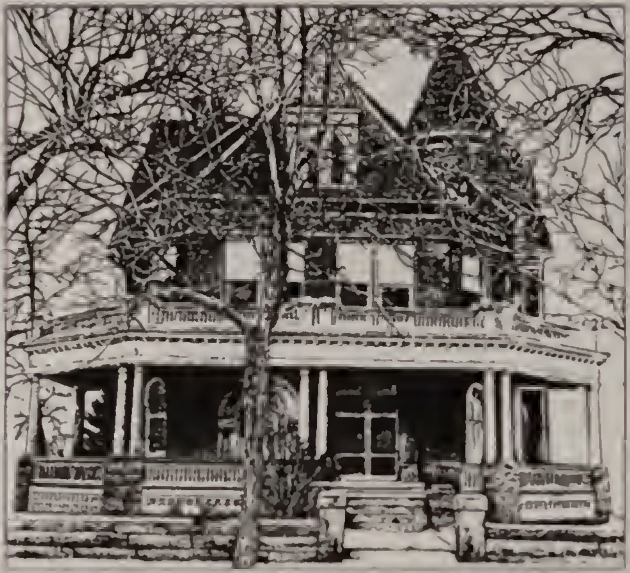
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 7318 3

Original Governor's Mansion Tour a Hit Again

"A Home Spun Christmas" was the theme for this year's Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour held in December. Artisans demonstrated quilting, spinning, weaving, candle-dipping, basket weaving, crochet, and tatting.

The homes on this year's tour included:

- The Linda and Gary Pollak home at 1299 Ranchview Road, which featured European antiques and a traditional, southern, Victorian feel as well as a Christmas tree decorated with antique ornaments and 2,500 lights.
- The Kori and Steve Dee home at 628 Dearborn Street. Built in 1906 by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bickett, this wonderful home was later purchased by Jacob Kaiserman, who was elected mayor of Helena in 1950. The Kaisermans were hosts to many social events, including welcoming legislators to the Capitol City during sessions of the Montana legislature.
- The Lynnae and Dan Bright home at 6220 Dairy Drive, built by Kien Hood and Paul Horning. This country home has large outside porches, dormers, distinctive roof lines, and an open floor plan. Two antique automobiles in the driveway were provided by Delwin Barnekoff.
- The Indian Law Resource Center at 602 N. Ewing Street. Built in 1885, the resource center is on the National Register of Historic Places and was an anchor in the Chessman-Davis Central Addition of Helena. The Weekly Herald newspaper said in 1885 that "the design is as handsome as it is peculiar." It features heavy porch columns, a third-story brick balconette wall, arched openings, ten-foot ceilings, and a formal hall.



MHS Museum, Helena

Original Governor's Mansion

Proceeds for this year's tour will help defray costs to replace the OGM sign on the outside of the building, and complete the wallpaper project in the southwest bedroom.

Baumler New State Historic Preservation Chief

courtesy Mark Baumler

Mark Baumler

Mark Baumler, state archaeologist with the Montana Historical Society for the past eleven years, has been appointed head of the State Historic Preservation Office. The office is in charge of identifying and protecting the state's significant wealth of heritage resources. "As head of State Historic Preservation, I plan to work closely with the public and private sectors to protect and develop Montana's heritage resources. It's all part of community pride and development," Baumler said.

Baumler replaces Paul Putz, who left the office last year. Baumler received his doctorate in anthropology and archaeology from the University of Arizona, Tucson. He is active in public outreach and helped develop Montana Archaeology Week.

Advisory Board Receives Grant

The Montana Historical Records Advisory Board received a grant from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission for a re-grant program. The grant provides for a traveling archivist to assist up to ten local repositories with implementation of historical records projects and re-grant funds to aid them in completing these projects.

Possible projects could include identifying, inventorying, appraising, preserving, describing and cataloging, or otherwise creating better access to and care for local historical records, manuscripts, and photographs. The grant is matched, in part, by money received from the 1999 Montana legislature through the Montana Cultural Trust.

To request an application or guidelines, call the Archives at (406) 444-4775 or e-mail to archives@mch.net.

Appointments Made to Lewis & Clark Commission

Governor Marc Racicot has appointed two new members to the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial Commission. Marilyn Ryan of Missoula is an American history teacher at Hellgate High School and winner of the National Council for Geographic Education and the Montana Merit Teacher award. Homer Staves of Billings is vice president of KOA International and has served on the National Lewis and Clark Bicentennial Council for the past three years.

Racicot also reappointed Betty Stone of Glasgow, current chairman of the commission, and Darrell Kipp of Browning, current vice chairman, to the 12-member commission. The commission is currently planning for the two-hundred-year anniversary of Lewis and Clark's "Voyage of Discovery."

Sherfy to Head Heritage Operations

Marcella Sherfy has been appointed Chief of Heritage Operations for the Montana Historical Society. She began work in the all-new position with Society administration in early January.

Burns, Helena

Marcella Sherfy

Sherfy had spent the past two years as the Visitor Services Bureau Chief at the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks. Previously, she had been State Historic Preservation Officer from 1980 to 1995 and was the Society Education Officer before joining Fish, Wildlife, and Parks two years ago.

Her duties will include implementing the various operational programs of the Montana Historical Society; reviewing, developing, and updating agency policies; working on special projects related to outreach, preservation, and collections management; and administering heritage properties.

Web Address

On March 1, the Society's domain name will become <www.state.mt.us>, replacing <www.mt.gov>, which will be deactivated. Any e-mail addresses that contain the reference @mt.gov will also need to be addressed to @state.mt.us. For information contact the Montana Online Webmaster at webadmin@state.mt.us.

1999 Donor list

More Than Two Hundred Items Donated to Society Collections

The Montana Historical Society received more than two hundred donations from organizations, businesses, and individuals in 1999. Donations included books, library materials, photographs, papers, and records. Of special interest were the vintage clothing of Tom Reynolds of Polebridge, vintage clothing worn by Alberta Sieben of Helena, two-18 carat gold watches, brass post office drawers from the Last Chance Station in Helena, and more post office boxes from West Glacier.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals: Robert Clark, Library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, Archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, Photograph Archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, Museum (444-4711).

- Addy, Jane
- Alfredson, Karma
- Allen, Gene
- Allen, Mary Ellen, Estate
- Alpha Tau Delta, Lambda Chapter
- American Association of University Women
  - Glendive Branch
  - Great Falls Branch
  - Montana Division
- Antonioli Family
- Austad, Richard
- Barnhart, Jane
- Baucus, Jean
- Beaman, Mary L.
- Beber, Margaret
- Bergen, William
- Big Crane, Joann
- Big Sky Chapter of ARMA
- Big Sky Weekly
- Bourbon, Frederick
- Bower, Jane
- Boyd, Diane
- Boyer, Ellen M.
- Brown, Bill and Jan
- Brust, James
- Buller, Dorothy
- Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Jack
- Burke, Jason C.
- Bushing, Mary, MSU Libraries
- Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives
- Cain, Karen, Swallow Press
- Carroll College, Corette Library
- Clark, Bob
- Clydesdale, Valentine
- Crepeau, Sherry
- Dakota County Historical Society (Minnesota)
- Darham, Jack
- Davis, Margaret S.
- Deering, Walter B.
- Dempsey, Steven W.
- DesRosier, Ramona and Fred
- Dorner, Jack
- Dornbos, Father Bill
- Draszt, Joan
- Dunkerley, Marguerite Hamilton
- Eamon, Gail
- Egged, Karen
- Ellis, W. Robert
- Fisher, June and Glen
- Fletcher, Rebecca
- Fortnightly Club (Helena, Montana)
- Franks, James
- Frazza, Christian
- Georgia Historical Society
- Gillis, Roberta B.
- Gilman, June
- Goodman, Joan Elizabeth
- Gordon, Tim
- Greiner, William
- Griffith, Mrs. John F.
- Gustafson, Sharon, in memory of Valentino Chelini
- Gutierrez, John

photograph by Commercial West-The Banker's Weekly

Margaret Hibbard wearing her mother Alberta Sieben's wedding gown at a Glacier Park Banker's Convention in 1963. The wedding gown is a recent donation to the Montana Historical Society from Jean Baucus.

- Hall, Mary Carol Wirth
- Halley, Susan
- Hamilton, Betty L.
- Hamilton, Tom
- Hansen, Grant O.
- Harrell, Mary Alice
- Harrison, John C.
- Hasskamp, Fred
- Hayes, Vivian
- Hayne, Jack
- Heetderks, Dr. A. D.
- Heierman, William
- Herrin, Elizabeth, bequest of
- Hewes, Minna W.
- Hill, Nancy Boone
- Holmes, David
- Holt, Jack
- Holten, George
- Holter, Joan
- Holter, Margaret
- Homer, Dennis
- Honegger, Audrey
- Hooper, Al
- Hoskins, Dick
- Hoven, B. J.
- Ilion Free Public Library (New York)
- IOOF & Rebekah Assemblies of Montana
- Istvanffy, Klara and daughters, in memory of Denes Istvanffy
- Jackovac, Phyllis
- Jancic, Ann
- Jerin, Bessie
- Johnson, Lon
- Jones, Helen
- Jones-Wallace, Roberta
- Kalesh, Thais
- Kalwara, Rosalee
- Karnes, Elinor
- Kenney, Connie Corette
- King, Robert
- Kirk Family (Cecil H.)
- Kleffner, Paul
- Klemencic, Richard, Mr. and Mrs.
- Knoblock, Peg
- Kosciusko County Historical Society (Indiana)
- Lacy, Robert
- Lane, Arlie J.
- Larson, Juanita
- Last Chance Audubon (Helena, Montana)
- Leadbetter, Debby
- League of Women Voters of Montana
- Lewis and Clark County, Forestvale Cemetery District
- Lions Clubs International (Helena, Montana)
- Lee, Shirley
- Long, Ruth
- Longs Standing Bear, Chief
- Love, Madolyn
- Malee, Tom
- Mallander, Karen
- Maloney, Monica
- Mayflower Society of Montana
- McDonald, Dr. and Mrs. Archie
- McKeever, Diane
- McLeod, Stephen
- McLaughlin, Nanette
- McLaughlin, Patty
- Meloy, Harriett, on behalf of Peter Meloy
- Meloy, Harriett
- Meschter, Daniel
- Mikkelsen, E. Alden
- Miller, Carolyn
- Missoulians On Bicycles
- Monroe County History Museum (Wisconsin)
- Montana Bureau of Mines & Geology
- Montana Chapter of the 41st Infantry Division Association
- Montana Historical Society Foundation
- Montana Library Association
- Montana Living Magazine
- Montana Lung Association (Helena, Montana)
- Montana Press Women
- Montana Tech of The University of Montana Library
- Montana Women's Lobby
- Morgan, Bob and Gen
- Morgan, Robert
- Morrison, Jeffrey B.
- Morrow, Ed
- Mular, James T.

Near, Susan R.
Newman, E. Dilworth
O'Brien, Kathy Mosdal
Osborn, Ron
Otto, Kathryn
Ouray County Historical Society (Colorado)
Pagett, Karen
Parker, Vincent
Peckham, Charles W.
Peterson, Floy
Peterson, Larry L.
Peterson, Oregon, bequest of Polson Bay Trading Company
Poulsen, Dorothy
Powers, Vince R.
Powlichek, Vickie
Quilters Art Guild of the Northern Rockies, Montana Historic Quilt Project Reap, Craig T., Col.
Reimer, Monica
Reynolds, Janette
Roberts, Montana, Public Schools
Rue, Helena
Russell, James O.
Sammick, Margaret
Sands, Diane
Sargent, Tom
St. Labre Indian School Educational Assoc.
Schenck, Marian Albright
Schneider, Douglas Blaine
Shields, Kenneth Jr., for the Fort Peck Tribal Archives
Shirley, Joan F.
Shively, Rosemary
Smith, Mark R.
Smith, Martha Crowley, family of Snyder, Randy
Sperry, Janet
Sullivan, Dan
Susag, Ralph W.
Swanberg, Robert F.
Tangled Roots Genealogy Society
Taylor, Patricia
Thayer, Richard
Thompson, Lee J.
Todd, Doug
Tode, Charles and Dorothy
Transportation Communications International Union
Tyers, John
United States Post Office
Utzinger, Karin L.
Van Campen, Bonnie
Voeller, A. Jean
Walter, Dave
Wedge, Dorothy, in memory of Clifford J. Wedge Wilkison, Diana
Williams, Glenn & Helen
Williams, J. Melvin
Wilmington College Library (Ohio)
Wood, Agnes Jean
Wood, Doris and John T.
Wood, Norris
Worley, Boyd
Wyatt, Diana
Wyoming State Archives
Zartman, Charles
Zinc, Wilbur

Director's Column — continued from page 1

It takes a lot of dedication to donate materials to the Society. People have to figure out how donations work, box materials, bring them here or ask Society staff to pick them up, provide background information, and check with siblings. An amazing number of Montanans invest in this intense, emotional labor of love, giving up—in some cases—short-term gain for long-term cultural and social benefits.

We appreciate equally all the Montanans who have donated financially to the Society. We are a private and a public agency. But much of our work (for instance our entire educational/outreach program) survives on the $30 to $30,000 gifts of families, businesses, and individuals who care. Cash gifts, special memberships, bequests, and trusts all support the Society's work.

We would be lost also without the individuals who donate their time. For them, we are enormously grateful. Nearly one hundred people currently give tours, help catalog photographs, process mailings, host receptions, repair artifacts, and much, much more. Homeowners who care for historic buildings and ranchers who preserve archaeological sites are also "volunteers" of a special nature.

Finally, we appreciate our colleagues in historic preservation, local museum administration, and community record-management. Our mission and goals are extended by so many professional colleagues and partners whose work helps us cover this enormous state for the benefit of all our citizens and visitors.

As director, I am awed by the responsibility and would not trade my new job for the world. Amidst challenges, controversies, resource and space needs, and much to learn, I am humbled every day by all the contributions that Montanans and Society advocates outside the state make to our civility and quality of life.

Thank you for helping us care for Montana's unique and beloved history and for helping us contribute to the richness of the collective human experiences.

Al Hooper Makes Photograph Donation

Al Hooper of Butte, Montana, has donated to the Society numerous photographs and negatives of mines and smelters in Silver Bow County from the 1870s to the 1940s. Hooper, a recent recipient of the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustee Award, got his start working in the mines for the Anaconda Company.

Included in Hooper's donation are photographs taken by Chalmer D. Sinkey of the North Butte Mining Company, which bought the property of the Speculator Mining Company, including the Speculator Mine, site of the worst hard-rock mining disaster in the nation. At one time, the North Butte Mining Company was the largest producer of ore in the district next to the Anaconda Company.

Hooper's donation also includes photographs of the Anselmo, Badger, Belmont, Elm Orlu, Leonard, and Mountain Consolidated mines.

The photographs are available in the Photograph Archives of the Society.

News from the Education Office

■ The Montana Historical Society Museum will offer free, regularly scheduled, public tours each Saturday through March 25. Two tours will be offered each Saturday, the first leaving at 10:00 A.M., the second at 11:30 A.M. The first guided tour will be of the Montana Homeland exhibit; the second will feature the Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art. Tour takers will be given a coupon for a buy-one, get-one-free ice cream sundae at the Ice Cream Parlor. To take part in the tours, meet at the Society Information Desk at either 10:00 or 11:30 each Saturday.

■ The Friends of the Society Appreciation Luncheon will be held Wednesday, April 19. Location and time to be announced.

■ There is still time to register for the Montana History Camp for Kids (June 18–24 or June 25–July 1) and the Montana History Camp for Educators (July 9–12) to be held in Virginia City this summer. "Kid's Camp" is open to Montana students, seventh and eighth grades, for $500.00. "Teacher Camp" is open to Montana educators teaching seventh through twelfth grades for $250.00. Call (406) 444-4794.

■ A new interactive family learning opportunity is planned for the Society's Museum galleries. Use the new "Family Guide to the Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art" and hands-on interactive features in the "Montana Homeland" exhibit this spring.

■ Fourteen new volunteers were recruited this fall.

Society Employees Honored for Service

Montana Historical Society employees were honored for their longtime service in January. Rebecca Kohl, photo archives assistant; Dave Walter, research historian; and Diana Wilkison, library technical assistant; were honored for twenty years of service to the Society.

Sharon McCabe, centralized services manager, and Tammy Ryan, publications business manager, were honored for fifteen years of service, and Herbert Dawson, State Historic Preservation historical architect; Charles Rankin, director of publications; and Lea Solberg, library clerk, were honored for ten years.

Five-year pins were given to Rita Cortright, administrative assistant; Thomas Quinn, security; Todd Saarinen, museum preparator; and Josef Warhank, State Historic Preservation historical reviewer.

Owl's Eyes Is New Press Release

Owl's Eyes and Seeking a Spirit: Kootenai Indian Stories, an illustrated children's book developed by the Kootenai Culture Committee, is the third in a series of cooperative publications between Montana Historical Society Press and Salish Kootenai College Press.

Written at a fourth-grade reading level, the stories were recorded by Kootenai elders and illustrated by Kootenai artists from the Flathead Indian Reservation. The 32-page paperback book will be available in March for $5.95.

Previous joint publications are Coyote Stories of the Montana Salish Indians (paper, $9.95), and Over a Century of Moving to the Drum: Salish Indian Celebrations on the Flathead Indian Reservation, by Johnny Arlee (paper, $14.95).

Also co-published by MHS Press with the University of New Mexico Press is Yellowstone: The Creation and Selling of an American Landscape, 1870–1903, by Chris J. Magoc.

Magoc takes the reader from the 1870 Washburn Expedition to present-day controversies over mining and thermal production.

The 266-page book includes 54 illustrations and sells for $49.95 in hardcover and $19.95 in paper. (Add $4.50 for shipping.) Call toll-free 1-800-243-9900.

Archaeology Conference April 14–16

As part of the Montana Archaeological Society Meeting, on April 14, there will be a one-day workshop for teachers, archaeologists and others interested in pre-collegiate materials for the Montana Historical Society Ancient Teachings Curriculum. Russ Ann Sisk and Sara Scott, authors of the curriculum guide, will lead the workshop, MAS scholarships and OPI renewal credits are available for teachers. The conference is set for April 14-16, at the Park Plaza in Helena and includes paper presentations and an evening banquet. Keynote speaker will be Dr. Chris Hill of the Museum of the Rockies on "Paleoindian Landscapes at the End of the Last Ice Age in Montana."

For workshop information, contact Dr. Mark Baumler, State Historic Preservation Office, P.O. Box 201202, Helena, MT 59621-1202, (406) 444-7717, mbaumler@state.mt.us. For conference registration, contact Brad Coutant, MAS Treasurer, P.O. Box 2123, Billings, MT 59103, (406) 257-7722, bradpatty@mcn.net.

Obituaries — continued from page 1

Historical Society Board of Trustees from 1977 to 1992, including two years as board president in the mid-1980s, and on the Montana Historical Society Foundation board.

Bill Mackay served on the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees from 1951 to 1961 and from 1981 to 1996. He was a state representative from 1951 to 1953 and a state senator from 1953 to 1972. He served on many volunteer boards of directors, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Mackay, donated the bulk of the permanent C. M. Russell collection of art now housed in the Society Museum's Mackay Gallery.

Bovey, a Kalispell resident, was the son of Charles and Sue Bovey. He sold the historic properties of Virginia City and Nevada City to the State of Montana for $6.5 million in 1997. The State operates the towns as tourist attractions.

Swims Under, a Blackfeet spiritual leader, advisor, teacher, and mentor, was also a painter and carver and could play many musical instruments. He was survived by 26 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren.

Bradley Awards Announced

The Montana Historical Society will again offer two James H. Bradley Fellowships for summer 2000 research in Society collections.

One fellowship is offered to candidates for advanced degrees in history, American Studies, or related field. Another fellowship is open to applicants other than graduate students. Fellowships pay $2,500 to each recipient.

Applicants must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write publishable historical articles. Recipients must spend at least four weeks in Helena researching the Society's collections between June and November 2000 and submit an article based on their research for possible publication in the Society's quarterly journal, Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Applications must be postmarked by April 3, 2000. For information write to Bradley Selection Committee, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201, or for general information call (406) 444-4702.

Spring Montana

continued from page 1

River, the stream that in part provides a border for Texas and Oklahoma today and what in the early nineteenth century served as the southern boundary of the Louisiana Purchase. Unfortunately for Jefferson and southern exploration, a Spanish military contingent did stop Freeman and Custis well short of their goal, but their story is, nonetheless, a fascinating tale of discovery and intrigue.

Also for the Spring issue, Douglas Steeples recounts the remarkable tale of Frank Smith and the development of an empire based on an unlikely product—borax—and centered in an unlikely place—the Mojave Desert. Also, former Montana editor William Lang considers the complex, sometimes questionable trade-offs made during the twentieth century to achieve full hydraulic development of the great Columbia River.

In addition, Aubrey Haines provides the second and concluding part of Serena Washburn's reminiscence of a steamboat voyage up the Missouri River in 1869, and five writers provide their reflections on Michael P. Malone, president of Montana State University and former President of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees, who died in late December.

Top 10 Books of 1999

Lewis and Clark and Charlie Russell remain perennial favorites among patrons of the Montana Store at the Montana Historical Society, but the books people buy reflect a broad range of interests. Below are the ten most popular books, as measured by Montana Store purchases during 1999.

1. Coyote Stories of the Montana Salish Indians, Salish Culture Committee
2. Charlie Russell Roundup: Essays on America's Favorite Cowboy Artist, Brian W. Dippie, ed.
3. Montana Century: One Hundred Years in Pictures and Words, Michael P. Malone, ed.
4. Montana Mainstreets, Volume 1: Guide to Historic Virginia City, by Marilyn Grant
5. Virginia City and Alder Gulch, by Ken and Ellen Sievert
6. An Ornery Bunch: Tales and Anecdotes Collected by the W.P.A. Montana Writers' Project
7. Bone Deep in Landscape: Essays on Writing, Reading, and Place, by Mary Clearman Blew
8. Montana's Historical Highway Markers, revised and expanded, compiled by Glenda Clay Bradshaw and Jon Axline
9. Journals of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, Volume 1 (the atlas), and Volume 12, Gary E. Moulton, ed.
10. Montana Mainstreets, Volume 2: Guide to Historic Glendive, by the Montana Historical Society

To order any of these books call the Montana Store at 1-800-243-9900.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Through the Artist's Eye: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp," Northeast Gallery, through March 15, 2000 |
| | Opening of "Life on the Upper Missouri: The Art of Karl Bodmer," Northeast Gallery, April 6, 2000 through March 15, 2001 |
| | "A Capital Capitol," Montana Reflections Gallery, June 3, 1999 through December 31, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| | Friends Lectures at 10:30 in the Haynes Auditorium, free to the public: |
| February 16 | Dr. Jay Kirkpatrick, "Zoos, Conservation, and Wildlife Fertility Control" |
| | March Lecture Series, Haynes Auditorium, noon. There is a $5 fee per lecture or all 4 for $16: |
| March 1 | Dave Walter, "Resurrecting Judge Crum: A Casualty of World War I" |
| March 8 | Lyndel Meikle, "Frank Conley: No Small Vices" |
| March 15 | Kirby Lambert, "Through the Artist's Eye: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp" |
| March 22 | Marcella Sherfy and Joan Holter, "Norman 'Jeff' Holter" |
| | Other Events in Haynes Auditorium, free to the public: |
| March 15 | Larry Peterson, "Walter Cooper Autobiography," 7:00 p.m. |
| April 19 | Stan Lynde, "Cartooning and Storytelling," 10:30 a.m. |
| May 17 | Mike Korn, "136 Years of Wildlife Conservation in Montana," 10:30 a.m. |

Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8–5. Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30 Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Closed January–March 2000. Public tours begin April 1. |
| Capitol (exterior only) | Group tours by reservation only. To arrange guided group tours of the Museum & Galleries, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789. |

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.state.mt.us
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Service Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 151
Great Falls, MT 59405

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
Vol.37, No.3

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 6059 4

SHELVE WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST
Montana Historical Society
Vol. 37 No. 3 • Autumn 1999

Trustees Honor White, Willard at History Conference

J. M. Cooper, photographer

Conference-goers view Helena's Archie Bray Foundation during the Montana History Conference in October.

The Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees recognized two Montanans in October for their services in helping to preserve the state's cultural heritage. Receiving Montana Historical Society Trustees Awards during the Twenty-sixth Annual Montana History Conference in Helena were Thain White, deceased, formerly of Dayton, and John Willard, of Billings.

Thain White's wife Fay accepted the award for White, who spent his life documenting prehistoric and historic sites, including the Big Hole and Bear's Paw battlefields. He also researched African-American soldiers in the Flathead Valley, the Nez Perce retreat from the army to Kutenai, Blackfoot linguistics, and railroad and stagecoach companies.

John Willard worked as a reporter, political writer, editor, and director for the Montana Railroad Association. He edited "Hoofprints from the Yellowstone," a monograph of the Westerner's Yellowstone Corral" and helped foster a continuing interest in western history, art, literature, landscape, and lore.

Other awards included:

- The Vivian A. Paladin Award. It went to Ellen Baumler of Helena for her article "Devil's Perch: Prostitution from Suite to Cellar in Butte, Montana," which appeared in the Autumn 1998 issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, the Society's quarterly history journal. Voted on by the magazine's editorial board and named after former magazine editor Vivian A. Paladin, the award is made for the best article to appear in the magazine the previous year.

Continued on page 2

Larry McRae New Trustee

Tom Ferris, photographer

Larry McRae

Larry McRae of Missoula has been named to the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees. Governor Marc Racicot appointed McRae, managing partner of the Best Western Grant Creek Inn in Missoula, in July. He replaces Anne Hibbard, who resigned as a public member of the Board.

Before moving to Missoula, McRae was general manager of the Best Western Outlaw Inn in Kalispell, past president of the Montana Inn Keepers Association, he has served on the Montana Tourism Coalition and the United States Travel and Tourism Advisory Commission serving the U.S. Senate.

Transportation Focus of Next Montana

Montana has never been a particularly easy place to get to, although twentieth-century modes of transportation have eased the difficulties and increased the comfort level measurably.

Such was not the case in the nineteenth century, however, when steamboats plied the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers, and stagecoaches and wagon trains creaked and rumbled across dusty trails to Montana's gold mines and early centers of population.

Such are the contents of the next issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, a special issue devoted to early western transportation.

In an opening essay, Carlos Schwantes details what it meant to take the stagecoach or steamboat to Montana. That historical time, Schwantes warns, should not be seen as simply a pre-railroad era.

Continued on page 3

Montana Wins Arrell M. Gibson Award

Montana The Magazine of Western History, the Montana Historical Society's quarterly magazine, received the 1999 Arrell M. Gibson Award for the best essay of the year published on the history of Native Americans.

The article, "Called Out People: The Cheyennes and the Central Plains," written by Elliott West, history professor at the University of Arkansas and a member of the Society's magazine editorial review board, describes the changes that came to the Cheyennes in the nineteenth century as they developed a high plains horse culture.

PLEASE RETURN

Three Montana Sites Placed on Preservation List

Three Montana locations have been placed on the grant list for the National Trust for Historic Preservation's Save America's Treasures program. The locations are the Tenth Street Bridge in Great Falls, the Lewis and Clark Traveler's Rest Campsite near Lolo, and the Oregon Shortline Historic District in West Yellowstone. Patti Jacques of the Montana Historical Society State Historic Preservation Office has been assisting these groups to receive national funding.

Each site has special historic attributes. The Tenth Street Bridge has beautiful arches and detail work; the Lewis and Clark Traveler's Rest Campsite was an important campsite for the Lewis and Clark expedition; and the Oregon Shortline Historic District, a collection of buildings built by the Union Pacific Railroad in West Yellowstone. For the latter, plans call for restoring the buildings to include educational programs to interpret the development of transportation and visitation of Yellowstone National Park.

For information call Randall G. Knowles, Tenth Street Bridge, (406) 452-7250; Allan Mathews, Lewis and Clark Campsite, (406) 523-4650; and Paul Shea, the Shortline District, (406) 646-7461.

MHS Press Offers Three New Books

The Montana Historical Society Press recently published its first children's book, Coyote Stories of the Montana Salish Indians, in collaboration with the Salish Kootenai College Press. Coyote Stories sells for $9.95 paperback, plus shipping.

Brian W. Dippie signed a limited number of hard cover editions of Charlie Russell Roundup: Essays on America's Favorite Cowboy Artist. Roundup contains stories and critical thinking on Russell, an artist who portrayed the Old West in all its vibrance.

Signed hardbacks are available for $39.95, plus shipping, on a first come basis. Paperback copies are available for $19.95, plus shipping.

In addition, the Montana Historical Society Press has a new book on the history of Yellowstone National Park, which it copublished with the University of New Mexico Press. Yellowstone: The Creation and Selling of an American Landscape, 1870–1903, by Chris J. Magoc, a fascinating history of early conflicts over Yellowstone's identity. Yellowstone may be purchased for $49.95 (hardback) or $19.95 (paperback), plus shipping.

All three books are available through the Montana Historical Society Museum Store or by calling 1-800-243-9900.

Curriculum Guides Set

Three curriculum guides for Montana The Magazine of Western History are now available. The guides are designed for high school classes and are available for the Autumn 1998 special issue on Butte, the Summer 1999 special issue on Western Images and Yellowstone, and the Autumn 1999 special issue on western gold rushes. A new guide will soon be available for the Winter 1999 special issue on early western transportation.

Guides are available for $5.00 each by calling Kristin Gallas at (406) 444-4794.

SHPO Launches Poster Contest

The State Historic Preservation Office has selected "Historic Schools" as the theme for its annual preservation poster contest. The photo contest is open to teachers, students, photographers, history buffs, classes, or groups. Entries must feature a school currently listed in the National Register of Historic Places or a school that has a nomination in progress.

Photographs must be received by November 30. To receive an entry form contact: Chere Jiusto, National Register Coordinator, State Historic Preservation Office, P.O. Box 201202, Helena, MT 59620-1202, (406) 443-2114, or e-mail cjiusto@state.mt.us.

J. M. Cooper, photographer

A group of children work on art projects at the Montana Historical Society "Art in Montana" program in August. The Society offers programs throughout the year for children and adults alike. See our calendar of events on page 4 of the Post.

Another Success for Western Rendezvous

The 21st Western Rendezvous of Art, held in August, in Helena, was a great success. Forty-two artists from across the country participated in the quick draw, art show and sale, awards dinner, and reception hosted by the Montana Historical Society. Also included this year were two seminars, one by Helena cartoonist Stan Lynde on cartooning, and another by Jackson, Wyoming, artist Jim Wilcox on landscape painting.

Funds raised by the Western Rendezvous of Art help support the Helena Civic Center, the Northwest Rendezvous Group of Artists, and the Montana Historical Society.

History Conference Continued from page 1

- The Merrill Burlingame—K. Ross Toole Award for the best graduate student essay submitted for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History. It went to Gregory Aydt of Paris, Illinois, for his article on the Montana Vigilantes.

In addition, six history students were given grant funding from the Dennis and Phyllis Washington Foundation to present historical research papers at the conference. The students were: Sue Ann Lindberg of Montana State University-Bozeman; Randy Webb of Carroll College, Helena; Edward "Duke" Richey of University of Montana-Missoula; Marvin Dawes of Little Big Horn College, Hardin; Patrick Armstrong of Blackfeet Community College, Browning; and Tachini Pete of Salish-Kootenai College, Pablo. Each student was awarded a $1,000 scholarship at the award banquet.

J. M. Cooper, photographer

Golden Spike in Virginia City

Governor Marc Racicot and James Powell of Helena stand in front of the 1910 Baldwin steam engine #12 at the Golden Spike Ceremony and dedication of the Lee C. McFarland Curatorial Center in Virginia City in September.

Bozeman Trail Attendance Tops 340

More than 340 people attended the Bozeman Trail Heritage Conference in Bozeman, Montana, in July. Among those attending were educators, writers, scholars, landowners, descendants, students, and trails and history enthusiasts from as far away as Florida, California, Denmark, and Japan. More than fifteen formal presentations on western trail history accompanied numerous other events, including bus tours of the trail and Virginia City, book signings, and a reception at the Museum of the Rockies.

Sponsored by the Montana Historical Society, the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the Wyoming Council for the Humanities, affiliates of the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Montana Department of Transportation, the Museum of the Rockies, and Montana State University, the conference highlighted the historical significance of the Bozeman Trail and links to its cultural heritage.

Audio tapes are available by writing Inter-Mountain Media, P.O. Box 2351, Kalispell, MT 59903, calling (406) 752-6338, e-mailing silvrtip@digisys.net, or faxing orders to (603) 925-6731. The cost per tape is $6.00 plus $6.00 shipping.

Transportation Issue

Continued from page 1

Modes of transportation had their own pace, rhythm, dangers, and pitfalls.

To reinforce the point, Aubrey Haines provides a view of early steamboat travel through the edited reminiscence of Serena Washburn, wife of Henry Dana Washburn, early surveyor general for Montana Territory. Mrs. Washburn's trip, with a number of mishaps including the sinking of her boat, underscores just how dangerous and exasperating such travel was.

Dangerous indeed was travel on the Bozeman Trail, which Frank Rzeczkowski considers from the viewpoint of the Crow Indians who, caught between invading whites and enemy Sioux and Cheyenne, attempted a precarious neutrality.

Jon Axline brings the reader into the railroad era with the story of the Montana, Wyoming & Southern, a short line railroad built in extreme south central Montana in the early 1900s, and former Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall looks at the West's wagon pioneers to note how their stories refute a number of myths that otherwise blur the realities of western history.

OGM Christmas Tour Set For December 5

The nineteenth annual Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour is scheduled for Sunday, December 5. The Original Governor's Mansion and other private Helena homes decorated will be part of the tour. This year's theme is "A Home Spun Christmas."

Fundraising continues for needed restoration work on the mansion. For information on the tour, call (406) 444-4710.

Two Receive Awards

Roberta Jones-Wallace, Montana Historical Society museum exhibits designer, and Todd Saarinen, Montana Historical Society preparator, received the Governor's Award for Excellence in Performance at Carroll College in September. The Governor's Award acknowledges outstanding state employees during Employee Recognition Day.

Jones-Wallace and Saarinen were selected for their outstanding creative team effort designing, building, and installing the Society's exhibits.

Society Assists TV Show

Ellen Baumler of Society's State Historic Preservation Office assisted producers for the television show "If Walls Could Talk" from Littleton, Colorado, about Montana houses.

Producers of the cable network show requested information about homes where owners had made discoveries during renovation that further explained the history of the house or information about previous residents. Baumler guided them to houses in Virginia City, Helena, Bozeman, and Butte.

The segment is expected to air sometime in December on the House and Garden cable network.

Joel Overholser Dies

Long time editor of the Fort Benton River Press Joel Overholser of Fort Benton died recently. He received the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees Award for sharing his knowledge of Fort Benton and the upper Missouri River region with scholars and students alike. He also served on the Lewis and Clark Memorial Committee in 1976.

In 1995, Governor Marc Racicot proclaimed Joel F. Overholser Day to honor his efforts in sharing Montana history and for the impact he made in Fort Benton.

Prints Available

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store has available for purchase notecards and prints of the historic pioneer cabin built in 1864 in Helena. The cabin is one of the last remaining structures representing early Helena. Proceeds will support care and preservation of the cabin.

To order, visit the Museum Store in Helena or call 1-800-243-9900. Signed and number prints and artist proofs are available by calling Janet Andrew at (406) 442-0750.

Mansfield Statue

A committee is working on plans for a statue to honor Mike Mansfield, former U.S. Senator, Senate president, and one of Montana's most recognized statesmen in the Montana State Capitol. Sculptors interested in receiving a prospectus should contact Kristin Han, Montana Arts Council, (406) 444-6430. Han will then mail information when it becomes available in November.

New Store Catalog

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store has released its 1999–2000 catalog. To place an order or receive the catalog, call 1-800-243-9900.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Through the Artist's Eye: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp," Northeast Gallery, through March 15, 2000 |
| | "A Capital Capitol," Montana Reflections Gallery, June 3, 1999, through December 31, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| | Friends Lectures at 10:30 in the Haynes Auditorium, free to the public |
| November 17, 1999 | An Ornery Bunch, readings from the WPA Montana Writers' Project 1934–1942 |
| January 19, 2000 | Readings by Salish and Kootenai tribal members |
| February 16, 2000 | Dr. Jay Kirkpatrick, "Zoos, Conservation, and Wildlife Fertility Control" |
| | March Lecture Series, Haynes Auditorium, noon. There is a fee |
| March 1, 2000 | Dave Walter, "Resurrecting Judge Crum: A Casualty of World War I" |
| March 8, 2000 | Lyndel Meikle, "Frank Conley: No Small Vices" |
| March 15, 2000 | Kirby Lambert, "Through the Artist's Eyes: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp" |
| March 22, 2000 | Marcella Sherfy and Joan Holter, "Norman 'Jeff' Holter" |

Autumn and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8–5. Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library/Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. First Saturday only of each month, 9–4:30 Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | September 7–December 31: Tuesday-Saturday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. Closed January–March 2000.Christmas Home Tour, December 5, 1999, call (406) 444-4710 for information. |
| Capitol (exterior only) | Tours by appointment only through December 1999. Call (406) 444-4789. |

To arrange tours of Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and Capitol, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.state.mt.us • 225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Service Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 151
Great Falls, MT 59405

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

DEC 07 1999

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
Vol.37, no.2

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 4676 7

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
AUG 2 4 1999
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 37 No. 2 • Summer 1999

Olsen Named New Director

Arnold "Arnie" Olsen has been named Director of the Montana Historical Society. Olsen, 49, who has worked for the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks for sixteen years, most recently as chief of operations, succeeded interim Society Director Sharon McCabe on July 1.

Tom Cook, photographer

Arnold Olsen

Olsen was selected by the executive committee of the Society's Board of Trustees after a five-month search. "This was a difficult decision. We had more than fifty applications from across the nation and as far away as Hong Kong," said Trustee President Bill Holt. "I think we have chosen the person who has the right combination of skills to do the job."

Olsen said he hopes to build on the solid foundation of the Society and its staff. "I want to find out where I can contribute most in improving and meeting the needs of all the Society's programs," he added. "I believe in working as a team." He said key issues to be addressed are funding, staffing needs, and building space.

Olsen said one focus area will be to upgrade the Society's computer system and find ways to use new technology to better serve all Montanans. "The Society is only going to succeed and grow if we form partnerships with both the public and private sectors," he said.

Olsen, who holds a doctorate in natural resource management from Colorado State University in Fort Collins, spent more than eight years managing state parks, including such historic sites as Ulm Pishkun and Bannack State Park. "Some of the issues are the same," he said.

History Camp at Virginia City Big Success

The Montana Historical Society's first History Camp was held at Virginia City in June.

Montana Historical Society Education Officer Kristin Gallas and Helena Middle School teacher Jim Schulz taught ten seventh and eighth grade students from across the state through three days of hands-on Montana history. Activities included a baseball game utilizing 1863 rules, gold panning, a cemetery tour, architecture lessons, and journal making. The campers also learned about historic preservation techniques by daubing a cabin and shingling an outhouse roof in Nevada City.

Plans call for extending next year's camp to two weeks for students and adding a one-week camp for teachers. For information, call (406) 444-4794.

Kristin Gallas, photographer

Virginia City blacksmith Jon Scott demonstrates his craft to history students Andy Rice, Jay Clarke, Lucy Madden, Tyler Evilstzer, and Chris Whalley.

Exhibit on Capitol Restoration Opens

"A Capital Capitol," a temporary exhibit celebrating the restoration of Montana's Capitol, is now open at the Montana Historical Society. The exhibit offers another way to experience the architecture, history, and art of the Montana State Capitol.

Part of the exhibit is a 15-minute video produced by Capitol High School computer technology students that tells the story of the Capitol and the people of Montana. The exhibit also features paintings by Amedee Joullin and the Gallery of Outstanding Montanans from the Capitol.

The Society will continue to offer limited tours of the Capitol's northern exterior and its grounds during the next two years of renovation. Tour headquarters is in the Montana Historical Society instead of the Capitol Rotunda.

For information call (406) 444-4789.

Utterback Appointed to Trustees Board

James Utterback of Helena has been appointed to serve as a public member of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees. Utterback has owned an automobile dealership in Helena since 1991 and was previously a certified public accountant. He succeeds Susan McDaniel, whose term expired in July.

Other Board of Trustee members reappointed as public members are Ed Henrich of Anaconda and Lee Rostad of Martinsdale.

John Burke of Butte was elected Trustees president, and Dr. Thomas Foor of Missoula was elected vice president. Burke has been on the board since 1988; Henrich and Foor since 1993; Rostad since 1997. All serve five-year terms.

PLEASE RETURN

Burlington Northern Santa Fe Supports Society Press

The Montana Historical Society Press has received $2,500 from the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Foundation to help fund Guide to Historic Kalispell, the fifth volume in the Montana Mainstreet series. Kalispell, originally established in 1892 as a Great Northern Railway division point, has a rich architectural and community history.

Mainstreet guides provide windows to the past, pointing readers to the buildings, cemeteries, and parks that act as monuments to local history. Detailed maps, historic photographs, and lively prose help these guides bring Montana's history and architecture alive.

Other Mainstreet guides include Guide to Historic Virginia City, Guide to Historic Glendive, the newly published Guide to Historic Lewistown, and Guide to Historic Hamilton (forthcoming next summer). Guide to Historic Kalispell will be authored by Kathryn L. McKay, who wrote Looking Back: A Pictorial History of the Flathead Valley, Montana, in consultation with members of Kalispell's Northwest Montana Historical Society's Heritage, Education, and Cultural Center. The book will be available next summer.

All Mainstreet guides are under 100 pages, sell for $6.95, and are available in bookstores and through the Montana Historical Society Museum Store (shipping additional). To order, call 1-800-243-9900.

Tom Cook, photographer

Patrick C. Keim, Director-Government Affairs, Burlington Northern Santa Fe, presents a check for $2,500 in support of Guide to Historic Kalispell to Martha Kohl, Editor of the Montana Historical Society Press.

Society Press Offers Three New Books

The Montana Historical Society Press will release Charlie Russell Roundup: Essays on America's Favorite Cowboy Artist, edited by Brian W. Dippie, longtime researcher of Russell's life and work in August. The book offers a wide-ranging view of Russell's life, including early press accounts, reminiscences by old friends, 38 interpretive essays by Russell scholars, and some of Russell's own writing.

The 368-page book with 15 color and 49 black-and-white illustrations is $39.95 for cloth, and $19.95 paperback.

In conjunction with Lewistown's Centennial Year, the press published A Guide to Historic Lewistown by Ellen and Ken Sievert. The guide book provides maps, historic photographs, and easily understood architectural information in a context that tells the broad story of Lewistown as it begins its second century. The 92-page Guide to Historic Lewistown has fifty illustrations and sells for $6.95.

Also new is a revised and easier-to-use version of Montana's Historical Highway Markers. The 208-page book includes maps and illustrations and sells for $10.95 plus shipping.

All books are available at Montana book stores or may be ordered from the Montana Historical Society by calling toll-free 1-800-243-9900.

Programs Feature Art, Small Towns

The Montana Historical Society will offer two public programs in August. The first, "A Celebration of Small Town Montana," will be Wednesday, August 4, from 6:30–9:00 P.M. at the Society. Intended to help promote the new Montana Historical Society Press's Mainstreet book series, it will include music, games, speakers, and an ice cream social. The Mainstreet book series features books on Glendive, Virginia City, Kalispell, Lewistown, and Hamilton.

The second public program, "Hands and Minds on Montana Art," will be held August 13 from noon to 3:00 P.M. and will include such hands-on activities as watercolor painting, hand-coloring of photographs, and sculpting for children and adults alike.

Festivity at OGM

A fundraiser for the Original Governor's Mansion is scheduled for Saturday, August 7, from 11:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. The Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board and the Montana Historical Society Museum will sponsor "Good Ol' Summertime Days" to include music, food tables, Original Governor's Mansion items for sale and other Helena sale items, raffle tickets, vintage cars, games, chalk art, contests, and an open house at the Mansion.

For information call (406) 444-4710.

Virginia City Exhibit

This summer, visit the museum store at the Virginia City Depot and see the new visitor information center, which features a new exhibit, "Virginia City: Then and Now." The exhibit uses photographs to trace Virginia City's evolution from a placer mining camp and territorial capital, through its years of dredge mining, to the town's decline and eventual rejuvenation as tourist mecca.

Bradley Research Grants Awarded

Gary D. Libecap, professor of economics and law at the University of Arizona, is the 1999 Senior Bradley Fellow. He will examine information problems that afflicted homesteaders and other post-frontier settlers on the North American arid plains, concentrating on Montana between 1900 and 1930.

Matthew Basso is the 1999 Graduate Bradley Fellow. A doctoral candidate in the American Studies Program at the University of Minnesota, Basso will investigate the role of masculinity in Montana industries during World War II.

The Gold Rush in Montana

Few events influenced the course of American history quite like the rush for gold in the American West.

Whether it was California in 1849, Colorado and Nevada in 1859, Idaho and Montana in the early 1860s, or Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, or South Dakota in subsequent years, gold rushes changed national perceptions and accelerated like few other events the course of settlement, ethnic and other immigration, industrialization, transportation, wealth accumulation, and conflict with native peoples.

E. Hall Martin,
The Prospector

Indeed, in this, the year of the sesquicentennial observance of the California gold rush, it seemed fitting to dedicate an entire issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History to western gold rushes. The Autumn issue of Montana therefore offers articles that consider this theme.

In an opening article Elliott West assesses the impact of western gold rushes on the national imagination. As West explains, gold rushes put history on fast forward; the pace of development accelerated far beyond anyone's imagination.

In other articles, Malcolm Rohrbough assesses why the forty-niners, once arrived in California, were reluctant to go home. They owed it to their families to strike it rich.

In addition, Martin Ridge assesses the use and force of law as well as the lawlessness in the early years of the rush to California; Liping Zhu explains how Chinese argonauts, who followed almost every western gold rush, were part of a great diaspora of Chinese miners throughout the Pacific Rim; and Ellen Baumler considers the history of Virginia City, Montana's earliest territorial capital, through the architecture that even today allows visitors to perceive the evolution of a gold camp.

In addition, the Autumn issue will continue several new Montana features, including "Historical Reflections, Photos from Montana's Past," "The Montana Traveler," which focuses on state historic sites, and "Gleanings from H-West," a column of informational items taken from the internet.

First Lady Helps Honor Society Volunteers

First Lady Theresa Racicot honored Montana Historical Society volunteers in April at the Montana Club. More than seventy Society volunteers provided almost 6,000 hours of service to the Society last year, roughly equivalent to three full-time employees.

The 1999 Director's Award went to Mary Brewer, who volunteered two days a week to work in the Museum Store, representing the Society and Montana to thousands of visitors each year.

The Society has three groups of volunteers: the muses, who organize and serve Society receptions and other events; docents, who led nearly 500 public tours last year; and the department assistant volunteers (DAVs) who work on everything from cataloging to transcribing oral histories to assisting with staff projects.

DAV awards went to Jane Addy, Mary Brewer, and Doris Hitt, each of whom contributed more than 300 hours of volunteer service. Dora Howard and Audrey Levitan donated 200 hours and Carolyn Cain, Marlene Carbis, Barbara Grimes, Teresa Hartzog, Marge Jacobson, Inge Jacobson, Doris McMurray, Bob Morgan, Doris Neu, Peggy Smith, Charlotte Thomas, and Leoiti Waite volunteered 100 hours each.

Pam Hulbert, Sheila Sullivan, and Marilyn Tutwiler were honored as docents along with Doris McMurray and Pam Hurlbert as muses. Sandra Penrod received the Intern Award for volunteering in the Society's Education Program.

DeCamp Exhibit Opens at Society

A new exhibit on Helena artist/photographer Ralph E. DeCamp has opened at the Society in Helena. It offers more than fifty paintings, twenty-five photographs, and a variety of interpretive material from DeCamp's career. The exhibit continues until March 15, 2000.

DeCamp, a prominent landscape painter and friend of Charlie Russell's who featured water in many of his works, painted and photographed the Missouri River near Helena, the Bitterroot River, the West Gallatin River, Lake McDermott, Flathead Lake, the Rosebud River, and Holter Dam. Other favorite subjects included the Mission Mountains and the Granite Range.

An exhibit opening was held at the Society April 22 for what is believed to be the first major showing to include both DeCamp's paintings and photographs. It will continue through March 2000.

Library Leads Tours for Genealogists

The Society's Library-Archives gave genealogists from the Montana State Genealogical Society and the Great Falls Genealogy Society tours of the archives recently. Such tours are intended to give researchers a better idea of the types of records available at the Society, what the Society does, and how it is done.

For a similar tour, call the archives at (406) 444-4774, or the library at (406) 444-2681, or write to the Montana Historical Society at P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

A pamphlet of genealogical resources is available at the Society. Family history materials available in the library-archives are listed, along with procedures for using confidential records and information on ordering microfilm or borrowing books on interlibrary loan. The pamphlet is free. Write to the address above or e-mail the library at mthislib@mcn.net.

Curriculum Guides to Montana Available

The Society's Education Office and the Publications Program have produced the second edition of the curriculum guide series for the Society's award-winning quarterly history journal Montana The Magazine of Western History.

The new lesson plan relates to articles from the Summer 1999 special Yellowstone and Western Images issue. The interdisciplinary lessons are designed for use in Montana, American, and world history high school classes as well as in art, photography, and art history classes.

Curriculum guides also will be developed for upcoming special issues of Montana on western gold rushes and transportation.

Teachers interested in using this exciting new resource should call Kristin Gallas at (406) 444-4794.

History Conference Set for October 14–16 in Helena

The 1999 Montana History Conference will be held in Helena on October 14–16. The theme, "Reflections: Montana at the Millenium," addresses a diverse selection of Montana and western history topics that reflect on the millenium and the century, including such people and events that have shaped Montana as Senator Mike Mansfield, the Mann Gulch Fire, Joseph Kinsey Howard, and the Archie Bray Foundation.

Conference brochures will be mailed in September. For information call (406) 444-4794.

Video Examines Art's Role

The Montana Historical Society Press has distributed a provocative new video on contemporary Montana artists. "Montana Defined by Images: An Artist's Impression with Dana Boussard" explores the work of contemporary Montana artists and how they have reflected transition and conflict in the state's physical and cultural landscape over the past 30 years. The video is a project of the Center for the Rocky Mountain West at the University of Montana, Missoula.

"The Society was pleased to advise the Center for the Rocky Mountain West on the technical aspects of the video's manufacture and distribution," Martha Kohl, Press editor, said. "The Society's Teacher Advisory Panel reviewed it and critiqued the accompanying curriculum material."

The video is available statewide for $19.95. A classroom version, including a teacher's guide and packet of contemporary art, is available for $24.95 plus shipping by calling toll-free 1-800-243-9900.

Industrial Trips Set

The Klepetko Chapter of the Society for Industrial Archaeology is sponsoring a two-day field trip to industrial sites in the Butte area on September 25–26. Highlights include a tour of Advanced Silicon Materials, Inc., Mycotech, and the Welch Quarry. For information contact Brian Shovers at (406) 444-2681 or (406) 443-6640 (after 6:00).

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Through the Artist's Eye: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp," Northeast Gallery, through March 15, 2000 |
| | "A Capital Capitol," Montana Reflections Gallery, June 3, 1999, through December 31, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| August 4 | Evenings at the Society, "A Celebration of Small Town Montana," 6:30–9 |
| August 7 | "Good Ol' Summertime Days," 11–4, Original Governor's Mansion, Helena |
| August 13 | Family Fridays at the Society, "Hands and Minds on Montana Art," 12–3 |
| August 19–22 | Western Rendezvous of Art, Helena, for information call (406) 447-8481 |
| September 20–25 | Montana Archaeology Week |
| October 14–16 | Montana History Conference, Helena |

Summer and Autumn Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | To Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8–6, weekends and holidays, 9–5. After Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8–5. Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library/Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30 Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To Labor Day: Tuesday–Sunday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begims at 4. September 7–December 31: Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. |
| Capitol (exterior only) | To Labor Day: tours begin on the hour. Daily, 9–5, last tour begins at 4; starting at the Montana Historical Society. |

To arrange guided group tours of the Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Service Requested

Non profit Org
U.S. Postage
PAID
151
MT

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

S
978.6
H6m
Vol.37, No.1

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 6025 5

Montana Post

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 37 No. 1 • Spring 1999

Society Sponsors Bozeman Trail Heritage Conference

BOZEMAN TRAIL HERITAGE CONFERENCE
JULY 28–31, 1999, BOZEMAN, MONTANA

The Montana Historical Society is among the sponsors of the Bozeman Trail Heritage Conference to be held July 28-31, 1999, in Bozeman, Montana. The conference will explore the historical, cultural, and social importance of the Bozeman Trail, the last great gold rush trail.

Included will be presentations by well-known historians, anthropologists, art historians, and trail experts on various facets of the trail's history, from military, Indian, and environmental perspectives, to art, literature, and material culture. Among the presenters will be Robert M. Utley, Elliott West, James P. Ronda, Dan Flores, Joyce Szabo, Jerome Greene, Paul L. Hedren, Susan Badger Doyle, John McDermott, Douglas C. McChristian, Raymond J. DeMallie, Phil Deloria, Richard White, Glenda Riley, Charles E. Rankin, Sherry Smith, Frank Rzeczkowski, Joyce Badgley Hunsaker, Michael P. Malone, Ellen Baumler, and Jeff Tiberi.

Continued on page 3

Sharon McCabe Interim Director

Tom Cook

Sharon McCabe

Sharon McCabe, Centralized Services Administrator, has been named interim director for the Montana Historical Society. McCabe, who has been with the Society since 1988, started with the Society as an accountant. Given additional administrative responsibilities over the years, she was named Centralized Services Administrator in 1992.

McCabe is a graduate of Carroll College with a double major in accounting and business administration. She is a certified public accountant and a member of the Montana Society of CPAs. A Montana native, she is married to Mike McCabe, and they have three children.

McCabe was named interim director in December to replace former director Brian Cockhill, who retired from the Society as of the end of 1998. The MHS Board of Trustees is conducting a search for a new permanent director.

DeCamp Exhibit
Opens April 22
at the Society 7:00–9:00 P.M.

PLEASE RETURN

Virginia City to Host History Camp

The first annual History Camp at Virginia and Nevada cities will be held June 13-16. The Montana Historical Society through a grant from the Dennis and Phyllis Washington Charitable Foundation, is sponsoring the camp for twenty Montana middle schoolers. To qualify, students must write an essay on a topic chosen by the selection committee and receive a recommendation from a teacher. Deadline for submission is April 15.

Society Education Officer Kristin Gallas and Helena Middle School teacher Jim Schulz will coordinate and direct the camp. Activities will include cooking over a campfire, gold mining, architecture, preservation, conservation, blacksmithing, and performing a vaudeville show. Instructors from the Montana Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Department, the Department of Transportation, the Department of Environmental Quality, Bannack State Park, and the Society's Historic Preservation Office will staff the camp.

For information call (406) 444-4794.

MHS Photograph Archives

Virginia City, Montana 1867

Authors to Speak on Yellowstone, Copper, Montana

The Montana Historical Society will offer its fourth annual "Author Talks" beginning in April. Featured authors will include Donald Spritzer, Lee Whittlesey, Andrea Merrill and Judy Jacobson, and Janet Finn. Authors will give their talks each Wednesday starting on April 28, with the final talk to be given on May 19. There is no charge, and the talks begin at noon in the Haynes Auditorium at the Society in Helena.

Donald Spritzer will kick off the series on April 28 with his talk based on his book Montana Roadside History (1999).

On May 5, Lee Whittlesey, Yellowstone's park historian, will discuss the lessons to be learned from the more than three hundred accidental deaths in Yellowstone, based on his book Death in Yellowstone: Accidents and Foolhardiness in the First National Park (1995).

On May 12, authors Andrea Merrill and Judy Jacobson will discuss their book, Montana Almanac (1997).

On May 19, University of Montana

Continued on page 2

‘Family Fridays’ Set For Summer

The Montana Historical Society will host several programs as part of its Summer at the Society series, including “Family Fridays” on June 18, July 16, and August 13.

“Family Fridays” will include a series of hands-on activities centered on specific topics. June’s Friday theme, “At Home on the Montana Farm,” will consist of hands-on agricultural activities. The State Capitol building will be featured in July as it undergoes extensive restoration and renovation, with scheduled activities on architecture and building. The August presentation will celebrate art in Montana. Painting and photography are planned in conjunction with the Society’s R. E. DeCamp art exhibit, which opens April 22.

The Society also will offer “Evenings at the Society” on July 27, and August 4. The evening talks will focus on Montana history and books about Montana. For information contact Kristin Gallas at (406) 444-4794.

Art Rendezvous Is August 19–22

The twenty-first Northwest Rendezvous Group Show will be held in Helena August 19-22, 1999. Last year, the art show, which features some of the finest art in the country, returned to Helena. Paintings, watercolors, sculptures, oils, and bronzes by nationally-recognized artists will be sold.

The Montana Historical Society will host an opening reception and seminars; the Helena Civic Center will host the art show, artist reception, gala dinner, and final breakfast.

To receive a schedule or for information call the Montana Historical Society Museum at (406) 444-4710.

Montana Club Open for Public Tours

Governor Marc Racicot, Secretary of State Mike Cooney, and members of the Montana Legislature gathered last month in Helena at the historic six-story Montana Club to dedicate a historic sign. Ellen Baumler, the Society’s State Historic Preservation sign program coordinator, helped unveil the historic sign.

Noting the Montana Club’s importance to state and local history, Baumler urged that the building be preserved and interpreted for everyone. A prestigious men’s only club established in 1885, the Montana Club hosted copper kings, millionaires, and politicians.

J. Anne Roberts, Montana Club manager, said proceeds from public tours of the building will help the Capitol Restoration Project for the Montana State Capitol.

Tours for twenty or more people may be booked now by calling (406) 442-5980. Regularly scheduled public tours will begin June 1.

OGM Talk, Tour Scheduled

The Friends of the Society will host a lecture by Jennifer Bottomly O’Looney, former Society volunteer coordinator in April. She will discuss the decorative tiles at the Original Governor’s Mansion. The talk will begin at 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday, April 21. The annual Montana Historical Society Volunteer Appreciation Lunch will follow immediately. For information on either the talk or the lunch, contact Lynn Israel, volunteer coordinator, at (406) 444-9553.

Also, the Original Governor’s Mansion will join the Helena Pioneer Cabin to hold its seventh annual Secret Garden Tour and Luncheon on Sunday, June 27.

The tour will feature the area’s most beautiful gardens, as well as the Original Governor’s Mansion and the historic Pioneer Cabin. A lunch of edible flowers and herbs will be served with a different course being served at each participating house.

For information call (406) 443-7641.

Authors

continued from page 1

professor Janet Finn will examine the relationships between the Anaconda Copper Mining Company’s holdings in Montana and Chile based on her book Tracing the Veins of Copper, Culture, and Community from Butte to Chuquicamata (1998).

Each forty-five minute talk will be followed by a booksigning. For information call (406) 444-4794.

Cook Papers Now Available

The Montana Historical Society Archives has completed processing of the A. B. Cook Papers, 1882–1940. Cook was a Montana businessman, state auditor, cattle breeder, and rancher.

The collection documents Cook’s real estate ventures in Missoula, his work building a reservoir in Bynum, Montana, the Canadian work of the Cook Construction Company, and his mining activities. A large portion of the collection contains extensive correspondence on the development of his internationally known prize-winning Hereford cattle herd. It also contains pedigrees, breeding records, and registration materials.

The Society’s Photograph Archives received hundreds of photographs that were separated from the Cook collection. They have been processed and are ready to be viewed in Photograph Archives.

For more information, call Ellie Arguimbau, archivist, at (406) 444-4774.

Capitol to Close

The Montana State Capitol building in Helena will be closed in April 1999 through December 31, 2000, for restoration and renovation. Tours will be held but on modified schedules during that time.

Following the state legislature’s adjournment, exterior Capitol tours will be offered in April and May of 1999 by reservation only. Beginning June 1 and continuing through September 4, 1999, exterior tours of the State Capitol building will start on the hour, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., at the Montana Historical Society. The tour will include the Society’s Capitol restoration exhibit after the exhibit opens on June 3 at the Montana Historical Society. For tour information call (406) 444-4789.

Miller New Technician

Molly Miller, formerly of the Western Historical Manuscript Collection at the University of Missouri, has joined the Montana Historical Society Archives as archival technician.

Miller received her bachelor’s degree in history from Hiram College in 1997 and her master’s degree (MLIS), specializing in archives, from the University of Pittsburgh in 1998. Her primary responsibilities will be to process small collections, legislative records, and accession records.

Montana to Feature Yellowstone, Western Images

The first photograph ever taken of Old Faithful, other early images of the Yellowstone country by all-but forgotten photographers, early sketches and water colors from an 1859 trek to Wyoming by Albert Bierstadt and other artists, and the art and photography of Ralph DeCamp, whose distinctive work hangs in the Montana State Capitol in Helena. Such are the topics that contribute to a special theme issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History on "Yellowstone and Western Images."

Yellowstone National Park historian Lee Whittlesey leads off the Summer issue with an overview of the many photographers who sought to capture scenes of "Wonderland" in the early years after the park's founding in 1872. James Brust then tells the tale of a remarkable find of long-lost photographs in the New-York Historical Society by Thomas Hine that include the first-ever view of Old Faithful in eruption. And Steve Jackson documents the life and travails of Joshua Crissman, another early park photographer who fell into obscurity after working alongside Yellowstone's most famous photographer, William Henry Jackson.

New-York Historical Society

Old Faithful by Thomas Hine, 1871

In addition, Jourdan and Alan Houston document the 1859 western trek of Albert Bierstadt, Francis Seth Frost, Henry Hitchings, and other artists under direction of Frederick Lander. Lander's mission was to survey a wagon road west, but the trip's most important contribution may have been a cache of newly discovered western art and illustrations.

MHS Museum Curator Kirby Lambert considers the life and art of Ralph DeCamp, turn-of-the-century Helena artist and photographer who won recognition for his landscapes, some of the most famous of which depicted the Gates of the Mountains area on the Missouri River. Lambert also has curated a Society exhibit on DeCamp that opens April 22.

Conference continued from page 1

Purpose of the conference is to bring together scholars, authors, students, enthusiasts, and individuals to promote broader understanding and public awareness of western trail and settlement history, of intercultural relations, and of historic sites.

The conference includes three days of sessions plus tours of the Bozeman Trail, demonstrations, workshops, entertainment, meals and a banquet, and an all-day trip to historic Virginia City. It is funded in part by grants from the Montana Committee for the Humanities and the Wyoming Council for the Humanities, both affiliates of the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Montana Department of Transportation, Montana State University, and the Museum of the Rockies.

Registration information is available on the Society's web site at: http://www.his.mt.gov; by writing to: Bozeman Trail Heritage Conference, Montana Historical Society, Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201; or by calling (406) 444-3761.

Montana Lesson Plan Completed

The Education Office and the Publications Office of the Montana Historical Society, have produced the first in a series of curriculum guides for Montana The Magazine of Western History. The first edition curriculum guide contains lesson plans relating to articles from the Autumn 1998 special issue on Butte. The interdisciplinary lessons are designed for use in Montana, American, and world history high school classes.

Other editions of the magazine curriculum will be developed for upcoming special issues on Yellowstone and western images, the gold rush, and transportation.

If you are a teacher or know a teacher who would be interested in this new resource, call Kristin Gallas at (406) 444-4794.

Student Article Competition Set

The Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1999 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award.

The award is named in honor of two of Montana's best-known historians, Merrill G. Burlingame and K. Ross Toole, and is given to the best article-length manuscript submitted for publication in Montana by an undergraduate or graduate student. Essays should be on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a plaque, cash award, and possible publication of the article in Montana.

Students must be enrolled in a college or university and sponsored by a faculty member to be eligible.

Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 16, 1999. For information, write Burlingame–Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Millennium Reflections Focus of 1999 Montana History Conference

The twenty-sixth annual Montana History Conference will be held in Helena October 14-16, 1999. This year's theme is "Reflections: Montana at the Millennium." Conference session and tour topics will include the Mann Gulch fire, Montana literature, the Archie Bray Foundation, Helena's rock quarries, the State Capitol building, cultural revival on the state's reservations, architecture, "jerks" in Montana history, and the finest of student presentations.

Keynote speakers will include Brian W. Dippie, professor of history, University of Victoria, Victoria, British Columbia, and Michael Steiner, professor and former chair of the American Studies Department, California State University, Fullerton.

Dippie, whose new book, Charlie Russell Roundup: Essays on America's Favorite Cowboy Artist, will be published later this year by the Montana Historical Society Press, is a noted expert on Russell. Steiner is winner of the 1998 Vivian Paladin Award for best article to appear in Montana that year.

A complete conference schedule will be available in June. For information call (406) 444-4794.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Through the Artist's Eye: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp," Northeast Gallery, through March 15, 2000 |
| | "Montana's Capitol Restoration," Montana Reflections Gallery, June 3, 1999, through December 31, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| April 21, 1999 | Friends Meeting at 9:00, third floor conference room, followed by Jennifer Bottomly O'Looney, "Decorative Tiles at the Original Governor's Mansion," at 10:30, in the Haynes Auditorium. Free and open to the public. |
| April 21, 1999 | Volunteer Appreciation Lunch, Montana Club, noon. |
| April 22, 1999 | Exhibit opening of "Through the Artist's Eye: The Paintings and Photographs of R. E. DeCamp," 7–9:00 P.M. |
| | Author Talks are held in the Haynes Auditorium at noon. They are free. |
| April 28, 1999 | Donald Spritzer, "Montana Roadside History," book signing follows |
| May 5, 1999 | Lee Whittlesey, "Death in Yellowstone: Accidents and Foolhardiness in the First National Park," book signing follows |
| May 12, 1999 | Andrea Merrill and Judy Jacobson, "Montana Almanac," book signing follows |
| May 19, 1999 | Janet Finn, "Tracing the Veins: Copper Culture and Community," book signing follows |
| June 13–16 | First annual History Camp at Virginia City and Nevada City |
| June 18 | Family Fridays at the Society, "At Home on the Montana Farm," 12–3:00 P.M. |
| June 27 | Seventh annual Secret Garden Tour and Luncheon, for information call (406) 443-7641 |
| July 16 | Family Fridays at the Society, "Building Montana's Capitol," 12–3:00 P.M. |
| July 27 | Evenings at the Society, "Statues and Sculpture of the Capitol," 7–8:30 P.M. |
| August 4 | Evenings at the Society, "A Celebration of Small Town Montana," 7–8:30 P.M. |
| August 13 | Family Fridays at the Society, "Art in Montana," 12–3:00 P.M. |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | To May 28: Monday—Friday, 8–5. Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. May 29 to Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8–6, weekends and holidays, 9–5. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To May 28: Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5, tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4. May 29 to Labor Day: Tuesday–Sunday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour. Last tour begins at 4 |
| Capitol (exterior only) | To May 28: tours by reservation. May 29 to Labor Day: tours begin on the hour, starting at the Montana Historical Society, daily, 9–5. Last tour begins at 4. |

To arrange guided group tours of the Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

---

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Service Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 151
Great Falls, MT 59405

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

DEC 01 1999

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
Vol. 36 #3

SHELVE WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 1472 4

MONTANA POST
Montana Historical Society
Vol. 36 No. 3 • Autumn 1998

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 19 1998
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Annual History Conference Set for Great Falls and Fort Benton

The Twenty-fifth Annual Montana History Conference will be held October 8–10 in Great Falls and Fort Benton. The conference will feature stagecoach, steamboat, and railroad transportation; hydroelectric power; coal mining; Montana sketches, art, and murals; the Black Eagle smelter; the Métis; and the Blackfeet Confederacy. Its theme is "At the Crossroads: Life in Northern Montana."

Conference events will include a reception at the Lewis and Clark National Historic Trail Interpretive Center in Great Falls, living history interpretations, the annual awards banquet, and tours of Fort Benton and historic grain elevators.

- Thursday, October 8: Workshops on cataloging records, Montana archaeology and heritage learning, and living history are scheduled during the day, with an evening reception at the Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center that will include living history interpretations by Ritchie Doyle and Jeanne Eder as William Clark and Sacagawea.

- Friday, October 9: Sessions scheduled during the day on the Métis and Blackfeet, railroads and coal mining, the Black Eagle community, and hydroelectric

Continued on page 2

Society Friends Sponsor Programs

The Friends of the Society, the Montana Historical Society's volunteer organization, kicked off its 1998–1999 season in September, with a joint presentation by Montana Historical Society curator Kirby Lambert and exhibit designer Roberta Jones-Wallace, titled "They Headed Us North: Exploring Alberta's Museums." The slide show summarized their work with several Canadian museums this summer.

On Wednesday, October 21, State Historic Preservation historian Ellen Baumler will trace the history of Butte prostitution through architecture and the storied past of Butte's Dumas Hotel in a presentation titled "Devil's Perch: Prostitution from Suite to Cellar in Butte."

Continued on page 3

Western Rendezvous of Art a Big Hit

The Western Rendezvous of Art held its twentieth anniversary Northwest Rendezvous Group Show in Helena in August. The Montana Historical Society, a sponsor of the event, hosted the opening reception and two seminars.

"This twentieth annual event exceeded expectations and topped previous sales with about $100,000 in sales and another $30,000 from the quick draw auction," said event organizer Bob Morgan. "We are all really pleased."

Plans are already being made for next year's Rendezvous to be held in Helena on August 19–22.

Funds raised support the Helena Civic Center Board for renovations, the Northwest Rendezvous Group of Artists, and the Montana Historical Society Foundation to fund art acquisitions.

Jerry Cooper, photographer

Artist Carolyn Anderson is shown at the Quick Draw held at the Kleffner Ranch near Helena as part of the Western Rendezvous of Art.

Winter Montana to Feature Mansfield, Skiing, Norman Maclean

From a necessity for some and dare-devil fun for a few others to a recreational sport for the masses, downhill skiing in the West has changed much since its inception before World War II. In many places, ownership has shifted from small-time operators to multi-national corporations, and the effects have been wrenching. In tracing this transformation through the experience of one such western place—Steamboat Springs, Colorado—Hal Rothman tells a cautionary tale of money, development, and local pride for the Winter issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Also for the Winter issue, Alan Weltzien tells of how Norman Maclean tried for almost a decade to write a book about George Armstrong Custer and Custer's defeat at the Little Bighorn before turning to autobiography and writing his award-winning A River Runs Through It And Other Stories. Weltzien bases his article on almost twenty years of correspondence between Maclean and prizewinning historian Robert M. Utley.

In addition, Verlain McDonald retraces the history of the Producers News, the Communist newspaper operated by the irrepressible Charles Taylor in eastern Montana in the 1920s and 1930s; Stan Howard writes of his parents' success in producing special varieties of seed corn for eastern Montana; William Furdell provides a look at Great Falls during World War II; and U.S. Senate historian Don Ritchie offers a Capitol Hill perspective on Montana's celebrated Senator Mike Mansfield.

PLEASE RETURN

Continued from page 1 — Montana History Conference Set for October 8-10

power in Great Falls, with the annual awards banquet that evening.

- Saturday, October 10: Presentations continue on "Jerks in Montana History"; the artwork of Granville Stuart, Julius Seyler, and Robert Morgan; the Métis; a walking tour of Fort Benton, and a guided tour of several historic grain elevators.
- Banquet and Luncheons: Carlos Schwantes, professor of history at the University of Idaho, will speak on stagecoach and steamboat travel in Montana at the Friday luncheon; Dan Flores, A. B. Hammond Professor of History, University of Montana, Missoula, will give the Friday banquet address on the Freeman and Custis expedition of 1806; and Gerald Morin, president of the Métis National Council, will speak on the Métis people at Saturday's luncheon.
- Tours: In addition to a walking tour of historic Fort Benton, Bruce Selyem, photographer at the Museum of the Rockies and president of the Montana Grain Elevators Preservation Society, will lead a tour of historic grain elevators in rural Fort Benton on Saturday afternoon.
- Other Events: A silent auction for the Museums Association of Montana and a roundtable book signing sponsored by the Montana Historical Society Press for guest speakers and other authors are both planned Friday.

For conference information, please call (406) 444-4794. Conference programs have been mailed.

Society Joins Time Travelers

The Montana Historical Society has joined the Time Travelers Reciprocal Benefits Program, a new national organization that gives special benefits to Society Special Members at participating museums across the country.

Twenty-two historical museums in sixteen states are already members of the Time Travelers Program.

To qualify for benefits, Special Members need only show their Society membership card to the participating museum. Benefits range from museum store discounts to free admission and parking.

'Records' Booklet Available

A new booklet, titled "Records at Risk: A Report on Montana's Historical Records and a Strategic Plan for Their Survival" and published by the State Historical Records Advisory Board (SHRAB), is available. The report identifies goals, recommendations, and strategies for saving Montana's records and attempts to answer how local institutions and libraries should preserve their records and assess their value.

Montana SHRAB, an advisory body for historical records planning and coordination in Montana, seeks to help Montanans realize the importance of their documentary heritage. SHRAB board members are appointed by the Montana governor.

The National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC), a grant-awarding arm of the National Archives, helped fund the booklet. For a copy, contact SHRAB, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Museum to Feature Warrior Artists

The Montana Historical Society will exhibit some dozen ledger art drawings in the lobby of the museum in Helena. The exhibit will feature the work of White Bear, a Cheyenne Indian, Elk Head, a Gros Ventre, and Curley, a Crow.

Both White Bear and Elk Head served time in the Montana Territorial Prison in Deer Lodge in the 1880s and while there executed a number of ledger art drawings, which are now part of the Montana Historical Society Museum collection. An article on both men that featured full-color reproductions of their work appeared in the Summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History. Curley, a scout for George Custer and the Seventh Cavalry at the Little Bighorn in 1876, later produced Indian portraits. The ledger designs were drawn with graphite, crayon, watercolor, and tempera on paper.

The exhibit will show from October 1 through March 16, 1999. For information call Kirby Lambert at (406) 444-4711.

Original drawings, made by "Curley", Crow Indian Scout, only living survivor of the Custer
Massacre on the Little Big Horn River, Montana, June 26, 1876. These pictures executed winter of 1886 and 1887, on Gray Bull River, Wyoming.
Donated by Chas. I. Reason

MHS Museum, Helena

Ledger art by Curley, as pictured above, and others will be on display at the Society in Helena through March 16.

MHS Foundation Urges Donations

The Montana Historical Society Foundation has created a brochure to explain how donors may enable the Foundation to help the Montana Historical Society expand its mission and better serve the public.

Established in 1988, the Foundation, a private, nonprofit organization that seeks to generate public support for the Society, has identified major projects that deserve immediate support.

First, expand gallery and auditorium space at the Society museum in Helena. Specifically, money is needed to remodel the Society's southeast gallery for rotating exhibits and to expand the auditorium for greater public programming.

Second, restore the Daly Mansion in Hamilton, Montana, so that it might accommodate guest shows and auctions as well as the state's art collection.

Third, create an endowment for the Montana Historical Society Press to help it expand its publication of fine quality books on Montana and western history.

To receive a brochure or for information write to the MHS Foundation at P.O. Box 863, Helena, MT 59624 or call (406) 449-3770.

DeCamp Exhibit to Open in April

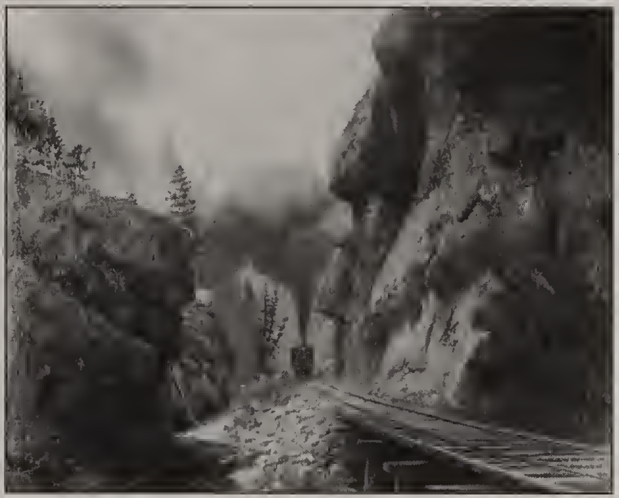
An exhibit of legendary Helena artist Ralph Earll DeCamp's photographs and paintings will open in April 1999 in the Northeast Gallery of the Montana Historical Society and continue through March 15, 2000.

DeCamp, noted for his landscape paintings and photographs, and a life-long friend of Charles M. Russell, painted ten scenic murals for the Montana State Capitol in Helena. DeCamp also painted the Gates of the Mountains near Helena and was commissioned by the Northern Pacific Railroad to produce paintings of Yellowstone National Park for its home office in St. Paul.



MHS Museum, Helena

Jawbone Railroad, Sixteen Mile Canyon
(oil on canvas, R. E. DeCamp, 1904)

New Volunteer Coordinator Named

Lynn Israel has been named volunteer coordinator for the Montana Historical Society. As coordinator, she will work with individuals who donate time to various programs.

Before coming to the Society, Israel worked for seven years in the Personnel Department of the Montana Department of Transportation in Helena and also worked as the employee incentive coordinator for that department. She received her master's degree in public administration at the University of Montana, Missoula.

Israel will concentrate her efforts on increasing volunteer participation at the Society. She replaces Jennifer Bottomly-O'Looney, who moved to Kalispell.

OGM Christmas Home Tour—December 6

The sixth annual Secret Garden Tour and Ice Cream Social, which featured ten gardens, the Original Governor's Mansion, and the historic Pioneer Cabin, attracted some one hundred people this summer. Homeowners and garden experts were on hand to answer specific questions and note special plantings.

The eighteenth annual Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour is scheduled for Sunday, December 6. The Original Governor's Mansion and other private Helena homes decorated for the season will be part of the tour. This year's theme is "A World of Holiday Traditions."

Fundraising continues for needed restoration work on the mansion. On the Christmas tour, call (406) 444-4710.

Museum Store Catalog to be Mailed Soon

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store will release its 1998–1999 catalog in mid-October. New items include ledger art notecards, a lithograph of the recently unveiled Charles M. Russell painting, "O. H. Cowboys Roping a Steer," and a lithograph and notecards of the E. S. Paxson capitol mural "Lewis and Clark at Three Forks," featured on the paperback edition of Stephen Ambrose's Undaunted Courage. Both new lithographs have also been transferred to canvas.

These new items are available at the Museum Store in Helena. To place an order or receive the new catalog, call 1-800-243-9900.

Friends-Sponsored Programs Set

Continued from page 1

On Wednesday, November 18, Society research historian Dave Walter will speak on Christmas traditions of the past in a talk titled "Christmastime in Montana: Two Centuries of Celebration."

Allen Chronister and Jeff Tiberi will give talks in January and February respectively.

Friends-sponsored talks are free and open to the public. Friends meetings are held the third Wednesday of each month at 9:00 a.m. in the third floor conference room at the Society in Helena. Programs begin at 10:00 a.m. in the Haynes Auditorium. Call (406) 444-4794 for information.

Montana Mainstreets Guides Coming

A new architectural guide to the gold rush-era town of Virginia City inaugurates the Montana Historical Society Press's new Montana Mainstreets series.

Released this fall, Montana Mainstreets, Volume One, Guide to Historic Virginia City, was written by Marilyn Grant, former associate editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Guide to Historic Virginia City explores Montana's former territorial capital and center of trade for Alder Gulch, home to the richest placer mines in the world.

Guide to Historic Glendive, volume two of the Mainstreets series, also published this fall, takes readers to this eastern Montana railroad and ranching town to explore the Northern Pacific Railroad heritage of the "Gate City" of the Yellowstone valley.

Funded in part by the Montana Cultural Trust and the communities they feature, Montana Mainstreet guides explain each community's history and direct readers to the buildings, cemeteries, and parks that act as monuments to Montana's history. Guide to Historic Lewistown is forthcoming next year. Mainstreet guides may be ordered for $6.95 plus shipping by calling 1-800-243-9900.

Lewis and Clark Book Already in Second Printing

Voyages of Discovery: Essays on the Lewis and Clark Expedition, a new anthology edited by James P. Ronda and published by the Montana Historical Society Press in June, is already in second printing. Voyages of Discovery has proven immensely popular, selling almost 4,000 copies in its first three months.

The book conveniently gathers the best and most thought-provoking essays on the Corps of Discovery under one cover, including articles by John Allen, Bernard DeVoto, Donald Jackson, Gary Moulton, and James P. Ronda.

The 368-page book contains five maps, twenty illustrations, and an extensive bibliography. Call the Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900 to order a first edition hardback for $45.00 or a second edition paperback for $19.95 (shipping charges additional.)

Give special Butte issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History as a gift, call 1-800-243-9900.

Gallas, Society Education Officer

Tom Cook, photographer

Kristin Gallas

Kristin Gallas of Colchester, Vermont, has been hired as Montana Historical Society education officer. Gallas, who received her master's degree in museum education from George Washington University, has worked at the Decatur House Museum, the Smithsonian Institution, and The Navy Museum in Washington, D.C.

Gallas will continue building the successful programs and services the Society already provides to Montanans. She hopes to develop more interactive opportunities in the Museum for all ages.

Gallas succeeds Marcella Sherfy, who resigned to become Visitor Services Bureau Chief at the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks earlier this year.

Think Gift Certificates

Need a versatile gift for the holiday season? How about a gift certificate from the Montana Historical Society Museum Store. For as little as $20.00, gift certificates can be mailed with a gift card and Museum Store catalog to just about anywhere. Call 1-800-243-9900 for details.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201
Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Off the Top: Hats & History," Montana Reflections Gallery, through April 25, 1999 |
| | "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," Northeast Gallery, through March 1999 |
| | "Native American Ledger Art," Society Lobby, October 1, 1998 through March 16, 1999 |
| | "R. E. DeCamp Retrospective," Northeast Gallery, April 15, 1999 through March 15, 2000 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

Friends meetings are scheduled on the third Wednesday of each month at 9:00 in the third floor conference room at the Society. Presentations begin at 10:00 in the Haynes Auditorium. Both are open to the public.

| | |
|---|---|
| October 8-10 | 25th Annual Montana History Conference, Great Falls and Fort Benton |
| October 21 | Friends Meeting followed by Ellen Baumler, "Devil's Perch: Prostitution From Suite to Cellar in Butte" |
| November 18 | Friends Meeting followed by Dave Walter, "Christmastime in Montana: Two Centuries of Celebration" |
| December 6 | Original Governor's Mansion Annual Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing Street, Helena, 1–5. Proceeds benefit mansion restoration projects. For information, call (406) 444-4710. |
| January 20 | Friends Meeting followed by Allen Chronister, "Warrior Artists in the Early Reservation Period" |
| February 17 | Friends Meeting followed by Jeff Tiberi, "Nevada City" |

Autumn and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | Monday—Friday, 8–5. Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To December 31: Tuesday—Saturday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. Group tours by reservation January–March only. |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily, 8-6. Group tours by reservation only. |

To arrange guided group tours of the Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, & the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

~~Non-profit Org.~~
~~U.S. Postage~~
~~PAID~~
~~Permit No. 151~~
Great Falls, MT 59405

Deadhead

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.36, #2
Summer 1998

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
3 0864 0014 0478 2

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
AUG 1[illegible] 1998
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620
PLEASE RETURN

SHELVE WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 36 No. 2 • Summer 1998

History Conference in Great Falls and Fort Benton

From the Blackfeet Confederacy, the Métis, and Montana fine art to stagecoaching and steamboating, the Great Falls smelter community, and hydroelectric power, this year's Montana History Conference will offer a wide variety of themes, issues, and historical interests.

The conference will open with a reception at the new Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center outside Great Falls on Thursday night, October 8. Ritchie Doyle will provide an interpretation of William Clark, and Jeanne Eder will portray Sacagawea.

The conference will convene formally in Great Falls on Friday, October 9, and continue in Fort Benton on Saturday, October 10. Dan Flores, A. B. Hammond Professor of History, University of Montana, Missoula, will give the banquet address on Friday night. His talk will focus on the Freeman and Custis expedition of 1806, the southern counterpart to the Lewis and Clark expedition. In addition, Carlos Schwantes will speak on steamboating and stagecoaching in the West at the Friday luncheon, and Gerald Morin will speak on the Métis at the luncheon in Fort Benton on Saturday, October 10.

Workshops on archives cataloging, living history, and ancient teachings will be held on Thursday, October 8. Conference programs will be mailed in mid-September. For information call (406) 444-0513.

Capitol to Close

The Capitol building in Helena will be closed from May 1999 through December 2000 to facilitate the Capitol Restoration Project. The building closure will allow the legislature to complete its 1999 session before offices are temporarily housed elsewhere. Capitol tour arrangements will be modified during construction.

The Capitol, built in 1899, was expanded in 1912 to accommodate the three branches of state government and underwent extensive modernization in 1965.

Thirty years later, another major renovation is needed, including repairing or replacing stonework and cracks in the columns, restoring paintings, plasterwork, and woodwork, replacing historic features removed in past remodeling projects, and reroofing.

The Montana Capitol Restoration Commission plans to have work completed by the 2002 Centennial Anniversary. For information call Bill Bayless at (406) 444-3060.

Tom Cook, photographer

Volunteers Mary Hunt and Dora Howard present to security staff member George Oberst two new wheelchairs that the Friends organization recently donated to the Society.

MHS Museum Is Accredited

The Montana Historical Society Museum has once again received the highest honor a museum can receive—being accredited by the American Association of Museums (AAM). Of the 8,000 major museums nationwide, only about 750 meet the high standards set by the AAM in managing collections responsibly and providing quality public service.

The accreditation committee was impressed by the work of the Museum Services staff but expressed concern for the inadequacy of the current facility, the lack of storage areas, manpower, and low pay levels. Efforts to save Virginia and Nevada cities were also praised.

Governor Marc Racicot congratulated the Museum for its professionalism.

The AAM is based in Washington, D.C., and accredits museums every ten years. The Society has been accredited three times.

Western Rendezvous of Art Returns to Helena in August

The Western Rendezvous of Art will present the twentieth anniversary Northwest Rendezvous Group Show in Helena on August 20-23, 1998.

The Montana Historical Society first sponsored the art show in 1972. Twenty-six years later, the Society is joining the Helena Civic Center Board and the Northwest Rendezvous Group to return the 1998 art show back to Helena.

Northwest Rendezvous artists may submit up to four pieces of art for the sale. Guest artists may bring no more than two selections. There will be a variety of fine paintings and sculptures, including cowboy, mountain man, Native American, wildlife, and portraits, using oils, watercolors, gouache, bronze, and stone.

The Montana Historical Society will host an opening reception and seminars, the Helena Civic Center will host the art show, an artist reception, the gala dinner, and a final breakfast. The brunch and quick draw will be held at the Kleffner Ranch.

For information contact Diane at the Civic Center at (406) 447-8481.

Cross Carved in WWII Donated to Society

Francis and Mary Poplawski, left, present the cross Francis made to Society Director Brian Cockhill.

Tom Cook, photographer

Francis Poplawski was captured by the German Army in 1939 while defending Poland against the blitzkrieg. For the next six years, he remained a prisoner of war in a work camp. Each evening when he was returned to confinement he used a paring knife to carve pieces for a teakwood cross that he and his wife Mary donated recently to the Montana Historical Society.

The cross is made of 580 pieces of wood and took about sixty hours to assemble. It stands 27½ inches high by 18 inches wide. The self-taught carver designed each piece of wood to interlock with the next piece to hold the intricate symbol of his faith together.

Spanish-American War Exhibit Opens

An exhibit on the Spanish-American War-Philippine Insurrection has opened at the Montana Historical Society. The exhibit features uniforms, weapons, horse gear, medals, war souvenirs, photographs, and maps. "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898" explores the role Montanans played in the conflict. The Kessler Banner, the basis for the current Montana state flag, was also unveiled. Funds to conserve the banner were raised by the Montana Military Museum Foundation.

The exhibit is in the Northeast Gallery of the Society through March 31, 1999.

Society, Salish Kootenai Copublish Book

Over a Century of Moving to the Drum
by Johnny Arlee
Salish Indian Celebrations on the Flathead Indian Reservation

For more than a hundred years, the Arlee Fourth of July Celebration, or Powwow, on the Flathead Reservation has brought people together to honor the traditions of the Salish. A new book, Over a Century of Moving to the Drum: Salish Indian Celebrations on the Flathead Indian Reservation by Johnny Arlee an instructor in the Salish Kootenai College Salish Cultural Leadership program, offers a tribute to this longstanding event.

Arlee conducted interviews in the 1970s with Salish elders while serving as founding director of the Salish Culture Committee. In addition to the rich illustrations and photographs are interviews with powwow participants, 97-year-old Louise Combs, the oldest member of the Salish nation, and 18-year-old Louie Plant, whose commitment to the Powwow assures its survival.

Over a Century of Moving to the Drum is copublished by Salish Kootenai College Press and the Montana Historical Society Press.

The 104-page book is available at local bookstores or from the Museum Store for $14.95 plus shipping. To order call 1-800-243-9900.

Montana to Feature Butte

Hard rock mining for precious metals, particularly copper, strong labor unions, the Anaconda Mining Company, and the seeming irony of a very urban place set in the open spaciousness of an otherwise rural Montana have long distinguished the City of Butte. But today, change, nostalgia, and heritage characterize the city as well, and these themes are reflected in a special issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History for Autumn.

In this special issue, Ellen Baumler tells the history of prostitution in Butte, where the "oldest profession" operated as long and with as great a fanfare as anywhere in the United States. Baumler, a historian with the State Historical Preservation Office, traces that history through architecture, especially Butte's surviving Dumas Hotel, which itself reflects the waxing and waning of the community's tolerance for the trade.

Butte's most noted historical continuity is perhaps the Anaconda Mining Company, which dominated copper mining in Montana for three-quarters of a century. A multi-national corporation, ACM also controlled copper mining in Butte's South American sister city, Chuquicamata, Chile. The story of how the company operated and profited by the two communities is told by historian Janet Finn.

When Chile nationalized ACM's mining interests in the 1970s, the company went into rapid decline and soon sold its interests in Montana. Butte's glory days of hard rock mining were over, and the community faced having to remake itself economically. The city's struggle since the 1970s to do just that are detailed in an article by Society research librarian Brian Shovers.

In addition, Jim Harrington considers the historical significance of the tragic Speculator Mine fire of 1917, the worst hard rock mining disaster in the United States. And, on a lighter note, Fred and Mary Voget offer Sue Chabalas Martinson's personal reminiscence of marathon dancing in Butte in the 1930s. David Emmons provides an essay review of the Tony Lukas book, Big Trouble.

The Montana Post welcomes news of events and activities related to Montana history. Send your information to Montana Post, Montana Historical Society, P. O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Society Honors Eighty-Five Volunteers at Annual Luncheon

The Montana Historical Society honored its volunteer group, the Friends of the Society, with a luncheon at the Stonehouse Restaurant in Helena.

Some 85 volunteers devoted the equivalent of two-and-one-half fulltime positions to Society projects during the past year. "Their spirit and enthusiasm inspire not only the staff, but also all of those in the public they help," said Society Volunteer Coordinator Jennifer Bottomly.

Jane Addy received the 1998 Director's Award for her dedicated years of service to the Society. Addy led the cleaning and preservation work on the historic hat display, "Off the Top: Hats and History" currently on display at the Society.

Docent Awards were received by Pam Hulbert, Mary Hunt, Betty Jones, and Betty LaSalle. The Intern Docent Award was given to Marilyn Tutwiler. Docents provided tours to school and other large groups interested in the Society.

Departmental Assistance Volunteer Awards went to Hariot VanTine and Doris Hitt. Denise Pennington, Dora Howard, Jan Fall, and Mary Hunt received Muse Awards for their skill in hosting special events at the Society.

The "Youngest Volunteer Award" was given to Caitlin Worthen, a third grader at Jefferson Elementary School, who hosted the "Make Your Own Hat" table during the Hat exhibit's grand opening. She is the daughter of Carol and Paul Worthen, and granddaughter of Marge and Inge Jacobson, also volunteers.

Others honored for departmental assistance were Hariot VanTine (400+ hours); Jane Addy and Doris Hitt (300+ hours); Mary Brewer, Dora Howard, Forrest Jackson, Audrey Levitan, and John Stoner (200+ hours); and Vo Belnap, Carolyn Cain, Mary Hunt, Marge Jacobson, Bob Morgan, Doris Neu, Charlotte Thomas, and Joyce Vashro (100+ hours).

Volunteers lead guided student tours, work in the museum store, perform clerical assistance, work with artifacts, and arrange and host public events.

For information about joining the Friends, please contact Jennifer Bottomly at (406) 444-9553.

Archives Staff Offers Workshops

The Montana Historical Society Archives presented a workshop on how to record and preserve church history."Doing Church History," was held this spring at the Society. The workshop was led by Kathryn Otto, state archivist; Ellen Arguimbau, Society archivist/manuscript curator; Jodie Foley, Society archivist/oral historian; and Marilyn Grant, former associate editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History. Plymouth Congregational Church co-sponsored the workshop.

The workshop will be taken "on the road" to assist spiritual organizations across the state in recording their church histories. The workshop is designed for clergy and lay persons.

Elsewhere, Foley presented an oral history workshop to the Utica Museum in Utica, Montana, this spring. She discussed interviewing techniques, project development, and how to preserve interviews.

Otto presented two workshops, the first at the Montana State Genealogical Society's annual conference in Missoula. She discussed how to set up a scrapbook. The second for the International Association of Clerks, Recorders, Election Officials, and Treasurers' regional meeting in Billings was on management decisions, privacy issues, and e-mail policy.

Arguimbau spoke in May at the Northwest Archivists, Inc.'s, annual conference in Portland, Oregon, on choosing the right software for archives use, specifically the STAR system used by the Society.

To schedule any of these workshops call (406) 444-4774.

Eleven Sites Added to National Register

BIG TIMBER VOL FIRE DEPT.
NO PARKING

Ron Wiggins, photographer

The Big Timber Fire Hall (above) was added recently to the National Register.

The Montana Historical Society State Historical Preservation Office has added eleven historic properties to the National Register of Historic Places.

To date 863 sites representing several thousand Montana properties have been listed in the National Register. Properties represent local, state, or national significance.

Among Montana sites recently added were: Wolf Creek Hotel, Wolf Creek; Methodist-Episcopal Church, Corvallis; Lewis and Clark Bridge (Wolf Point Bridge), McCone and Roosevelt counties; Summers/Quast Farmstead, Corvallis; Big Timber Town Hall, Big Timber; Flaming Arrow Ranch House, Gallatin County; Saco Mercantile, Saco; and Rialto Theater, Deer Lodge.

In Anaconda, properties added to the National Historic Register included the Commercial Historic District, Anaconda Goosetown Historic District, and Anaconda West Side Historic District.

Bradley Fellowships Announced

Patricia Dean, a supervisory curator in the Museum Collections Department, Minnesota Historical Society, is the 1998 Senior Bradley Fellow. She received her degree from Carroll College in Helena, and a master's degree in Museum Studies from Cooperstown, New York. Dean will research store records to analyze household furnishings and interior decorating patterns in lower and middle-class Montana homes in the early 1900s.

Sonya K. Smith has been selected as the 1998 Graduate Bradley Fellow. Smith has a degree in American Studies at Stanford University and is a doctoral candidate in the American Culture program at the University of Michigan. She will study Japanese-American and Mexican seasonal agricultural workers in Montana during World War II.

The Bradley Fellowships were initiated in 1983 to encourage research and scholarship in Montana history at the Montana Historical Society. Each fellow will receive a $2,500 stipend to do research in Helena.

Tiberi Is Permanent Head of Commission

Jeffrey Tiberi

Jeffrey Tiberi has been named the permanent director of the Montana Heritage Preservation and Development Commission. Tiberi has been acting director since November 1997.

Before joining the commission, Tiberi was management bureau chief for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks.

The Commission was created in 1997 to manage Virginia and Nevada cities and future historic sites.

Blackwood Will Direct Lewis and Clark Panel

Clint Blackwood

Clint Blackwood has been named Executive Director of the Montana Lewis and Clark Bicentennial Commission. Blackwood comes to the Society from the Montana Department of Commerce, Travel Montana division, where he was the tourism development coordinator and a group travel coordinator.

His new duties include coordinating Montana's observance of the epic 1803–1806 Lewis and Clark Expedition.

C. M. Russell Art on Loan

Two Charles M. Russell watercolors, "Attack on the Red River Carts" and "Return of the Horse Thieves," are on temporary loan from the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls to the Montana Historical Society. They will be exhibited in the Mackay Gallery through August.

These watercolors are considered among the most significant in the C. M. Russell Museum's collection. In exchange, the Montana Historical Society loaned several Lewis and Clark-related art works to the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls for a special Lewis and Clark exhibit.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Off the Top: Hats & History," Montana Reflections Gallery, through August 1999 |
| | "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," Northeast Gallery, through March 1999 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Virginia City and Other Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| July 24-26 | Victorian Weekend, parade, oratory, teas, and a grand ball |
| August 1-2 | 2nd Annual Virginia City Cowboy Gathering, poetry, music, and storytelling |
| August 15 | Virginia City Heritage Day, parade, and historic games |
| | For information call 1-800-829-2969 |
| August 20-23 | Northwest Rendezvous Group Show, Helena |
| | For information call (406) 447-8481 |
| Sept. 21-26 | Montana Archaeology Week |
| | For events contact Mark Baumler at (406) 444-7721 |

Summer and Autumn Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | To Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8-6, weekends and holidays, 9-5. After Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8-5. Saturday, 9-5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30 Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To Labor Day: Tuesday—Sunday, 12-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. September 8-December 31: Tuesday—Saturday, 12-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. |
| Capitol | To Labor Day: tours begin on the hour. Sunday—Saturday, 9–5, last tour begins at 4; self-guided tours daily, 8-6. |

To arrange guided group tours of the Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 47
Butte, MT

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

S
978.6
H6m
V.36 no.1

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR [illegible] 1998
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA [illegible]

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 36 No. 1 • Spring 1998

Spanish-American War Exhibit to Open at Society May 7

An exhibit on the Spanish-American War-Philippine Insurrection will open at the Montana Historical Society on May 7 to observe that conflict's one hundredth anniversary. The exhibit will feature uniforms, weapons, horse gear, medals, war souvenirs, photographs, and maps from Montana Historical Society collections and materials borrowed from other institutions and collectors.

Titled "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," the exhibit will explore the role Montanans played in the conflict and its significance to Montana and the rest of the nation. It also considers the causes of the war, who Montana's soldiers were and why they volunteered, soldiers' daily life, the fate of Montana's "rough riders," campaigns involving Montana troops, the role of journalism in public opinion, the manner in which Montana's newspapers covered the war, and the outcome and consequences of the war.

In addition, the Society will unveil the Kessler Banner, the First Montana Infantry U.S. Volunteers regimental flag. The banner is the basis for the current Montana state flag and has undergone extensive conservation treatment.

The exhibit may be seen in the Northeast Gallery of the Society through March 31, 1999. For information contact Kirby Lambert, Curator of Collections, MHS Museum, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 or phone (406) 444-4711.

Hats Are In and On at New Exhibit

J. M. Cooper, photographer

Mike McCabe sports a "ten-gallon hat" at the "Off the Top: Hats and History" opening in January at the Montana Historical Society.

Reception visitors wore hats of all shapes and sizes during the exhibit opening for "Off the Top: Hats and History" at the Montana Historical Society on January 29. The exhibit, which features one hundred historic hats and some fifty photographs, will be on display at the Society through August 1999.

Exhibit artifacts include athletic, high fashion, lodge regalia, Native American, and cowboy headgear. Prizes, furnished by Hennessy's, were awarded in several categories to guests wearing unusual hats. Poet, newspaper columnist, and author Gwen Peterson of Big Timber recited her poem, "Hats for All Seasons."

The Society also unveiled twenty-one new pieces of art acquired over the last couple of years. Pieces ranged from an early oil painting by Charlie Russell to two clay sculptures and a plaster cast by Earl E. Heikka, a graphite drawing and a wood carving by John L. Clarke to an oil painting by Jack Beauchamp of Kenya, a sled dog from historic Camp Rimini. Other art included several watercolors, oils, charcoal, and mixed media.

Author Talks to Focus on Politics, Soldiering

The Montana Historical Society will offer the Third Annual "Spring Author Series." Authors will include Stephen Ambrose, Jerome A. Greene, John Morrison, Catherine Wright Morrison, and Stan Cohen. Talks will be held each Wednesday starting on April 29 and will conclude on May 20. There is no charge and they all begin at noon.

The Ambrose and Greene presentations will be held across the street from the Society in the old Supreme Court Chambers of the Capitol Building. The Morrisons and Cohen talks will be held in the Society's Haynes Auditorium.

Helena authors John Morrison and Catherine Wright Morrison kick off the

Continued on page 4

Endowment Seeks Matching Funds

The Margaret T. Biddle Foundation of New York and an anonymous donor have given $500,000 to the Montana Historical Society Foundation. The funds will help establish a permanent endowment to be known as the Pioneer Fund, limited to educational and curatorial programs such as internships, publications, artifact conservation, research, exhibits, and public education at Virginia and Nevada cities.

The Society Foundation will seek matching funds to create a $1 million endowment, an amount needed to meet projected educational and curatorial needs of the two historic cities.

"We hope that Montana organizations and individuals will meet this challenge and come forward to match the generosity of these out-of-state contributors," said Society Director Brian Cockhill.

Interested contributors may send donations to the Montana Historical Society Foundation, P.O. 863, Helena, MT 59624 or call 449-3770 for information.

Montana State Library
3 0864 1006 2954 5

Garden Tour Set for June 28

As part of a fundraising effort, the Original Governor's Mansion joins the Helena Pioneer Cabin to hold the sixth annual Secret Garden Tour and Ice Cream Social on Sunday, June 28, from 1:00 to 4:00 P.M. The tour will feature at least ten gardens, as well as the Original Governor's Mansion and the historic Pioneer Cabin.

Homeowners or garden experts will be available at each site to answer questions and highlight special plantings.

Tickets, $10 per person, may be purchased the day of the tour at the Original Governor's Mansion or the Pioneer Cabin and qualify holders for an ice cream social in the garden behind the Pioneer Cabin. Maps and directions to gardens will be provided the day of the tour at both ticket sites. The tour begins at the Pioneer Cabin. For information call (406) 443-7641.

KKK Records

Microfilmed records of the Butte Ku Klux Klan and photocopies of the Harlowton Klan membership records are available for public use at the Montana Historical Society Archives.

The Butte KKK collection includes more than 150 names and information about the members, minutes of meetings, and other correspondence. The Harlowton photocopies include 1920s membership records for about 200 members.

The Society welcomes records donations. Contact Kathryn Otto at (406) 444-4775.

Pioneer Cabin Seeks Support

Helena's oldest residence, the Pioneer Cabin near Reeder's Alley, needs $33,000 to preserve the structure. Renovation of the 1864 cabin was completed in 1997 with an understanding that it continue to be maintained.

In an effort to preserve the restoration work done on the cabin, the Pioneer Cabin Fund has been set up as two accounts—a working capital fund, and an endowment fund that will be used for continued upkeep and maintenance.

To contribute contact: Scott Hibbard, President, The Pioneer Cabin Fund, P.O. Box 835, Helena, MT 59624, (406) 442-1805, or Jean Weeks, Treasurer, The Pioneer Cabin Fund, 162 Sawmill Road, Clancy, MT 59634, (406) 442-5786.

Foley Offers Oral History Workshops

Jodie Foley, Montana Historical Society oral historian, will present a three-hour workshop on the impact of new technologies and production trends in oral history projects.

The workshop will be held April 30 in conjunction with the Museum Association of Montana (MAM) Conference in Billings. Jim Parker, video specialist for the Bitterroot Historical Society, will present information with Foley at a pre-conference workshop. For information contact Deidre Shaw at (406) 888-7936.

Foley will also present a workshop for the Crazy Mountains Women's Group and Sweetgrass Museum Society on May 9 from 9:00 a.m. to noon at the Sweetgrass Museum. She will discuss oral history interviewing techniques and project development. For information contact Katie Fazier at (406) 932-4451.

BULLETIN BOARD

■ Call for papers. The Center for the Rocky Mountain West and University of Great Falls seeks papers for its conference on September 18-19, 1998, on "Joseph Kinsey Howard," historian, journalist, and community promoter. Perspectives for the conference include the disciplines of history, environmental studies, labor studies, journalism, literature, and Native American Studies. Possible topics include: The Montana Study and comparable community studies in Alberta and Saskatchewan; Howard's relation to the Metis and Native Americans; trans-border connections, familial, economic, and cultural; Howard's career and links with Bernard DeVoto, A. B. Guthrie, Jr., and Mildred Walker; regional genesis and regional identity; American and Canadian Wests as "plundered provinces"; who should control the West; environmental legacy of the "plundered province"; reality of the "Copper Collar"; agricultural history; "Whoop Up Country"; and organized western labor.

Send proposals or papers to William E. Farr, Associate Director, Center for the Rocky Mountain West, University of Montana, Milwaukee Station, Second Floor, Missoula, MT 59812-1158 by June 15, 1998. For information write to Center for the Rocky Mountain West or call (406) 243-7700.

Author Greene To Tour Montana

Historian Jerome A. Greene will take to the road May 17–29 as the third Montana Historical Society Press author to tour the state as part of the Society's "Live from the Society!" program.

Greene will talk on Frontier Soldier: An Enlisted Man's Journal of the Sioux and Nez Perce Campaigns, 1877, newly released by MHS Press.

Frontier Soldier is the edited journal of Private William F. Zimmer, who fought in the closing Sioux campaigns and against the Nez Perce in the late 1870s. Greene will speak and sign books in Montana at Lewistown, White Sulphur Springs, Helena, Great Falls, Bozeman, Chinook, Havre, Red Lodge, and Roundup, and in Wyoming, at Sheridan and Ft. Laramie National Historic Site.

Frontier Soldier is available at local bookstores and from the Society Museum Store for $32.00 cloth, or $15.95 paper, plus shipping. To order, call toll-free at 1-800-243-9900. For details call Martha Kohl at (406) 444-0974.

Ronda Will Speak In Helena, Great Falls

James P. Ronda, editor of Voyages of Discovery: Essays on the Lewis and Clark Expedition, forthcoming Montana Historical Society Press, will speak in Helena and Great Falls this summer. The book of 370 pages, five maps, and twenty illustrations is an anthology of primary source documents and essays illuminating the origins, voyage, and aftermath of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. It will be available for Ronda's talks.

On July 1, at 7:00 p.m. at the Montana Historical Society in Helena, Ronda will speak on the "Fascinatin' Journey: The Lure of Lewis and Clark." He will be available afterward to sign books.

On July 2, in Great Falls, Ronda will give the banquet address, titled "The 'Core' of Discovery: Getting Back to Basics," at the 30th Annual Meeting of the Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation at the Heritage Inn in Great Falls. He will be available to autograph books at the Heritage Inn from 4:30–6:00 on July 2.

Voyages of Discovery features the best articles on the Corps of Discovery. It will be available in bookstores and from the Society in July for $45.00 cloth, or $19.95 paper, plus shipping. Call toll-free at 1-800-243-9900.

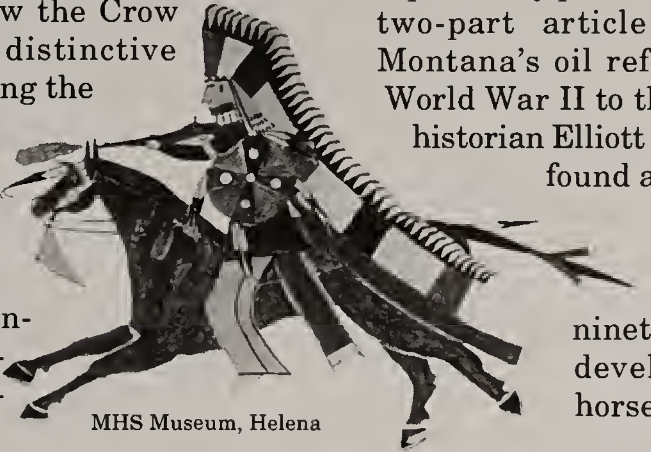
Summer Montana to Feature Indian Ledger Art, Artifacts

Some of the most extraordinary artwork in the Montana Historical Society's museum collections has nothing to do with Charles M. Russell. Rather, it was fashioned in the 1880s by two Montana State Prison inmates, White Bear, Cheyenne, and Elk Head, Gros Ventre.

Some years ago, the art found its way into Montana Historical Society collections and is the focus of an article that analyzes its origins and meaning. Authored by Helena attorney Allen Chronister, it will appear with full-color illustrations in the Summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

In a separate article, anthropologists Michael Logan and Douglas Schmittou also use Society museum collections to help illustrate how the Crow Indians created distinctive marker traits during the late nineteenth century to distinguish themselves from their enemies.

Elsewhere, Montana State University geographer Joseph Ashley provides the second half of his two-part article on the history of Montana's oil refining industry—from World War II to the present—and noted historian Elliott West describes the profound and ultimately wrenching changes that came to the Cheyenne Indians in the nineteenth century as they developed a high plains horse culture.



MHS Museum, Helena

Rankin Heads Arizona Critique

Charles E. Rankin, Montana Historical Society Director of Publications, headed a recent professional evaluation of the publications division at the Arizona Historical Society in Tucson. The evaluation, conducted by a three-member committee in February and composed also of Arizona State University history professor Robert Trennert and Arizona Highways publisher Nina LaFrance, sought to identify strengths and weaknesses in the Arizona society's publications operation.

"The Arizona Historical Society is probably as close to a sister agency to Montana as any of the western states," Rankin said, "and it is revealing how similar are their strengths, challenges, and ambitions to ours." Like Montana, the Arizona society depends largely on earned revenue to publish a quarterly history magazine, several books a year, an agency newsletter, and numerous other projects.

"Like us, the Arizona society is looking for new ways to improve budget, staffing, and space, while maintaining a high level of quality," Rankin said. "It is the challenge of the 1990s that cultural agencies everywhere are having to face."

Sherfy Leaves MHS to Join FWP

Marcella Sherfy has ended her eighteen-year association with the Montana Historical Society to become Visitor Services Bureau Chief at the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks.

"Marcella has a spirit and dedication that has energized many of the Society's undertakings. We will hire someone in her position, but we will always miss her willing and thoughtful personality," Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

Sherfy joined the Society in 1980 as the State Historic Preservation Officer and became Society Education Officer in 1995.

The Society is currently conducting a search for her replacement. Other staff members are helping to keep all education projects going in the interim, and there should be no disruption in educational services or programs.

Ideas Sought for History Conference

The twenty-fifth annual Montana History Conference will be held in Great Falls and Fort Benton Thursday through Saturday, October 8-10, 1998.

Conference sessions will address area transportation, Native American issues, local industrial development, Canadian topics, and agriculture.

The Society welcomes suggestions for programs that individuals or groups would like to present as well as ideas for speeches, panels, workshops, and presentations by persons whom you have heard, including historians, authors, students, independent researchers, or entertainers.

Please respond to Jim McHugh, this year's conference coordinator, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 by May 1.

Randi Webb Is New Society Intern

Randi Webb, a junior student in history and education at Helena's Carroll College, is the fourth intern to work at the Society under a special program sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, the national honors society in history.

Webb, the third Carroll College intern, has been working primarily with the MHS Press on such upcoming titles as Voyages of Discovery: Essays on the Lewis and Clark Expedition, edited by James P. Ronda, and Charlie Russell Roundup, edited by Brian W. Dippie.

Phi Alpha Theta national has awarded a $10,000 grant to the Society for two years to support the interns, who are chosen through competitive selection.

Montana Announces 1998 Burlingame–Toole Competition

The Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1998 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award.

The award, named in honor of two Montana history professors, Merrill G. Burlingame and K. Ross Toole, is given to the best article-length manuscript submitted for publication in Montana by an undergraduate or graduate student on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a plaque, cash award, and publication of the article in Montana.

To be eligible, students must be enrolled in a college or university and sponsored by a faculty member.

Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 17, 1998. For information, write Burlingame–Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Lewis and Clark Center to Open

The Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center will open to the public starting May 5 at Giant Springs Heritage State Park. The grand opening will be July 4 during the Lewis and Clark Week of Discovery and Festival in Great Falls.

For information call (406) 727-8733 or write the Lewis and Clark Interpretive Center, 4201 Giant Springs Road, P.O. Box 1806, Great Falls, MT 59403.

Authors, from page 1

series on April 29 with a talk based on their new book, Mavericks: The Lives and Battles of Montana's Political Legends.

On May 6, Missoula author Stan Cohen will present a pictorial overview of the Spanish-American War based on his new book Images of the Spanish-American War, April–August 1898. Cohen's talk coincides with the Society's new exhibit, "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," opening May 7.

On May 13, author Stephen Ambrose will discuss his new book, Citizen Soldiers: The U.S. Army from the Normandy Beaches to the Bulge to the Surrender of Germany, and on May 20, noted frontier military historian Jerome Greene will discuss his new book, Frontier Soldier: An Enlisted Man's Journal of the Sioux and Nez Perce Campaigns, published by the Montana Historical Society Press.

Each hour-long talk will be followed by a booksigning. For information call (406) 444-4767.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," Northeast Gallery, through April 11, 1998 |
| | "Off the Top: Hats & History," Montana Reflections Gallery, through August 1999 |
| | "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," Northeast Gallery, opening May 7, 1998 through March 1999 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

Spring Author Series, Wednesdays, at noon. The April 29 and May 6 lectures are in the Haynes Auditorium, Montana Historical Society. The May 13 and 20 lectures are in the old Supreme Court Chambers, Capitol Building, Helena. They are free to the public with books available for signings.

| | |
|---|---|
| April 29 | John Morrison and Catherine Wright Morrison, "Mavericks: The Lives and Battles of Montana's Political Legends" |
| May 6 | Stan Cohen, "Images of the Spanish-American War, April–August 1898" |
| May 13 | Stephen Ambrose, "Citizen Soldiers: The U.S. Army from the Normandy Beaches to the Bulge to the Surrender of Germany" |
| May 20 | Jerome A. Greene, "Frontier Soldier: An Enlisted Man's Journal of the Sioux and Nez Perce Campaigns" |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | To Memorial Day: Monday–Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. May 26 to Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8–6, weekends and holidays, 9–5. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. First Saturday of each month, 9–4:30 Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To Memorial Day: Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5, tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4. May 26 to Labor Day: Tuesday–Sunday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. |
| Capitol | To Memorial Day: self-guided tours daily 8–6. May 26 to Labor Day: tours begin on the hour. Sunday–Saturday, 9–5, last tour begins at 4. |

To arrange guided group tours of the Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 47
Butte, MT

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
v. 35 no.4
SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS
PLEASE RETURN
STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
FEB 05 1998
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 35 No. 4 • Winter 1997

McFarland Family Donates $1 Million for Virginia City

The McFarland Family Trust has donated $1 million toward constructing a storage facility where Virginia City and Nevada City artifacts can be preserved, protected, and displayed. An interpretative and viewing area "to allow the public to see items in storage and watch curators at work" will be part of the facility, said Society Director Brian Cockhill. Plans call for the facility to be built in the Virginia City/Nevada City area.

The gift is being made in honor of Lee C. McFarland, a successful entrepreneur and oil businessman. The McFarland family said, "we hope that our gift might encourage others to step forward and support this important effort."

The McFarlands have roots in Montana. Some family members reside in Montana, and several others graduated from the University of Montana, Missoula.

Trustees Honor Three Montanans at Conference

Charles A Banderob
Tom Cook, Photographer

Charles Banderob and Trustees President Bill Holt

Three Montanans received Trustee Awards at the Twenty-Fourth Annual Montana History Conference held in Helena in October. Huntley Project museum curator Charles Banderob, Montana historian and author Richard Roeder, and Butte Senior High School history teacher Jim Street were among those honored by the Society's Board of Trustees.

Charles Banderob grew up near the Huntley Irrigation Project near Huntley, Montana, and has dedicated his life to sharing stories of the Yellowstone Valley and spearheading development of the Huntley Museum complex, which contains more than 5,000 artifacts, displays, and buildings exhibiting sugar-beet, small-grain, and irrigation machinery. Banderob is writing a new history of the Huntley Project and completing his autobiography.

Richard Roeder, who died in 1995, co-authored with Montana State University President Michael P. Malone Montana: A History of Two Centuries, the standard history of the state and taught at Montana State University, the University of Montana, the University of Great Falls, and Carroll College. Roeder was a member of the 1972 Montana Constitutional Convention and encouraged the concept of an annual history conference at the

Continued on page 4

Society, Foundation Receive Award

The Montana Historical Society and the Montana Historical Society Foundation received an award from the National Trust for Historical Preservation recently in Santa Fe, New Mexico, for their efforts on behalf of the people of Montana to save historic Virginia City and Nevada City.

The effort was undertaken last year when Governor Marc Racicot, legislative leaders, and Montanans persuaded the state legislature to purchase Virginia and Nevada cities. The Foundation and the Society spearheaded the effort by helping raise the $375,000 option price.

New Hats Exhibit Opens January 29

An all-new exhibit, "Off the Top: Hats and History," will open at the Montana Historical Society on January 29 and will be on display in the Montana Reflections Gallery for the next year.

The exhibit explores why hats were so prominent in past generations and takes a light-hearted look at the role of headgear in the lives of our ancestors. "Off the Top" will feature about 100 historic hats and 50 historic photographs illustrating the importance of hats in history. Native American headgear, an 1878 Stetson, a 1930 football helmet, high fashion from the 1950s, Oddfellows ceremonial regalia, and a 1937 beanie from the North Montana State Fair and Rodeo are among items featured in the exhibit.

An opening reception will be held January 29, 1998, from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m. at the Society and will feature poetry by Gwen Peterson of Big Timber, including her poem, "Hats for All Seasons," music, and refreshments. Hats are required. Prizes will be awarded in several categories for guests wearing hats.

"Off the Top" will replace "Montana Monthly," which has been on exhibit since January 1997.

Society Programs in the Spring

A variety of public programs are planned this spring at the Society, including a series of noon lectures each Wednesday in March and author talks in May featuring recently published books. In addition, there will be informational programs every third Wednesday of the month through May, following the Friends of the Society's monthly meeting.

Upcoming programs include Carla Homstad, "The Montana Study: Look Homeward Angel," on January 21; Julie Shewman, "Children in Trouble and Toil: How Montana's Progressive Reform Movement Changed Juvenile Labor Laws and Courts," on February 18; and Timothy McCleary, "The Stars We Know: Crow Indian Astronomy and Lifeways," on April 15 followed by a book signing.

The Women's History Month March lecture series sponsored by the Friends of the Society and the Society, will be at noon each Wednesday in March. This year's series, "Breaking the Mold: Montana Women at Work," will feature speakers Norma Ashby on her work in television broadcasting since 1962; Dave Walter on Jeannette Rankin's "no" vote in 1941; Agnes Kenmill on teaching the Salish lifestyle; and Connie Staudohar on Dr. Caroline McGill.

For information contact the Society's Education Office at (406) 444-4794.

Press to Issue Frontier Soldier

The Montana Historical Society Press will offer readers a chance to gain a new perspective on the Indian Wars this spring with the publication of Frontier Soldier: An Enlisted Man's Journal of the Sioux and Nez Perce Campaigns, 1877, by Private William F. Zimmer.

Edited and annotated by noted Indian Wars historian Jerome A. Greene, Frontier Soldier is the first-person account of an enlisted man who fought under Nelson Miles in the closing stages of both the Great Sioux War and the Nez Perce War. Zimmer, an observant and committed diarist, was one of the few enlisted men to record his experiences.

Frontier Soldier will be available in April 1998 at bookstores across the country and from the Montana Historical Society Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900. It sells for $32.00 hard cover and $15.95 paperback, plus $4.50 shipping for the first book and 50 cents for each additional copy.

Grant Assists Archives with Upgrade

The Montana Historical Society Foundation approved a grant to the Society archives program for a computer upgrade. The 2.1 gigabyte hard-drive will give the archives space to operate its system containing bibliographic information on holdings, searchable "catalog cards," and box-folder container listings for quick reference searches.

The archives hopes to make the database accessible on the Internet through the Society's homepage. If you have questions call (406) 444-4774, write to the archives, or stop by for a demonstration.

Foley Presents Oral History Workshops

Jodie Foley, Montana Historical Society oral historian, conducted oral history workshops for fifth- and eighth-grade students in St. Ignatius this fall. The workshops were part of a year-long project to collect family and community histories as part of the Montana Heritage Project.

Fifth-grade students will interview a family member and present their favorite stories to students, teachers, and parents. Eighth-grade students will interview community members about special journeys they have taken in connection with a unit focusing on the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

ARMA Honors Society Archivist

Kathryn Otto, Montana Historical Society state archivist, received the 1997 Chapter Member of the Year award from the Big Sky Chapter of ARMA, the Association of Records Managers and Administrators. Otto was recognized for her e-mail presentation, work on the national task force writing e-mail guidelines, presenting workshops at chapter meetings, acting as newsletter editor, promoting National Records and Information Management Week, and providing overall assistance to board members. Otto also received the award in 1995.

Disneyland, Oil in Spring Montana

If the frontier has far more power as an ongoing story than it did as an actual experience, as historian Michael Steiner believes it did, then Walt Disney realized that fact more than forty years ago and invested hugely in it in the form of his architectural dreamscape, Disneyland. Just why and how that happened and its far-reaching implications for American culture comprise the subject of an article by Professor Steiner for the Spring issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

In the same issue, geography professor Joe Ashley offers the first of a two-part article on the history of oil refining in Montana. In Part I, professor Ashley describes the era of wildcat exploration and the rise of myriad refining companies throughout Montana up to World War II.

In addition, Bozeman historian Connie Staudohar offers Part II of a two-part series on the history of Montana's public health response to tuberculosis, including the founding of Galen, the state's sanitarium, and former Montana editor William Lang provides an essay review of the recent Ken Burns PBS series on the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

Bradley Fellowships Offered for 1998

The Montana Historical Society will offer two James H. Bradley Fellowships for summer 1998 to research collections at the Society.

One fellowship is limited to candidates for advanced degrees in history, American studies, or related field. Another fellowship is open to applicants other than graduate students. Fellowships pay $2,500 to each recipient.

Competition is not restricted to professional historians, but applicants must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write publishable historical articles. Recipients also must spend at least four weeks in Helena researching the Society's collections between June and November 1998 and submit an article based on their research for possible publication in the Society's quarterly journal, Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Applications must be postmarked by April 3, 1998. For further information, write Bradley Fellowship Committee, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, Montana 59620-1201, or call (406) 444-4702.

1997 Donor list

The Montana Historical Society received almost 300 donations from organizations, businesses, and individuals in 1997. The donations include books; library materials; photographs; and personal business papers and financial records. Specific items donated include: a complete set of United States Mint typeset; a 1915 Campfire girl uniform; a palette and drawing from Helena artist Mary Cecelia Wheeler; and the oil painting "Wilsall Elevators" by Clyde Aspevig.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals: Robert Clark, library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, photograph archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, museum (444-4711).

Bob Abbott
Jane Addy
Albuquerque Museum
American Heritage Center, University of Wyoming
Paul Anderson
Rod Anderson
Carlene Armstrong
Aspen Systems
Betty Babcock
Tim Babcock
Deb and Dick Bahr
Lucille Balfour
Bannack Association, Inc.
William H. Barnes
Jane Stewart Barnhart
Ellen Baumler
Jean Shephard Baucus
Helga Baussus
Margaret Benes
Elwin Bennington
Berea College, Special Collections and Appalachian Museum
Francis B. Bessenyey
Mary Jo Shearer Bevan
Loretta Bible
Big Horn County Historical Society
B'nai Israel Congregation
John C. Board
J. Michael Bodell
Robert Booth
Fredrick Bourdon
Jennifer Bottomly
Richard Boyd
Bob and Jerry Bragole
Linda Brander
Bridge Publications, Inc.
Broadcast Media Center, University of Montana
Marta Brooks
James Browning
James Brust
Reva and Charles Bry
Jim Buckley
Raymond Bungard
Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives
Jim Calvi
Bob Campbell
Dorothy Carlson
Cindy Carter
Cascade County Historical Museum
Patrick L. Chandler
Robert M. Clark
Brian Cockhill
Ward Cole
Elizabeth Wheeler Coleman
Michael Collins
Competitive Enterprise Institute
Lois Compton
Charles L. Convis
County Grain Elevator Historical Society
John D. Craig
Louise Cross
Dorothy M. Crowell
Don Cullen
Custer Battlefield Advocate
Marcia S. Dana
Doris Davies
Margaret Davis
Mary C. Davis
Sheila Devitte
Frank Dunn
Ed Eberly
Dorothy Eck
Douglas Edwards
Kris Ellingsen
Estate of Henry Elwood
Anita Emel
Connie Erickson
Wayne Eveland
John C. Ewers
Mary Felder
Ed Fenalson
Jerry Fenger
Sue Field
Kristine Finch
Flathead Business Journal
Margaret Fleming
Virginia M. Foote
Friends for the People of Montana
Florentine Films
Bob Franklin on behalf of WESM-FM
John E. Fred and Family in memory of Ranny and Mabel K. Lyman
Hank Galpin
Anne Garner
Sally Garrett
Betty Gilson
Raola Giles
Delores Gillen
Betty Gilson
Gough, Shanahan, Johnson and Waterman
Grimes Family
Betty Haight
Judith and Richard Hallgren
Darcy Halpin
Aggie Hamilton
Keith Hamilton
Edith J. Hankins
Katherine L. "Kay" Hansen
Jack Hayne
Heritage Museum
Inez Herrig
Alice Herrin
Historical Museum at Fort Missoula
Doris Hitt
Elizabeth Hoem
Joan Holter
Dennis Homer
Dora Howard
Robert E. Hull
Judy Jacoby
Dave Johns
Frithiof Johnson
Terry C. Johnston
Roy Kallin
Kansas Corral of the Westerners, Inc.
Rita Kauneckas
Olivia Kneale
Horton B. "Tony" Koessler
Rebecca Kohl
E. C. Krebsbach
Erika Kulhman
Kumamoto Plaza
C. Robert Lackie
Marian Lane
Jewel Lansing
Ethel LaRock
Charlotte Larson
Gordon Laverty
Margaret Layne
Jeanne Leeson
Laura Leuthold
Audrey Levitan
Lewis and Clark Public Library
Penney Lind on behalf of Malta High School Library
Whitman Longley
Virginia Lucht
Carey B. Lund
Murray Lundberg
William Macko
Mai Wah Society
Dale Martin
Mike Matross
George McArthur
John H. McDaniel
Bill McEvoy
Bernice and Warren McGee
John McRae
Mrs. Reuben W. McVey
Harriett Meloy
Janotta Merklin
Donna Metcalf
Dallas Miller
Kay Miller
Minnesota Historical Society
John C. Moe
Mary Law Mollander
Montana Association of Clerk and Recorders
Montana Chamber of Commerce
Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks
Montana Development Center
Montana Heritage Project
Montana Horseman's Journal
Montana Military Museum
Montana Tech of the University of Montana, Library
Joyce Morgan
Robert F. Morgan
Marian Morello
Lewis Morris
Barbara Morrow
Delores Morrow
National Park Service, Inter-mountain Region
Susan Near
Nebraska State Historical Society
Beverley and Howard Ness
Frieda Neumiller
George Oberst
Kathy Mosdal O'Brien
Mark O'Keefe
Old Trail Museum
Mary Olson
Charlotte Orr
Kathryn Otto
Joan Mahoney Page

Charles C. Patton
Floy Peterson
Virginia Haight Peterson
Winifred and Robert Peterson
Frank Phillips
William S. Phillips
Anne Pichette
Rhoda A. Pollock
Prairie Street Mennonite Church
Jeanette Prodgers
Gustav F. Raaum
Renee Rasmussen
Red Lodge Volunteer Firefighters Association
Doris Reichelt
Renton Historical Society
Barbara Reitsch Richardson
Marcella A. Rislove
Jeanne Doney Ritterson
Rocky Mountain Museum of Military History
Jim Robbins
Mary Lou Skinner Ross
Eunice M. Roth
Saint John's Lutheran Church History Committee
Dorothy Samuel
School of Art, Montana State University
Barbara Senn
Seven-Up Pete Joint Venture
Dr. and Mrs. Clem Shafer
Marcella Sherfy
William C. Sherman
Brian Shovers
Sigma Theta Tau, Zeta Epsilon Chapter
Lee Silliman
Greg Siple
Don Smith
Myrtle Backen Smith
Ruth Cummings Smith
Mary Sobotka
Jane Seely Solberg
James Southworth
Josephine A. Spaulding
Janet Sperry
State Historical Society of Wisconsin
Peter Steere
Al Stoner
John Stoner
Therese Sullivan
William C. Summers
Robert F. Swanberg
Alexandra Swaney
Eleanor Thode
Rosalin Thom
Patricia Thomas
Mrs. F. M. Thomson
Mr. & Mrs. Ned Thompson
William Thompson
Adelaide M. Thornton
Margaret Thornton
Tobacco Valley Improvement Association
Madelyn Tompkins
Julie Toothaker
Shirley Torgerson
Warren Truesdell
Blanche Uehling
Michael Umphrey
United States Navy
Up the Creek Publishing
Upper Musselshell Historical Society
Robert M. Utley
Katherine Veech
Veterans of Foreign War, Department of Montana
Paul Verdon
Herbert Von Kluge
Theresa Wall
Dave Walter
F. Eldred Watts
J. Meredith Watts
John Whelan
Stuart White
Wade C. Wightman
Roger Williams
Keith Wilson
David Wilson
Ann Woodward
Marylee Wright
Lois Yeager
Yellowstone National Park Association
Anna Zellick

History Conference Awards

continued from Page 1

Audio tapes of the conference are available by writing Inter-Mountain Media, P.O. Box 2351, Kalispell, Montana 59903 or by calling (406) 752-6338. All conference sessions and meal speeches are available for $6.00 per tape.

Society. His daughters, Ellen Pfalzgraff and Karin Wallen, accepted on Roeder's behalf.

Jim Street received the Trustee Teacher's Award for his innovative teaching methods, research and communication skills, and dedication to preservation and sharing of local, state, and regional history. Street has inspired community heritage projects and students to pursue history careers for two decades.

Other award winners at the conference were Quintard Taylor, recipient of the Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History during the preceding year. Taylor was honored for his article, "From Esteban to Rodney King: Five Centuries of African American History in the West," from the Winter 1996 issue of Montana. Taylor is professor of history at the University of Oregon, Eugene.

The Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award for best student essay submitted to Montana in 1996 was presented to Michael J. Lansing for "Indian Women, Interracial Marriage, and Métis in the Upper Missouri Trade." Lansing is currently an Editorial Fellow for the Western Historical Quarterly at Utah State University, Logan.

Montana Preservation Alliance awards were given to: the Moss Mansion of Billings for its preservation efforts; the Miles City Convent for saving and rehabilitating the Ursuline Convent; the Palace Hotel of Missoula, for its low-income apartment rehabilitation; the Mineral County Court House Addition of Superior for its compatible addition to the building; Bozeman's Design Review Process for its review and comments on hundreds of projects in the Bozeman area; Judy McNally of Billings for her continued dedication to historic preservation; and Lee Enterprises for its support to save Virginia and Nevada cities.

Richard B. Roeder

Tom Cook, Photographer

Society research historian Dave Walter with Richard Roeder's daughters, Ellen Pfalzgraff (center) and Karin Wallen.

Schools and other groups are urged to book spring tours of the Montana Historical Society, the Capitol, and the Original Governor's Mansion as soon as possible. Tour times generally are filled early in the season. To arrange tours, call (406) 444-4789.

Home Tour Raises $5,000 for OGM Restoration

This year's Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour attracted more than six hundred people and raised over $5,000 to assist with mansion restoration.

The tour, held December 7, featured seven historic Helena homes and buildings, including the Original Governor's Mansion, built in 1888 and occupied by Montana governors until 1959. "The success of the tour was a team effort by the board, our volunteers, and community homeowners and businesses," Director of Museum Services Susan Near said.

Included on the tour was the Victorian home of Marie and Rich Hopkins at 512 Harrison, built in 1895, featuring oak woodwork and stained glass windows; the "Hill Top Home" occupied by B. J. and Louis Archambault on South Montana Avenue, built in 1927, featuring multi-paned french doors, hardwood trim, and interior fireplace; the modern four-level home of John and Mary Lynn Comes, 528 Hazelgreen, built in 1973, and incorporating solar heat, picture windows, exposed beam and joist ceiling, and native landscaping; the home of Jan and Loren Kovich at 114 N. Hoback, built as the St. James African Methodist Episcopal Church in 1889 and consisting of two guest bedrooms, dining room, kitchen, and studio gallery, operated as St. James Bed & Breakfast; the 1892 Queen Anne style home of Nicci Jasmin and Rhett Oligmiller of 2005 Jerome, formerly owned by Congressman Pat and Carol Williams, the Kleinschmidt family, and the McGrortys, including a two-story carriage house and renovation; and the office of Jackson, Murdo, Grant & McFarland, Attorneys at Law, 203 N. Ewing, built in 1903 for Governor Joseph K. Toole, then sold to Lincoln Schaeffer, and later conveyed to the Roman Catholic Bishop of Helena until 1976. The law firm acquired it in 1979 and repaired the 1935 earthquake damage.

Planned restoration work for the OGM includes reproducing original tapestry wall coverings for the second floor southeast bedroom.

OGM Receives Donation for Rug

Mary M. "Peggy" Ford Rockwell lived in the Original Governor's Mansion in Helena for eight years while her father, Samuel Ford, was governor of Montana.

In an effort to give something back to Montana, Rockwell donated funds to purchase an oriental rug for the Victorian mansion, which was once her home and is now operated as a museum by the Montana Historical Society. "This was her way of saying thank you to the people of Montana for the honor and happy time her family spent in the mansion," said C. A. Rockwell of Loveland, Colorado, of his wife's gift.

Mrs. Rockwell died in February and is survived by a sister who lives in Idaho, a son who lives in Great Falls, and a daughter and son who live in Billings.

U.S. Navy Donates Silver Service

The Montana Historical Society is now the owner of a nineteen-piece silver service once used to entertain officers, dignitaries, and presidents aboard the battleship USS Montana during World War I, on the USS Helena, during World War II, and later on the new USS Helena after the first USS Helena sank in the Pacific.

Supreme Court Justice Theodore Brantly and others originally presented the service to Captain Alfred Reynolds at the Norfolk Navy Yard in 1908.

The service contains engravings of the USS Montana and representations of the state capitol, the Lewis and Clark Expedition, and artwork by Charlie Russell and Edgar Paxson.

Museum Seeks Photos, Descendants

The Montana Historical Society is seeking historic photographs of three mining communities: Combination (Granite County); Blackpine (Granite County); and Parrot (Madison County).

The Society is planning a traveling exhibit featuring the artwork of Muriel Sibell Wolle, a Colorado artist and art educator, who toured Montana ghost towns in the 1950s. Her travels resulted in publication of the book, Montana Pay Dirt, A Guide to the Mining Camps of the Treasure State (1963). The exhibit will include drawings showing the abandoned locales Wolle painted and historic photographs that illustrate what the sites looked like in their heydays.

If you have photographs of these communities to loan for copying, or if you would like more information on the upcoming exhibit, please contact Kirby Lambert, Curator of Collections, Montana Historical Society Museum, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 or phone (406) 444-4711.

In addition, the Society wishes to identify descendants of Montanans who volunteered for service in the Spanish-American War/Philippine Insurrection. Identified descendants will receive an invitation to and special recognition at the opening of "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," a new exhibit that will open May 7, 1998, in observance of the one hundredth anniversary of that conflict. If you, or someone you know, are descendants of such a soldier, please contact Kirby Lambert at the above address or phone number.

Lewis and Clark Commission Appointed

Governor Marc Racicot has appointed nine individuals to serve on the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial Commission. Appointees are: Jeanne Eder of Dillon; Hal Stearns, Jr., of Missoula; John Lepley of Fort Benton; Teresa Korpela of Great Falls; Edythe McCleary of Hardin; Leif Johnson of West Yellowstone; Betty Stone of Glasgow; Darrell Kipp of Browning; and Curley Youpee of Poplar. Eder recently retired from the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees, serving since 1992.

Other members of the Commission are Society Director Brian Cockhill; Travel Montana Program Director Matthew Cohn; and Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks, Parks Division Administrator Arnold Olsen. The Commission, created by the 1997 Legislature, will hire a full-time director to coordinate the 200th anniversary of the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

Society Staff Honored for Service

Five Montana Historical Society employees were honored for their service recently. Society archivist Ellen Arguimbau was honored for twenty years of service. Director of Museum Services Susan Near was honored for fifteen years of service.

Others honored were Patti Jacques, grants manager, Deanna Johnson, tour coordinator, and Roberta Jones-Wallace, exhibits designer, each with five years of service.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," Northeast Gallery, through April 11, 1998 |
| | "Off the Top: Hats & History," Montana Reflections Gallery, opening January 29, 1998 |
| | "Rush to Glory: Montanans at War, 1898," Northeast Gallery, opening May 7, 1998 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| January 21 | Carla Homstad, "The Montana Study: Look Homeward Angel," 10:00 A.M., Haynes Auditorium |
| January 29 | Exhibit opening and reception for "Off the Top: Hats in History," 6:00–9:00 P.M. |

Friends of the Society March Women's History Brown Bag Lectures, "Breaking the Mold: Montana Women at Work," Haynes Auditorium, noon. Fundraiser for Friends of the Society, admission charged.

| | |
|---|---|
| March 4 | Norma Ashby, "From Snakes to First Ladies: Norma Ashby, Montana TV Broadcaster Since 1962" |
| March 11 | Dave Walter, "Rebel with a Cause: Jeannette Rankin's Second 'No' Vote, 1941" |
| March 18 | Agnes Kenmill, "Living and Teaching Salish Lifeways and Skills" |
| March 25 | Connie Staudohar, "Individual Spirit: The Life and Times of Dr. Caroline McGill |

| | |
|---|---|
| April 1 | Gary L. Temple and Marylee M. Moreland, "Hans Kleiber: Artist, Forest Ranger, and Poet," noon, Haynes Auditorium. Seminars for artists will be offered in the afternoon. |
| April 15 | Timothy McCleary, "The Stars We Know: Crow Indian Astronomy and Lifeways, 10:00 A.M., Haynes Auditorium. Book signing follows. |

Winter and Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8 A.M.–5 P.M., Saturday, 9 A.M.–5 P.M. Closed Sundays and holidays. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday–Friday, call (406) 444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8 A.M.–5 P.M., First Saturday of each month, 9 A.M.–4:30 P.M. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1 P.M.–5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | January–March 31: Tours by reservation only. To arrange guided group tours call (406) 444-4789. |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8 A.M.–6 P.M. Group tours by reservation only. |

To arrange guided group tours for the Museum & Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789. For information on March lecture series or seminars, call (406) 444-4794.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 47
Butte, MT

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H2m
V. 35
No 2

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JUL [illegible] 1997
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

MONTANA POST
Montana Historical Society
Vol. 35 No. 2 • Summer 1997

SPECIAL VIRGINIA CITY ISSUE

Purchase of Virginia City and Nevada City Finalized

Stu White, photographer

Society Director Brian Cockhill (far left) shakes hands with Ford Bovey on May 16 after signing the purchase agreement for Virginia and Nevada cities. Looking on are (from left): MHS Foundation President Ward Shanahan; Bovey attorney Bill VanCanagan; and MHS Foundation attorney Mona Jamison.

A Message from The Director

by Brian Cockhill

The Bovey properties in Virginia and Nevada cities have been acquired by the Montana Historical Society, acting for the State of Montana. As an accomplishment in the field of heritage and preservation, this is one of the most significant events in the past twenty years in the United States. What the public, both in Montana and the nation, will have available is a collection of gold rush buildings and hundreds of thousands of artifacts that will provide education, entertainment, and a form of peace of mind. A truly significant part of the heritage of the western United States will survive intact.

The saga began early in 1991 when Ford Bovey determined that he could neither physically nor financially continue to operate the properties as tourist attrac-

Continued on page 3

MORGAN PRINT AVAILABLE TO HELP SAVE VIRGINIA CITY

BUY this limited edition print by Montana artist Bob Morgan and HELP SAVE the historic treasures of Virginia City and Nevada City. Numbered prints of this Virginia City 1860s street scene by Bob Morgan have been limited to 500. Morgan donated the original painting to the Montana Historical Society Foundation to raise funds for its option on the historic buildings and artifacts that survive there. These limited edition prints are $90 each. Also available are 50 artist proofs with remarques by Morgan for $130 each. All proceeds go to the Foundation's "Save Virginia City Fund." For information, call (406) 449-3770 or to order, complete this form, enclose your payment, and mail to:

Montana Historical Society Foundation
P.O. Box 863
Helena, MT 59624

Number prints: ________ Total cost: ________________________ (postage paid)

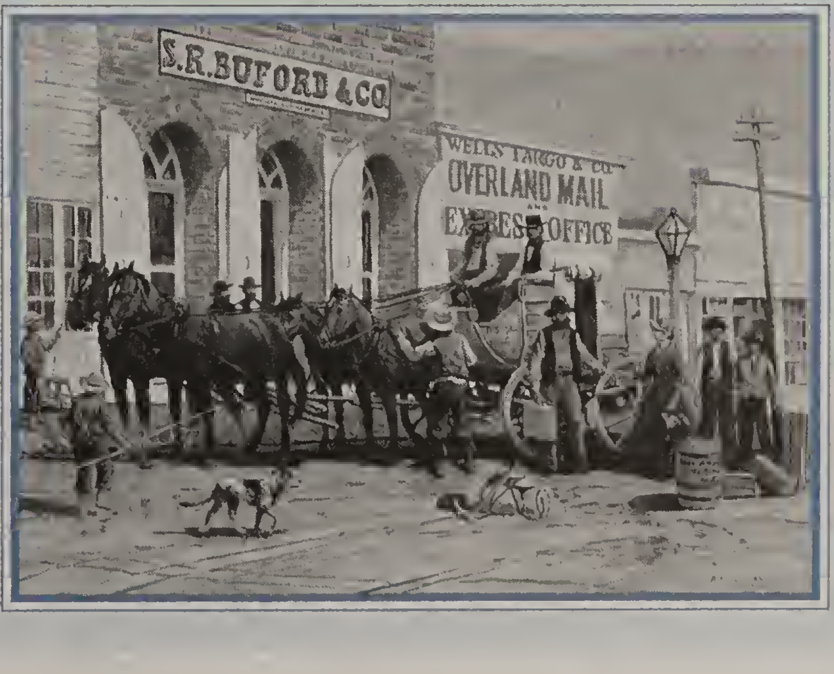
Name: ________________________________________________

Address: ______________________________________________

City/State: ___________________________ Zip: ______________

Method of payment: check ☐ Visa ☐ Mastercard ☐ Discover ☐ Am.Ex ☐

Card# ______________________ expiration date ______________



S.R. BUFORD & CO.
WELLS FARGO & CO.
OVERLAND MAIL
EXPRESS OFFICE

School Children Campaigned for Virginia City

School students all across the state participated in a heartwarming effort to save Virginia and Nevada cities. "We would like to publicly thank each and every one of the students and teachers who worked community-wide to raise not only money but public support for the campaign," said Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill. Many classes raised money, wrote letters to politicians, did special course work on Virginia and Nevada cities, or campaigned their parents and other adults.

One such class was the third grade students in Colleen Vittone's class at Whittier Elementary School in Bozeman, which raised over $1,000 for the Montana Historical Society Foundation's "Save Virginia City Fund." Vittone said in a letter to the Society, "The children really feel like they did make a difference and were integral in convincing the state to purchase the cities . . . They campaigned to friends, family, and schoolmates . . . I told my class that not only have they learned about past Montana history, but they also are part of Montana history in the making."

Other schools from across the state, from the very large to those as small as Geyser Public School's fifth through seventh grades, as well as parochial schools like Our Lady of Lourdes in Great Falls took on projects to save Virginia and Nevada cities.

Fundraising efforts in Montana's schools included cookie sales, penny drives, and a quilt raffle, in addition to spreading public awareness.

Come to Virginia City

- Virginia City is planning "A Victorian Weekend" on July 25-27. Included in the festivities will be a parade, oratory, afternoon teas, and a grand ball. For information call (406) 843-5419.
- Heritage Day will take place on August 16 at Virginia City. Celebrate Virginia City's past with a parade and historic games. For information call (406) 843-5555.

Virginia City Program Available

A special program, "Glimpses of Virginia City," has been prepared by Montana Historical Society staff members Tom Cook, public information officer, and Ellen Baumler, historian, for public presentations throughout Montana. The program offers viewers a snapshot of Virginia City as seen through early newspapers, letters, and diaries. The slide program then compares early Virginia City to today's town. This year's focus on Virginia City complements the Society's efforts to save Virginia City and Nevada City. Each year Society staff will create a new program on some aspect of the state's history. Society staff will present each program, and travel costs will be shared with local sponsors.

To schedule this program, which is part of the Society's "LIVE from the Society," call Marcella Sherfy, Society Education Officer, at (406) 444-4794.

Society to Open Store/ Information Center in Virginia City

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store and Information Center opens July 4 in Virginia City in a small house locally known as Aunt Julia's.

Located on the west end of Wallace Street, across from the Virginia City Opera House, the Society store will sell posters, prints, historic photographs, and books on Montana and the West. The information center will provide material on Virginia City and on the Society's activities across the state.

Later this summer, the information center will feature a small exhibit of early photographs of Virginia City. "We are excited to be joining the good people of Virginia City in promoting the history of the gold rush era," said Richard Boyd, museum store manager.

The store and information center will be open from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Tuesdays through Sundays, through Labor Day.

AN INVITATION FROM THE MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Join the Society and help us in our efforts to preserve western heritage and educate future generations on the history of Montana and the West. As a special member, you will receive the award-winning Montana The Magazine of Western History, the Montana Post newsletter, a free museum store catalog, 15% discount on purchases (excluding original art and limited editions), and invitations to special events.

Call us at 1-800-243-9900 or send this form to:

Montana Historical Society
225 North Roberts Street, P.O. Box 201201
Helena, MT 59620-1201

Name ______________________________

Address ______________________________

City ____________ State ____ Zip ________

Special Memberships (one year, includes magazine and benefits mentioned above):

___ $48 Supporting
___ $100 Contributing ___ $125 Business
___ $300 Sustaining
___ $750 Patron
___ $1000 Corporation

MONTANA
The Magazine of Western History
☐ new ☐ renewal

Subscription to magazine and newsletter only:

___ $24 one year ___ $45 two years

___ Payment enclosed (_payable to Montana Historical Society)

___ Visa, MasterCard, Discover

______________________________

Expiration date ______________________________

Signature ______________________________

Foreign orders add $8 per year postage in U.S. funds. Allow 6-8 weeks delivery of your first magazine.

Virginia City and Nevada City Purchase—a message from the Director

Continued from page 1

tions. The first effort to purchase the properties assumed that the federal government would acquire at least Virginia City to operate as a national park to interpret the gold rush. Planning and surveys ensued, but by 1995 it was clear that adding another national park was not feasible.

From 1995 to early in 1996 the effort became more state-based with a two-track effort to persuade the Montana Legislature to purchase at least Nevada City as work went on simultaneously to raise the purchase price privately. The legislative effort in 1995 also failed and subsequent fundraising stalled because the Montana Historical Society could not persuade Mr. Bovey to enter into an option with a three-year time frame, which the MHS Foundation's leadership believed necessary to mount a national, private giving campaign. In spring 1996, the purchase was essentially dead, and the specter of auction and dispersal of the properties loomed.

MHS Photograph Archives

Virginia City, Montana—1866

The National Trust for Historic Preservation, which had declared Virginia City one of the nation's most endangered historic sites, urged making one last effort with the Society and Governor Marc Racicot. This was given impetus by thousands of concerned citizens in Montana and nationwide.

Governor Racicot appointed a short-term task force to examine the feasibility of acquiring the properties and paying for and operating the sites. The Montana Historical Society and the Society Foundation assumed responsibility for supporting the task force's work and negotiating a purchase option to give the legislature time to deliberate.

The Society and Foundation did not enter into this project without trepidation, for it became clear very rapidly that it would require a significant investment of staff time and funds. In addition to the $375,000 option payment, there were also the questions of lobbying costs, printing and postage, security for the assets, and many other factors that required funds. Further, the effort would come while the Society was defending its budget before the legislature and seeking other legislation. Also, how would acquisition of the Bovey properties affect other Society and Foundation priorities? Would other projects have to be postponed or discarded? The reality, of course, was that the Society and Foundation had to undertake the project. It was too important to Montana, the nation, and our posterity.

Completing its deliberations in November 1996, the task force determined to seek legislative acquisition of the Bovey properties, settled on a price of $6,500,000, outlined preferred management, restoration, and operational approaches, and called for an additional $3,000,000 appropriation to ensure short-term operation and restoration.

A full recounting of the ebbs and flows of the Virginia City proposal in the state legislature would require more space than available here, but in capsule, success came because legislative leadership embraced the proposal, because an excellent lobbyist committed her whole being to the success of the endeavor, and because of a tremendous outpouring of help from newspapers, civic groups, municipalities, and thousands of individuals.

Even with the euphoria that accompanied the cities' purchase, some things will give us pause as the months go by. There is the question of how the acquisition will affect the Society's ability to go forward with other programs, and we trust that as Virginia City becomes successful that revenues generated can contribute to care and management of the assets.

Troubling, too, is the question of the remaining funds that must be raised to pay for the option. Foundation staff will continue to work on that issue.

Most troubling is the controversy that arose between Virginia City's supporters and the Montana arts community. The division resulted from the decision made in the legislature to fund part of the acquisition with half of the Cultural Trust. Politically, that was an issue with overtones of sentiment, such as not publicly funding the arts, liberal-conservative confrontations, and other matters. The Society never proposed the use of the Cultural Trust and finally supported it reluctantly, as did Governor Racicot, because Virginia City was too important to the nation to lose. We will try to heal this breach, but the arts community must also address perceptions about its place in society with the ultimate goal of broadening its base of support so that the arts are not constantly at risk.

There are difficulties still to be overcome, but we should not lose sight of how much has been accomplished. A lot of work lies ahead, but posterity will thank all who played a part in this grand undertaking.

Montana's First Lady Honors Society Volunteers

The Montana Historical Society honored its volunteers, the Friends of the Society, and the Original Governor's Mansion Board, in April with a luncheon hosted by Montana First Lady Theresa Racicot at the Governor's residence.

Some 50 volunteers have devoted 5,200 hours to Society projects during the last year, an increase of 1,400 hours over the previous year. "Throughout the Society on every day of the week, volunteers are busy—in work both seen and unseen by the rest of the state's citizens who count on the Society to be there for them," said Society Director Brian Cockhill.

Mary Hanson received the Director's Award for her contributions to the Society by providing hundreds of museum tours to Montana students, providing tours of the Original Governor's Mansion, and speaking about the Society to various groups. She has been an active volunteer tour guide since 1973, the only remaining guide who helped to launch the Society's docent program.

Tom Cook, photographer

First Lady Theresa Racicot (left) with Director's Award winner Mary Hanson at the Society Volunteer Luncheon held in April

Jane Addy and Doris Hitt received Departmental Assistance Volunteer Awards for donating 442 hours and 572 hours respectively in the Museum Store, Publications Office, and the Library.

Pam Hulbert, Denise Pennington, and Charlotte Thomas received Muse Awards for helping with Society receptions and other public events.

Ethel LaRock, who gave 86 hours to the Museum program, and John Stoner, who donated 68 hours to the State Historic Preservation Office, were honored for the most hours donated by first-year volunteers.

Others honored for donating more than 100 hours for departmental work were Mary Brewer, Dorothy Carpenter, Gordon Defendorf, Norma Heiman, Dora Howard, Forrest Jackson, Marge Jacobson, Betty Jones, Audrey Levitan, Doris McMurray, Bob Morgan, Hariot Van Tine, and Joyce Vashro.

Volunteers assisted in a variety of projects, such as decorating the Society for special occasions, planning and hosting receptions, transcribing tapes, preparing mailings, keyboarding book projects, cataloging artifacts, assisting in the Museum Store, leading tours, and writing gift cards.

For information about joining the Friends, contact Marcella Sherfy, Society Education Officer, at (406) 444-4794.

Programs Feature Métis, Weaving

The Montana Historical Society will offer a rich collection of activities this summer. On July 11-12 the Society will complement two current Society exhibits, "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience" and "Montana Monthly," by hosting weaving demonstrations.

"Weaving Weekend" will present traditional skills like rug hooking, basket weaving, spinning, and cloth weaving. The process of making functional and beautiful clothing and other objects will be demonstrated from beginning to end. "We will be honoring and remembering the great artistic skills that women traditionally have invested in making their homes warm and beautiful places," said Society Education Officer Marcella Sherfy.

On August 1 and 2 the Society will host "Métis Days," which will demonstrate the lives and traditional skills of the Métis, whose mixed culture and lineage drew from the Chippewa and Cree Indians, and the French, Irish, and Scottish fur traders. The Métis are famous for their Red River carts and colorful clothing. Métis Albert Wiseman from Choteau, Montana, will demonstrate carpentry skills and discuss heritage. Films and programs will also be part of the event. For details on either program, call (406) 444-4794.

Teacher Advisory Panel Named

Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill has selected six Montana educators to serve on the newly-appointed Montana Historical Society Teacher Advisory Panel.

Vi Hills, Chester Grade School Principal; Marta Brooks, St. Ignatius High School English teacher; Raymond Berg, Montana City Middle School Social Studies teacher; Shirley Barrick, Fergus County Superintendent of Schools; Julie Cajune, Curriculum Coordinator for the Confederated Salish and Kootenai; and Bruce Wendt, Billings West High School Social Studies teacher were selected from a large group of applicants.

The panel held its first meeting in June to discuss the Heritage Learning Program and how it could replace or complement Montana's previous participation in National History Day. Resources for Montana history texts and updated supplements were also discussed.

The panel will help the Society develop programs and materials to better serve Montana's students.

Dorothy Johnson Looks at Early Montana

There are plenty of reasons to read Dorothy Johnson's When You and I Were Young, Whitefish, but the main one is that it's fun. The Montana Historical Society Press has just republished the reminiscences of the famous Montana author of such classics as The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance, The Hanging Tree, and A Man Called Horse.

In telling the stories of growing up at the head of the Flathead valley in Montana in the early part of this century, Johnson's humor shines through, even as she recalls the hardships. "The magic of Johnson's writing rests in its simplicity and in its power to evoke rich visual images," said Martha Kohl, editor of the Montana Historical Society Press. "It is why her work was so easily transformed into successful motion pictures."

The 164-page book includes a new introduction by Johnson's friend Vivian Paladin, former editor of the Society's Montana The Magazine of Western History.

When You and I Were Young, Whitefish can be ordered for $10.95 (plus $3.50 for shipping and handling) by calling the Society Store at 1-800-243-9900.

Autumn in Montana: Exploration, Yellowstone, and Baseball

Early Helena baseball team, circa 1900

MHS Photo Archives

Lewis and Clark have received much deserved acclaim for their heroic journey West in 1804-1806. Farther north and a dozen years earlier, however, Scottish fur trader Alexander Mackenzie made his way across Canada to the Pacific shore and thus became the first white explorer to cross the North American continent. In the first of a two-part article for the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, Canadian historian Barry Gough details Mackenzie's harrowing trek of 1792–1793.

Also for the Autumn issue, Paul Schullery describes the extensive hunting of game and furbearing animals in Yellowstone National Park during the first decade of the park's history, and how human impact and park policies during the 1870s and after have helped shape the park's ecology down to the present day.

Elsewhere, Jeffrey Safford completes his story of eastern capital and mining enterprise in Montana in the 1860s with the second of a two-part series, and Kathryn Aiken details the impact of Communism on labor relations in Idaho's Coeur D'Alene mining district in the mid-twentieth century.

James Scott provides an entertaining tale of the raucous events surrounding formation of the first professional baseball league in Montana in 1900. The league, made up of teams from Helena, Great Falls, Butte, and Anaconda and introduced amid much fanfare in early summer, enjoyed a tumultuous existence and lasted but a single season. It was not resumed the following year largely because of the gambling, violence, and disrespect for the umpires and even league officials.

In addition, Dorothy Johnson's endearing reminiscence of being a telephone operator in Whitefish, Montana, in 1922 is offered again. Originally appearing in Montana in Autumn 1973, the reminiscence was later included in Johnson's When You and I Were Young, Whitefish, a book published in 1982 and just re-issued by the Montana Historical Society Press.

OGM Garden Tour Planned July 13

On Sunday, July 13, from 1-5 p.m., the Society, the Original Governor's Mansion Board, and the Pioneer Cabin will co-sponsor its fifth annual "Garden Tour/Ice Cream Social," featuring Helena's most beautiful lawns and gardens. Ten tour sites, including a Victorian garden, a fish pond, and a professional horticulturist's garden, have been selected.

Tickets are $10 and are available the day of the tour at the Original Governor's Mansion, 304 N. Ewing, and the Pioneer Cabin near Reeder's Alley.

John Schneeberger of Garden City Seeds in Hamilton, Montana, will be available at Helena's Pioneer Cabin to answer questions. For details on the Garden Tour, call (406) 444-4710.

Legacy Dust Jackets Available

The Montana Historical Society Press has dust jackets available for its clothbound book, Legacy: New Perspectives on the Battle of the Little Bighorn, edited by Charles E. Rankin (available for $45.00 plus shipping from the Museum Store).

If you have already purchased a cloth copy of Legacy, the Press will enclose, at your request, a free dust jacket with your next order from the Society's museum store. Or you may obtain your dust jacket by sending $2.00 for shipping and handling to the Montana Historical Society Museum Store, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, MT 59601-1201.

Historian Robert Utley has called Legacy, which has been chosen as a History Book Club alternate selection, one of "the few works basic to perceiving the context, the event, and the legacy of the Little Bighorn."

The book features sixteen essays by such noted scholars as Brian Dippie, Paul Andrew Hutton, and Richard A. Fox, Jr. Topics examined include the environmental context of the Northern Plains, new archaeological discoveries about the battle, Native American perspectives of the battle, and the battle's symbolic legacy.

Sperry Selected for Artist Residency

Janet Sperry, Montana Historical Society Registrar, has been selected as one of thirteen artists to participate in the "Artist in Residence Program," sponsored by the Helena National Forest and the Holter Museum of Art in Helena.

As an award recipient, Sperry will spend one week this summer at the Thompson Guard Forest Station near White Sulphur Springs. She will explore chamber music repertoire for the flute, including flute and clarinet duets and flute, violin, and cello trios.

Following the residency, Sperry plans to hold public recitals to perform selections worked on at the Forest Service cabin.

This is the second year of the project, designed to connect communities and artists. Last year, Roberta Jones-Wallace, Montana Historical Society exhibits designer, was selected to work on wood carvings, pen-and-ink drawings, watercolors, and acrylic paintings at a cabin near Helena. Jones-Wallace joined other artists selected last year for a group art show in early spring of this year at the Holter Museum in Helena.

Campbell Fellowship Winners Announced

MHS Photo Archives

The Campbell Farming Corporation near Hardin, Montana, hauling wheat using the latest technology available around 1920

The first-ever fellowships to study the Campbell Farm records at the Montana Historical Society have been awarded. Douglas M. Edwards and Dr. Frank R. Grant will spend four weeks at the Society researching the Campbell Farming Corporation records. As recipients of the Campbell fellowship, each will receive $2,500 and will write an article for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Edwards, who recently received a master's degree in history from Montana State University, will analyze the rise of corporate farming in Montana, focusing on the role of agricultural workers. He hopes to show how ordinary Montanans weathered the economic and social changes of the 1920s and 1930s.

Dr. Grant, currently of Albuquerque, received his doctorate in history from the University of Montana. He worked as a director of the Fort Missoula Historical Museum and was consulting and staff historian for Historical Research Associates of Missoula. Grant will evaluate the Campbell farming operations and the specific measures that Thomas D. Campbell implemented for sustained dryland farming operations in an effort to clarify the historic role of dryland farming in Montana's economic and cultural development.

Phoebe Knapp Warren, granddaughter of Thomas D. Campbell, donated the financial support for the Thomas D. Campbell Fellowships to support research in the family's farming records in the Montana Historical Society Archives. Campbell, an expert in dryland farming and industrial farming techniques, once operated the largest wheat farm in the world, pioneering the extensive use of mechanization. Warren was instrumental in ensuring that the corporation's records were donated to the Archives.

Quilt Registration/Workshop Held

The Montana Historical Society, along with Joyce Morgan, a certified quilt appraiser and restoration expert from Bozeman, and Margo Krager, owner of Patchworks in Amsterdam, presented the workshop, "Tracing a Quilt's History," in April at the Society.

The workshop discussed the development of print and dye technology and how to use that information to date a quilt. Morgan and Krager talked of dating quilts by studying fabric dyes, colors used, print designs, quilt pattern designs, and the tightness of the quilting stitches.

Society staff and volunteers registered and photographed quilts brought in by local individuals. Volunteers also assisted individuals with questions such as how to finish a quilt and how to care for and clean quilts. Information collected at the Society about the quilts will be placed in a data base and can be sorted by the quilt maker, current owner, county, pattern type, and date.

"We wish to preserve the heritage and history that quilts represent," said State Archivist Kathryn Otto. She added, "People are becoming much more aware of their heritage and want to record it for future generations."

In addition, State Archivist Otto and Archivist Jodie Foley addressed the Quilters' Art Guild of the Northern Rockies at that group's annual meeting in Helena, held the same day as the Society workshop. They discussed preparing oral histories with quilters and how the Society will use the information gathered about quilts. The Guild plans to register 2,000 quilts by the turn of the century and prepare statewide quilt exhibits and a book. The book will feature seven geographic regions of Montana and is expected to show trends in quilt patterns both locally and regionally. For information, contact Kathryn Otto at (406) 444-4775.

Grass Dancing, Capitol Paintings Bradley Topics

Jennifer Waterston, a graduate student of dance history from the University of New Mexico, is the 1997 Graduate Bradley Fellow. She will spend four weeks this summer at the Society studying Pow Wow grass dancing of the Blackfeet and Crow as an adaptive response to federal assimilation policies from 1860 to 1930. She is the first Bradley Fellow to use artifacts as the primary focus of her study.

Dr. Patricia M. Burnham, a lecturer in American Studies and Art History at the University of Texas, is the 1997 Senior Bradley Fellow. Dr. Burnham received a National Endowment for the Humanities summer grant in 1994 to study C. M. Russell's works, particularly Russell's large mural in the House of Representatives at the Capitol building in Helena. This summer she will expand the study to include all the paintings in the Capitol building and will use state archives resources. Each fellow will receive a $2,500 stipend to work in Helena for four weeks.

Vivian Paladin Receives Jacobson Preservation Award

Kay Hansen, photographer

Preservation award recipients pictured (from left): Vivian Paladin, Ray and Mary Beth Linder, Ed Smith, Betty Babcock, Anne Hibbard, and Chris Imhoff. Not pictured are: Alan Nicholson, Michael and Deborah Corak, Chad and Laurie Fitzgerald, and a representative from the National Guard Armory.

Vivian Paladin of Helena received the Herb Jacobson Memorial Lifetime Achievement Award in May from the Helena/Lewis and Clark Historic Preservation Commission. Paladin, long-time editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History and contributor to numerous books including Helena: An Illustrated History, Valleys of the Prickly Pear, and More Stories from the Quarries, has dedicated her life to history and historic preservation.

Paladin is the first recipient of this award, presented in memory of Herb Jacobson, a Helena architect, who devoted his life to architectural and historic preservation in Helena. Jacobson was an original member of Helena's Historical Preservation Committee, still in existence.

Anne Hibbard, current board member for both the Montana Historical Society Foundation and the Montana Preservation Alliance, also received a preservation award for her dedication on both local and statewide levels, including her work on Virginia City and Nevada City.

Also receiving awards were: Historic Preservation Commission member Betty Babcock, who assisted with State Capitol restoration efforts and the Virginia City and Nevada City campaign; Chris Imhoff for her contributions to the State Capitol restoration effort; Alan Nicholson, an original member of the Historic Preservation Commission who prevented demolition of the Securities Building and created adaptive reuse of other downtown Helena buildings; and, past member of the Historic Preservation Commission Ed Smith, who helped establish the preservation awards program and the local historic sign program.

Homes owned by Michael and Deborah Corak at 309 N. Ewing Street; Chad and Laurie Fitzgerald at 212 Blake Street; Ray and Mary Beth Linder at 321 Howie Street; and the National Guard Armory Building were also recognized for construction or remodeling efforts.

The luncheon, held at the Montana Club in Helena in April, kicked off National Historic Preservation Week, which included several historic sign dedications, presentations, lectures, and special tour train rides.

Come to the Museum

If you are traveling in the Helena area this summer, be sure to visit the Montana Historical Society Museum at 225 North Roberts Street. Located across from the Capitol, the Museum offers the Mackay Gallery—one of the major collections of Charles M. Russell art, Montana Homeland, F. Jay Haynes, and many other special exhibits. Admission is free. Call (406) 444-2694 for information.

BULLETIN BOARD

■ The Buffalo Bill Historical Center of Cody will exhibit "It Never Failed Me: The Arms and Art of the Remington Arms Company" through September 28. The exhibition will trace the history of one of America's most important firearms manufacturers, featuring historical Remington firearms and original artwork by American artists such as Philip R. Goodwin and N. C. Wyeth. Included will be four components of gun-making: barrel-makers, military rifles, revolvers, sporting arms, highly embellished, prototype, one-of-a-kind arms, and decorated products. For information contact the Buffalo Bill Museum, P.O. Box 1000, Cody, WY 82414, call (307) 587-771, or fax (307) 587-5714.

■ The 32nd Annual Northern Great Plains History Conference will be held September 24–27, at the Doublewood Inn, Bismarck, North Dakota. For information contact Janet Daley Lysengen, program chair, State Historical Society of North Dakota, 612 East Boulevard, Bismarck, ND 58505, call (701) 328-2799, fax (701) 328-3710, or e-mail: ccmail.jlysenge@ranch.state.nd.us.

■ "The Meaning of Museums: Will the Millennium Modify our Definitions?" is the theme for the Mountain Plains Museums Association's annual conference set for October 1–4 in Missoula, Montana. It is hosted by the Historical Museum at Fort Missoula, The Art Museum of Missoula, the Montana Association of Art Gallery Directors, the National Forest Service Museum, the Boone & Crockett Club, the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, the Northern Rockies Heritage Center, the Smokejumpers Visitors Center, and the Fine Arts Department of the University of Montana. For information contact Robert Brown at (406) 728-3476.

■ The Oral History Association will hold its annual meeting September 25–28 in New Orleans, Louisiana. The theme, "Looking In, Looking Out: Retelling the Past, Envisioning the Future," will examine relationships between science, religion, personal values, and debates over public policy. For information contact Alphine W. Jefferson, Department of History, College of Wooster, Wooster, OH 44691, call (330) 263-2452, fax (330) 263-1614, or e-mail AlJefferson@acs.Wooster.edu or contact Steven J. Novak, UCLA Oral History Program, UCLA 157511, Los Angeles, CA 90095, call (310) 825-7524, fax (310) 206-2796, or e-mail sjNovak@library.UCLA.edu.

History Conference Set for October 23-25

"Surrounded by History" is the theme for the Montana Historical Society's Annual History Conference to be held October 23-25 in Helena. The conference, which will coincide with publication of the Montana Historical Society's Oral History Guide, will spotlight valuable sources of historical information, including oral histories, music, art, drama, artifacts, and buildings.

Conference activities kick-off with an overview of the Society's year, including the recent purchase of Virginia and Nevada cities. Later on Friday a progressive open house is planned for many historic homes, public buildings, and churches in central Helena. Included in the open house will be the Lewis and Clark County Courthouse, the Sanders Bed and Breakfast, the St. Helena Cathedral, the Holter Art Museum, and the original Governor's Mansion.

The conference will include a workshop on oral history, two new sessions on the value of collecting historic furniture and toys, the return of the popular "Jerks in Montana" session, and much more. A Society open house will provide conference participants with the opportunity to look at the collections, archives, and library storage. Historic music with some sing-along opportunities will round out entertainment.

A tour of Helena-area industrial sites will be offered on Sunday by the Montana Chapter of the Society of Industrial Archaeology.

Conference information will be mailed to members in September. For information call Marcella Sherfy at (406) 444-4794.

Visit the Society at http://www.his.mt.gov

Find information on the Montana Historical Society's museum, library, archives, photo archives, publications, merchandise, education, historic preservation, Virginia and Nevada cities, and much more on the Society's new World Wide Web site.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," Northeast Gallery, through February 21, 1998 |
| | "Montana Monthly," Montana Reflections Gallery, through October 31, 1997 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| July 11-12 | "Weaving Weekend," Montana Historical Society |
| July 13 | Fifth Annual Garden Tour/Ice Cream Social, Original Governor's Mansion and Helena Pioneer Cabin, 1-5. Call (406) 444-4710 for details |
| August 1-2 | "Métis Days," Montana Historical Society |
| October 23-25 | Montana History Conference, Helena |

Summer and Autumn Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | To Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8-6, weekends and holidays, 9-5. After Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8-5. Saturday, 9-5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8-5, First Saturday of each month, 9-4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1-5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Through August 31: Tuesday—Sunday, 12-5, tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4. September 2-December 31: Tuesday—Saturday, 12-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. |
| Capitol | Through September 13: every day 9-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4; self-guided tours daily, 8-6. |

To arrange guided group tours for the Museum/Galleries, Original Governor's Mansion, and the Capitol, or to confirm hours, call (406) 444-4789

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694 • http://www.his.mt.gov
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 461
Bozeman, MT
59715

S
978.6
H6m
Vol.35,No.1

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR 21 1997
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 35 No. 1 • Spring 1997

May Lecture Series to Feature Authors of Recent Works

The tradition of having authors and experts talk about their latest works will continue again this year, following on last year's highly successful series of May Author Talks at the Montana Historical Society.

On Tuesday, May 6, Robert Morgan of Helena, will discuss Charlie Russell's pen-and-ink drawings. Featured will be the new Montana Historical Society Press book, the Charlie Russell Journal, which includes thirty-four Russell drawings.

On Tuesday, May 13, Mary Murphy, of Montana State University, Bozeman, will discuss her just-released book Mining Cultures: Gender, Work, and Leisure in Butte, 1914–41. Murphy will elaborate on the role of women in Butte.

On Tuesday, May 20, Lyndel Meikle, of Deer Lodge, editor of Very Close to Trouble: The Johnny Grant Memoirs, will talk about the life of Johnny Grant and what it was like to live on the Montana and Idaho frontiers during the mid-nineteenth century. Grant, memorialized by the Grant-Kohrs Ranch National Historic Site at Deer Lodge, Montana, made firsthand observations of the landscape, the frontier population, vigilantes, and other frontier happenings.

On Tuesday, May 27, Rick Newby of Helena, editor, introduction writer, and contributor to Writing Montana: Literature under the Big Sky will discuss this collection of twenty-seven essays on such writers as Joseph Kinsey Howard, Donald Hollowbreast, Frieda Fligelman, and Mary MacLane plus ten essays from The Last Best Place.

All talks begin at noon in the Haynes Auditorium of the Montana Historical Society and are free to the public. Books will be available for sale and authors or editors will be available to sign books following the talks.

New Exhibit Opens at Society

F. Y Cory Publishers, Inc.

1925 Liberty magazine cover by Fanny Y. Cory

A new exhibit, titled "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," opened March 5 at the Montana Historical Society. The exhibit features paintings, drawings, and sculptures by female artists who came from many backgrounds—urban, rural, rich, poor, native, and immigrant—and all of whom helped define the Montana experience.

The exhibit was opened in conjunction with a special weekly March lecture series that featured talks by artist Dana Boussard on her own creations; Sue Near, museum services administrator, on Elsa Jemne and Caroline G. Granger and their work among Montana's Blackfeet and Crow Indians; Sarah Boehme, curator of fine art for the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, on Montana artist Fra Dana; and Butte photographer Kristi Hager on Evelyn Cameron, turn-of-the-century eastern Montana photographer.

The "Painting Ladies" exhibit is open to the public for viewing until February 21, 1998, in the Northeast Gallery.

Also new and on display is the "Montana Monthly" exhibit in the Society's Montana Reflections Gallery. This exhibit explores how calendars, as advertising media and art forms, reflect broader themes of Montana history. The "Montana Monthly" exhibit will be on display through October 31, 1997.

Art to Fund Museum Acquisitions

A limited, numbered edition of the Society's new Charlie Russell Journal is available from the Montana Historical Society Foundation. The regular edition of the Journal has proven again how popular Charles M. Russell's work is, and it is hoped that the limited edition will help fund additional fine art acquisitions by the Montana Historical Society Museum.

The Charlie Russell Journal features Russell quotations, primarily from his letters, and thirty-four Russell pen and ink sketches, four of which have never been published before. It also leaves plenty of room for diarists and sketch artists to express their own visions in words and pictures.

Continued on page 2

Summer in Montana

When the Great Northern Railroad decided early in this century to invest heavily in promoting Montana's Glacier National Park, it did so for obvious reasons, namely passengers and profits. That, at least, has been the standard historical interpretation.

Now, Christiane Diehl-Taylor challenges that view with a detailed look at Great Northern business history. Prestige, she argues, was an equally important factor. Anxious to associate itself with one of the nation's premiere national parks, the Great Northern, through unceasing efforts by Louis W. Hill, James J. Hill's son, invested heavily and sometimes at a loss to build and promote elaborate ac-

Continued on page 4

PLEASE RETURN

New Trustee

Edward A. Henrich has been appointed by Governor Marc Racicot to the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees.

Edward Henrich

Henrich, of Fairmont, is general manager of the Fairmont Hot Springs Resort and president of the Montana Innkeepers Association. He also served on the Governor's Virginia City/Nevada City Task Force, which recently recommended that the state purchase those two historic towns and their artifacts.

He and his wife Judith Ann have two children, Joseph and Elizabeth.

Henrich will complete a three-year term ending in 1999 vacated by Marjorie King, who died in December.

Fundraising Continues

The Montana Historical Society through its foundation continues its fundraising efforts to save the historic treasures at Virginia City and Nevada City. Support for the effort has come from across the state as well as from concerned people across the nation, Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

"These are exciting times for the Montana Historical Society as we continue to respond to the demand to preserve Virginia City and Nevada City," Cockhill said. "We thank those who have supported us in their contributions and ask those who have not already done so to please help."

Governor Marc Racicot and the Society continue to work with the Legislature on the issue.

1997 Burlingame–Toole Competition Announced

The Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1997 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award.

The award will be given to the best article-length manuscript submitted for publication in Montana by an undergraduate or graduate student. Articles should focus on a Montana or western history topic.

Students must be enrolled in a college or university and must be sponsored by a faculty member from their institution. Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 18, 1997.

Art to Fund Acquisitions continued from page 1

Each limited edition journal contains an original artwork created for the Society Foundation by one of thirteen nationally known western artists. An illustration by Buckeye Blake, Joe Bohler, Robert Cavanaugh, Charles Fritz, Frank Hagel, Jack Hines, Terry Mimnaugh, Robert F. Morgan, Newman Myrah, Don Prechtel, Tom Saubert, Steve Seltzer, or Jessica Zemsky appears on the inside front endpapers of the special edition journals.

Each limited edition copy is being offered through a lottery. To place your name in the lottery, send a $500 check made out to the Montana Historical Society Foundation; include your name, address, telephone number, and your first, second, and third choice of artists' illustrations. Entries must be received by June 16, 1997, with the winners being drawn on June 20 from all requests received. Nonwinning checks will be returned promptly.

Proceeds from sale of the limited edition journal will be used to establish a Fine Arts Acquisition Fund to assist the Museum in purchasing art for its permanent collections.

More than one thousand copies of the regular $12.95 edition of the Charlie Russell Journal have been sold since the 128-page hardbound book went on sale just a few weeks ago.

Limited edition Charlie Russell Journal by Jack Hines

In addition to the thirteen limited edition Russell journals, a fourteenth book will be illustrated by internationally known Montana artist Clyde Aspevig and will be offered for sale by bid as "The Last of the 5,000." The minimum bid is $500 with the successful bidder being announced on October 24, 1997, at the Montana History Conference in Helena.

For information contact the Montana Historical Society Foundation, c/o Fine Art Acquisition Fund, P.O. Box 863, Helena, MT 59624, or call (406) 449-3770. To purchase regular editions of the Charlie Russell Journal, call the Montana Historical Society Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900.

BULLETIN BOARD

■ Bozeman Trail Days will be June 20-22 at Fort Phil Kearny State Historic Site, off Highway I-90 between Sheridan and Buffalo, Wyoming. Sponsored by the Fort Phil Kearny/Bozeman Trail Association and the Wyoming State Parks and Historic Sites Department, the festival includes a symposium, tours, demonstrations, and a buffet dinner. For information write: Fort Phil Kearny/Bozeman Trail Association, P.O. Box 5013, Sheridan, WY 82801, or call Fort Phil Kearny Historic Site at (307) 684-7629.

■ The Museum of the Mountain Man and the Sublette County Historical Society will hold its 1997 Fur Trade Symposium in Pinedale, Wyoming, on September 11-13. This year's theme is "The Fur Trade Era: The Influence of the Rocky Mountain Fur Trade on the Development of the American West." The symposium will focus on the concept of enterprise as an organizing principle in understanding mountain men. Robert M. Utley, noted author, will give the keynote address. For information, contact the Museum of the Mountain Man, Box 909, Pinedale, WY 82941, call (307) 367-4101, or fax (307) 367-6768.

■ The Plains Indian Museum of Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, will host the Plains Indian Seminar on September 26-28, 1997. The conference will address the theme, "Plains Indian Art: A Place in the Universe." For information contact Lillian Turner, Public Programs Coordinator, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, 720 Sheridan Avenue, Cody, WY 82414 or call (307) 578-4028.

■ Request for proposals. The 38th Annual Conference of the Western History Association invites western scholars and students to submit papers, panels, and other proposals. Theme for the October 14–17, 1998, conference in Sacramento, California, is "Claims and Prospects: Western History in 1998." Especially welcome are proposals discussing the West from transnational, environmental, postwestern, and global approaches. Deadline for submissions is August 31, 1997. Send one-page vita, along with complete address, phone, and email contacts to Professor Virginia Scharff, Co-Chair, 1998 WHA Program Committee, Department of History, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, NM 87131-1181, phone (505) 277-2451, or fax (505) 277-6023.

Postmark Honors RFD Anniversary

The Tri-Rios postal working group, the Helena Post Office, and the Montana Historical Society joined forces in February to commemorate the one-hundredth anniversary of rural free mail delivery service in the nation and its arrival in Montana in February 1901.

In honor of the occasion, Montana-theme cachet envelopes were created. Local postal employees were on hand to apply a special RFD cancellation also created for the event.

Helena Post Master Harvey Goldstein and Terri Hensley, historian for the Montana Rural Letter Carriers' Union presented a program on the impact of rural mail service in Montana. Estevan "Steve" DeLeon, designer of the special cachet envelopes, was available at the Montana Historical Society to meet the public. Refreshments and special activities were held for the children.

Society Urges Help to Libraries

This Montana Historical Society Press book has been donated to the Lewis & Clark Public Library
by (donor's name)
in memory of (donor's choice)

Sample bookplate

In honor of National Library Week, April 13-19, the Montana Historical Society has initiated a "Give a Library a Book!" campaign. "The Press is inviting people to purchase Montana Historical Society Press books for their favorite libraries," explained Press editor Martha Kohl.

Once someone selects a book, the Press will send it to the library of his or her choice with a custom bookplate identifying the purchaser as the donor and acknowledging anyone the donor wishes to honor by his or her gift.

"We see this as a win-win situation," Kohl said. "The gift is tax-deductible, the local library receives a book, the Montana Historical Society Press sells a book, and more members of the public become aware of the exciting western history titles that the Press is publishing."

People interested in supporting the "Give a Library a Book!" campaign should contact the Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900 or (406) 444-2890 for further information.

History Conference Call for Papers

The twenty-fourth annual Montana History Conference will be held in Helena on October 23–25. The conference will be held in conjunction with publication of the Oral History Guide, a guide to the oral history collections at the Montana Historical Society.

Conference sessions will focus on the original historical sources that help us understand our past, including manuscripts, oral memories, historic art, historic buildings, records, and photographs.

The Society welcomes your suggestions for programs that you or other individuals or groups would be willing to present, or your ideas for speeches, panels, workshops, and presentations by historians, authors, students, independent researchers, or local organizations whose programs or work you have heard about.

Please respond to Marcella Sherfy, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 no later than May 15.

Grant to Support Archaeology Education

The Montana Historical Society has received a $12,500 grant from the Society for American Archaeology (SAA) to coordinate archaeology education programs in Montana and make related materials available to teachers and practicing archaeologists to involve students in the study.

Mark F. Baumler, state archaeologist for the State Historic Preservation Office, and Marcella Sherfy, education officer for the Montana Historical Society, will jointly coordinate the program, called the Montana Ancient Teachings Education Project. The program will prepare educational materials, train archaeologists and educators, and develop on-line databases of archaeology education resources for teachers.

The first step is to identify who in Montana teaches archaeology or prehistory, what materials are used currently, and what other materials could be used. It is intended that teachers and archaeologists then will create teams to develop enrichment materials. The final step will be to plan a workshop to demonstrate how the materials can be used.

For information about this program or to assist, write: Ancient Teachings Project, Education Office, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Editor of New Red Cloud Autobiography to Speak

The Montana Historical Society Press is sending one of its authors on the road. R. Eli Paul, editor of the Autobiography of Red Cloud: War Leader of the Oglalas, will speak and attend book signings at several locations this spring and summer. Plans include visits to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, for the Dakota History Conference; Fort Robinson, Nebraska, for the Fort Robinson History Conference; and Buffalo and Fort Phil Kearny, Wyoming, for Bozeman Trail Days. This fall, Paul will speak in several Montana communities.

Due out in May 1997 from the Montana Historical Society Press, Autobiography of Red Cloud is an "as-told-to" autobiography that provides rich detail on the raiding and war practices of the Oglalas and other Plains' tribes as it traces the major events of Red Cloud's life until the 1860s.

In an advance review, Alvin Josephy, Jr., author of The Patriot Chiefs and many other books on Indian history, called Autobiography of Red Cloud "an exciting addition to the rather slim literature of first person Indian accounts of what life was like before resistance to white aggrandizement became the Plains tribes' number one concern." Lula Red Cloud, a descendant of the great chief, is equally pleased with the autobiography.

Red Cloud's autobiography rested for years unpublished in the Nebraska State Historical Society where Eli Paul painstakingly researched the history of the manuscript to verify that, in fact, it contained Red Cloud's story as Red Cloud told it. In addition to performing the historical detective work to authenticate the book, Paul has written an introduction and series of annotations to enhance readers' understanding of this invaluable historical resource.

For details on Paul's itinerary, contact Sue Erickson at (406) 444-4767. To order the Autobiography of Red Cloud (cloth, $27.95; paper, $15.95, plus $3.50 postage and handling), contact the Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900.

Convention Anniversay to be Observed in June

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the 1972 Constitutional Convention will be held June 27–28 in Helena.

The Montana Historical Society will set up exhibits at both the Capitol and at the Society. The Society's archives will conduct oral histories of Constitutional Convention delegates to complement interviews with Betty Babcock, Bob Campbell, George Harper, Judge John Harrison, Jack McDonald, and Jerry Loendorf. There will be "how to" seminars on organizing a constitutional convention, panel discussions, and keynote address by Dr. Janice C. May, of the Department of Government, University of Texas, Austin.

For information contact Bob Campbell, 601 Broadway, Helena, MT 59601 or call (406) 443-5276.

Montana

continued from page 1

commodations at Glacier Park.

Also for Summer, Eugene Tidball, former legal counsel for the Anaconda Company and then for ARCO, assesses from an insider's viewpoint the final days of the Anaconda Company and ARCO's decision to abandon copper mining and smelting for good in Montana.

Elsewhere, Jeff Safford pursues in the first of a two-part series the efforts of two Connecticut entrepreneurs to establish gold mining companies in and around Virginia City, Montana, immediately following the Civil War, and Robert W. Larson continues his story of the famed Oglala warrior Red Cloud in the second of a two-part biographical series on the only Native American leader to win a war against the United States.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," Northeast Gallery, March 5, 1997 through February 21, 1998 |
| | "Montana Monthly," Montana Reflections Gallery, through October 31, 1997 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

May "Author Talks" will be held in the Haynes Auditorium, at noon, with book signing following. No charge.

| | |
|---|---|
| May 6 | Robert F. Morgan, "Charlie Russell Journal" |
| May 13 | Mary Murphy, "Mining Cultures: Gender, Work, and Leisure in Butte, 1914–41" |
| May 20 | Lyndel Meikle, "Very Close to Trouble: The Johnny Grant Memoirs" |
| May 27 | Rick Newby, "Writing Montana: Literature under the Big Sky" |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum/ Galleries | To Memorial Day: Monday—Friday, 8-5, Saturday, 9-5. Closed Sundays and holidays. May 26 to Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8-6, weekends and holidays, 9-5. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday–Friday, call (406)444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8-5, First Saturday of each month, 9-4:30 Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1-5. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To Memorial Day: Tuesday—Saturday, 12-5, tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4. May 27 to Labor Day: Tuesday—Sunday, 12-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. To arrange guided group tours, call (406) 444-4789. |
| Capitol | To Memorial Day: self-guided tours daily 8-6. May 26 to Labor Day: tours begin on the hour. Sunday—Saturday, 9-5, last tour begins at 4. To arrange group tours, call (406)444-4789. |

To confirm hours, call (406)444-4789.

ATTENTION: If the mailing label below says "LAST COPY," this will be your final Montana Post unless we hear from you. To continue receiving this newsletter, drop us a note, along with your mailing label to: Post Newsletter, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620-1201

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 461
Bozeman, MT
59715

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

S
978.6
H6m
v.34, No.4

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

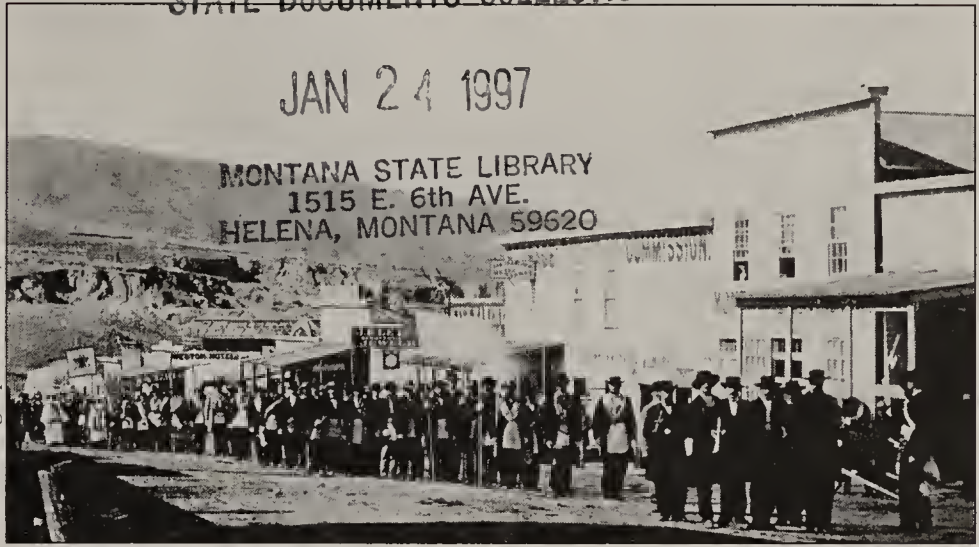
Montana Historical Society
Vol. 34 No. 4 • Winter 1996

Fundraising Critical to Saving Virginia, Nevada Cities

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JAN 24 1997
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620



MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

Shriners and masons parade in Virginia City during the 1870s.

Gold and dreams built Virginia and Nevada cities, and it will take both once again to save them for future generations.

Nature and luck have preserved the historic properties and artifacts in the cities, which date from the famous 1860s placer mining strike in Alder Gulch. Now it is up to the current generation of Montanans and their Legislature to keep the dreams and the story of Montana's founding years alive.

"This is important not only to Montana but the nation because it is the most significant western mining landmark in the United States," Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

The Montana Historical Society Foundation soon will be mailing contribution materials to Society members seeking their tax-deductible financial support for the project.

"There is no better way to show your love for Montana than by giving to protect our heritage," Cockhill said.

The more than one hundred historic buildings and extensive artifacts in Virginia and Nevada cities are in danger of being auctioned off and lost to future generations.

The Society Foundation has secured a $375,000 option on the historic properties and artifacts in the cities from their current owner, Ford Bovey, and must raise money from the private sector to pay for it.

Continued on page 2

Let's Be Sure to Keep This Montana Treasure

Commentary

Montana is still living with what former Montana Historical Society Director K. Ross Toole called a shame against our past.

If the noted historian were alive today, he undoubtedly would be saying, "not again."

In 1945 S. A. "Sid" Willis sold the Mint Bar in Great Falls and with it more than ninety pieces of the original artwork of Charlie Russell.

In 1948 Maurice and Gretchen Egan of Billings and George and June Sterling of Great Falls, who had purchased the artworks, offered the collection to the state of Montana for $125,000.

After the state failed to purchase the collection, it was sold in 1952 to Texas publisher Amon Carter for about $265,000.

Priceless today, the collection became the heart of the Amon Carter Museum's Russell exhibit, which draws hundreds of thousands of persons each year to the Fort Worth attraction.

Simply put, Montana history and heritage were off to Texas.

That's why fire burns in the eyes of longtime Montanans like Francis Bardanouve of Harlem when they think of what it would mean to let Virginia and Nevada cities suffer the same fate.

New Exhibits at Society to Feature Artists, Calendars

An all-new exhibit, "Montana Monthly," will open at the Montana Historical Society on January 20 and will be on display in the Montana Homeland Reflections Gallery through October 31, 1997.

The exhibit explores how calendars, as advertising media and art forms, reflect broader themes of Montana history. Calendars promoting filling stations, railroads, and the war effort during World War II may be seen in this exhibit. Also on display will be pocket calendars, almanacs, Native American winter counts, plates, and other decorative objects bearing calendars.

A second exhibit, "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," will open on March 5 in the Northeast Gallery. A tea with light sandwiches and pastries will be served. The public is invited to the exhibit's opening from 4:30 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. at the Society on March 5. Featured speaker will be noted textile artist Dana Boussard.

"Painting Ladies" will exhibit art in traditional fine art forms such as paintings, drawings, and sculptures and also items of necessity, such as quilts and parfleches, which were turned into works of beauty. The display will explore "art as history" to see what can be learned about Montana's past by examining the art of earlier generations.

PLEASE RETURN

Final Effort Launched to Save Virginia, Nevada Cities

Virginia and Nevada Cities continued from page 1

Had the Foundation not secured the option, Bovey said he would have been forced to auction off his extensive holdings in the cities.

Montana Governor Marc Racicot, and a special task force he created and headed by Society Trustee Jack Burke, have strongly endorsed securing the properties and artifacts.

The governor is drafting a bill for the legislative session beginning in January to acquire the artifacts and properties for $6.5 million. The sale, negotiated and verified by outside appraisers, has been agreed to by Bovey.

In addition to contributing funds to show support for saving Virginia and Nevada cities, Society members also can contact their legislators to seek their support for the legislation.

If Society members have fraternal, civic, business, or other groups they would like to involve in fundraising and support for Virginia and Nevada cities, they should contact the Foundation at (406) 449-3770 for information and materials.

Representatives from Colonial Williamsburg and the Biltmore Estate spent time in Virginia City and Nevada City last summer and testified to the Governor's task force that the site could be transformed into a self-supporting, world-class, living history attraction.

The Dance and Stuart Building, site of the first Montana Historical Society meeting in 1865

Tom Cook, photographer

Alder Gulch became the richest placer mining site in the world for its acreage, and has yielded more than $2.5 billion in gold by today's prices.

By 1865 a census showed that nearly 12,000 people were living in and around the two cities, and the population may have been as high as 15,000. Montana's first newspaper was published in Virginia City in 1864, and the Montana Historical Society itself was founded there in 1865, making it the oldest such organization west of the Mississippi River. Montana's first telegraph connected Virginia City to Salt Lake City by 1867.

Virginia City, which became Montana Territory's first effective Territorial Capitol in 1865, was an important center for development of the interior Pacific Northwest.

Virginia City's original buildings, many furnished and stocked much as they were when they were abandoned, remain today. They include hotels, merchantile stores, dress shops, a printing office, brewery, opera house, and many others.

The climate and location of the cities, which made them unlikely places for frontier settlement, also constituted major factors for their high quality preservation. The altitude was too high and cold for termites, and aridity kept mold and rot in check. The flat roofs were not caved in by heavy snowfall.

In addition, the cities' remote location did not lend itself to new construction. As a result, existing buildings were not torn down or extensively renovated, and there was no major fire.

Today Virginia City's little changed main street provides an exceptional example of commercial architecture from the mid-1800s as well as an unmatched monument to Old West boomtowns.

"It would be a tragedy to see this important collection scattered and lost forever," Cockhill said.

Spring Programs at the Society

A variety of public programs are planned at the Society this spring, including informational programs to aid volunteers and the public in understanding the Society and Montana's history, a series of noon lectures each Wednesday in March, and weekly author talks in May featuring recently published books.

Each third Wednesday of the month through May, following the Friends of the Society's monthly meeting, the Society will offer its informational programs. For example, on February 19, Society Press Editor Martha Kohl will describe how to publish a book.

Other talks have included Society Director Brian Cockhill, on the Society; George Oberst, Montana Historical Society, and Art Wiseman, a Choteau Métis, sharing Métis stories and traditions; Society Archivist Kathryn Otto and Bev Nuebel, Creative Memories representative, describing how to organize a scrapbook to withstand the test of time; and State Historic Preservation Officer Paul Putz, on Montana's National Register of Historic Places.

Each March, the Friends of the Society and the Society jointly sponsor noon lectures on Wednesdays. This year's series, titled "Through the Eyes of a Woman: Women Artists Document Montana," will complement a new Society exhibit on Montana women artists. Montana textile artist Dana Boussard will be the first speaker on March 5.

Among the authors to be featured this May will be Eli Paul, author of the "Autobiography of Red Cloud," and Vivian Paladin, author of a new introduction to Dorothy M. Johnson's classic reminiscence of Whitefish, Montana, titled "When You and I Were Young, Whitefish." Both books will be published by the Montana Historical Society Press this spring.

For more information contact the Montana Historical Society's Education Office at (406) 444-4794.

Staff Lauded for Service

Six Montana Historical Society employees were honored for their service recently, including Society Director Brian Cockhill who marked his twenty-fifth year of service. Cockhill began his career at the Society as an archivist in 1971 and became Society Director in 1992.

Society museum registrar Janet Sperry, who catalogs and keeps records on the museum's artifact collection, was honored for fifteen years of service to the Society.

Others honored were Bonnie Morgan, photo archives clerk; Kathryn Otto, State Archivist; Tom Cook, Public Information Officer; and Gail Owens, museum store sales clerk, each with five years of service.

Hooper, Finnegan Honored at Butte Conference

The City of Butte went "all out" to ensure the success of the Twenty-Third Annual Montana History Conference held in October. The conference included a vaudeville performance and presentations on mining, Montana and western history, newspapers, radio, wind energy, the role of Butte women, Butte labor, the Anaconda Company, environment, literature, sports, and politics.

"The people of Butte far surpassed what we had even envisioned," said Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill, "and we knew it would be a great conference. The conference required hard work, attention to detail, donated equipment and service, and the willing hearts and muscles of many Butte people. The hospitality was overwhelming."

Two area residents were specially honored at the annual history conference banquet. Al Hooper and Alice Finnegan both received Board of Trustee Awards for their significant contributions to Montana history.

Tom Cook, photographer

Al Hooper and Alice Finnegan (right) received Society Trustee Awards from Board President Susan R. McDaniel.

Hooper, of Butte, got his start working in the mines, then as a hoist engineer, and compressor operator for the Anaconda Company, a carpenter in Butte, and a fireman on the Milwaukee Road. A founding member of the Butte Historical Society and the Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives, he also helped preserve historic mining photographs in the World Museum of Mining.

Finnegan, of Anaconda, has led the historic preservation movement in Anaconda and southwestern Montana for more than twenty years. A founder of the Tri-County Historical Society and the Anaconda-Deer Lodge County Historical Society, Finnegan fought for a court injunction in the 1970s that saved such historic landmarks as City Hall and the Davidson Block. After the Anaconda Smelter closed in 1980, Finnegan helped preserve photographic records, streetlight fixtures, and collecting oral histories.

Also during the annual banquet Liping Zhu, an assistant professor of history, Eastern Washington University, Cheney, received the Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in the Society's award-winning Montana The Magazine of Western History. Zhu's article, titled "'A Chinaman's Chance' on the Rocky Mountain Mining Frontier," appeared in the Autumn/Winter 1995 issue of Montana.

In addition, Frank Rzeczkowski, a doctoral student at the University of Houston, received the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award for his article, "Crow Response to the Bozeman Trail: A Failure to Neutrality." The Burlingame–Toole Award is given to the best student manuscript submitted for publication in Montana.

Susan R. Near, Museum Services Administrator for the Montana Historical Society, received the Peter Yegen, Jr., Award for Achievement in museum work. The Museums Association of Montana (MAM) presented the award, which recognizes dedication to advancing the museum's work and fostering the collection, preservation, and interpretation of Montana's cultural heritage. Near, who has worked for the Society and been a MAM member for fourteen years, also served on the MAM Board of Directors, was the Mountain-Plains Regional Representative to the American Association of Museums, and is the 1997 Program Chair for the Mountain-Plains Museums Association.

Audio tapes of the conference are available by writing Inter-Mountain Media, P.O. Box 2351, Kalispell, Montana 59903 or calling (406) 752-6338. All conference sessions and meal speeches are available for $6.00 per tape.

OGM Tour Raises $5,000 for Restoration

This year's Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour attracted more than six hundred people and raised some five thousand dollars to assist with restoration projects at the mansion.

The tour, held December 8, featured several historic Helena homes, including the Original Governor's Mansion itself, which was built in 1888 and served as home to Montana governors until 1959. Fifty Helena-area volunteers assisted with the tour, which is sponsored each year by the Original Governor's Mansion Board and administered by the Montana Historical Society.

In addition to the OGM was a tour of a three-story mansion built in 1904 by Peter Larson for his daughter, Mabel, and Mabel's husband Charles Power. The home, later owned by Wellington Rankin and his wife Louise, who often entertained Wellington's sister, Congresswoman Jeannette Rankin, is presently owned by Michael and Deborah Corak.

The tour also included a Queen Anne style home built in 1886 by businessman Shirley Carter Ashby. Ashby, chairman of the Committee on Territories, is credited with the legislation that gave Montana its name. This home was exchanged with Senator Thomas Powers' home in 1911 and is now owned by Leila and Joe Goldes.

A brick two-story Victorian home in Helena's south central neighborhood owned by Patricia Bik and a newly constructed country-style home owned by Merry and Gary Lunde rounded out the tour.

Restoration plans for the OGM call for work on the second floor southeast bedroom. The room was used as the master bedroom for the home's first inhabitants, the William Chessmans. A length of original wall fabric from this room—a repeating floral basket pattern—was donated to the Society in early 1970, and the Society will restore the southeast bedroom to reflect an accurate history of the house, including reproducing the woven fabric that served as the room's wall covering.

The Montana Post welcomes news of events and activities related to Montana history. Write to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

The Montana Historical Society received more than 250 donations from organizations, businesses, and individuals in 1996. The donations consist of books; library materials; photographs; personal and business papers; organization and government archival records; and museum artifacts such as the bell from the 1922 Jack Dempsey fight in Shelby, Montana, school papers and childhood treasures from Ollie, Montana, a 1917 woman's "going away to college" wool suit, and a J. L. Clarke wood carving.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals: Robert Clark, library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, photograph archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, museum (444-4710).

Margaret Adams
Jane Addy
Kelly Addy
Janet Akins
Alicia Alrich
Alpha Delta Kappa, Montana Branch
American Association of University Women, Kalispell Branch
American Association of University Women, Montana Division
Anaconda/Deerlodge County Historical Society
Gladys Anderson
Joyce Anderson
Burton L. Appleton
Arizona Historical Society
Wadonna Ashcraft
Rudy Autio
Lucille Campbell Balfour
Gary Barker
Sandy Barker
Esther Barnhart
Ron Bartsch
Grace Bates
Jean Baucus
Karyl Beattie
John Bennett
Bequest of Leo Benolken
Belvina Bertino
Mary Jo Shearer Bevan
Big Horn County Historical Museum
Robert Bigart
John Blazer
Ron Bone
Jennifer Bottomly
Boulder Hot Springs
Richard Boyd
Dorothy Bradley
Mary Kay Bray
James S. Brust
Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives
Mary Elizabeth Brown Dwyer
Dorothy & Gustaf Carlson
Jim Calvi
Carroll College, Corrette Library
Janet Cervelli
Gerard Chapman
Bill Charbonneau
Coral Charbonneau
Chouteau County Free Library
David Clark
Dean S. Clark
Douglas Clark
Robert Clark
Brian Cockhill
Linda Cockhill
Judy Cole
Julie Coleman
Richard Conn
Stuart Connor
Doreen Cook
Rodric J. Coslet
W. S. Crichton
Mary A. Criswell
Marcia Schonborn Dana
James R. Dangel
Margaret Claire Dangel
Gerald Davidson
Bessie Day
David Delo
Barbara Dodrill
Marilyn Doray
Melanie Draper
Kathryn Dyer
Eleanor McDonald Ecker
Kermit Edmonds
Della Emmett
Audrey Erber
Emil Eschenberg
Jean Freese
Michael Finley
Chad Fitzgerald
James Franks
Good Samaritan Thrift Store
Dr. Philip Gray
Great Falls Insurance Service
Meredith Gregg
William Greiner
Mary Etta Hagan Estate
George Harper
Leona Hassen
Susan Haubrich
Helena Area Chamber of Commerce
Bernice Helseth
Elizabeth Hilger
Mrs. Lewis Hoadley
Katherine Holden
Tim Holmes
Joan Holter
Christina & Dennis Homer
Al Hooper
Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Association of Rebekah Assemblies
Indian Law Resource Center
Doris Irion
Gerald Irion
Susan Jackson, on behalf of Laura Nicholson
Phyllis Jakovac
Chris Johnson
Betty Jones
Toby Joyce
Matti Kaups
Dr. Ken Kawai
Paul Keller
Becca Kohl
Seena Kohl
N. June Korenko
Kirby Lambert
Charlotte Larson
Dr. D. V. Leen
John H. Leuthold
Audrey Levitan
Lewis and Clark Public Library
Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation, Inc.
Lewistown Public Library
Doris Loeser
Nancy Luther
Everett Lynn
Kenneth A. MacDonald
Connie & Earl Mayer in memory of Leon Lemieux
Don Maynard
Marion M. McCarthy
C. Howard McDonald
Gina & Douglas McDonald
James McGuinness
Wilbur McKinney
Dale & Lois McMeekin
Harriett Meloy
Peter G. Meloy
Jesse Merrill
Jan Mershon
Donna Metcalf
Métis Cultural Recovery, Inc.
Lee Micklin
Mary Law Mollander
Montana Arts Council
Montana Audubon Council
Montana Center for International Visitors
Montana Council on Vocational Education
Montana Democratic Party
Montana:
  Department of Administration
  Department of Agriculture
  Department of Commerce
  Department of Environmental Quality
  Department of Justice, Highway Patrol Division
  Department of Labor and Industry
  Department of Natural Resources and Conservation
  Department of Public Health & Human Services
  Department of Public Service Regulation/Public Service Commission
  Department of Revenue
  Department of Trans.
Montana Division of Child & Family Services
Montana Historic Quilt Project/Quilters Art Guild of the Northern Rockies
Montana Legislature, Legislative Services Division
Montana Native Plant Society
Montana Power Company
Montana State University, KUSM Public Television
Montana Tech Library, Butte
Montana Watercolor Society
Donald M. Morehead
Robert F. Morgan
Joyce Morgan
Lynda Moss
Anne Moudree
Myrtle Murfitt
Joanne Mussulman
Museum of History and Industry, Seattle
Susan Near
Mary Ellen Nettik
Eric Newhouse
Irene Newton
Val Newton
George Nicholson
Bruce J. Noble, Jr.
Meredith Noble
North County Media Group
Penny O'Byrne
George Oberst
Vi O'Conner
Carol O'Connor
Ohio Historical Society
Olde America Antiques
Kathryn Otto
Linda Peavy
Barbara Pierre in memory of Elerine M. DeMers McDonald
James Philp
City of Plevna
Plymouth Congregational Church
Leo Pocha Memorial Clinic
Rhoda H. Pollock
John Marshall Prewitt
George Pridmore
Marjorie Priser
Ruth Putz
Euenelle Quanrud
Orville Quick
Arlyne Reichert
George Ripley
Marsha Rising
Dave Robinson
Rocky Mountain Trade Corridor
Mark Ross
Dan Rottemberg
Mrs. Martha K. Rudnicki
Rupert's Land Research Centre
Thomas Rust
Diane Sands
Karen Schofield
Schoolhouse History and Art Center, Colstrip

Marie Schonborn Dana
Jeanne Schutt
Addie Scott
Mary Scriver
Anne Seagraves
Mary Jo Shearer Bevan
Bill Sherman
Brian Shovers
Jane Smith
Myrtle Backen Smith
Ursula Smith
Bob Southland
Janet Sperry
Brenda Spivey
C. Karen Stanton
Sheldon Stoner
Bill Summers
Pearl Swank
Sue Talbot
Alan Taylor
Jeanne Taylor
Dr. John Taylor
Temple Beth Aaron, Billings
L. J. Tenpstra
Ellen Rae Thiel
Alan Thompson
Peggy Todd
Buck Traxler
Jim Tutwiler
University of Oregon,
  Knight Library
University of Montana,
  Montana Public Radio
University of Montana, Telecommunications Center
United States:
  Bureau of Reclamation,
    Great Plains Region
  Department of Interior,
    National Park Service
  Internal Revenue Service
  Weather Service, Helena
Bonnie Van Campen
Janet & Kemmer Vance
Paul E. Verdon
T. Vick
Mrs. Jack Vujovich
David Walter
Woodrow Walter
Zella B. Walton
Lou Ward
Gertrude Anderson Wargo
Josef Warhank
Vernon L. Weaver
E. H. Welliver
Dolores West
Dr. Hargis Westerfield
Western Federal Savings Bank of Montana
Veronica Wetsch
Ann Davis Whipps, on behalf of Georgia Whipps
White River Valley Museum
Leslie Wild
Diana Wilkison
John Willard
Catherine Willis
Keith Wilson
World Museum of Mining
Yellowstone County Clerk of District Court
Ray Young
Guy Youngblood
Susan Zanto
Ken Zontek
Herbert Zwemke

Society Receives WWII Collection

A collection of World War II diaries, letters, reports, and maps have recently been donated to the Montana Historical Society from Hargis Westerfield of Kearney, Nebraska.

Westerfield, a Purple Heart and Bronze Star recipient, was part of the 41st Infantry Division, primarily made up of the 163rd Montana, the 162nd Oregon, and the 186th Idaho and Washington regiments. The Montana National Guard coordinated with the Westerfields to collect, box, transport, and deliver the collection to Helena.

The Westerfield Collection includes accounts of grenade attacks, moving tanks, using dogs to locate the enemy, organizing softball games, and eating fresh rations. Also part of the collection are casualty lists, reports, and membership records of Montana's 163rd C Company.

Society Archivist Kathryn Otto said the Westerfield Collection is valuable for research, personal, and genealogical uses. Otto encouraged anyone with "letters, diaries, or other material related to World War Two, Korea, and Vietnam" to contact the Archives at (406) 444-4774 about donating items.

Two Bradley Research Grants To Be Available in 1997

The Montana Historical Society is offering two James H. Bradley Fellowships for summer 1997 to research the collections at the Society.

One fellowship is limited to candidates for advanced degrees of history, American studies, or some related field. The other fellowship is open to applicants other than graduate students.

Competition is not restricted to professional historians. Applicants, however, must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write publishable historical articles.

Each recipient must be able to spend at least four weeks in Helena pursuing research in the Society's collections between June and November 1997. They are also asked to submit an article based on their research for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Applications must be postmarked by April 4, 1997. For further information, write Bradley Fellowship Committee, Montana Historical Society, P. O. Box 201201, Helena, Montana 59620-1201, or call (406) 444-4702.

BULLETIN BOARD

■ The Schwinden Library at the Museum of the Upper Missouri in Fort Benton, Montana, is the recipient of papers and materials from the James Willard Schultz Society. Schultz came to Fort Benton by steamboat in 1877 and was devoted to Native American causes, married a Blackfeet woman, and wrote forty books based on his experiences and on stories he heard. The twenty-year-old James Willard Schultz Society, publishers of the newsletter, "The Piegan Storyteller," will cease operation because of a decline in membership and an inability to reprint Schultz's books.

■ The C. M. Russell Auction of Original Western Art is scheduled for March 19–22, 1997. An annual event in Great Falls, Montana, the sale is one of the world's largest auctions of western art. Proceeds from the auction will be used to benefit the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. For information about the auction or tickets, write GFAF, P.O. Box 634, Great Falls, MT 59403, call 1-800-803-3351, or fax (406) 453-1128.

■ The Fort Connah Restoration Society needs tax deductible donations to help restore Fort Connah to its original 1850 appearance and rebuild the missing buildings at the fort, south of Ronan, Montana. Original drawings, early photographs, and infrared photographs will aid in the restoration process.

The fort was constructed in 1846 for the Hudson's Bay Company as an important link between forts on the east and west side of the Rocky Mountains. For information or to contribute, write to Fort Connah Restoration Society, P.O. Box 56, Charlo, MT 59824.

■ The fortieth Annual Missouri Valley History Conference will be held March 6–8, 1997, in Omaha, Nebraska. For information write to Lorraine Gesick, Program Chair, MVHC, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Omaha, NE 68182.

As part of the conference, the Society of Military History is accepting proposals for papers and sessions on military history. Proposals should be sent to Mark R. Grandstaff, History Department, Brigham Young University, 414 KMB, P.O. Box 2446, Provo, UT 84602.

■ The Twenty-Ninth Annual Dakota History Conference, "Spirit and Land," will be held May 29–31, at Augustana College, Sioux Falls, South Dakota. For information contact Harry F. Thompson, Conference Director, Center for Western Studies, Box 727, Augustana College, Sioux Falls, SD 57197, call (605) 336-4007, fax (605) 336-4999, or e-mail hthomps@inst.augie.edu.

Society Trustee Passes Away

Marjorie W. King of Winnett, a member of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees, died on December 3 after an extended illness. A Montana native, King had been a Society trustee since 1993.

King was born in Lewistown, Montana, on October 31, 1927. She graduated from Montana State College in Bozeman in 1950 and later received an honorary doctorate in 1982 from MSU for her public service.

Marjorie W. King

She married Joe C. King III and they raised their children Karen, J. Chris IV, and Jill on their ranch near Winnett.

In addition to the Society's governing board, King also served on the Winnett elementary and high school board of trustees; the Winnett Public Library Board; the Petroleum County Public Library Board; the State Library Commission; the State Board of Education; the Regents of the Montana University System; and the Board of Realty Regulation.

Work Continues on SHPO Guide

Returned questionnaires, shared ideas, suggestions, comments, and forums all contributed to the framework for "Working Together," State Historic Preservation's guide to policy, planning, and activities in the future. Comments showed support for creating a multi-level, linked set of both general information and specific guidance concerning prehistoric and historic properties that could then be applied to education, management, and promotion.

"This is an on-going project with potential to make information available on the Internet and for contributions to be made by many different people," said Paul Putz, State Historic Preservation Officer. "We ask for continued public support, comment, and willingness to stay involved to make 'Working Together' succeed." For information call (406) 444-7715.

Phi Alpha Theta Sponsors Interns

Jeff Johnson, a senior in history at Carroll College, Helena, and Douglas R. Weber, a master's student in history at Montana State University, Bozeman, are the first two interns to work at the Montana Historical Society under a special program sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, the national honors society in history.

Johnson, who began his tenure with the Society's publications program in September, has been working on a variety of projects related to publication of Montana The Magazine of Western History and to the Montana Historical Society Press. Weber, who expects to complete his master's degree in western environmental history later this year, will begin work with the publications program in mid-January.

The national Phi Alpha Theta office has granted $10,000 to the Montana Historical Society to support the internships. Student interns will be paid for their work at the Society, and Phi Alpha Theta's grant will be matched with in-kind support from the Society, Carroll College, and Montana State University. Both Johnson and Weber are members of Phi Alpha Theta and were chosen through competitive selection at their respective schools. Both will work at the Society through the spring semester.

Phi Alpha Theta is sponsoring a similar student internship program at the Texas State Historical Society, according to the honor society's president, Gordon M. Bakken. The Texas and Montana historical societies were selected, Bakken said, because of the wide range of high-quality historical services they provide and the diversity of professional experience they can offer Phi Alpha Theta students.

"Carroll College has had a chapter of Phi Alpha Theta since 1979," said Robert R. Swartout, academic advisor for Carroll College's Phi Alpha Theta chapter and chair of that school's history department, "and that chapter has played an integral role in training our students in the field of historical research over the past seventeen years."

Said Ray Mentzer, Phi Alpha Theta adviser at MSU, "This is a real opportunity to get our students top-quality training for the history profession."

Quilt Documentation Continues

Twenty-four quilts were documented at the Montana Historical Society in November as part of the "Montana Historic Quilt Project," which seeks to create a permanent quilt record for future reference.

Montana Historical Society staff and members of the Helena and Great Falls quilters guilds interviewed quilt owners for background information on their quilts, and each quilt was photographed. In addition, the quilts were measured and notations made about color, fabric, number of stitches, and pattern.

A record of each quilt will be maintained permanently in the Society archives and added to information being gathered in other states.

Part of a nationwide effort to document and preserve our cultural heritage, "Quilt Days" have been conducted throughout the state since 1987. More documentation is planned, with registering sessions to be scheduled this spring in Helena and elsewhere in the state. For information, contact the Society at (406) 444-4774.

Preservation Seeks Workshop Site

The Montana Community Preservation Team is looking for a community or region that is interested in hosting a two-day preservation workshop.

The Montana Historic Preservation Office joined with the Montana Preservation Alliance, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, and representatives from Certified Local Government programs in Missoula, Butte, Helena, and Bozeman to form the Preservation Team. The joint team was formed to assist rural communities in protecting local and regional heritage by encouraging historic preservation activities.

Mineral County held a pilot workshop last fall in Superior with field studies in Alberton, Superior, and at the Forest Service Savenac Nursery. Approximately forty people focused on a wide range of preservation-related topics, including heritage education, heritage tourism, and economic benefits of preservation.

Interested communities should contact Patty McLaughlin, Montana Historical Society, Preservation Office, 1410-8th Avenue, Helena, MT 59620-1202 or call (406) 444-7768.

Spring Montana to Highlight Oregon Trail, Red Cloud

Emigrants bound for Oregon and California knew they had entered a state of nature when they crossed the Missouri River on their way west. They were also acutely aware of having passed beyond the rule of law—beyond police protection, courts, judges, even government itself. In striving to preserve the trappings of justice and due process, they became law unto themselves.

Just how overland emigrants determined crime and meted out punishment on the trail is the topic of an article prepared by legal historian John Phillip Reid for the Spring issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Also in the Spring issue, biographer Robert W. Larson explores in the first of a two-part series the life of the famed Oglala warrior Red Cloud, the only Native American leader to win a war against the United States in the clash over closing of the Bozeman Trail.

In addition, former radio station owner Clair Krebsbach and journalism historian Bill Knowles look back to the fledgling days of one of Montana's earliest radio stations—KGCX. Founded in 1926 in Vida, one of the smallest towns ever to have a radio station, KGCX moved subsequently to Wolf Point and Sidney but served northeastern Montana for almost seventy years before succumbing to competition in the early 1990s.

Also for Spring, Annie Gilbert Coleman tells a cautionary tale of Aspen, Colorado—of the Roaring Fork valley's "quiet years," when, after silver mining declined, farming and ranching flourished only to be in turn supplanted by the modern ski industry in the mid-twentieth century.

Finally, Clyde Milner and Dayton Duncan respectively review and look back on the making of the Ken Burns PBS series The West, which aired last September.

Denver Public Library

Famed Oglala leader Red Cloud in 1897

New Journal Features Unpublished Russells

Four previously unpublished Charles M. Russell pen-and-ink sketches will be included in the Charlie Russell Journal, a new book to be available March 1 from the Montana Historical Society Press.

An inspirational book featuring pen-and-ink sketches and apt quotations by Charlie Russell, the Charlie Russell Journal also leaves plenty of room for diarists and sketch artists to express their own visions in words and pictures.

Russell often personalized books for friends by adding original drawings, according to the Society's curator of collections Kirby Lambert. Several of these books were later donated to the historical society. Lambert chose the thirty-four illustrations included in this journal from these and other Russell pen-and-ink sketches in the society's collection and in the collections of other institutions devoted to preserving Russell's legacy.

Illustrated letters, painstakingly written by Russell and highly prized by lucky recipients, provided the primary source for the Russell quotations. "Both the quotations and the sketches exemplify the unique brand of good humor with which Russell viewed the world," Lambert said. "My hope is that this journal provides people with glimpses of Russell's artistry with the pen, both as an illustrator and as a 'word painter' and perhaps encourages them—like Russell—to record their thoughts about the world around them."

The 128-page journal can be purchased for $12.95 plus postage by calling the Montana Historical Society Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900.

History Book Club Picks Legacy

The History Book Club will feature Legacy: New Perspectives on the Battle of the Little Bighorn, edited by Charles E. Rankin, as an alternate selection in May 1997.

Published by the Montana Historical Society Press in October, Legacy is the proceedings of the Little Bighorn Legacy Symposium held in Billings in 1994. The volume includes essays by some of the best-known scholars in western history, including Brian W. Dippie, Paul Andrew Hutton, Richard A. Fox, Jr., Alvin M. Josephy, Jr., and Richard S. Slotkin.

The History Book Club's selection of Legacy provides national recognition for the Montana Historical Society and underscores the caliber of its publishing program. Legacy is the second title published by the Society to be recognized by the History Book Club. The first was The Great Sioux War, edited by Paul L. Hedren. These and other Montana Historical Society Press books are available for purchase through the Museum Store, 1-800-243-9900.

Heritage Learning Program Underway

The Montana Historical Society is developing a "Heritage Learning Program," through which it hopes to better encourage the study and teaching of Montana community history in cooperation with the state's teachers.

Working with K-12 teachers, students, and local historical societies, the Society hopes to encourage research into community history through a variety of events and presentations. Because of declining participation, the Montana Historical Society will not participate in nor sponsor the annual National History Day program this year. Instead, the "Heritage Learning Program" will replace and expand upon that national event.

The Society is forming a teachers' advisory panel to review and discuss heritage learning alternatives. Montana educators are invited to request written explanations of the proposed Montana Heritage Learning Program and the Teachers' Advisory Panel by writing to Marcella Sherfy, Educational Officer, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201, calling (406) 444-4794, or faxing (406) 444-2696.

Workshops Focus on Conservation

Montana Cultural and Aesthetic Project grants have made it possible for the Montana Historical Society and the Museums Association of Montana to present hands-on "common sense" workshops across Montana for museum staff, volunteers, and the public.

The workshop, presented by a professional conservator, explains how to identify conservation problems, assess and meet conservation needs, prioritize projects, and preserve historical materials. Host institutions receive on-site consultation with the conservator, including an assessment of the overall environmental condition of storage and exhibit areas.

Workshops have already taken place in Kalispell, Butte, and Hardin, and others are scheduled through April in Harlowton, Sidney, Culberton, Hamilton, and Bozeman.

For details contact the Society at (406) 444-4710.

MAM to Meet

The Museums Association of Montana annual conference is scheduled April 17-19, in Bozeman. A "common sense" collections care workshop will be held in conjunction with the meeting and is scheduled for April 17.

The Gallatin County Pioneer Museum, the American Computer Museum, and the Museum of the Rockies will host the three-day conference, which will focus on promotion and publicity, mounting exhibits, financial management, and developing organizational plans.

For information on the conference, contact Dee Seitel, (406) 994-6892 or MAM President Deirdre Shaw, Glacier National Park, (406) 888-7936.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Lure of the Parks," Northeast Gallery through February 14, 1997 |
| | "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," Northeast Gallery, March 5, 1997 through February 21, 1998 |
| | "Montana Monthly," Montana Homeland Reflections Gallery, January 20, 1997 through October 31, 1997 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| January 29 | Legislative Open House and opening for "Montana Monthly" at the Society, 6:30 P.M.–9:00 P.M. |
| January 29 | Montana Preservation Awards Ceremony, old Supreme Court Chambers, Capitol Building, 6:00 P.M. |
| February 8 | 100th Anniversary of Rural Free Delivery with first-day cancellation events, 11:00 A.M.–3:00 P.M. |
| March 5 | Exhibit opening and reception for "Painting Ladies: Women Artists and the Montana Experience," Dana Boussard speaking, 4:30 P.M.–7:00 P.M. |
| March 5, 12, 19, 26 | Friends of the Society March Women's History Brown Bag Lectures, "Through the Eyes of a Woman: Women Artists Document Montana," Haynes Auditorium, noon. Fundraiser for Friends of the Society. Admission charged. |

Winter and Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8:00 A.M.–5:00 P.M., Saturday, 9:00 A.M.–5:00 P.M. Closed Sundays and holidays. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday–Friday, call (406) 444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8:00 A.M.–5:00 P.M., First Saturday of each month, 9:00 A.M.– 4:30 P.M. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1:00 P.M.–5:00 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | January-March 31: Tours by reservation only. To arrange guided group tours, call (406) 444-4789. |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8:00 A.M.–6:00 P.M. To arrange group tours, call (406) 444-4789. |

To confirm hours call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

DEADHEAD

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 461
Bozeman, MT
59715

Printed on recycled paper

3
978.6
H6m
V.34
No 3

PLEASE RETURN
PERIODICALS
STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT [illegible] 1996
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Post

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 34 No. 3 • Autumn 1996

Montana History Conference Convenes in Butte Oct. 17–19

Butte, Montana, is larger than life, both today and historically, and this year's Montana History Conference in Butte October 17-19 will attempt to explore why that is so by focusing on Montana's most urban place from the 1920s to the present.

Theme for this year's gathering, the Twenty-Third Annual Montana History Conference, is "Only in Butte." Conference headquarters are the Masonic Temple and the Mother Lode Theatre. The historic Finlen Hotel in Uptown Butte will serve as the conference hotel. Other accommodations are available as well.

The conference offers a wide range of activities, including panel presentations, tours, performances, ethnic dining, and a variety of community events and workshops. Field trips to historic Butte homes and other locations as well as to industrial and archaeological sites in Butte and Anaconda are scheduled both Saturday and Sunday, October 19 and 20.

Conference presentations will feature Butte labor, literature, and sports, the Anaconda Company, the environment, the city's impact on state politics, and Butte's economic viability in the late twentieth century. Other sessions will feature comparable themes on other Montana locales, including sale of the Anaconda newspapers to the Lee newspaper chain, Lee Metcalf and conservation, and early radio and wind energy development in northeastern Montana.

MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

The Arts Chateau is one of several Butte historic buildings to be involved with the conference.

Montana State University President Michael P. Malone is Friday night's banquet speaker. Author of seven books on Montana and western history, Malone will consider Montana's place today in the world economy. Banquet festivities will include presentation of the annual Trustees Award and the Vivian A. Paladin and Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole awards for excellence in western historical writing.

Mary Murphy, a Montana State University assistant history professor, will speak on the changing social roles for Butte women in the 1920s at the Friday luncheon on October 18. At the Saturday luncheon on October 19, Brown University Professor Patrick Malone, an indus-

Continued on page 4

Society, Phi Alpha Theta Internships Set

Phi Alpha Theta, the national honor society in history, will sponsor three student internships at the Montana Historical Society during the coming academic year. The internships will be granted to one student each from the University of Montana, Missoula, Montana State University, Bozeman, and Carroll College, Helena, through competitive selection processes conducted at each school.

Under the program, the national Phi Alpha Theta office will grant the Montana Historical Society $10,000 annually to support the internships. Student interns will be paid for their work at the Society, and Phi Alpha Theta's grant will be matched with $30,000 in-kind support from the Society, Carroll College, and the two Montana universities. The students, who must be currently enrolled and Phi Alpha Theta members, will work in one of several professional capacities at the Society, including publications, library/archives, museum, or state historic preservation.

"This is a real opportunity to have history students receive direct professional training in preparation for careers in history," said Gordon M. Bakken, Phi Alpha Theta national president. "We are delighted that the Montana Historical Society and its high-quality staff will be able to provide that training."

Phi Alpha Theta has agreed to sponsor a similar student internship program at the Texas State Historical Society, Bakken said, noting that the two historical societies were selected for the wide range of high-quality historical services they provide and what will therefore be the diversity of professional experience they can offer Phi Alpha Theta students.

This Winter in Montana

Energy from the wind has intrigued the inventive of mind worldwide and inspired dreams of sources for renewable energy for the better part of a century, but its origins as a workable solution to scarcity arose from the high, windy plains of eastern Montana.

In an article for the Winter issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, historian Robert W. Righter explains how that happened by relating the story of Marcellus and Joe Jacobs. The Jacobs brothers, two northeastern Montana farmer-ranchers, created some of the best wind energy machines ever built largely from spare parts, ingenuity, and a desire to pump water and run small appliances on their farm in the days before rural electrification.

Also for the Winter issue, historian Quintard Taylor considers the long, often

Continued on page 4

Montana Heritage Project's Success Brings Expansion

The Montana Heritage Project, a student and community education program designed to teach Montana students how to compare Montana community life in the past with community life today, has been so successful, it will be expanded in the upcoming year.

Last year, sixteen teachers from the Montana communities of Corvallis, St. Ignatius, Chester, Broadus, Libby, and Pryor worked with 371 students to study, research, and interpret their local history and heritage. Red Lodge and Townsend have now joined the list.

Students use materials from local, state, and national libraries, historical societies, universities, and museums to compare past and present. They also learn interviewing techniques to document and compare cultural life today. They then share information with their communities through exhibits, programs, and public seminars. Last year, for example, Chester students organized a heritage fair that included historical displays, presentations, and other activities, and drew an attendance of more than five hundred people.

The Montana Heritage Project is funded by the Liz Claiborne and Art Ortenberg Foundation, and supported by the Society, the Montana university system, the Office of Public Instruction, the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the Montana Arts Council, and the Library of Congress.

"The project has turned out to be an even better tool than we had hoped to engage students across the state in the history of their communities," said Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill.

To get involved in this project call Michael Umphrey at (406) 240-5425.

Volunteers Needed for Interviews

The Montana Historical Society is seeking volunteers to help transcribe twenty-six oral history interviews conducted by the Society staff this summer during a reunion of conscientious objectors at Creston, Montana.

The reunion was attended by those people who served in the Civilian Public Service program in Glacier National Park during World War II. Conscientious objectors worked as firefighters, trail breakers, maintenance crew members, fire tower and road construction workers, and tree blister rust fighters.

Thirty-seven individuals have been interviewed so far. They are: Olive, Merlin, and Abraham Miller; Jasper Roth; Saloma and Daniel Headings; Alta and Lawrence Schrock; Lydia and Crist Borntrager; Alvin Kliewer; Esta and Simon Hershberger; Lucille and Melvin Gerig; Earl Kennel; Henry Mullet; Daniel Schrag; Vera and John Garber; Vera and James Weaver; Howard King; Audrey and Perry Schrock; Phoebe and Jacob Glanzer; Amos Groff; Oscar Roth; Emanuel Schlabach; Ruth and Glenford King; Ralph Kaufman; Willard Nofziger; Henry Friesen; and Esther and Marvin Fast.

The Montana Historical Society oral history program is also seeking longtime Glacier area residents who had contact with these men and women in hopes they, too, will share their recollections. For information contact Jodie Foley, oral historian at the Society, (406) 444-4775.

BULLETIN BOARD

- The Montana National Guard is raising money to restore the Kessler Flag. In 1895 the First Montana Infantry Regiment, led by Colonel Harry Kessler, commissioned the "traveling trophy" flag. The Kessler Flag flew over battles during the Philippine Insurrection, and in 1899 it was retired. Now stored at the Montana Historical Society, the silk flag needs costly repairs to be displayed. To help, contact the National Guard Public Affairs Office in Helena at (406) 444-6995.

- The Fort Connah Restoration Society needs your tax deductible donation to help restore Fort Connah to its original 1850 appearance and rebuild the missing buildings at the fort, south of Ronan, Montana. The fort was constructed in 1846 for the Hudson's Bay Company as an important link between forts on the east and west side of the Rocky Mountains. Original drawings, early photographs, and infrared photographs will aid in the restoration process. Write to Fort Connah Restoration Society, P.O. Box 56, Charlo, MT 59824.

- The Gallatin County Historical Society will host its eighth annual history conference November 9 from 9 A.M. to 3 P.M. at the Pioneer Museum. On presenting a paper, call Dennis at (406) 582-3195; on the conference, call Dan Johnson at (406) 587-2135.

- The Schwinden Library at the Museum of the Upper Missouri in Fort Benton, Montana, has received the papers and materials of the James Willard Schultz Society. The twenty-year-old James Willard Schultz Society, publishers of the newsletter, "The Piegan Storyteller," will cease operation because of a decline in membership and an inability to reprint Schultz's books.

Society Collects Con Con Papers

In 1972, one hundred delegates convened in Helena to rewrite the Montana state constitution, a document originally drafted in 1889 when Montana became a state. To commemorate the event, the Montana Historical Society hopes to make its collection of papers pertaining to the 1972 Constitutional Convention as complete as possible and is seeking donations of private papers from convention delegates, executives, and employees.

The Society's archives provides a safe, permanent repository for these invaluable research materials. A number of convention delegates have already donated their papers to the Society, including Cedor B. Arnow, William A. Burkhardt, James C. Garlington, Arnold W. Jacobsen, Rachell K. Mansfield, Robert Baxter Noble, Jr., Arlyne E. Reichert, Richard B. Roeder, Miles Romney, Jr., Donald A. Scanlin, Lucile E. Speer, and Margaret S. Warden. Many more such donations are needed to complete this important collection.

For information on how to donate personal 1972 Constitutional Convention materials to the Society, contact State Archivist Kathryn Otto at (406) 444-4775.

Catalog Coming

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store catalog for 1996–1997 will be mailed to Society members by mid-October.

If you wish to receive another catalog, or want to place an order, please call 1-800-243-9900.

Jennifer Bottomly, photographer

Harold Pedersen (in hat) explains camp cooking.

Camping, Cooking Fair Draws 1,300

A two-day outdoor fair on the Society's front lawn attracted almost 1,300 people this past August. The fair featured the how-tos of camping and cooking in Montana's parks and complemented the Society's current "Lure of the Parks" temporary exhibit.

Experts on a variety of topics made presentations on river floating, backpacking, compass and map reading, bear safety, setting up a clean horse camp, and watchable wildlife. Helenan Harold Pedersen offered food samples and answered questions from his authentically restored chuckwagon.

The fair also featured original movies on the parks, new videos by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and several early Hollywood movies filmed in Montana parks starring such actors as Andy Devine and Ronald Reagan.

The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Society sponsored the fair with assistance by Vann's Appliances.

Longtime Trustee Hornby Dies

Helen S. Hornby, past president of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees and member of the Montana Historical Society Foundation board, died at her home near Livingston, Montana, on July 31 after a brief illness. She was 79.

"No one served the cause of preserving Montana's history and heritage with more dedication and distinction than Helen over the last twenty-five years," said Society Director Brian Cockhill. Helena attorney and Society Foundation President Ward Shanahan added, "She has been a true and longtime supporter, and we will miss her badly."

MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

Helen Hornby

Hornby was well-known as a local business and community leader and philanthropist. The adopted daughter of J. W. Schnitzler, a prominent eastern Montana pioneer, Hornby served on the Society board of trustees from August 1983 to July 1993, including a term as president, and had been a board member of the Montana Historical Society Foundation since January 1986. She also supported St. Mary's Catholic Church, Carroll College, and the Society financially.

Exhibits to Feature Haynes, Calendars

The photographs of F. Jay Haynes, official photographer for Yellowstone National Park and the Northern Pacific Railroad, will be part of a newly refurbished exhibit on the development of Yellowstone National Park. The exhibit, titled "F.J. Haynes: Fifty Views," will be on display in the Montana Historical Society's Homeland Reflections Gallery until January 10, 1997.

Haynes's photographs illustrate the history of the Northwest, including Yellowstone Park, from 1876 to the turn of the century. Haynes sold his scenic views to visitors, and to others who did not come West, to promote visitation and immigration. In addition to views of Yellowstone Park are images from Haynes's early career in the Dakotas and Montana as well as views of Idaho, Oregon, Washington, and Alaska.

After showing at the Society, the exhibit will be available to other Montana museums. For information call (406) 444-4710.

A new exhibit, titled "Montana Monthly: The Calendar as Art and History," will open at the Society on January 20, 1997. Exploring how calendars served as advertising media and art forms to reflect broader themes in Montana history, it will include calendars promoting filling stations, railroads, and the war effort during World War II, as well as pocket calendars, almanacs, Native American winter counts, plates, and other decorative objects bearing calendars.

The "Montana Monthly" exhibit will continue at the Society through October 31, 1997.

MHS Awarded Grant

The Montana Historical Society has received a $3,300 Institute of Museum Services grant to assist it with evaluating and improving its education and outreach programs.

The grant will aid the Society in assessing the public's experiences, perceptions, and involvement with the museum and in formulating suggestions for improving service, public relations, research opportunities, public programs, exhibitions, and the museum's funding base.

"This grant will help us better meet the needs of our various audiences across our large geographic service area," said Society Museum Services Administrator Sue Near.

The grant also provides funds to continue survey work and gather public comment on Society programs.

Designer Selected

Roberta Jones-Wallace, Montana Historical Society exhibits designer, has been named one of thirteen artists to participate in a special pilot "artist in residence program," sponsored by the Helena National Forest and the Holter Museum of Helena.

Jones-Wallace specializes in wood carvings, pen-and-ink drawings, watercolors, and acrylic paintings. As an award recipient, she will spend one week this fall at a Helena-area Forest Service cabin to work on a variety of art projects, one of which will be donated to the Helena National Forest Service.

History Conference

Continued from page 1

trial historian, will compare Butte and Anaconda to other mining towns around the world. Also on Saturday, Carol O'Connor, the Society's 1996 Senior Bradley Fellow, will talk on Montana pioneer Granville Stuart at the Bradley Breakfast.

Activities on Thursday, October 17, will include special workshops on common sense curatorial and archival care, how to write a family history, and an open forum on the State Historic Preservation Office's new plan for preserving Montana's historic and prehistoric resources. Conference activities continue Thursday night with "A Taste of Butte" reception and a live historic vaudeville performance.

Uptown Butte merchants and Butte-Silver Bow government will offer special services and opportunities to conference-goers, including regularly scheduled shuttles around Uptown Butte.

Conference programs with registration forms are being mailed to all Society members. For information call Marcella Sherfy at (406) 444-4794.

Winter in Montana

Continued from page 1

ignored, sometimes misinterpreted history of blacks in the American West, while historian D. Claudia Thompson reassesses the established interpretation of vigilante justice and the riot it sparked at Bear River in southwestern Wyoming in 1868.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Lure of the Parks," Northeast Gallery through February 14, 1997 |
| | "F.J. Haynes: Fifty Views," Montana Homeland Reflections Gallery through January 10, 1997 |
| | "Montana Monthly: The Calendar as Art and History," Montana Homeland Reflections Gallery from January 20, 1997 through October 31, 1997 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 17-19 | Montana History Conference, Butte |
| December 8 | Original Governor's Mansion Annual Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing Street, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Proceeds benefit mansion restoration projects. For information, call (406)444-4710. |

Autumn and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum & Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8-5, Saturday, 9-5. Closed Sundays and holidays. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday–Friday, call (406)444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8-5, First Saturday of each month, 9-4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1-5. Morning hours by appointment. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To December 31: Tuesday–Saturday, 12-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. January–March 31: Tours by reservation only. To arrange guided group tours, call (406)444-4789. |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8-6. To arrange large group tours, call (406)444-4789. |

To arrange large group tours and confirm hours call (406)444-4789.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201 • Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Address Correction Requested

DEADHEAD

Non-profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 461
Bozeman, MT
59715

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

S
978.6
H6m
V.34
No.2

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
AUG 01 1996
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 34 No. 2 • Summer 1996

MHS Acquires Barthelmess Collection

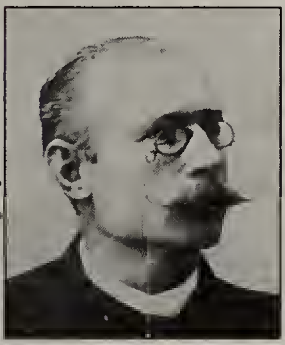
The Montana Historical Society is now home to a rare collection of photographs taken by Christian Barthelmess, a photographer at Fort Keogh near Miles City in the late nineteenth century.

Barthelmess immigrated from Bavaria to New York in 1867 at age thirteen to live with relatives in Ohio where he learned about photography. Nine years later he joined the United States Army as a musician and was first assigned to several southwestern forts before being stationed at Fort Keogh in 1888. Except for military tours to Cuba and to the Philippines, Barthelmess lived with his family at Fort Keogh until his death in 1906.



MHS Photograph Archives

Christian Barthelmess

Barthelmess began his army career as a musician, but his skill as a photographer was soon recognized. Through his craft, he developed close associations with Navaho and Apache Indians in the Southwest and later with Indian people who lived near Fort Keogh. Welcomed into their camps and villages, he took intimate portraits of Native Americans in their natural surroundings. He also photographed the daily life of frontier soldiers, natural land features, and life in towns and ranches. Military bands and dress parades, dances and picnics, Indian scouting patrols and ice harvesting parties are a small sampling of the subjects depicted in his photographs. His work creates a rich visual history of the everyday experiences of people living at isolated western posts.

After Barthelmess's death, his son Casey gathered and identified photographs taken by his father. In 1965, Casey, with Maurice Frink, researched and wrote Photographer on an Army Mule, a book describing his father's life.

Continued on page 4

History Day Winners Compete at Nationals

Tom Cook, photographer

Tara Murphy and Katie Hoyne receive their awards from Secretary of State Mike Cooney at Montana History Day. Murphy and Hoyne won special recognition at College Park, Maryland.

Two Montana City School students won special recognition at the National History Day competition at the University of Maryland in College Park on June 13. Tara Murphy and Katie Hoyne won "Montana's Outstanding Students Award" for their Junior Group Media presentation, "Mighty Masterpieces Fight: Impressionism Takes a Stand." Nine students represented Montana at the National History Day competition.

Fifty-two students competed in the thirteenth annual Montana History Day competition held at the Montana Historical Society and the Capitol in April. The top winners who were eligible to attend the national competition and their state rankings were:

Montana City School—Junior Group Media, first place, "Mighty Masterpieces Fight: Impressionism Takes A Stand," by Katie Hoyne and Tara Murphy; Junior Individual Performance, first place, "The Divine Whisper," by Chandra Obie.

Cayuse Prairie, Kalispell—Junior Group Projects, first place, "Delany Sisters," by Brandy Cluka and Abbie Lorentzen; Junior Individual Projects, second place,

Continued on page 4

History Conference in Butte October 17–19

"Only in Butte: Richest, Largest, Tallest, First, Worst" will be the theme of the twenty-third annual Montana History Conference to be held October 17-19 in Butte. Presentations will reflect on the community, union, and business response to technology, economic, and social patterns in Butte and Montana.

Michael P. Malone, president of Montana State University and author of seven books on Montana and western history, will give this year's banquet address Friday night, October 18. His topic will be

Continued on page 4

Custer, Pony Express Coming in Autumn Montana

Custer's Last Stand is one of the American West's most familiar events, indelibly etched into the American consciousness through books, articles, and illustrations. An accurate picture of just how George Armstrong Custer met his end has long been in dispute, however, and may never be known. Indeed, his heroic "stand" may be a complete fiction, created by artists. So argues historian Brian Dippie in an article for the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Also for the Autumn issue Martin Ridge

Continued on page 2

PLEASE RET

Society Programs to Feature Films on Parks

The Montana Historical Society will feature its temporary exhibit, "The Lure of the Parks," in its summer programming. Every Wednesday at noon from July 10 through August 21, visitors can watch movies and videos featuring Montana state and national parks in the Society's Haynes Auditorium. The movies range from newly-made state parks educational videos and the Hollywood production, Yellowstone, featuring Andy Devine, to historic footage of construction of the Going-to-the-Sun Road in Glacier Park.

On August 9 and 10, the Montana Historical Society and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks team up to offer an outdoor fair on "Camping and Cooking in Montana's Parks." Activities and presentations will center on a refurbished chuckwagon owned by Harold Pedersen, a retired Helena teacher, who will demonstrate how visitors "lived" in our parks.

Bradley Fellows Begin Work on Stuart, Metcalf

Two James H. Bradley fellows will be in residence at the Montana Historical Society for four weeks this summer, having received fellowships worth $2,500 each to do research on Montana history in the Society's Library/Archives.

Carol A. O'Connor, Professor of History at Utah State University, Logan, will research the family life of Montana pioneer Granville Stuart. Many of Stuart's papers are at the Society, and O'Connor will apply her research to co-author a full-length biography of one of Montana's first settlers.

Also in residence this summer will be Rex J. Renk, a doctoral student in history at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque. Renk, who received the Bradley student fellowship, will do research in the voluminous papers of Montana's United States Senator Lee Metcalf, concentrating especially on Metcalf's work in behalf of the environmental movement in the 1950s and 1960s.

Historic Preservation Forum Asks Involvement

Public officials, citizens, legislators, and historic preservation leaders gathered in Helena in June to ask Montanans to become more involved in the protection of its historic treasures.

Such issues as Congressional support, funding, preservation of Virginia City and Nevada City, Montana's capitol restoration project, preservation of the Tenth Street Bridge in Great Falls, historic sites preservation within the state parks systems, and how to create greater public involvement were discussed.

"This conference provides a unique forum to focus on historic preservation issues on the local, state, and national levels, and to hear from leaders in the fight to protect our heritage resources," said Kathy Macefield, president of the Montana Preservation Alliance. Citizens were urged to join together to support historic preservation. For information contact John Barsness, Montana Preservation Alliance at (406) 585-9551.

MHS Archives Receives Summer Intern

Beth Pate, a senior at Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau, Missouri, is working as a full-time intern with the Montana Historical Society Archives this summer.

Pate will arrange the papers of former Governor Tim Babcock, process numerous small collections, and help archivist Ellie Arguimbau sort the large Montana Power Predecessor Companies collection.

Pate is a historic preservation major with an archives emphasis at Southeast Missouri State. Her degree requires her to complete a four hundred-hour internship worth nine credit hours. She is originally from Norris City, in southeastern Illinois, and is living with relatives in Helena for the summer.

Coming in Autumn Montana

Continued from page 1

shows that the Pony Express was a victim of bad business decisions and bankruptcy and Robert Keller takes a hard look at how western author Wallace Stegner based literature on history to render a controversial interpretation of labor hero Joe Hill.

Canadian historian Frits Pannekoek looks at how Canadians perceive American westerners, and Montana Historical Society archivist Ellie Arguimbau tells of Pearl Danniel, a hardscrabble eastern Montana homesteader who left her poignant story embedded in a wealth of unpublished writings recently donated to the Society.

OGM Seeks Quilts for December Display

The Original Governor's Mansion is looking for people who want to display their quilt work and even their homes for next winter's OGM Christmas Home Tour to be held Sunday, December 8.

"The Warmth of Christmas, the Warmth of Quilts" will be the theme for the 1996 tour. "A variety of quilts will be on display in the homes selected for the tour to warm the holiday season," said OGM Board Vice President Cheryl Boid.

The Helena Quilters Guild and Calico Cupboard will donate a handcrafted quilt for fund-raising.

Anyone interested in displaying a quilt or placing their home on tour may contact Boid at (406) 449-7492 or Merrylee McCrea at (406) 442-8002.

Proceeds from the home tour and fund-raising provide money for restoration projects at the Original Governor's Mansion located at the corner of Ewing and Sixth streets. Past projects funded by Christmas tours have provided additional light fixtures and reproduced original wallpaper in the second floor bathroom. The mansion is administered by the Montana Historical Society Museum.

MHS Press Receives Humanities Grant

The Montana Historical Press has been awarded several grants to underwrite the publication of Legacy: New Perspectives on the Battle of Little Bighorn, edited by Charles E. Rankin. Regular grant funds of $5,000 and $2,500 in United States Treasury matching funds were provided by the Wyoming Council for the Humanities, and the Montana Historical Society Foundation generously contributed another $5,000.

Offering a collection of formal presentations delivered during the Little Bighorn Legacy symposium in Billings, Montana, in August 1994, Legacy examines the Little Bighorn's historical significance and cultural impact from both white and Native American perspectives. Among the fifteen nationally known scholars contributing to the volume are Richard A. Fox, Brian Dippie, Paul Andrew Hutton, Edward T. Linenthal, and Richard S. Slotkin.

Essays examine such diverse topics as the environmental context of the northern Plains, new archaeological discoveries about the battle, Custer in art and the movies, and the battle's symbolic legacy. Legacy will be available this September.

Volunteers Honored for Contributing almost 3,900 Hours to Society

The Montana Historical Society honored the Friends of the Society volunteer organization at the Society's annual volunteer appreciation luncheon in April. More than eighty volunteers provided 3,891 hours of service last year, almost the equivalent of two full-time employees.

Volunteers assisted with a wide-range of projects, including decorating the Society, cataloging artifacts, assisting in the museum store, leading tours, planning and hosting receptions, transcribing oral history tapes, and preparing mailings.

Betty LaSalle received the Director's Award for her contributions to the Society as a docent and providing departmental assistance for the last thirteen years. Jerry Williams and Jeannie Morrison received Muse Awards for their skill in hosting special events, such as the recent "Lure of the Parks" opening. Betty Jones received the Docent Award for providing the greatest number of hours guiding school groups through the Society.

Doris Hitt received the Departmental Assistance Volunteer Award for volunteering 356 hours in photo archives, merchandising, and publications.

Others honored for departmental work were Mary Brewer, Jane Addy, Audrey Levitan, Betty Jones, and Loretta Bible with over two hundred hours each; and, Gordon Defendorf, Joyce Vashro, Charlotte Thomas, Dora Howard, and Joan Peter, each with over one hundred hours.

President Betty Jones, Secretary Marge Jacobson, Treasurer Dora Howard, and Muse co-chairs Jerry Williams and Jeannie Morrison were recognized for their work on the Friends Board, along with interns Jan Fall and Doris McMurray.

For information about joining the Friends, please contact Marcella Sherfy, Society education officer at (406) 444-4794.

Tom Cook, photographer

Vivian Paladin (left) and Jean Baucus autographed their co-authored book, Helena: An Illustrated History, recently issued in new edition by the Montana Historical Society Press, following a noon-hour talk at the Society May 21. Their presentation was part of an ongoing series of author talks and book signings at the Society this summer.

Temporary Quilt Exhibit at Society Until September

A new exhibit at the Montana Historical Society, "Textiles from Montana's Past," combines the art form and the day-to-day function of quilting and weaving with history and heritage. Included in the display are a "Crazy Quilt" made from political campaign ribbons by the Montana Republican Club in 1894; quilts made by Native American girls in the 1880s; a "Sunbonnet Girls" quilt from the 1930s; an 1895 hand-crocheted bed spread, an all wool, hand-hooked "Thunderbird" design rug; a woman's woven suit; and Native American Eddy Barbeau's 1900s L'Assomption sash.

"These textiles serve as timeless illustrations of the skill with which craftswomen, and occasionally men, transformed common labors of necessities into lasting works of art," Society Museum Services Administrator Sue Near said. "Textiles from Montana's Past" will be on display at the Montana Historical Society until September 20, 1996.

The Society exhibit was a feature of the Montana Association of Weavers and Spinners convention and juried art show in Helena in June.

Not a Russell

Randy Ash, paintings conservator from Denver, was not examining a Charles Russell painting, as reported in the Spring Montana Post, but rather a work titled "Buffalo Revenge," done by William Standing, an Assiniboine artist, who died in 1951. The work is part of the Society's collection. Ash also examined numerous Charles Russell paintings at the Society on her last visit.

Friends Help Fund Society Projects

The Friends of the Society, the Montana Historical Society's volunteer organization, recently donated $500 to the MHS Press toward the reprinting of Dorothy M. Johnson's When You and I Were Young, Whitefish, a book about Johnson's memories of growing up in Whitefish, Montana.

The Friends also donated $600 to the museum program's education office to refurbish replica artifacts used in the Society's traveling educational trunks and in the "touch and feel" drawers used by school groups in the Haynes Auditorium for hands-on examination of the replicas. In addition, the Friends gave $250 to the education and administrative offices to host an open house for the Helena business community.

In the past year, the Friends have assisted with Montana History Day by underwriting the cost of prizes and refreshments for participants, helped the education office purchase a replica cradleboard for the Indian artifact tour, and replaced the footlockers used in the Society's traveling trunk program.

The Friends offer critical assistance to the Society's daily work, serving as hosts for special events, giving guided tours, and assisting programs with filing, cataloging, repairing, and computing. The Friends helped sponsor a March lecture series this year to provide financial assistance for unfunded Society needs.

To become a Friend call (406) 444-4794.

Barthelmess Photographs

Continued from page 1

On behalf of their parents, Casey and Anna Barthelmess, their sons and daughters—Richard, Robert, Casey, Jr., Rosemary, Leo, and Randall—have donated their family's collection of Christian Barthelmess's vintage photographs, copy prints, and a photograph album.

"We are very pleased that the Barthelmess family has entrusted their valuable collection of photographs to us," said Lory Morrow, photograph archives supervisor. "Christian Barthelmess's photographs are rare and offer a uniquely personal view of military and Indian life on the frontier."

History Day Winners

Continued from page 1

"Vigilantes of Montana," by Buddy Evenson.

Clancy School—Junior Individual Projects, first place, "Jeannette Rankin," by Brianna Karhu.

Chief Joseph Middle School, Bozeman—Junior Group Projects, second place, "The Polish Undergrounds of World War Two," by Helen Keremedjiev and Ryan Ivie.

White Sulphur Springs Junior High—Junior Group Media, second place, "Raoul Wallenberg: Standing Against the Holocaust," by Jeff Girton and Christopher Tilson.

Montana History Day is sponsored by the Friends of the Society, Alberta Bair Trust, Helena Independent Record/Lee Newspapers, and the Montana Historical Society.

History Conference

Continued from page 1

Montana in the late twentieth century.

Conference activities also include a vaudeville/variety show, a multimedia program titled "This is Butte," and tours of Butte homes and industrial sites. Conference sessions and meals will be held in historic uptown Butte at the Masonic Temple and the Mother Lode Theater.

Workshops on how to care for historical collections, archival processing, photography of buildings and events, and family history will be on October 17.

Conference programs will be mailed to members in mid-September. For information call Marcella Sherfy at (406) 444-4794.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Lure of the Parks," Northeast Gallery through February 14, 1997 |
| | "Textiles from Montana's Past," Montana Reflections Gallery through September 20, 1996 |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| July 10–August 21 | Summer at the Society will feature "The Lure of the Parks in Moving Pictures" by showing free movies and videos at noon every Wednesday in the Society's Haynes Auditorium. |
| July 20 | Fourth Annual Garden Tour/Ice Cream Social, Original Governor's Mansion and Helena Pioneer Cabin, 10-3. Call (406) 444-4710 for details |
| August 9-10 | "Camping and Cooking in Montana's Parks," outdoor fair on Society lawn |
| October 17-19 | Montana History Conference, Butte |

Summer and Autumn Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum & Galleries | To Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8-6; weekends and holidays, 9-5. After Labor Day: Monday–Friday, 8-5. Saturday, 9-5. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8-5, First Saturday of each month, 9-4:30. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1-5. Morning hours by appointment. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Through Labor Day: Tuesday–Sunday, 12-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. September 3 to December 31: Tuesday–Saturday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. |
| Capitol | Through September 15: every day, 9-5, tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4; self-guided tours daily, 8-6. |

To arrange large group tours and confirm hours call (406) 444-4789.

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

---

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
v. 34
No. 1

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
10
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 34 No. 1 • Spring 1996

May Lecture Series to Feature Ambrose, Baucus, Paladin

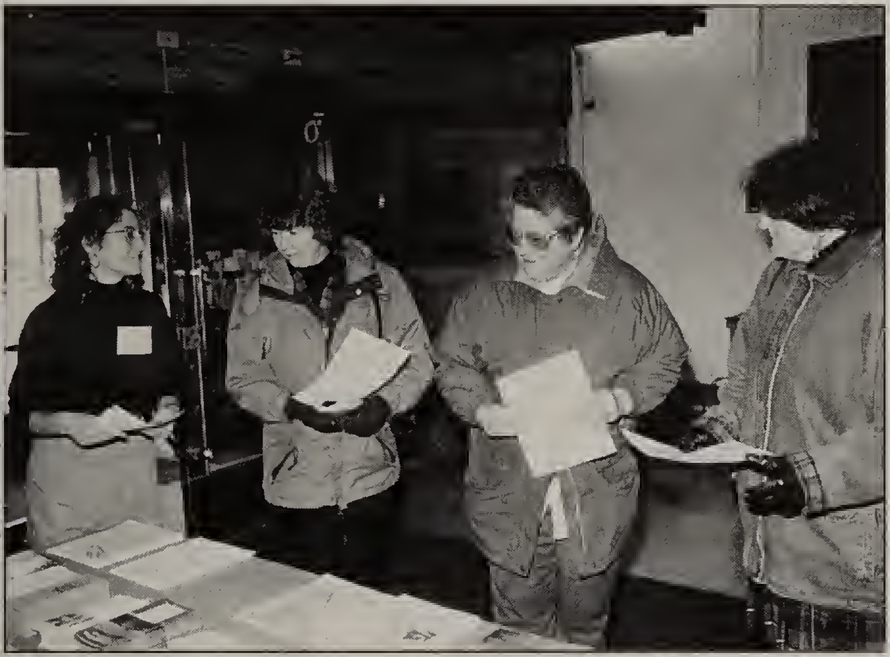
The March lecture series was so successful, the Montana Historical Society will offer two "Tuesday Talks" by well-known authors in May. Programs begin at noon.

On May 7, Stephen E. Ambrose will discuss his new book, Undaunted Courage: Meriwether Lewis, Thomas Jefferson, and the Opening of the American West. Ambrose is founder and director emeritus of the Eisenhower Center at the University of New Orleans and author of biographies of Dwight D. Eisenhower and Richard M. Nixon.

On Tuesday, May 21, Jean Baucus and Vivian Paladin will speak at the Society on "Writing Helena's History," based on their experiences researching and writing Helena: An Illustrated History. A new edition of the book has been published by the Montana Historical Society Press.

Both Paladin and Baucus have longstanding associations with Helena and the Montana Historical Society. In particular, Paladin, who recently received the American Association for State and Local History Award of Merit, served for many years as editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Each hour-long talk will be followed by a booksigning/dessert reception, lasting until 2:00 P.M. There is no charge but reservations are encouraged. For reservations call 444-4789.



Tom Cook, photographer

Leanne Kurtz of the State Historic Preservation Office (far left) tells state employees visiting the Montana Historical Society about its new exhibit, "The Lure of the Parks" and explains Society services. Over two hundred state employees attended the March open house.

Montana Wins Fourth "Wrangler" Award

An article tracing the legendary Wyatt Earp through literature and film and published in Montana The Magazine of Western History has won the National Cowboy Hall of Fame's "Western Heritage Award" for "Outstanding Magazine Article" for 1995.

Author of the article is Paul Andrew Hutton, professor of history at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, and executive director of the Western History Association. Hutton's article, "Showdown at the Hollywood Corral: Wyatt Earp and the Movies," appeared in the Summer 1995 issue of Montana. Professor Hutton and magazine editor Charles Rankin both attended the Hall's thirty-fifth annual Western Heritage Awards ceremonies in Oklahoma City March 16 and received bronze "Wrangler" trophies presented by the Hall of Fame.

It was the fourth time that Montana has received the prestigious award.

Coming in Montana

As likable and unassuming as Montana's cowboy artist Charles M. Russell was in life, his death in 1926 ushered in a decades-long scramble to fashion his life story. As John Taliaferro explains in an article for the next issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, there have been more false starts and vain attempts than successes. The reasons are varied and have been marked as much by jealousy and greed as by good intentions and veneration.

Taliaferro's own biography, Charles M. Russell: The Life and Legend of America's Cowboy Artist, is to be released in May.

Also for the Summer issue, Peter H. Hassrick traces the changing interpretation and art criticism of western illustrator and artist Frederic Remington. As Hassrick shows, critical commentary of

Continued on page 4

Conference Session Ideas Requested

The twenty-third annual Montana History Conference will be held in uptown Butte on October 17–19. Conference sessions will focus on Butte after World War I and southwestern Montana's historic development.

The Society welcomes your suggestions for programs that you or other individuals or groups would be willing to present, or your ideas for speeches, panels, workshops, and presentations by historians, authors, students, independent researchers, or local organizations whose programs or work you have heard about. Please direct your responses to Marcella Sherfy, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 no later than May 15.

PLEASE RETURN

■ The Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, will hold its fourteenth annual Frontier Festival June 8–9. In addition to demonstrations on how to make authentic, handmade frontier products, the festival will include a packhorse race, craft booths, campfire cooking contest, log-sawing contest, "kiddie frontier" activity area, petting zoo, western musical entertainment, and horseshoe pitching. For information write to the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, 720 Sheridan Avenue, Cody, WY 82414 or call (307) 587-4771.

■ Again this summer the Glacier Institute plans a variety of adult field seminars, youth science camps, naturalist and discovery schools, and special workshops from April through October. Montana Historical Society historian Dave Walter will discuss Louis W. Hill and the Great Northern Railway and will talk about early homesteaders in the North Fork Valley during his presentation, "Glacier's Early Days," July 6–7.

Darrell Norman, a professional artist and Blackfeet tribal member will present "Blackfeet Culture & Tradition," July 15–17. Norman's class will visit Two Medicine Buffalo Jump, Old North Trail, and Chief Mountain while exploring tribal history, traditions, and beliefs. Students may join in a traditional meal and camp in tepees. For information contact The Glacier Institute, P.O. Box 7457, Kalispell, MT 59904 or call (406) 755-1211.

■ The Museum of the Mountain Man in Pinedale, Wyoming, will hold Rendezvous Days July 12–14 that will include the Green River Rendezvous Pageant of events from the fur trade era and free living-history demonstrations on Plains Indian culture.

For information contact Museum of the Mountain Man, Box 909, Pinedale, WY 82941, call (307) 367-4101, or fax (307) 367-6768.

■ Works by Native American artists are displayed in the new exhibit, "Old & New Masterpieces," which opened April 3 at the C.M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. The collection of seventy Indian objects recognizes outstanding artists of yesterday and today while demonstrating the evolution of Native art forms. The exhibit will be on display through May 27, 1996. For information contact the C.M. Russell Museum, 400–13th Street North, Great Falls, MT 59401-1498 or call (406) 727-8787.

SOCIETY NEWS

Associate Editor of Montana Retires

Marilyn Grant, associate editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History, retired April 1 after six years with the Society's Publications Program. From 1984 to 1990, Grant operated a communications/public relations consulting firm in Bozeman and taught business writing, public relations, and print production courses for the Bozeman Public School Adult Education Program.

Before returning to her native Montana in 1984, Grant was associate editor for the Wisconsin Magazine of History, published by the State Historical Society of Wisconsin in Madison.

Society Employees Receive Service Pins

The Montana Historical Society recently recognized the efforts of fourteen employees with service pins representing the years they have worked for the Society.

Fifteen-year pins were awarded to Pat Bik, Dennis Homer, and Marcella Sherfy. Ten-year pins were awarded to Mary Bannon, Kirby Lambert, Patty McLaughlin, and George Oberst. Recipients of five-year pins were Richard Boyd, Jodie Foley, Marilyn Grant, Chere Jiusto, Dianne Keller, Corla McDonnell, and Jean Schmit.

"We thank these people for their work and also for the loyalty they have shown to Montana and its history over the years," Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

Buford Mercantile Papers Purchase Made

In March Ellie Arguimbau, Montana Historical Society archivist, traveled to Virginia City to pick up over one hundred financial volumes of the S. R. Buford Mercantile Company of Virginia City.

The ledgers, journals, and daybooks complete the Buford Merchantile records that were acquired from Bovey Restorations in spring 1994. The materials provide detailed information about the economy of Virginia City from the late 1870s to the early 1900s.

Purchase of the records was made possible by a generous grant from the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington.

New Sioux War Guidebook Featured

As befits a traveling series, the first speaker to be part of the Society's new program, "Authors on the Road," is historian Paul L. Hedren, who will discuss the battlefields, forts, and other physical remains of the Great Sioux War.

This May Hedren will speak at several locations in eastern Montana and sign copies of his new book, Traveler's Guide to the Great Sioux War, just published by the Montana Historical Society Press. Hedren has written or edited five other books on the military frontier.

"Authors on the Road" is part of a larger outreach initiative, "Live from the Society," which seeks to provide public programming and educational events to communities across Montana. In partnership with local organizations, the program will put workshops, lectures, and other kinds of public programming "on the road."

Hedren is scheduled to speak at the Custer Country Art Center in Miles City on Thursday, May 9; the Bighorn County Historical Society in Hardin on Friday, May 10; the Western Heritage Center in Billings on Saturday, May 11; and the Frontier Gateway Museum in Glendive on Sunday, May 12. Thursday's Miles City talk will begin at 7:00 p.m. All other talks will start at 2:00 p.m.

Hedren will also speak at several other sites important to the Sioux War story this summer. For information call Marcella Sherfy at (406) 444-4794.

Lecture Rescheduled

Annick Smith's "Homestead" lecture, part of the noon March Women's History Brown Bag series, has been rescheduled to Tuesday, May 14, at the Montana Historical Society's Haynes Auditorium. The program, one of the Friends of the Society fund-raisers, was canceled due to inclement weather. There is a five dollar charge for this lecture.

1996 Burlingame–Toole Competition Announced

The Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1996 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award. The award will be given to the best unpublished article-length manuscript written by an undergraduate or graduate student on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a plaque and cash award.

Students must be enrolled in a college or university and must be sponsored by a faculty member from their institution. Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 19, 1996.

MCH Fellowships

The Montana Committee for the Humanities announces a fellowship program supporting humanities research in Montana and the region. Up to three awards of no more than four thousand dollars each will be made annually. Research projects must result in a presentation to the public.

Applicants must be legal residents of Montana and must not be seeking support for work leading to a degree. Fellowships are open to scholars and writers working independently or in museums, libraries, and historical associations.

Applications must be postmarked by December 20, 1996. For application information write: Montana Committee for the Humanities, P.O. Box 8036, Missoula, MT 59807 or call (406) 243-6022.

Jack Russell Dies

Jack C. Russell, adopted son of Charles M. Russell and Nancy Russell, died at age seventy-nine on January 9 at his home in Oceanside, California. He was one of the last direct links to Charles M. Russell, famed cowboy artist, who died in 1926.

After Charles Russell's death, Jack Russell and his mother lived in California, where he attended private schools before joining the military during World War II. After the war, he worked in the Midwest on a construction crew before moving back to California to work for the Boeing Company and later the California Department of Highways. He retired in 1974.

Jack Russell is survived by his wife, Helen, daughters Sandra Curry and Yvonne Jones, grandchildren, and great grandchildren.

Museum Seeks Ethnic Artifacts

The Montana Historical Society Museum invites you to hunt through closets, attics, and cupboards for historic Montana calendars and for objects that reflect ethnic traditions and crafts. The museum seeks historic Montana calendars for an exhibit tentatively scheduled for January 1997.

The exhibit will examine ways in which calendars reflect popular tastes, commercial enterprise, community and regional identity, and artistic preferences throughout Montana. Examples could be calendars from your local cafe, garage, insurance company, or school.

The museum also is seeking artifacts that illustrate ethnic traditions of Montana settlers for possible inclusion in a new traveling school footlocker titled "A Patchwork of Peoples." The footlocker will help Montana students appreciate the origins of their families and communities through such small items as distinctive embroidery, items of clothing, tole work, coins, games, sheet music, and cookware. "A Patchwork of Peoples" is funded by Belle and Norman Weinstein memorial gifts.

For information, please contact Kirby Lambert, Curator of Collections at (406) 444-4711.

Doug O'Looney, photographer

Paintings conservator Randy Ash from Denver (left) and Montana Historical Society Museum technician Jennifer Bottomly examine a Charles M. Russell painting from Society collections. Ash is performing a general condition survey of museum paintings and a detailed survey of 150 paintings as part of the Society's recent conservation grant.

Preservation Friend Tallbull Passes Away

Northern Cheyenne elder Bill Tallbull died March 8 in Billings, Montana. Tallbull was a consultant for the Montana Historical Society's "Homeland" exhibit and an ethnobotanical specialist for the Montana Historical Society Historic Preservation's Flying D Project near Big Sky. In 1994 he was appointed by President Bill Clinton to the national Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, making him the first Native American member. He founded the Medicine Wheel Alliance, dedicated to preserving the sacred Indian site in the Bighorn Mountains of Wyoming. Tallbull also held several positions with the Northern Cheyenne tribe, dedicating his life to preserving and sharing Northern Cheyenne history and culture, and was an assistant professor at Dull Knife College in Lame Deer teaching oral traditions and ethnobotany.

Tallbull became the first Native American to receive the Montana Historic Preservation Award in 1990. That same year former United States Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan appointed him to a committee to rewrite the Native American Graves and Repatriation Act.

Garden Tour/Ice Cream Social Planned

The Original Governor's Mansion and Helena Pioneer Cabin's fourth annual Secret Garden Tour and Ice Cream Social will be held Saturday, July 20, from 10:00 A.M. to 3:00 P.M. Several gardens will be featured on the tour in addition to the Original Governor's Mansion and the historic Pioneer Cabin near Reeder's Alley. Homeowners or gardening experts will be available at each site to answer questions and point out special plantings.

Tickets are ten dollars per person and include the ice cream social. The tour begins at the Pioneer Cabin, and tickets are available only at the cabin on the day of the event. Maps and directions to featured gardens will be provided. Proceeds will benefit the Original Governor's Mansion and Helena's Pioneer Cabin.

Coming in Montana

Continued from page 1

Remington's work has changed over the years with the nation's shifting social and political moods as well as with academic fads.

In addition, historian Elliott West looks at the use of western images in modern advertising, and National Park Service historian Douglas C. McChristian examines the pomp, circumstance, and oddities that attended the fiftieth anniversary in 1926 of George Armstrong Custer's defeat at the Battle of the Little Bighorn.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles E. Rankin; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Lure of the Parks," Northeast Gallery through February 14, 1997 |
| | "The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery through May 17 |
| | "Textiles from Montana's Past," Montana Reflections Gallery, begins May 25 |
| Ongoing Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| April 27 | Montana History Day, Montana Historical Society and the Capitol Building |
| May 7 | Stephen Ambrose, "Lewis and Clark Expedition," Haynes Auditorium, noon, booksigning/dessert reception following. No charge. |
| May 14 | Annick Smith, "Homestead," rescheduled Friends of the Society Brown Bag Lecture, Haynes Auditorium, noon. There is a charge. |
| May 21 | Jean Baucus and Vivian Paladin, "Writing Helena's History," Haynes Auditorium, noon, booksigning/dessert reception following. No charge. |
| | Paul L. Hedren, "Traveling Sioux War Country," Live from the Society Programs: |
| May 9 | Custer County Art Center, Miles City, 7:00 P.M. |
| May 10 | Bighorn County Historical Society, Hardin, 2:00 P.M. |
| May 11 | Western Heritage Center, Billings, 2:00 P.M. |
| May 12 | Frontier Gateway Museum, Glendive, 2:00 P.M. |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum | To Memorial Day: Monday—Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., Saturday, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.; Closed Sundays and holidays. May 28 to Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8 A.M. to 6 P.M., weekends and holidays, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday—Friday, call 444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., First Saturday of each month 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To Memorial Day: Tuesday—Saturday, 12 P.M. to 5 P.M., tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4. May 28 to Labor Day: Tuesday—Sunday, 12 P.M. to 5 P.M., tours begin on the hour, last tour begins at 4. To arrange guided group tours call 444-4789. |
| Capitol | To Memorial Day: self-guided tours daily 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. May 28 to Labor Day: tours begin on the hour, Monday—Saturday, 10 A.M. to 5 P.M., last tour begins at 4; Sunday, 11 A.M. to 4 P.M., last tour begins at 3. |

To arrange guided group tours call 444-4789.

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.33
No 4

PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JAN 31 1996
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 33 No. 4 • Winter 1995

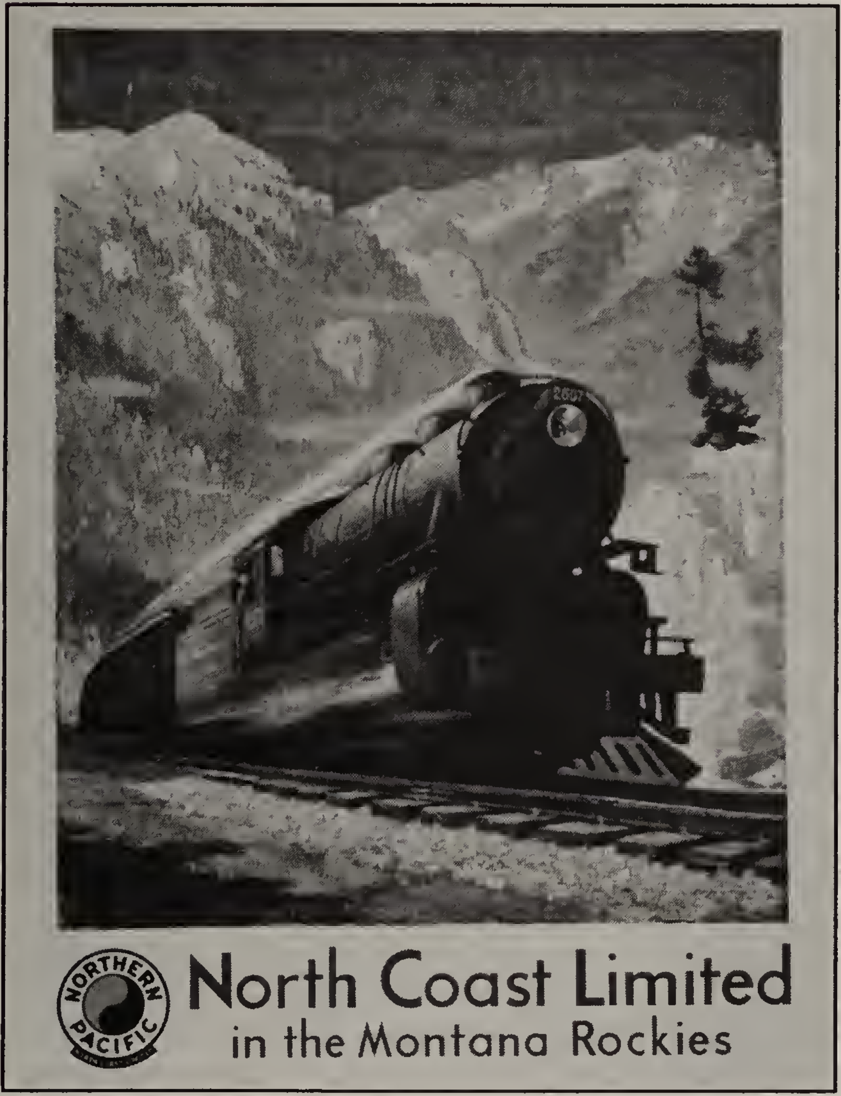
New Exhibit Displays Poster Art Promoting Montana Parks



Haynes Foundation Coll., MHS Museum, Helena

"There is no voice in all of the world so insistent to me as the wordless call of these mountains. . . . Those who go once always hope to go back," American writer Mary Roberts Rinehart (1876–1958) wrote of her visits to Glacier National Park. Rinehart touched the feelings of many people, whose enchantment with the country's national parks is graphically portrayed in "The Lure of the Parks," the Society's museum exhibit opening February 23 in the Northeast Gallery.

The exhibit features travel posters from the museum's Haynes Collection advertising the glories of the West; Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroad posters representing the wonders of Yellowstone and Glacier national parks, respectively; and a series of National Park Service posters from the 1930s that promote state and national parks. Also displayed will be other types of promotional materials; park souvenirs; photographs depicting recreational activities in the parks; and artifacts such as china and silver from park hotels, fishing and camping gear used in the parks, and a waitress's uniform from Glacier Park. Wood sculptures by Blackfeet artist John L. Clarke (1884–1970) also will be exhibited. Clarke worked in his studio in East Glacier and sold his art in Glacier Park.

The public is invited to the exhibit's opening from 7:00 P.M. to 9:00 P.M. at the Society, February 23. Guests will be treated to a "park experience" with songs around a campfire, picnic cuisine, and an old-fashioned ranger talk by Tom Tankersley, assistant chief of interpretation for Yellowstone Park. Tankersley's slide presentation shows how park visitors and park activities have changed over time.

"Lure of the Parks" will remain at the Society for approximately one year. After the exhibit is dismantled, a two-dimensional traveling version will be prepared for circulation throughout Montana. For information on the traveling exhibit, contact Janet Sperry at (406) 444-4719.

Historians' Contributions Recognized At 1995 Montana History Conference

Two longtime friends of the Society received Montana Historical Society Board of Trustee awards at the 1995 Montana History Conference in October. Ginger K. Renner, Paradise Valley, Arizona, and Warren R. McGee, Livingston, Montana, were honored for their contributions to preserving and promoting Montana history.

Renner, an authority on the art of C. M. Russell, is a Russell art consultant for Montana The Magazine of Western History. She has published four catalogs of Russell art collections and written numerous books, articles, and reviews of Russell and his art. Renner is the widow of Frederic G. Renner, who was a well-known authority on Russell and author of Russell publications.

Railroad historian Warren R. McGee worked for the Northern Pacific Railroad for thirty years, is the son of a Northern Pacific engineer, and has studied railroad history most of his life. McGee also has located and documented the interwoven routes of the Bozeman Trail through southern Montana. As one of the state's

Continued on page 2

Montana's Spring Issue Considers Wolves, Parks, Poster Art in Color

The magic and majesty of Yellowstone and Glacier national parks and wolves in the West await readers in the Spring 1996 issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History. In "The Lure of the Parks" Kirby Lambert, curator of collections at the Montana Historical Society Museum, shows how paintings and poster art promoted railroads and parks alike. His article complements the upcoming museum exhibit of the same name and is illustrated with full-color poster art.

Continued on page 4

PLEASE RETURN

History Conference Awards (Continued from page 1)

foremost authorities on railroads and the Bozeman Trail, he freely shares his knowledge with other transportation and trail scholars.

"The careers and voices of both Ginger and Warren," Trustee President Susan R. McDaniel said, "have greatly enriched the telling of the Montana story to all future generations of Montanans."

Other award winners at the conference were James P. Ronda, Barnard Professor of Western History, University of Tulsa, Oklahoma, recipient of the Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History during the preceding year. Ronda, a member of the magazine's editorial board, was honored for his article, "A Moment in Time: The West—September 1806," that appears in the Autumn 1994 issue of Montana.

The Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award for best student essay submitted to Montana in 1995 was presented to Annie Gilbert Coleman for "'A Hell of a Time all the Time': Farmers, Ranchers, and the Roaring Fork Valley During the 'Quiet Years,'" the story of a Colorado agricultural region that became a recreational mecca. Coleman is a doctoral student at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

Former Montana editor Vivian A. Paladin, Helena, received the American Association for State and Local History Award of Merit. The national award honored Paladin for her editorial expertise directed towards developing Montana into a nationally recognized history journal.

Also at the conference, the Museums Association of Montana gave the Peter Yegen, Jr., Award to Frances LaSorte, director of the Glacier County Historical Museum in Cut Bank, Montana. The award recognized LaSorte's dedication to advancing the museum's work and fostering the collection, preservation, and interpretation of the state's heritage.

Tom Cook, Photographer

Tom Cook, Photographer

Ginger K. Renner (top) and Warren R. McGee (bottom, right) receive Montana Historical Society Board of Trustee Awards from Board President Susan R. McDaniel (bottom, left) at the 1995 Montana History Conference.

Librarian Attends Conservation Sessions

Diana Wilkison of the Society's library staff and recipient of a regional National Endowment for the Humanities preservation grant (NEH), has completed the first of three training sessions on book conservation. The training combines week-long sessions at the University of Utah's conservation treatment laboratory in Salt Lake City with intervals of work at the Society's conservation laboratory implementing the newly learned techniques. Wilkison returns to Salt Lake City in January and March to complete her training.

To qualify for the NEH grant, the Society was required to buy a bookbinder's board shear for the conservation laboratory. The shear has specialized gauges that allow its operator to cut conservation materials of varying types and thicknesses with fine precision.

Wilkison developed the Society's library conservation program after completing a training program in library preservation practices and techniques at Stanford University, California, in 1986. She spends one day a week in the Society's laboratory treating and repairing books and other paper items from the Society's collections.

Two 1996 Bradley Historical Research Fellowships Offered

The Society will again offer two $2,500 James H. Bradley Fellowships for research in the Montana Historical Society collections during summer 1996.

One fellowship is limited to candidates for advanced degrees in history, American studies, or some related field. The second fellowship is open to applicants other than graduate students.

Competition is not restricted to professional historians. Applicants, however, must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write publishable historical articles.

Each recipient must be able to spend at least four weeks in Helena pursuing research in the Society's collections between June and November 1996. Recipients also agree to submit an article based on the research for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History within a year after completion of their fellowship.

Applications must be postmarked by April 5, 1996. For further information, write Bradley Fellowship Committee, Montana Historical Society, P. O. Box 201201, Helena, Montana 59620-1201, or call (406) 444-4702.

Library Research Facilities Extend Regular Hours

Responding to increased public demand, the Society's library and archives are extending their hours to include the first Saturday of each month from 9:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Regular library and archives hours are Monday through Friday, 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.

The photograph archives will not be open on Saturday, but specific photograph collections may be made available if patrons make advance arrangements.

"There is increased public interest in history," Society Librarian Bob Clark said, citing the Montana Heritage Project, funded by the Liz Claiborne and Art Ortenberg Foundation, growing student participation in Montana History Day, and the ever-growing number of researchers of family histories.

"We realize it is difficult for many would-be researchers to come to the Society library during weekday hours. If we had more staff, we would be open every weekend," Clark added.

The Montana Historical Society received more than 250 donations from individuals, organizations, and businesses in 1995. The donations include books; library materials; photographs; personal, ranch, and business papers and financial records; organization and government archival records; and museum artifacts such as stone beads from the site of Fort McKenzie, a commercially-made forty-one star flag, a stone fragment from the foundation of Thomas Francis Meagher's lake cottage in Tasmania, and a decorated gold thimble made from Montana gold.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals: Robert Clark, library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, photograph archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, museum (444-4710).

Margaret E. Adams
Jane Addy
AFL/CIO
Alberta Ministry of Community Development
Alfred W. Bowers Laboratory of Anthropology, University of Idaho
Betty Algard
Clyde Alexander
Patricia C. Allen
Alpha Tau Delta, Lambda Chapter
Irene Appleman
Ellie Arguimbau
Catherine Armitage
Robert D. Armstrong
Victoria Barbeau
Esther Barnhart
Jean Farris Fallan Barrett
Casey E. Barthelmess, Jr.
Barthelmess Family
Sue Bartlett
Grace Kemp Bates
Don Beatty
William Swayer Bergen
J. Michael Bodell
LeRoy R. Brendlinger
Harry M. Bright
Clarence Bristol
Jane Brophy
Robert Bucher
Buffalo Bill Historical Society
Ruth M. Burleigh
C. M. Russell Museum
Jim Calvi
Marla Campbell
Cambridge Historical Commission
Carroll College Library
Central Nevada Museum
Cheney Historical Museum, Eastern Washington University
Chouteau County Superintendent of Schools
Helen Christianson
Allen Chronister
Robert M. Clark
Lorena McMillen Clusin
Brian Cockhill
Julie Coleman
Karen Collins
Bryon Corbett
Rita Cortright
Rod Coslet
Frederick Crane
Kenneth E. Crouch
Custer Battlefield Advocate
Custer County Art Center
Benji Daniels
Carolyn Demin
Frank DeRosa
Frances DeYong
Sally Garrett Dingley
Doug R. Dodge
Gale Dorn
James Taylor Dunn
Art Dwelley
Jeanette Culbertson Erickson
Robert Erickson
Richard L. Edwards
John C. Ewers
James J. Flanagan
Tom Foley
David W. Folsom
Harlene Page Fortune
Virginia B. Fosland
Eileen Pierce Fousr
Lynn Fredlund
Charlotte & Victor Freyler
Gordon Fullerton
Louise Galt
Mrs. Rudolph Geissler
Tom Gignoux
Good Samaritan Thrift Store
Phil Grandby
Frances A. Graves
Art Greenlee
Arnon Gutfeld
Carol Guthrie
Joan Haefer
Tom Hamilton
Martin Hanson
John C. Harrison
Vickie MacDonald Harrison
Jack Hayne
Helena Arts Council
Neil Helgath
Grace Helming
Betty Hicks
James & Betty Holdeman
Marybelle Holshue
Virginia S. & George Holton
Dennis Homer
Dorothy & Thomas Hoobler
Rev. Leopold H. Hopps
Dale Hoskins
Joseph J. Hovish
Mike Ihnat
Illinois State Historical Society
Indian Law Resource Center
Dale L. Johnson
Judy Johnston
Marguerite O. Jones
Toby Joyce
Ginney Crossen Katzlberger
John Koerth
Helen Knight
Eloyce Hubbard Kockler
Rebecca Kohl
Robert R. Lacy
John A. Lamb
Kirby Lambert
Lynn Langdon
Rudy Langel
A. Dean Larsen
J. Einar Larson
Juanita Larson
Woody Laughnan
Betty LaSalle
Therese & Jack Leary
David Leonard
Audrey Levitan
Lewis & Clark Trail Heritage Foundation
James Linderman
Charmaine Lindgren
Lloyd Lippman
Doris Loeser
Karin Ludeman
Joe Lundberg
Verna Lundin
Jim MacKay
Frances Maclay
James S. Magera
Tom Malee
Mary E. Marshall
Sister Mary Lenore Martin
Harriet Mathews
Jean E. Matusik
Margo Mazetier
Edward McAndrews
Quinn McCann
Ann McCarthy
Bequest of Father Robert McCarthy
Amy L. McKinney
Sharon McLane
Sue McNicol
Gertrude McStravick
Harriett C. Meloy
Peter Meloy
Elaine Burch Miles
Milk River Genealogical Society
Harold W. Milot
Minneapolis Public Library
Keith & Loni Mitchell
Montana Alliance for Arts Education
Montana Community Shares
Montana Department of Agriculture
Montana Power Company
Montana Stockgrowers Association
Montana Tech of the University of Montana, Library
Montana Women's Lobby
Montana Wilderness Association
John Clayborn "Clay" Moore
Grace Morgan
Mr. & Mrs. Robert F. Morgan
John Morrison
Chuck Motheral
James K. Murray
Museum of North Idaho
National Geographic Society
Susan Near
Ernest A. Neath
Nebraska State Historical Society
R. L. "Pinky" Nelson
Howard Ness
Genevieve Nickey
Lee Niedringhaus
Northwest Archaeological Associates
Alice H. Oestreicher
Gayle Ogan
Oklahoma Historical Society
Kathryn Otto
Dixie Peltier
Stan Peterson
Petroleum County Public Library
Mary K. Pollard
Vern Pomeroy
Bill Porter
Marjorie Priser
Grace Probert
Provincial Archives of Alberta

Provincial Museum of Alberta
Lillian & Howard Rapp
Nancy M. & Glenn Randers-Pehrson
Kathy Reed
Alma J. Reid
Fred J. Riffe
Dean Robertson
Gene Robertson
Nancy Robinson
Rocky Mountain Rider
Gail Roderick
Richard Roeder
K. J. Roll
William Romek
Ben L. Rose
Estate of Helen Rundell
Mr. & Mrs. John D. Ryan
Donald M. Salisbury
Catherine Sassen
Mrs. Jack Schultz
Joseph D. Schwartz
Ward Shanahan
Bill Sharp
Nina Shengold
James J. Shive
Jack Shryne
Darrell L. Small
Patricia Chapman Smart
Janet Sperry
Kalmar Stevenson
Maynard B. Stevenson
Rose Marie Storey
Chuck Streeby
Alex Swaney
Joye Swenson
Temple Beth Aaron, Billings
Brett Thackeray
Lucille Thompson
Linda Tigges
Karen Tkach
Pamela Wilson Tollefson
Lucille Thompson
Patricia L. Torrez
University of North Dakota, Department of Anthropology
University of Montana, Telecommunications Center
Helen E. Vogt
Margaret Ward
Dave Walter
James Welch
Emery Beach Wellman
Western Federal Savings Bank
Westerners Los Angeles Corral
Veronica Wetsch
John H. Whelan
Howard White
D. Keith Williams
David G. Willson
Malcolm D. Winter, Jr.
Charles G. Woodhouse
Linda Wostrel
Lois Marie Yeager
Edward Young

Montana's Spring Issue

(Continued from page 1)

Lee Whittlesley, National Park Service archivist for history at Yellowstone Park, tells the story of G. L. Henderson, who, Whittlesley argues, was the first national park interpreter. Henderson came to Yellowstone in 1882 and spent more than twenty years there, honing his interpretive skills while promoting his beloved park. In a second article Whittlesley and California psychiatrist and historical researcher James S. Brust present Colgate Hoyt's account of his 1878 tour of Yellowstone Park accompanied by his famous brother-in-law, General Nelson Miles.

In separate essays Wyoming writer Bruce Hampton describes encounters between wolves and humans in the early West, and Peter Zmyj documents people's efforts first to eradicate gray wolves from Wyoming and later to reintroduce the animals to the same region. Zmyj's article was the 1994 Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole essay award winner.

Look for your Spring issue of the magazine earlier this year than in the past, even before spring appears on your calendar. The change in Montana's distribution schedule began with the last issue of the magazine in order to accommodate newsstand distribution, which requires that magazines be published at the beginning of the month or season printed on the cover.

Wolves of North America, p. 135

Although wolves travel in small packs, early illustrators often pictured large groups of wolves such as this pack at a homesteader's door.

As they have since 1951, Montana readers will continue to receive four issues of the magazine each year, but now they will receive them a little earlier.

Jennifer Bottomly Attends Texas Museum Seminar

Jennifer Bottomly, Society museum technician, received the Glenda Morgan traveling fellowship to attend the 1995 Winedale Museum Seminar on Administration and Interpretation in November. The seminar included lectures, discussions, and hands-on activities on such topics as material culture, education and public programming, grant writing, exhibition fabrication, historic photographs, and security and conservation of collections.

The seminar, sponsored by the Winedale Historical Center near Round Top, Texas, and the Texas Historical Commission, was designed to improve the quality of and promote the continuing development of community and regional history museums, historical organizations, and other cultural institutions.

Home Tour Raises Money For OGM Restoration

More than 750 people participated in the fifteenth annual Original Governor's Mansion (OGM) Christmas Home Tour December 3 in Helena. "The success of the tour was a cooperative effort on the part of the board, volunteers, and community homeowners and businesses," Museum Services Administrator Susan Near said.

Proceeds from the tour help fund restoration projects at the mansion, which is administered by the Montana Historical Society. Restoration plans include providing additional light fixtures for the mansion and an analysis of the second floor southeast bedroom to determine what work is needed to restore the bedroom to more accurately reflect the 1911–1921 period of interpretation. The mansion was built in 1888.

In addition to funds raised by the tour, the OGM Board will receive about one thousand dollars from Diana Dowling, Helena mayoral candidate. Dowling, who was defeated in the November election, decided to donate the remainder of her campaign monies to the mansion's restoration fund after she had taken part in the Christmas Home Tour. "The Mansion," Dowling said, "is absolutely marvelous, one of the best things that ever happened to Helena."

Schools and other groups are urged to book spring tours of the Montana Historical Society, the Capitol, and the Original Governor's Mansion as soon as possible. Tour times generally are filled early in the season. To arrange tours, call (406) 444-4789.

Montana Scholar and Society Patron Richard B. Roeder Dies

Richard B. Roeder, well-known Montana historian and, since 1977, a member of the Editorial Board for Montana The Magazine of Western History, died in Helena, December 23, after a long illness. Roeder also served on the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustees from 1989 to 1992.

MHS Photograph Archives

A popular lecturer at conferences and in classrooms, Richard Roeder spoke on "Montana and the World's Fairs" at the 1985 Montana History Conference in Helena.

"Richard Roeder was in many ways the conscience of the Society," Society Director Brian Cockhill said. His insights concerning Montana's history were incisive, and he often persuaded staff to look with new perspectives at the goals ahead of them. His knowledge of our holdings was encyclopedic, and his numerous scholarly contributions are heavily grounded in the Society's holdings. I will miss him as a friend of the Society and as a personal friend, who always had a good natured jibe about the football contests of our respective favorites, the Bobcats and the Grizzlies."

A tenacious researcher and prolific writer, Roeder was co-author with Michael P. Malone, now president of Montana State University, of Montana: A History of Two Centuries, the definitive history of the state. First published in 1980, the book was revised in 1991 with a third author, William L. Lang. Roeder was an editor for The Last Best Place, a Montana literature anthology published by the Montana Historical Society Press in 1988. He wrote numerous articles and essays examining Montana's cultural and political history for a variety of publications and was a frequent contributor to Montana. His most recent essay in the magazine appears in the Autumn 1992 issue and considers Paris Gibson's contributions to the development of Great Falls.

Roeder was a history professor at Montana State University from 1962 to 1984. He later taught history at Carroll College in Helena, The University of Montana, and the University of Great Falls. He was a delegate to the 1972 Montana Constitutional Convention where he played a pivotal role as consensus builder, and he was administrative assistant to Lieutenant Governor George Turman from 1985 to 1988. At the time of his death he was general editor at Sweet Grass Books.

Born in 1930 in Schuykill Haven, Pennsylvania, Roeder was an undergraduate of Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania and he received master and doctoral degrees in history from the University of Pennsylvania. Roeder is survived by two daughters, Karin Wallen of Great Falls and Ellen Pfalzgraff of Calgary, Alberta; a son, Thomas, of Canby, Oregon; five grandchildren; a sister; and four brothers. Memorials in Richard Roeder's name may be sent to the Montana Historical Society or to an organization of the donor's choice.

Society Library Hires New Reference Assistant

Angela Murray, a Helena native, recently joined the Society staff as the library reference assistant. She also will assist the head librarian with acquisitions.

Murray was the assistant librarian at Chouteau County Free Library in Fort Benton for almost four years before coming to the Society in October. She received a history degree from Carroll College in 1990.

Murray replaces Dorothea Simonson who retired last August after working in the library since June 1991. Prior to working at the Society, Simonson was a reference assistant at the Lewis and Clark Public Library in Helena for more than seven years after teaching in rural Montana and Idaho schools for twenty-one years.

Simonson, who lives in Helena, attended Northern Montana College at Havre and the College of Great Falls.

New Books Coming From Historical Society Press

The Montana Historical Society Press plans to release two titles this spring: Traveler's Guide to the Great Sioux War: The Battlefields, Forts, and Related Sites of America's Greatest Indian War by Paul L. Hedren and a new edition of Helena: An Illustrated History by Vivian Paladin and Jean Baucus.

Also this spring, the Press will rerelease Montana Native Plants and Early Peoples by Jeff Hart.

A richly illustrated guide keyed to official highway maps, Traveler's Guide to the Great Sioux War leads the reader to virtually every principal landmark associated with the war—from Fort Phil Kearny where the Sioux besieged soldiers sent to guard the Bozeman Trail in the 1860s to Fort Buford, the site of Sitting Bull's surrender in 1881. Author Paul L. Hedren is the editor of The Great Sioux War, 1876–77: The Best from Montana The Magazine of Western History, which the Press published in 1991.

Helena: An Illustrated History by former Society editor Vivian Paladin and Jean Baucus has garnered high praise from historians and lay people alike. "Bold, brassy and boisterous before it attained a measure of gentility and grace, Helena has a truly marvelous history, magnificently captured in this delightful book," historian Stephen Ambrose commented on the first edition.

The Press first published Montana Native Plants and Early Peoples, as a bicentennial project in 1976. Now with an index and in an easy-to-carry 8½" x 5½" format, the guide features sixty native Montana plants, from alders to yellowbells and tells how Native Americans and other early inhabitants of the area used these plants for food, medicine, and religious rituals. Each illustrated entry also gives a detailed description of the plant and its habitat and range.

Press titles are available from the Society's Museum Store (1-800-243-9900).

Society Wants Your Ideas To Incorporate in State Historic Preservation Plan

People throughout Montana will receive a questionnaire in the next several weeks asking for their ideas, opinions, and comments on historic preservation in Montana.

The Montana Historical Society's State Historic Preservation Office is interested in hearing about everyone's ideas, concerns, and opinions as it prepares the Montana Historic Preservation Plan, a compilation of information about the problems and opportunities people in this region face as they work to protect the state's heritage.

"We would like to see the office flooded with letters telling us what people think about historic preservation," Paul Putz, Montana's state historic preservation officer said. "We are particularly interested in their views on local preservation problems and solutions and what tools they see as being important to local preservation success. We also are interested in how the public views historic preservation statewide."

To begin the planning process the historic preservation office is sending questionnaires to people across the state. Look for one in your mailbox this winter.

If you wish to participate but do not receive a questionnaire, please request one from the Historic Preservation Office, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery through January 31"Lure of the Parks," Northeast Gallery begins February 23"The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery |
| Ongoing Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| February 23 | Exhibit opening and reception for "Lure of the Parks" 7 P.M. to 9 P.M. |
| | Friends of the Society March Women's History Brown Bag Lectures, Haynes Auditorium, noon. There is a charge. |
| March 6 | Gayle Shirley, "Searching for More Than Petticoats" |
| March 13 | Dr. Seena Kohl, "Settling the Canadian-American West: Family and Household in the Homesteading Frontier" |
| March 20 | Dr. Mary Murphy, "Searching for an Angle of Repose: Women and Creativity in Montana" |
| March 27 | Annick Smith, "Homestead" |
| April 27 | Montana History Day, Montana Historical Society and the Capitol Building |

Winter and Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., Saturday, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.; Closed Sundays and holidays. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday–Friday, call 444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., First Saturday of each month 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Library, archival materials, and reference help. Closed other weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | January 1–March 31: Tours by reservation; regular hours begin April 1. |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8 A.M. to 6 P.M.: Group tours by reservation. To arrange all group tours call 444-4789. |

To confirm hours call (406) 444-4789.

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6M
Vol 33, No 3
SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS
STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
SEP 25 1995
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 33 No. 3 • Autumn 1995

1995 Montana History Conference Convenes in Helena October 26

"Western History Rewound" is the theme of the twenty-second annual Montana History Conference to be held in Helena October 26–28. Conference sessions will focus on patterns of historical interests. People choose to preserve and remember certain personalities, places, events, and things of the past while ignoring others. Conference speakers will examine what we have chosen to keep, what we have forgotten, and how our historical decision making has changed.

Friday banquet speaker Frits Pannekoek, director of Historic Sites and Archives, Department of Community Development in Alberta, Canada, will discuss how history is processed on both sides of the border. Banquet festivities will also include presentation of the annual Trustees Award for invaluable contributions to Montana history, and other awards.

Lillian Turner, coordinator of public programs for the education office at the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, will show the video she produced about "The Golden Horse on the Silver Screen" at the Friday luncheon.

Susan Badger Doyle, independent scholar and writer from Sheridan, Wyoming, will talk about the Bozeman Trail at the Saturday luncheon. Doyle's book, Journeys to the Land of Gold: Emigrants on the Bozeman Trail, 1863–1866, is forthcoming from the Montana Historical Society Press. During the Bradley Breakfast Saturday morning, Connie Staudohar, 1995 Senior Bradley Fellow, will review her research on the spread of tuberculosis from miners to women and children in Montana and treatment of the disease at the state hospital.

Conference sessions on Friday and Saturday will include topics such as World

continued on page 3

Horses, Pony Express to Highlight Autumn Montana

At a time when many traditional western heroes seem to be losing their luster in light of new historical interpretations, there is at least one familiar character of the Old West who remains as beloved as ever—the horse. No matter the interpretation, western history would not be the same without horses, and contributors to the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History show why.

Lillian Turner of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center traces popular infatuation with horses from the heroic adulation given Robert E. Lee's famed mount, Traveler, to Buffalo Bill Cody's elevation of horses to western hero status, and finally to film and television's creation of such equine stars as Trigger and Fury.

In a separate article, historian Martin

continued on page 3

Rena C. Ricker Estate Gives Russell Oil Painting to Historical Society

An outstanding Charles M. Russell oil painting came to the Society in August as a bequest of the late Rena Cox Ricker of Bothell, Washington. Completed about 1892, the painting, O. H. Cowboys Roping a Steer, is one of the earliest, major works in the Society's Russell collection.

Mrs. Ricker inherited the painting from her father, who acquired it about 1917 from the W. G. "Green" Preuitt family. Preuitt was at one time co-owner with Jesse Phelps of the O. H. Ranch in the Judith Basin. Russell spent the harsh winter of 1886–1887 on the O. H. Ranch, where he painted Waiting for a Chinook, the watercolor that helped launch his career as an artist.

Mrs. Ricker, born in Seattle in 1915, was the daughter of Allen H. and Rena C. Cox, Helena natives. The family vacationed in Montana, and in 1943 Rena Cox married R. Brooke Ricker of Helena. The couple returned to Montana each year. "These strong Helena ties make the Montana Historical Society a fitting repository where the painting can be shared with the people of Montana," estate trustee Jack Ricker and his wife Bonnie of Helena said.

Because of its age and condition, the painting requires conservation work. The Society plans to raise three thousand dollars for cleaning and restoration before exhibiting O.H.Cowboys Roping a Steer in the Mackay Gallery of Russell Art.

John Reddy, photographer

O. H. Cowboys Roping a Steer (36½" x 18½")

Two other significant works of art also were acquired recently by the Society. Martin Hanson of Mellen, Wisconsin, donated Proud Big Horn, to the museum's collection of drawings, carvings, and

continued on page 4

PLEASE RETURN

■ Schools and other groups are urged to book tours of the Montana Historical Society, the Capitol, and the Original Governor's Mansion as soon as possible. Society tour times generally are filled early in the season. To arrange tours, call (406) 444-4789.

■ In February the Society will open The Lure of the Parks, a temporary exhibit that will examine why Montana's state and national parks are so "alluring." It will feature approximately 30 travel posters—produced under the auspices of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads and the WPA Poster Project—as well as other promotional materials, souvenirs, and historic photographs. After it closes at the Historical Society in February 1997, The Lure of the Parks will be made available to other Montana institutions as a traveling exhibit.

■ "Landscapes and Communities of Asia and the Pacific Northwest" will be the theme for The Mansfield Conference and Academic Symposium to be held October 15–17 at the University of Montana, Missoula. The conference will focus on landscapes and communities. For information contact the Mansfield Center, Mansfield Library, 4th Level, University of Montana, Missoula, MT 59812, call (406) 243-2988, or fax (406) 243-2181.

■ The Oral History Association's twenty-ninth annual meeting will be held October 19–22, at the Pfister Hotel, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. In addition to forty conference sessions, workshop topics include strategies, computer access, strengthening relationships in Native American and other communities, and grant opportunities. For information contact Kezia Ruiz, Oral History Association, P.O. Box 97234, Baylor University, Waco, TX 76798-7234, phone (817) 755-2764, fax (817) 755-1571, or E-Mail OHA_Support@Baylor.edu.

■ The C. M. Russell Museum of Great Falls, Montana, will feature four painters of the contemporary West as part of the exhibit, "The Spirited Line." Included are the western fantasies of Larry Pirnie of Missoula, Montana; depictions of cowgirls by Donna Howell-Sickles of Frisco, Texas; rodeo horse and rider action by Walter Piehl of Minot, North Dakota; and early West, American Indians, and women by Amy Burnett of Bremerton, Washington. For information write C. M. Russell Museum, 400 13th Street North, Great Falls, Montana 59401-1498 or call (406) 727-8787. The exhibit will be on display through November 26.

■ The thirty-ninth annual Missouri Valley History Conference will be held in Omaha, Nebraska, on March 7–9, 1996. For information contact Dale Gaeddert, Chair MVHC, University of Nebraska, Omaha, Omaha, NE 68182.

"Taking a Stand in History" Is History Day Theme

Middle school and high school social studies teachers can begin planning activities that focus on "Taking a Stand in History," theme for the 1996 National History Day. Participating students prepare papers, exhibits, performances, or media presentations for Montana's History Day Fair, which will be April 27, 1996, in Helena.

Winners at the state competition are eligible for National History Day held annually at the University of Maryland. Last year nineteen Montana students competed nationally, and Chandra Obie of Clancy, Montana, was one of twelve finalists out of one hundred students in her category of Junior Individual Performance at the national competition.

Obie's performance, "There Can Be No Compromise with War," focused on Jeannette Rankin's decision to vote against entry into World War II. Obie also was named Montana's Outstanding Student by National History Day organizers.

Susan R. McDaniel Is New Trustee President

Susan R. McDaniel, Billings, is the new president of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees. McDaniel is the director of grants at Rocky Mountain College in Billings and has been a member of the Board of Trustees since her appointment by Governor Stan Stephens in 1989. Before moving to Billings, she was the executive director of the Custer County Art Center in Miles City.

McDaniel succeeds Ward Shanahan, a Helena attorney, who has been president of the trustees since 1993 and a board member since 1987. Shanahan will continue on the board and is also president of the Montana Historical Society Foundation Board of Directors.

Education Footlockers

With help from the Friends of the Society, the museum and education office staff refurbished six footlockers and added a seventh for use in Montana classrooms. The newest footlocker, "Life at Pictograph Cave," was funded by the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks and prepared by Chere Jiusto of the Society's preservation office.

Teachers may request information or reserve footlockers through the education office (406) 444-4789.

Christmas Home Tour Supports Mansion Restoration Projects

The Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour, a fundraiser for the mansion's Restoration Society, will be Sunday, December 3. Participants on the fifteenth annual home tour will visit the mansion and private Helena homes decorated for the holidays.

The mansion's master bath, recently restored to its early twentieth-century appearance, will be featured this year. Walls of the bathroom have been covered with a wallpaper suggesting blue Delft tile that was produced by a California company to replicate the bathroom's original paper.

Additional funds for restoration projects will be raised this year through a raffle as part of the home tour. The raffle winner will receive a numbered limited edition etching of the Original Governor's Mansion by artist Barbara Coppock of Lakeside, Montana. For information about the tour or raffle tickets, call the Society's museum office, (406) 444-4710.

Museum Store Catalog Available in October

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store catalog for 1995–1996 will be mailed to Society members by mid-October.

Books forthcoming from the Montana Historical Society Press and listed in the catalog include:

Perilous Passage: A Narrative of the Montana Gold Rush, 1862–1863, by Edwin R. Purple, edited by Kenneth N. Owens, $25.95 cloth, $15.95 paperback.

Battle for Butte: Mining and Politics on the Northern Frontier, 1864–1906, by Michael P. Malone, with a new preface, $18.95.

The Museum Store offers a comprehensive collection of western history and literature, notecards, and gift items for all ages. If you are looking for a book not listed in the catalog, wish to receive another catalog, or want to place an order, please call 1-800-243-9900.

Vivian A. Paladin Receives National Award

Vivian A. Paladin, former editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History, is the recipient of a 1995 Award of Merit from the American Association for State and Local History (AASLH). Paladin received the award for developing Montana into a nationally recognized, award-winning history journal during her nineteen-year tenure as associate editor and editor.

The AASLH awards program is designed to establish and encourage standards of excellence, and the awards are the nation's most prestigious recognition of achievement in the preservation, promotion, and interpretation of local, state, and regional history.

"Vivian A. Paladin, more than any other person," Society Director Brian Cockhill wrote in submitting her nomination, "played a pivotal role in developing the Society's publications program and making Montana The Magazine of Western History the nationally recognized and respected publication it is today."

Paladin retired from the Society in 1978 and lives in Helena. She serves on Montana's editorial board and has contributed numerous articles to the magazine on western artists Charles M. Russell and Earl E. Heikka and on other topics. She also contributed a foreword to Roberta Sollid's book, Calamity Jane, newly reprinted by the Montana Historical Society Press. Paladin joined the Society publications staff in 1958, became associate editor of Montana in 1959, and was appointed editor in 1966.

Vivian A. Paladin in a recent photograph taken in her home

Museum Grant Helps Protect Collections

The Society's museum will use a 1995 Institute of Museum Services Conservation Project Support Grant of $25,000 to improve storage conditions for its collection of paintings of Montana and the American West. The Institute of Museum Services is a federal agency that offers conservation project support to the nation's museums.

Paintings conservator Randy Ash of Denver, Colorado, was at the Society in May and will return in October and March to conduct a general condition survey of approximately 2,000 paintings in the Society's collections as well as a detailed survey of 150 of the most significant pieces.

Ash will advise the museum staff on the care of the paintings and on preventative conservation techniques, and she will oversee construction of proper storage units for the paintings. Jennifer Bottomly, museum technician, will assist Ash in cataloging, supervising the general survey, and designing the units.

In addition to her current work at the Historical Society, Ash recently completed the first phase of a Capitol Art Preservation Project. This project, to assess the condition of art in the capitol complex, was funded through a Cultural and Aesthetic Grant from the 1993 Montana Legislature. Ash checked the stability and cleanliness of murals in the Senate and House chambers, Rotunda, former Supreme Court Chambers, and former Law Library and inspected and treated two murals by Shorty Shope in the Scott Hart Building.

Autumn Montana

(continued from page 1)

Ridge recounts the brief but illustrious career of one of the West's most celebrated business enterprises—the Pony Express. And in an article originally scheduled for Summer, James D. McLaird unlocks the mystery surrounding Jean Hickok McCormick, the purported daughter of frontier legends Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane.

In addition, the Autumn issue offers a brief excerpt from the reminiscences of Edwin R. Purple, the articulate man who participated in Montana's early gold rush and wrote of Henry Plummer and early day Bannack. Purple's full reminiscence, edited and annotated by historian Kenneth N. Owens and titled Perilous Passage: A Narrative of the Montana Gold Rush, 1862–1863, will appear from the Montana Historical Society Press this fall.

Conference (continued from page 1)

War II and Montana; tourism in Yellowstone and Glacier National parks and at the Broadwater Hotel and Natatorium in Helena; the Montana Eastern Railway, Montana gold mining during the Great Depression, hydroelectric power construction in Montana, and the Montana State Orphans Home (now the Children's Center) in Twin Bridges. Workshops on Thursday will cover writing nominations for the National Register of Historic Places, appraising and assessing art and historic postal material, and public programming for community organizations.

Montana State University's Vigilante Theatre Company will present "Rewinding Montana" following the Thursday evening opening reception, and conferees will tour Helena's historic Sixth Ward on Friday and East Helena's ASARCO Lead Smelter and the Child/Kleffner Ranch on Saturday.

Conference headquarters will be at the Colonial Inn. Sessions, workshops, and presentations are scheduled for the Society building, State Capitol, and Myrna Loy Theater. Co-sponsors of the conference are the Montana Historical Society, Montana Historical Society Foundation, Alberta Bair Trust, and Center for the Rocky Mountain West. The Montana Arts Council, Alberta Community Development, ASARCO, the Museums Association of Montana, and the Helena/Lewis and Clark Historic Preservation Commission have given financial and organizational assistance.

Conference programs will be mailed to Society members. For programs or information, call (406) 444-4794.

Society's Volunteers Begin New Season

The Friends of the Society kicked off their 1995–1996 season on September 20, 1995, with a presentation by Secretary of State Mike Cooney titled, "Rescuing our Capitol: Restoration Plans and Needs."

Last year the seventy-five member Friends organization gave more than four thousand hours of volunteer service to the Society guiding tours, cataloging artifacts, filing, preparing mailings, and planning and hosting receptions.

The Friends recruit new members each September and commit to specific projects for the Society. If you are interested in joining the Friends, please call the Society's education office at (406) 444-4794.

South Dakotan Heads Historic Preservation Office

Paul M. Putz joined the Montana Historical Society staff in early September as manager of the Historic Preservation Program and State Historic Preservation Officer. Before accepting the Montana appointment, Putz had been director of the South Dakota State Historic Preservation Center in Vermillion since 1980 and on its staff since 1972. For the last year he also served as the South Dakota State Historic Preservation Officer.

Announcing the appointment, Society Director Brian Cockhill said, "Paul brings significant experience in all facets of preservation work and will, I am sure, contribute to the public's appreciation of this component of Montana's history."

Putz is a history graduate of the University of South Dakota and is active in regional and national historic preservation activities. He replaces Marcella Sherfy who resigned last March to become the Society's education officer. Since Sherfy's resignation, State Archaeologist Mark Baumler has served as interim manager of the Historic Preservation Program and Montana State Historic Preservation Officer.

Russell Painting Given to Society

(continued from page 1)

illustrated letters by Blackfeet artist John L. Clarke. Hanson's uncle purchased the wood carving of bighorn sheep in 1920 at Clarke's East Glacier studio.

The late Father Robert McCarthy of Carroll College in Helena, bequeathed to the Society a Russell horse bronze. The sculpture, On Nee-Nah, depicts the artist mounted on one of his favorite horses. Russell completed the original wax and plaster model before 1910. The bronze was cast in the early 1940s by Homer Britzman at Nelli Art Bronze Works in Los Angeles. The Montana Historical Society Foundation arranged the bequest.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery"The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery |
| Ongoing Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 26–28 | Montana History Conference, Helena, Montana |
| December 3 | Original Governor's Mansion Annual Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing Street, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Proceeds benefit mansion restoration projects. |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., Saturday, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.; Closed Sundays and holidays. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday–Friday, call (406) 444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday–Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To December 31: Tuesday–Saturday, noon to 5 P.M., tours on the hour, last tour begins at 4 P.M. January 1–March 31: Tours by reservation only. To arrange guided group tours, call (406) 444-4789. |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. To arrange large group tours, call (406) 444-4789. |

To confirm hours call (406) 444-4789.

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

---

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

S
978.6
H6M
v.33/no.2
STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JUL 17 1995
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620
PLEASE RETURN
SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 33 No. 2 • Summer 1995

Society Acquires Herd Bull Sculpture

MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

Todd Saarinen, museum preparator (right), and Ralph Gardner, from Montana Metal Buildings (left), fit one of Herd Bull's horns in place as the sculpture rests on the Society's lawn.

Billings artist Benji "Oswego" Daniels's Herd Bull is now part of the Society's permanent collections. In May the Society purchased the massive metal buffalo skull that has graced the Society's front lawn since early April.

"The sculpture," Society Director Brian Cockhill said, "represents for the Society an acquisition of excellent art, but it also is a symbol that increases awareness of the Montana Historical Society and its mission."

The two and one-half ton, sixteen-foot sculpted skull rises nearly seven feet from the ground, and the horns span more than twenty-four feet from tip to tip. Don Jones of Montana Metal Buildings in Helena donated his time and equipment—a forty-ton crane and one hundred-foot boom—to move the sculpture from the artist's flatbed truck to the Society's front lawn.

Daniels, a member of the Assiniboine Sioux tribe at Fort Peck Reservation, said the idea for the skull grew from scuba dives in the Missouri River near Fort Peck Dam where he and his friends often found buffalo skulls along the river's bottom. "Buffalo have always intrigued me, and the Indians had great reverence for them, using every single part from the bones to hooves and hides," Daniels said.

The actual creation of the work came to him later while he was working as a welder. As he watched sheet metal being stripped from a storage tank roof, he envisioned the metal as raw material for Herd Bull. "The quality of iron that impresses me most," Daniels said, "is its ability to withstand nature and time." His sculptures, he explained, are designed for the outdoors where "rain, wind, snow, and even fire beautify the patina."

Two Scholars Receive Bradley Fellowships

Connie Staudohar, an independent historian from Bozeman, Montana, is the 1995 Senior Bradley Fellow. The $2,500 stipend enables her to spend four weeks this summer in the Society's library to study the spread of tuberculosis in Montana from miners to women and children and to study the establishment, evolution, and nature of the state hospital treatment of tuberculosis. Staudohar's research will draw on the substantial collection of state hospital records in the Society archives.

Sharon M. Howe, a master's candidate in history at Western Washington University in Bellingham, is the 1995 Graduate Bradley Fellow. She will examine across-the-border investments during the period between completion of transcontinental railroads in Canada and the United States and the end of World War I. Howe also will receive a $2,500 stipend.

Bradley fellows are expected to submit an article to Montana The Magazine of Western History for possible publication.

Save October 26 to 28 For 1995 Montana History Conference

The Montana Historical Society's Annual History Conference will be held October 26–28 in Helena. The conference theme, "Western History Rewound," asks speakers and participants to reflect not just on past events and people, but on which themes, places, and resources we have valued in our past and on our motives for what we choose to remember and save.

Participants will have the opportunity to attend "how-to" workshops on the care of art pieces, buildings, objects, and photographs. Current Society exhibits and timely celebrations will be recognized in other sessions on World War II and its impact on Montana and on the role of the horse in the West.

A conference schedule will be mailed to members about mid-September.

Popular Culture and the West Is Summer Montana Theme

For better or worse, popular culture has made the West familiar to Americans for more than a century and fashioned legends for the exploits of such western frontier characters as Wyatt Earp, Calamity Jane, and Annie Oakley. Several leading historians discuss this phenomenon in a special "Popular Culture in the West" theme issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History for summer.

Historian and television documentary consultant Paul Andrew Hutton provides an extensive photographic historical essay on Wyatt Earp. Contrasting the real Wyatt Earp with the western figure created in literature and film, Hutton shows how the shootout at the OK Corral in Tombstone, Arizona, has served as the prototype for walk-down shootouts in western film and literature ever since.

Similarly, historian Glenda Riley shows how Annie Oakley was the prototype for the western cowgirl. In a sepa-

Continued on page 3

■ The Gallatin County Historical Society and Pioneer Museum will sponsor the Pioneer Museum History Conference November 4 in Bozeman. Amateur and professional historians will present papers on local history. For information contact Dennis Seibel at (406) 582-3195 or write Gallatin County Historical Society and Pioneer Museum, 317 W. Main, Bozeman, MT 59715.

■ The Pikes Peak Library District will sponsor the fifth annual Great Pikes Peak Cowboy Poetry Gathering August 18–20 in Colorado Springs. The celebration of cowboy culture, humor, folklore, and western lifestyle features poetry, literature, storytelling, music, art, films, and dance. Most events are free. For information contact Nancy Downs, Public Information Office, (719) 531-6333, ext. 1200.

■ "Contemporary Northwest Quilts" and "Quilts from Kumamoto, Japan," will be on display until August 6, 1995, at the Holter Museum of Art in Helena. The showing is sponsored by the Helena Quilters Guild and the Kumamoto Plaza in Helena.

The museum has scheduled its twenty-fourth national juried art competition, "ANA 24," August 18–September 18 and "Group Exhibition of Idaho Artists," August 18–September 11. For information contact Holter Museum of Art, 12 East Lawrence Street, Helena, MT 59601 or call (406) 442-6400.

■ "The Sculpture of C. M. Russell" exhibit at the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls will run through September 5, 1995. The interpretive, three-dimensional exhibit contains more than 150 bronzes and models from private and museum collections, including the Trigg's Collection with a large number of uncast original models. Lifetime casts, plaster casts, and bronzes made from Russell's plaster casts will be displayed. For information contact Pam Hendrickson at the C. M. Russell Museum, 400–13th Street North, Great Falls, MT 59401-1498, or call (406) 727-8787, or fax (406) 727-2402.

■ The sixth annual "Ride the Russell Trail," sponsored by the C. M. Russell Museum and the Circle Bar Ranch, will be September 13–17. Participants will visit the Russell studio and the museum in Great Falls before leaving on horseback to follow Indian and hunting trails used by Charlie Russell. Riders will stay at the Circle Bar Ranch on the edge of the Little Belt Mountains and take horseback trips into the Judith and Pigeye basins. In the evenings Raphael Cristy will tell Russell stories, and slide shows of Russell's art will be shown. Horseback riding experience is essential. For information contact Jennifer Page at (406) 727-8787.

■ "The North American West: New Boundaries" is the theme for the thirty-fifth annual Western History Association Conference October 11–14, 1995, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Denver, Colorado. Forty-nine sessions are planned. Stephen Ambrose, director of the Eisenhower Center at the University of New Orleans is banquet speaker. For information contact Western History Association, University of New Mexico, 1080 Mesa Vista Hall, Albuquerque, NM 87131-1181, or call (505) 277-5234, or fax (505) 277-6023.

■ Proposals for papers and sessions in all areas of history are being accepted for the thirty-ninth Annual Missouri Valley History Conference in Omaha, Nebraska, March 7–9, 1996. Proposals and a one-page abstract and vitae should be sent by October 15 to Dale Gaeddert, Chair MVHC, University of Nebraska, Omaha, Omaha, NE 68182.

As part of the conference, the Society of Military History also is accepting proposals for papers and sessions. Military history proposals should be sent to Mark R. Grandstaff, History Department, Brigham Young University, 414 KMB, P.O. Box 24446, Provo, UT 84602.

■ The James J. Hill Reference Library will award several grants of up to $2,000 to support research in the James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill papers. The Hill papers include information on the railroad industry, tourism and Glacier National Park, political developments in the nation and the Northwest, national and regional economic development, agronomy, and other topics concerned with the upper Midwest, Pacific Northwest, and western Canada. Applications deadline is November 1, with awards to be announced in early 1996. For information contact: Curator, James J. Hill Reference Library, 80 West Fourth Street, St. Paul, MN 55102, fax (612) 222-4139, or Email jjhill@jjhill.org.

■ Two exhibits at the Hockaday Center for the Arts in Kalispell feature state artists and Glacier National Park. Paintings, sculptures, photographs, and mixed media by Montana artists Rudy and Lela Autio and Robert and Jennie DeWeese comprise "Family Resemblance." "Glacier National Park Eighty-Fifth Anniversary Historical Exhibit" displays photographs by T. J. Hileman and other images from the Glacier Park Archives.

"Affinities," curated by the Plains Art Museum of Fargo, North Dakota, opens August 8 at the Center. The exhibit features poems by Mark Vinz and photographs by Wayne Gudmundson.

All three exhibits run through September. For information call (406) 755-5268 or write Hockaday Center for the Arts, Second Avenue E and Third Street, Kalispell, MT 59901.

■ Fredric L. Quivik is seeking correspondence or other information concerning Thomas Couch, Sue Bovey's grandfather and manager of the Boston and Montana (BN&M) Consolidated Copper and Silver Mining Company of Butte from 1887 to 1896. Couch helped persuade BN&M to build the copper smelter in Great Falls. If you have any Couch papers or information about this event in Great Falls history, please call (406) 766-2246 or write Fredric L. Quivik, P.O. Box 277, Froid, MT 59226. Information will be used for Quivik's dissertation on the history of technology.

■ Bannack State Park near Dillon, Montana, is presenting historical and recreational lectures and demonstrations this summer on topics such as mountain climbing, Sacagawea, geology, Lewis and Clark, and Dutch-oven cooking. Lectures are held Saturday evenings at 7:00 through September 2 at the old church in Bannack. Lectures are free, but there is a $3.00 vehicle fee to enter the park. For information call (406) 834-3413 or write Bannack State Park, 4200 Bannack Road, Dillon, MT 59725.

■ The eighth annual Cottonwood Festival will be held September 8–10 at the State Fairgrounds in Great Falls. The educational event offers affordable family activities that teach participants about their heritage by bringing history alive for all ages. More than forty craftspeople, musicians, and entertainers will participate in the festival sponsored by the Cascade County Historical Society. Events include demonstrations on basket weaving, toy making, and horse shoeing. Visitors will participate in activities such as making apple-head dolls, panning for gold, weaving, and milking. Other events include a preservation dinner, antique car show, country bike ride, and the Community Preservation Awards presentation. For information, send a SASE to Cottonwood Festival, Cascade County Historical Society, 1400 First Avenue North, Great Falls, MT 59401-3299 or call (406) 452-3462. Applications from craftspeople, artists, and entertainers who wish to participate must be received by August 1, 1995.

■ People attending summer reunions in Montana are sharing their stories with the Society's oral history program. By the end of September, oral history staff and volunteers will have interviewed former Montana Civilian Conservation Corp workers, residents of the Montana State Orphans Home (now the Children's Center), and members of Montana's One Hundred Sixty-third Infantry. If you have been involved with any of these groups and wish to be interviewed, please contact Jodie Foley, Society oral history program, at (406) 444-4775.

History Day Winners Compete in Nationals

Fifty-three students from eight Montana schools competed at the twelfth annual Montana History Day competition—"Conflict and Compromise in History"—held at the Historical Society and the Capitol in April. Winners in each category who received an average of eighty-four judging points attended the National History Day competition at the University of Maryland in College Park, June 10–15. They are:

Cayuse Prairie School, Kalispell—Historical Papers, first place, "Born to Be Free: The Life of Chief Joseph," by Lori Benson; second place, "Beef: The Beginning of an Industry," by Jamie Fosbery; Group Media, first place, "Persian Gulf War in Private," by Tiffany Snell, Elissa Byers, Gordy Zundel, and Mandy Adams; Group Project, first place, "Demersville," by Katerli Bounds and Fawn Helms; Group Performance, first place, "Abortion Conflict," by Sarah Hammer, Rebekah Lenoch, Cheryl Steenson, and Kristy Dana.

Montana City School—Individual Project, first place, "Hiroshima," by Colleen Ferriter; second place, "The Korean War," by Erin Hagmeier; Individual Performance, first place, "There Can Be No Compromise," by Chandra Obie.

Chief Joseph Middle School, Bozeman—Group Project, second place, "The Battle of the Little Big Horn," by Suzanne Heare, Erin Schlepp, Cyndi Nydam, and Shannon Somers.

Home School, Helena—Individual Performance, second place, "Helen Keller's Life," by Kasey O'Keefe.

Winners at the state level who did not receive sufficient judges' points to attend the national competition are: Montana City School, "The Parachute Dress," by Holle Ruffatto and Chris Kenison, and Chief Joseph Middle School, Bozeman, "A Taste of the Civil War," by Lindsey Schweitzer, Juliana Chase, Kathy Suta, and Nicole Wolf. Other schools competing were Forsyth Middle School, White Sulphur Springs Junior High School, and Trinity Lutheran School, Kalispell.

Montana History Day is sponsored by the Friends of the Society, Alberta Bair Trust, Ash Grove Cement Company, Helena Commercial Banks Association, and Montana Historical Society. State Representative Chase Hibbard and Society Trustee Anne Hibbard presented the awards and prizes.

Martha Kohl Joins Publications Staff As MHS Press Associate Editor

The Montana Historical Society Press is expanding its operations as a regional publisher of high-quality history books, guidebooks, and anthologies on Montana and the West. The Society has hired an associate editor for the MHS Press to work directly with publications program staff to increase both the number of books the Press publishes each year and the Press's visibility as a regional academic publisher.

To meet these responsibilities, the Society has hired Martha Kohl, formerly with the Missouri Historical Society and editor of Gateway Heritage, the Missouri Historical Society's quarterly history magazine. Kohl is a native of St. Louis and holds a master's degree in history from Washington University.

Previously, MHS Press has published two to three books each year, but plans call for that number to more than double in the future.

Several factors have made expansion of the Press possible, including an ever-growing interest in Montana history, renewed popularity of western history generally, and a steady growth of the Society's publications program.

Recent MHS Press titles have included: Calamity Jane; Keeping the Peace, Police Reform in Montana, 1889–1918; Montana Native Plants; Montana's Historical Highway Markers; The Great Sioux War, 1876–77; Guide to the Milwaukee Road; and The Last Best Place: A Montana Anthology. Upcoming books will include Perilous Passage: A Narrative of the Montana Gold Rush, 1862–1863, by Edwin R. Purple and edited by Kenneth N. Owens; A Historical Guide to Sites of the Great Sioux War, by Paul L. Hedren; The Charlie Russell Reader, edited by Brian W. Dippie; Red Cloud's Autobiography, edited by R. Eli Paul; and Journeys to the Land of Gold: The Bozeman Trail Diaries, edited by Susan Doyle.

Society Honors its Volunteers

More than seventy-six volunteers gave 4,012 hours of service to the Montana Historical Society in 1994. That equals two full-time staff members, Marcella Sherfy, Society education officer, told Friends of the Society at the volunteer recognition luncheon in April. Eighteen volunteers received awards during the luncheon.

Audrey Levitan, who has given three thousand hours since 1982, received the Director's Award. "Audrey's dedication to serving the Society, Montana's history, and the people of the state is humbling," Society Director Brian Cockhill said. "It illustrates the finest tradition of the Society and Montana."

Recipients of Departmental Assistance Volunteer Awards for volunteering more than three hundred hours are: Doris Hitt, Audrey Levitan, Mary Brewer, and Hariot Van Tine. Mary Hunt, Betty Jones, and Betty LaSalle received Docent Awards for guiding museum tours.

Jerry Williams and Jeannie Morrison received Muse Awards for organizing special events. Novice Awards for new members of the Friends were given to Arlene Carpenter and Anne Hibbard. Marylee McCrea received the Original Governor's Mansion Volunteer Award.

Honored for contributing more than one hundred hours were: Helga Baussus, Loretta Bible, Joan Bishop, Charlotte Thomas, and Joan Peters. Charlotte Thomas, Friends of the Society president, was recognized for assuming extra duties between the time former Education Officer Joan Haefer resigned and Marcella Sherfy was named to succeed her.

For information about joining the Friends, contact Sherfy at (406) 444-4794.

Summer Montana

(Continued from page 1)

rate article, historian James D. McLaird argues convincingly that, despite her recent portrayal in the television mini-series, "Buffalo Girls," Calamity Jane and Wild Bill Hickok never had a daughter, and that the Jean Hickok McCormick letters and diaries are fakes.

In addition, historian Ron Davis provides a biographical portrait of the famed western filmmaker John Ford. Davis's article offers an intriguing look at the events and people behind the making of such Westerns as Stagecoach, My Darling Clementine, and The Searchers.

Museum Tour Visitors Double Over Last Four Years

Although the numbers of tours and tour participants who visit the Historical Society's museum during the school year have increased steadily over the last four years, the increase is more noticeable during legislative years.

From September 1994 through May 1995, a legislative year, docents guided 298 groups totaling 5,699 adults and students through the museum. During the preceding year, 2,493 visitors participated in 160 tours. In 1992–1993, another legislative year, 3,265 visitors with 159 tours visited the museum, and 130 tours brought 2,297 students and adults to the Society's museum in 1991–1992.

"This is a 248 percent increase over the four years in the numbers of tour visitors coming to the Society's museum," Deanna Johnson, Society tour coordinator, said, "and more than a 200 percent increase between the 1993 and 1995 legislative years." Johnson attributes the increase, at least partially, to renewed interest in Montana history and government.

Historical Society guides also provided 328 tours of the Capitol building to nearly 7,000 students and adults during the 1995 legislative session. Smaller groups and individuals from around the world visit the museum as well as the Society's library and archives throughout the year for study and research.

James Castles Dies

Longtime Montana Historical Society supporter and Montana native James Castles died recently at his home in Portland, Oregon, at the age of seventy-nine.

As a friend of the Society and a trustee of the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington, Castles was instrumental in obtaining support for Society projects, including construction of the "Montana Homeland" exhibit in 1988.

Castles grew up in Superior. He is survived by his wife, Louise, who lives in Portland.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery"The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery |
| Ongoing Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

"Riders Under the Big Sky" Summer Series held Wednesday noon on Society front lawn unless otherwise noted.

| | |
|---|---|
| July 19 | "How Horsehair Hitching is Done," Lyndel Meikle, Grant-Kohrs Ranch National Historic Site, Deer Lodge |
| July 26 | "How to Watch a Rodeo Well," Rodger Nordahl and Helena area high school rodeo contestants |
| August 2 | "How to Make and Repair Wagon Wheels," Bob Morgan, Helena |
| August 9 | "How Saddles are Made," Bill Bartsch, Helena |
| August 9 | "Native Americans and Horses," Demonstration and Workshop, 10:00 A.M. to 8:00 P.M., Michael Terry, Deadwood, Oregon |
| August 16 | "How to Train Horses," Curt Pate, Helena (one block north of Society on 8th Avenue) |
| October 26–28 | Montana History Conference, Helena |

Summer and Autumn Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Memorial Day to Labor Day: Mon.–Fri., 8 A.M. to 6 P.M.; weekends and holidays, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. After Labor Day: Mon.–Fri., 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., Sat., 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed Sundays and holidays. To arrange guided museum tours, Mon.–Fri., call 444-4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Mon.–Fri., 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Mon.–Fri., 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Through Labor Day: Tues.–Sun., NOON to 5 P.M., tours on the hour, last tour at 4 P.M. Labor Day to December 31: Tues.–Sat., NOON to 5 P.M., tours on the hour, last tour at 4 P.M. |
| Capitol | Through September 15: tours on the hour, Mon.–Sun., 9 A.M. to 5 P.M., last tour at 4 P.M.; self-guided tours daily, 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. After September 15: self-guided tours daily 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. |

To arrange all tours and confirm hours call 444-4789

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan. The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

S
978.6
H6m
V. 33
No. 1

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 33 No. 1 • Spring 1995

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR 1 1995
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Coming in the Spring Montana

Author Norman Maclean spent more than twelve years researching and writing Young Men and Fire, his moving chronicle of Montana's fatal 1949 Mann Gulch wildfire. Although the book was thoroughly Maclean's creation, he had help—from a United States Forest Service employee and former smoke jumper named Laird Robinson.

Robinson provided Maclean with invaluable expertise and inspiration that the prize-winning author of A River Runs Through It readily acknowledged. Yet Robinson's role in the book, now being made into a major motion picture, has remained surprisingly obscure—until now.

In the Spring issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, Western Montana University English professor Alan Weltzien reveals the story behind the story in creation of Maclean's Young Men and Fire.

Also featured in the Spring issue will be John Taliaferro's insightful look at Charlie Russell, the man and the myth. Taliaferro has written the first-ever full-length biography of Montana's cowboy artist (forthcoming from Little, Brown later this year). His article in the Spring issue is based on his banquet address during the 1994 Montana History Conference held in Red Lodge last October.

In other articles, Suzanne Schrems considers the clash of Christian missionary work with tribal cultural resiliency among the Northern Cheyenne in the late nineteenth century, and William A. Dobak surveys the lighter side of frontier military duty in an article on the licit amusements of enlisted men stationed at western posts after the Civil War.

Will Rogers

MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

Will Rogers (left) and Charles Russell (right) sit on a stage set at Goldwyn Studios in Los Angeles in 1922.

Society Foundation Raises $115,000 to Buy Virginia City Collection

The Montana Historical Society Foundation has raised $115,000 for the purchase of archival material related to Virginia City and the early development of Montana. "We are deeply grateful to all of the Society's friends who made this possible," Ward Shanahan, president of the Society Foundation, said.

The collection of individual and business papers and documents, photographs, and other material from the Virginia City area from about 1865 through the early 1900s was gathered by Charles and Sue Bovey.

The fundraising campaign was launched early in 1994 to enable the Society to purchase the Bovey collection before it was offered for sale on the open market. Foundation board member and former Society trustee Helen Hornby of Livingston and longtime Society supporter and Foundation board member William Sherman of Portland, Oregon, opened the drive with major gifts. With these two donations in hand, Shanahan said, the Foundation was able to secure a $50,000 outright grant and an additional $17,500 matching grant from the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington.

Continued on page 3

Elinor F. Poindexter Dies in Connecticut

Elinor F. Poindexter, former New York art dealer and longtime friend of the Historical Society, died November 6, 1994, at her home in Easton, Connecticut.

During the 1960s and 1970s Mrs. Poindexter and her husband, George, who died in 1975, donated to the Society ninety-nine pieces of abstract art representing forty-one artists. George Poindexter grew up in Dillon, Montana.

Elinor Poindexter was born in Montreal, Canada, but grew up on Staten Island, New York. She is survived by a son, two daughters, and eight grandchildren.

Montana History Day Competition Set

"Conflict and Compromise in History" is the theme for the 1995 Montana History Day scheduled for Saturday, April 29, in Helena. Students from middle and high schools throughout the state will present papers, projects, performances, and media presentations based on research in primary sources dealing with the year's theme. State winners have the opportunity to compete in National History Day at the University of Maryland in June.

Montana History Day sessions will be held in the Society building and in the Rotunda and Old Supreme Court chambers in the state Capitol directly across the street from the Society.

Montana History Day, part of the national program, is sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and endorsed by the State Office of Public Instruction. For more information call Marcella Sherfy, Society education specialist, 444–4794.

■ Five artists share their views of the western landscape in the C. M. Russell Museum exhibit, "The Landscape and Closer Views," on display through July 9. Artists included in this exhibit are Cyrus Afsary, Loren Entz, Jim Morgan, Ned Mueller, and Steve Seltzer. For information write C. M. Russell Museum, 400 13th Street North, Great Falls, MT 59401–1498, or call (406) 727–8787.

■ The Holter Museum of Art will present two new exhibitions from May 19 to June 24, 1995. The Sherman Gallery will feature "Mini-treasures: 2nd Annual Miniature Works of Western Art and Auction," representing over fifty artists using paintings, prints, and sculpture on a miniature scale. An auction will be held on June 24 at 7:30 P.M. at the Holter Museum of Art in conjunction with this exhibit. The Bair Gallery will host "Sisters of the Earth: Contemporary Native American Ceramics," representing six artists using native cultures and beliefs to create contemporary figurative works to reflect their heritage, personal experiences, and aesthetic concerns. A one-day ceramic workshop will be held on May 20 in conjunction with "Sisters of the Earth." For information contact the Holter Museum of Art, 12 E. Lawrence, Helena, MT 59601, or call (406) 442–6400.

■ The Montana Archaeological Society (MAS) and Klepetko Chapter of the Society for Industrial Archaeology (SIA) will hold a joint meeting on May 11–13, 1995, at the Kuatuqnuk Resort on Flathead Lake in Polson. Topics include dumps at fire lookouts, 1930s mining in southwestern Montana, and a smelter workers' shantytown at Black Eagle. For information write to Mitzi Rossillon, Renewable Technologies, Inc., 511 Metals Blvd., Butte, MT 59701.

■ The Wade Gallery in Livingston announces the fifth annual Earth Day Exhibition, "A Celebration of the Earth." The show opens Friday, April 21. For information contact Kelly Wade, The Wade Gallery, 116 N. Main Street, Livingston, MT 59047, or call (406) 222–0404.

Montana History News?

The Montana Post would like to receive press releases from other Montana organizations. We report events and activities related to Montana history from across the state. The Post is quarterly and appears in April, June, September, and December. Send your information to Montana Post, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620–1201.

Books About Horses, Riders, and Art

A variety of books that complement the museum exhibits, "Riders Under the Big Sky" and "The Horse in Art," are available in the Montana Historical Society Museum Store. Among the store's offerings are:

Desert Dreams: The Art and Life of Maynard Dixon by Donald J. Hagerty, $65.00 (Dixon's Men and Mountains oil painting was featured on the cover of the Winter 1995 Montana The Magazine of Western History)

What the Cow Said to the Calf: Stories and Sketches by Ballie Buck, a Legendary Indian Cowboy by Helen Parsons Neilson, $17.95

Spirit Horse of the Rockies by Susan R. Nardinger, $9.95

Mr. Rodeo: The Big Bronc Years of Leo Cremer by Patrick Dawson, $15.95

Wind on the Buffalo Grass: Native American Artist-Historians (ledger art) edited by Leslie Tillett, $18.95

Cowboy Gear: A Photographic Portrayal of the Early Cowboys and Their Equipment by David R. Stoecklein, $60.00

Songs of the Wild West, commentary by Alan Axelrod, arrangements by Dan Fox, $19.95

The Cutting Horse by Patrick W. Steenberge, Don Weller, Robert H. Williams, and Randy Witte, photographed by Don Weller, $29.95

Saddles by Russel H. Beatie, $65.00

The Museum Store offers a comprehensive collection of western history and literature, notecards, and gift items for all ages. If you wish to receive a catalog or want to place an order, please call 1–800–243–9900.

■ Custer Battlefield Historical & Museum Association, Inc. will host its ninth annual history seminar June 23 at Hardin Middle School auditorium. Research papers and discussions will be presented on the Battle of the Little Bighorn and its participants. Admission is free. The CBHMA's sixteenth annual field trip will visit Sitting Bull's village site and Major Marcus A. Reno's crossing to the bluffs. A three-day bus tour from Great Falls to the Little Bighorn will trace Colonel John Gibbon's March of the Montana Column. The tour will visit the Montana Historical Society. For information call (406) 665–2060.

■ The thirtieth annual Northern Great Plains History Conference will be held September 27–30 at the Victoria Inn in Brandon, Manitoba. The conference, attracting historians in all fields of research, will focus on rural history. The keynote speaker is John Thompson of Duke University. For information contact Hans W. Burmeister, Department of History, Brandon University, Brandon, MB, Canada R7A 6A9, or call (204) 727–9718.

■ Manuscripts are requested on folk healers, faith healers, magnetic healers, herbalists, patent medicine promotors, medicine showmen and women, and other inventive and imaginative medical practitioners, who lived and practiced in the West between 1830 and 1930 for the book Mystic Healers and Medicine Shows. Manuscripts should be 500 to 3,000 words, with photographs or illustrations included. Send manuscripts to: Gene Fowler, 3101 Dancy Street, Austin, TX 78722, or call (512) 322–0602.

■ The American Heritage Center will sponsor its fourth annual history conference on the University of Wyoming campus September 21–23, 1995. The conference will focus on "Blacks in the West: Image and Reality." For information write Dr. Michael J. Devine, Director, American Heritage Center, P.O. Box 3924, Laramie, WY 82071–3924, or call (307) 766–4114.

■ In observation of the fiftieth anniversary of the end of the Second World War, Montana State University-Bozeman will host a conference September 16, 1995, on Montana during the war. The university seeks proposals for papers on all aspects of Montana life during World War II. A vita or brief biographical statement and the proposal should be mailed by April 30 to Susan Rhoades Neel, Department of History and Philosophy, Montana State University, Bozeman, MT 59717.

■ The Agricultural History Society is seeking members who are interested in research and publications on the history of agriculture. Membership is open to individuals and institutions. For information write Lowell Dyson, Executive Secretary Treasurer, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Room 928, 1301 New York Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20005–4788.

■ Richard Zolla is seeking historical information about Pipestone Pass and the surrounding region in Montana for a book he is writing. If you have any information about this historically significant area between Butte and Whitehall, contact Richard Zolla, 1138 Dorset Lane, Costa Mesa, CA 92626.

Award Competition Opens For Student Manuscripts

Montana The Magazine of Western History and the Montana Historical Society announce the 1995 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award. The award, named in honor of two of Montana's most influential and admired history professors, will be given to the best article-length manuscript written by an undergraduate or graduate student on a Montana or western history topic.

Students must be enrolled in a college or university and must be sponsored by a faculty member from their institution.

Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 21, 1995. For application information, write Burlingame–Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620–1201.

Historical Society Honors Staff for State Service

Ten Historical Society staff were honored recently for their years of service to the state. "It is important to remember," Society Director Brian Cockhill said as he gave each person a service pin, "there is no substitute for experience, knowledge, and dedication, especially when it comes to Montana history and research."

Staff honored for fifteen years of service are: Dave Walter, research historian; Rebecca Kohl, library technician; and Diana Wilkison, preservation librarian. Ten-year pins were given to Sharon McCabe, central services manager; Tammy Ryan and Barbara Lien, business manager and assistant editor, respectively, for Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Charles Rankin, director of publications; Herbert Dawson, deputy historic preservation officer and historical architect; Jennifer Bottomly, museum assistant; and Lea Solberg, library assistant, received five-year recognition pins.

Marcella Sherfy Is Appointed Society's New Museum Education Specialist

Marcella Sherfy, who has served as program manager for the Society's Historic Preservation Program since 1980 and as the State Historic Preservation Officer since 1984, became the Society's education specialist in March.

The education office is in the Society's Museum Program and is responsible for adult public education programs and workshops in Helena and around the state; the annual Montana History Conference; children's programs; educational projects planned cooperatively with Montana public schools; and Friends of the Society, the Historical Society's volunteer support group. Tours of the Society building, the state Capitol, and the Original Governor's Mansion also are coordinated by the education office.

Governor Marc Racicot has appointed State Archaeologist Mark Baumler to serve as interim State Historic Preservation Officer. Baumler also will serve as program manager of the Historic Preservation Office until the Society selects a permanent replacement for Sherfy.

Baumler has been on the Society staff since 1988 and most recently has been principal investigator for the archaeological inventory on the Flying D Ranch southwest of Bozeman.

Marcella Sherfy replaces Joan Haefer, who resigned as the museum's education specialist and moved to Kalispell in December.

Fundraising Goal Met

Continued from page 1

Building from that base, the goal was met with contributions from individual Society supporters throughout Montana as well as from other states and from corporate and organization donors D. A. Davidson, Montana Power Company, General Mills, and the Liz Claiborne/Art Ortenberg Foundation.

Society Director Brian Cockhill described the collection as a "great addition to our archives. This is a collection that we could not let slip by. The Society very much appreciates the efforts of the Foundation and all those who contributed."

Do You Have Ideas for Conference Sessions?

The twenty-second annual Montana History Conference will be held in Helena from Thursday through Saturday, October 26, 27, and 28. Conference sessions will focus on the broad themes of Montana's cultural treasures and the state's political history.

The Society welcomes your suggestions, proposals, and recommendations for specific topics that interest you, speakers you would like to hear, as well as papers, panels, and other presentations—including Montana films—that could be incorporated into the conference program.

Please send your recommendations by May 15 to Marcella Sherfy, Montana Historial Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, MT 59620–1201.

Summer Tours Planned

Two special Montana tours for history enthusiasts are planned for this summer. The tours, offered by the Montana Historical Society Foundation, are designed to be fun as well as educational.

The first tour, from July 19–23, visits ghost towns in Montana's gold mining country with stops in Bannack as well as other mining camps and one day in Yellowstone National Park. Local historians will discuss the various locations as the tour progresses.

The second tour begins September 8 and for six days retraces the Lewis and Clark Expedition through western Montana. Participants will visit the Missouri River headwaters, watch a black powder demonstration, and float the Missouri River between Carter and Fort Benton. A Montana historian will accompany the group.

For more information write to the Montana Historical Society Foundation, P.O. Box 863, Helena, MT 59624.

Funding Compromises Capitol Restoration

The Montana Preservation Alliance, of which the Montana Historical Society is a member, is encouraging the state legislature to fully fund Capitol renovation. The twenty million dollar project developed by the Capitol Restoration Commission and the Department of Administration is part of the governor's long-range building program to preserve and maintain state buildings.

As of this writing the legislature's joint Long-Range Building Subcommittee has recommended funding only basic infrastructure repairs and no historical restoration.

The governor's proposed long-range program would restore the Capitol to a functional, energy efficient condition for its use as the seat of Montana government and as a popular tourist stop.

People interested in maintaining the historical integrity of the Capitol are urged to contact the Director's Office, Department of Administration, P.O. Box 200101, Helena, Montana 59620–0101.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery |
| | "The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery |
| Ongoing | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| April 29 | "Conflict and Compromise," Montana History Day competition, Montana Historical Society and Montana State Capitol |
| May 24 | Friends of the Society annual field trip to Great Falls, Fort Benton, and Loma |
| June 10 | "Conflict and Compromise," National History Day, College Park, Maryland |
| | Friends of the Society monthly meetings and programs, Haynes Auditorium, 10 A.M. Open to the public. Speakers are: |
| April 19 | Sally Garrett Dingley, author of numerous Harlequin Romances, "Creating Valid Fiction from Montana's Past" |
| May 17 | Stu Conner, past president of the MHS Board of Trustees, "The Horse in Rock Art" |

Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | April 1 to Memorial Day: Monday—Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5. Closed Sundays and holidays. Memorial Day to Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8–6, Weekends and holidays, 9–5. To arrange guided museum tours, Monday—Friday, call 444–4789. |
| Library/ Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. Closed weekends and holidays. |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | April 1 to Memorial Day: Tuesday—Saturday, 12–5, tours on the hour, last tour beginning at 4. May 30 to Labor Day: Tuesday—Sunday, 12–5, tours begin on the hour, last tour beginning at 4. To arrange guided group tours call, 444–4789. |
| Capitol | April 1 to Memorial Day: self-guided tours daily 8–6. May 30 to Labor Day: tours begin on the hour, Monday—Saturday, 10–5, last tour beginning at 4; Sunday, 11–4, last tour beginning at 3. To arrange large group tours, call 444–4789. |

Author Autographs Book

Charles M. Russell
RICK STEWART

MHS Photograph Archives, Helena

Although the general public may be more familiar with Charles M. Russell's paintings, he was equally adept as a sculptor. "By the time he gained a measure of fame as a painter of the American West, many of his contemporaries considered him more gifted as a sculptor," Rick Stewart writes in his book, Charles M. Russell, Sculptor.

Stewart's book, published in 1994 by the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth, Texas, and Abrams of New York City, is the only study of the complete works of sculpture by Russell. Stewart, curator of western painting and sculpture at the Amon Carter, was a guest lecturer in March at the Montana Historical Society, where he discussed Russell's work and autographed copies of his book (above).

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.32
NO.4

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 32 No. 4 • Winter 1994

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
FEB 02 1995
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Two New Society Exhibits Portray Northern Plains Horse Culture

Two exhibits examining the impact of horses on North America through portrayals of the relationship between people and horses, especially in Montana, open at the Montana Historical Society on January 24. The exhibits, "Riders Under the Big Sky" and "The Horse in Art," will remain in the museum's galleries through January 1996.

Fossil remains of an eohippus, the fifteen-inch ancestor of present-day horses that disappeared from North America some ten thousand years ago, introduces "Riders Under the Big Sky." The three-dimensional exhibit features horses as carriers of people from early native populations through today's inhabitants of the region. The exhibit briefly traces how horses spread throughout North America after their return to the continent on Columbus's second voyage to the New World in 1493.

Most of the exhibit artifacts focus on the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries. Riding gear and about forty-five saddles of different types — Indian, military, stock, rodeo, sidesaddle, racing, and English — will be displayed throughout the building.

A life-sized replica of Spokane, the only Montana horse to win the Kentucky

Continued on page 4

N. A. Forsyth, Photographer

Horse and rider display Indian beadwork and other finery at the Crow Indian Fair on the Crow Reservation about 1910

Environment, Gambling, And Indian Cowboys In Montana's Winter Issue

When Warren Nelson turned down a chance at Butte politics in 1936 to continue a seemingly clandestine career in gambling, little did he know he would become one of the key figures in Nevada's modern gaming industry. But such was the case, and if background counts for anything, then Nevada has Montana to thank, for Nelson learned much of what he would need to know in Nevada from his years operating keno and other games in the bars and back rooms of Great Falls and Butte.

Warren Nelson's early days in 1920s and 1930s Montana are traced in an article for the Winter issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History. The story, written by R. T. King, is based on Nelson's oral history as told to the Nevada Oral History Program at Reno, which King directs.

Also for the Winter issue, historian Mark W. T. Harvey considers the rise of the modern wilderness preservation movement in an article describing the battle over construction of Echo Park Dam in Dinosaur National Park. The battle

Continued on page 5

Award Winners Honored At Society's History Conference

Montana rancher and Society Trustee William R. Mackay, Sr., received the 1994 Montana Historical Society Trustees Award at the Twenty-First Annual Montana History Conference in Red Lodge in October. Recipients of the annual award are chosen for their contributions to preserving and promoting Montana history.

Mackay, who runs the Lazy E. L. Ranch at Roscoe—a family operation since 1901—was first appointed to the Board of Trustees in 1953. In 1981 and 1982 he served as president of the board. Mackay represented Carbon County in the Montana Legislature, first as a representative and

Continued on page 6

Funds Raised for Bovey Collection

Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill has launched a major fund raising campaign to pay for the Bovey archival collection acquired by the Society last summer. The collection consists of ledgers, bank records, personal papers, mining stock certificates, diaries, and other documents related to Virginia City from the 1860s into the 1900s.

These documents were ready for sale to private collectors when the Montana Historical Society offered $115,000 to Bovey Restorations for the collection valued at $128,000.

The M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington, has given the Montana Historical Society Foundation an outright grant of $50,000 towards the acquisition cost and has offered a $17,500 challenge grant that must be matched with other contributions.

When the $17,500 match is met and added to the funds already raised by the Foundation, the full acquisition cost will have been reached.

"The extensive collection dating to the earliest days of Virginia City and the Montana Territory is an extremely important historical record," Society Director Cockhill said. "I would ask that all those who care about Montana history support the fund drive."

For information on how to contribute, call (406) 444-4706.

Society Collections Grow with a Variety of Donations in 1994

The Montana Historical Society received more than three hundred donations from individuals, organizations, and businesses in 1994. The donations consist of books; library materials; photographs; personal and business papers; organization and government archival records; and museum artifacts such as a complete wedding outfit from 1906, membership badge from the Mount Helena Miners Union, Local 138, and an autographed snare drum used during John Denver's 1991 Christmas television special.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals: Robert Clark, library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, photograph archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, museum (444-4710).

Fern Aagaard
Mr. & Mrs. Harry Achamire
Jane Addy
American Association of University Women, Glendive Branch
American Association of University Women, Montana Division
American Heritage Center
American Historical Association
Leroy "Andy" Anderson
Archie Bray Foundation
Arizona Historical Society
Dianne Armstrong
Ellen Arthur
Association of Western State Engineers
Attic Archaeology
Jon Axline
Tim Babcock
Loren Bahls
Rachael Balyeat
Bancserve, Inc.
Esther Barnhart
John Barrett
Mary & Donald L. Beaudette
Donald W. Becklin
Umberto Benedetti
Leo A. Benolken
Beveridge Family
Richard Boyd
Bill Brandt
Sylvia & Ottis Bryan
John J. Burke
Paul L. Burke
John T. Cadby
Carroll College Corrette Library
Morris Camrud
Coral Charbonneau
Nancy Christenson
City of Helena—Planners Office
Helen M. Clark
John Clouse
Brian Cockhill
Linda Cockhill
Codington County Historical Society
Rose Colby
Julie L. Coleman
Stuart Conner
Bryan Corbett
Marion C. Covington Estate
Scott & Kathleen Crichton
Louise Cross
Pat Kennedy Crump
Dacotah Prairie Museum
Vicki Dagnall
Doris Davies
Herb Dawson
Bessie R. Day
Jan DeLaney
David M. Delo
Sheila Devitte
Imo C. Dougherty in memory of Ed Dougherty
Elizabeth C. Eastwood
Esther Egan Estate
Willis J. Ehlert
Gary Eichorn
Jane English
Wayne Eveland
Jerold & Ruth Faasen
Judith Kay Fabry
Mrs. Charles (Eva) Farrington
Darlene Fassler
Lewis K. Ferguson
Mary Burke Ferguson
First United Bank of Sidney
Jennifer White Fischer
Ron Fischer
Flathead Public Library
Nancy Marks Foote
Lynn Fredlund
GCM Services
Mrs. Roger Gardner
Vic Garrett
Robert H. Gattiss
René J. Gerrod
Gough, Shanahan, Johnson & Waterman
William T. Gover
Mary Maddox Grandell
Iris McKinney Gray
Barbara Grinder
Charlene M. Grover
Nadine H. Hablit
Joan Haefer
Antoinette R. Hagener
Sandra Hale
Dorie Hall
Arthur Hamerl
H. Duane Hampton
Beverly B. L. Hanson
Rene Anne Harbell
Robert C. Harsh
Dick Haskins
Leona Lampi Hassen
Hastings Public Library
Mable O. Haynes
Betty Hilger, Viola Hilger Nelson, and Hallie Hilger Alexander in memory of Joseph G. Hilger
Don M. Hill
Historic Heartland Assoc., Inc.
Bob Hoene
Gary & Mary Beth Hoff
Don Holmstead
Dennis Homer
Claude R. Hookham
Al Hooper
Lorman L. Hoopes
Idaho State Historical Society Library and Archives
Indigena Fine Art Publishers, Ltd.
I. F. (Bud) Iwen
Betty Jackson
Elizabeth Ford Jackson
Sue Jackson
Doryce & James Jensen
Roger J. Jensen
Joyce Jenson
Norman R. Jones
Roderick L. Jones
Rita Kauneckas
Ver Keljik
David A. Kingma
June Kingead
Robert H. Kleinschmidt
James D. Koster
Richard M. Koster
O. M. Kramer
Labor Archives and Research Center
Kirby Lambert
Juanita Larson
Swen A. Larson
League of Women Voters of Montana
Jack & Therese Leary
Susan Carol Ledford
Leon LeMieux
David Leonard
Sally J. Letchworth
Helen C. Lewis
Marilyn Lewis
Lewis and Clark County District Court
Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation, Inc.
Lewistown Heritage Committee
Helen Lindy
Bill Lindsay
M. O. Lockrem in memory of O. E. Lockrem
Marty Lord
Mitchell Lovely
Myrna Loy Estate
Martin Lustgraaf
Dr. Everett L. Lynn
Robert Lyon
R. K. (Bob) MacDonald
Allan S. MacKenzie
Shirley & Bert Madsen
Aletha Markusen
Dale Martin
Sister Mary Lenore Martin
Hank Mathiason
J. Norman & Lucille Matthews Family
Mr. & Mrs. Milan C. McDowell
McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc.
Kathy McKay
Donald C. McKenna
Dorothy McLaughlin
Hugh F. McNamer
Harriett Meloy
Peter Meloy
Vickie Menard
Merck & Co.
Jerry Metcalf
Milk River Genealogical Society
Victor Miller
Harold Milot
Minnesota Historical Society
Montana Bankers Association
Montana Big Sky Pow Wow Committee
Montana Broadcasters Association
Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife & Parks
Montana Department of Revenue
Montana NARAL
Montana Nurses Association
Montana School of Mines
Robert F. & Gen Morgan
Kim Curry Morrison
Lory Morrow
Cathy Mudd
George Mueller
Tom Mulvaney
Hope Mummer

Mary Munger
Museums Association of Montana
Lillian Bryson Myles
National Association of Government Archives & Records Administration
National Geographic Society
Susan Near
Donald F. Nell
Pat Nelson
Howard Ness
George & Dortha M. Neuberg
Earlene Nevins
Laura Nicholson
Francis L. Niven
Claude E. Norcross
Northern Rockies Action Group
Viola O'Connor
Ohboy, Inc.
Don Ohman, Sr.
Fern Olson
Flora Jean Olsson
Jane O'Neill
Organization of American Historians
Gene Francis Ostram
Kathryn Otto
Dr. Frits Pannekoek
Julia B. Parisel
Paulette K. Parpart
Sunny Peters
Thomas J. Peters
Donna M. Peterson
Martin L. Peterson
Tim Petrick
Angelo Petroni
Johanna Marie Pfund
William R. Piatt
Doris B. Platts
James & Shirley Poage
Forrest Poe
Vern Pomeroy
Poplar Museum
Athna May Porter
Powell County Genealogy Society
Thomas C. Power
Putting People First
Reimert Thorolf Ranenholt
Bill Reed
Jean H. Reed
Margaret Reess Estate
Barbara K. Robins
Dick Rogers
Sarah Rollins
Howard W. Ross Family
Mary Lou Skinner Ross
Louisa Rothfus
Royal Teton Ranch News
Rupert's Land Research Center
St. John's Episcopal Church, Bellevue
Sanders Family
John E. Schaufelberger
Lloyd Scholer
Joe Schwartz
Anne Seagraves
Bill Sharp
Nina Shengold
James Sherow
Brock V. Silversides
Julia Smith
Thompson R. Smith
Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of Montana
Roberta Beed Sollid
Iona May Ingram Sowa
Janet Sperry
Connie Staudohar
Jim Steffeck
Francis D. Stillman
Keith Stoytyn
Robert F. Swanberg
O. J. Taylor
Temple Beth Aaron, Billings
Erwin Thompson
Richard Thoroughman
Tobacco Valley Photo/Graphics
Betty Townsend
Charlotte Trolinger
Margaret Tuttle
George H. Tweney
United States:
  Bureau of Reclamation, Billings
  Department of Agriculture
  Department of the Interior
  District Court
  Forest Service
  National Park Service
United States Forest Service Northern Rocky Mountain Retiree Association
University of Montana
Upper Musselshell Historical Society
Freda VanDuzer Trust
Paul Verdon
Edrie Vinson
Mark Wagenveld
Giles Walker
Leroy Walker
Merri Walsh
Vernon G. Walters
Margaret Warden
Bea Wardlaw Estate
Candy Waugaman
Wilbur Werner
Pauline Westermeyer Estate
Wade C. Wightman
Albert James Willett, Jr.
Gerald L. Williams
Lesley Wischmann
Charlotte Woodrow
Yellowstone Genealogy Forum
Edward Young
Phyllis Ziemer

BULLETIN BOARD

■ The American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming is offering travel grants of up to $500 each to be used by scholars during 1995. The grants provide support for travel, food, and lodging to carry out research using the American Heritage Center's collections. Subject areas include: Wyoming, the American West, transportation, conservation, water resources, and the performing arts. Deadline for applications is April 15, 1995. For information contact Director, American Heritage Center, University of Wyoming, P.O. Box 3924, Laramie, WY 82071–3924.

■ Proposals for papers or sessions in any area of history are sought by Brandon University for the 30th Northern Great Plains History Conference at the Victoria Inn in Brandon, Manitoba, on September 27–30, 1995. Send a one–page prospectus and brief vita by March 31, 1995, to Hans Burmeister, Department of History, Brandon University, Brandon, Manitoba, Canada R7A 6A9, call (204) 727–9718, fax (204) 726–0473, or E-mail to History@BrandonU.ca.

■ The 13th annual Buffalo Bill Historical Center's Cowboy Songs and Range Ballads program is scheduled April 7–9, 1995, in Cody, Wyoming. The event will feature evening concerts, daytime music performances, discussion sessions, films, and workshops. This year's symposium on April 7 will feature cowgirls and their contributions as performers and songwriters to western history and music. The event is designed to preserve the traditional cowboy music of the range created in the late nineteenth century. For information, contact Lillian Turner, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, P.O. Box 1000, Cody, WY 82414, or call (307) 587–4771, ext. 248.

■ The C. M. Russell Auction of Original Western Art is scheduled for March 15–18, 1995. An annual event in Great Falls, Montana, the sale is one of the world's largest auctions of western art. Proceeds from the auction will be used to benefit the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. For information about the auction or tickets, write GFAF, P.O. Box 634, Great Falls, MT 59403, call 1–800–803–3351, or fax (406) 453–1128.

■ The 1995 National Genealogical Society Conference in the States will be held May 3–6, 1995, in San Diego. For information write to 1995 NGS Conference in the States, 4527 17th Street, North, Arlington, VA 22207–2399.

What Is Happening In Montana History?

The Montana Post would like to receive press releases from other Montana organizations. We report events and activities related to Montana history from across the state. The Post is quarterly and appears in March, June, September, and December. Send your information to Montana Post, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620–1201.

Continued on page 4

Two New Society Exhibits

(Continued from page 1)

L. A. Huffman

Sunburned face, clothes, and gear attest to the working life of this cowboy relaxing astride his horse.

Derby, will be featured wearing the silk blanket embroidered with gold that residents of Spokane, Washington, purchased for five thousand dollars in 1889 for their equine namesake. Spokane, winner of the 1889 derby, was owned by Noah Armstrong of Twin Bridges.

The importance of saddle makers to turn-of-the-century Montana is documented, and the exhibit ends showing the eventual replacement of horses with trains and automobiles.

The companion exhibit, “The Horse in Art,” includes pieces ranging from European fine art to Native American beadwork to a Stetson hat decorated with horses painted by Montana artist O. C. Seltzer. The two-dimensional exhibit reflects on horses as vehicles of conquest and settlement, beasts of burden, objects of recreation and companionship, and cultural symbols. Art pieces from the Society's collections include oils, watercolors, pen-and-ink drawings, sculptures, and beadwork.

The Society invites the public to attend the opening of the exhibits on January 24 from 7:30 P.M. to 9:00 P.M. at the Society. Entertainment and refreshments will be provided.

A legislative open house from 2:00 P.M. to 6:00 P.M. will precede the opening. Legislators attending the 1995 session are invited to tour the Society's facilities during the afternoon and attend the exhibits opening that evening.

William Kittredge, Editorial Board Member, Receives Humanities Award

University of Montana English Professor William Kittredge is one of five Americans who received the 1994 Charles Frankel Prize in the Humanities as part of National Arts and Humanities Month. Kittredge, a member of Montana The Magazine of Western History's editorial board, received the award from President Bill Clinton in a ceremony on the south lawn of the White House on October 14.

A University of Montana faculty member since 1969 and former director of the university's creative writing program, Kittredge has published fifteen books that range from personal essays to Western novels. His works include the memoir Hole in the Sky, which won the PEN West Award for the best nonfiction book of 1992; an essay collection Owning It All; and two short story collections We Are Not in This Together and The Van Gogh Field and Other Stories.

With Annick Smith he co-edited Th[illegible] Last Best Place, published by the Montana Historical Society, and has published dozens of stories and essays in anthologies and national magazines including Time, Atlantic Monthly, Esquire, and Rolling Stone. His screenwriting credits include the film “Heartland” and the screen adaptation of Norman Maclean's A River Runs Through It.

BULLETIN BOARD

■ The Friends of the Fort Union Trading Post and the National Park Service announce a $1,000 Fort Union Fellowship for 1995. The annual fellowship supports a qualified researcher wishing to explore and produce an article or monograph on an aspect of Fort Union Trading Post history. The recipient of the award must be in residence at Fort Union for a minimum of one week in 1995, preferably during the summer. Applications must be postmarked no later than February 1, 1995, with the award winner being announced no later than March 1, 1995. For additional information contact Paul Hedren, Chair, Fort Union Fellowship Committee, Fort Union Trading Post NHS, RR 3 Box 71, Williston, ND 58801, or call (701) 572–9083.

■ The Montana Arts Council and the Montana Historical Society are co-sponsoring an oral history workshop for the Carbon County Historical Society in Red Lodge on February 17, 1995. The workshop will be conducted by Jodie Foley, an archivist and the oral history contact person at the Montana Historical Society, and Francesca McLean, state folklorist, Montana Arts Council. Topics include oral interviewing techniques and the role of folklore in local oral history. For registration information contact Jo Gruendemann, Carbon County Historical Society, P. O. Box 1570, Red Lodge, MT 59068, or call (406) 445–2375.

■ The Buffalo Bill Historical Center of Cody, Wyoming, is seeking presentations for its seminar on “Art of the Plains—Voices of the Present” to be held September 29– October 1, 1995. Presentations will focus on the contemporary art of the Plains Indian people, including its evolution and place within the contexts of cultures, economies, and current issues.

Experts from tribal communities, historians, art historians and critics, anthropologists, artists, and other interested persons are invited to submit a 450-word proposal or completed paper and abbreviated resume by April 10, 1995. Suggested topics for presentation include the works of artists in traditional and non-traditional media, historical development of contemporary artwork, art as political commentary, the influence of the market, and artistic expression in cultural celebrations. Send proposals or queries to Lillian Turner, Public Programs Coordinator, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, P.O. Box 1000, Cody, WY 82414, or call (307) 587–4771, ext. 248.

Montana Historian and Society Member, Merrill G. Burlingame, Dies in Bozeman

Montana historian Merrill G. Burlingame died November 4, 1994, at the Gallatin County Rest Home in Bozeman at the age of ninety-three. Professor Burlingame was a member of the editorial board for Montana The Magazine of Western History from the board's inception in 1950 until 1985 and a member of the Society's Board of Trustees from 1949–1976. He served as president of the board from 1967–1969.

A member of the history faculty at Montana State University in Bozeman from 1929 until his retirement in 1967, Burlingame was chairman of the department from 1932 to 1965. He was born in Boone, Iowa, on March 13, 1901, and attended the University of Iowa, where he earned bachelor's, master's, and doctorate degrees.

Merrill G. Burlingame

Among his many publications are: John M. Bozeman, Montana Pathfinder, The Montana Frontier, A History of Montana State University, Gallatin County's Heritage, and A History of Montana, written with K. Ross Toole, former Society director and University of Montana history professor. In 1982 the Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History honored the two historians by creating the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award presented each year for the best article-length manuscript written by a student on Montana or western history.

In addition to his work with the Montana Historical Society, Burlingame was active in the Museum of the Rockies from its beginning in 1953, was a founding member of the Gallatin County Historical Society and Pioneer Museum and of the Montana Institute of the Arts, and served on the Governor's Advisory Council on Historic Sites and Antiquities.

Professor Burlingame was preceded in death by his wife and professional partner, Virginia Struble Burlingame, who died in 1993. He is survived by a son, Ray, of Amarillo, Texas.

Two 1995 Bradley Fellowships Offered For Historical Research In Society's Collections

The Society once again is offering two James H. Bradley Fellowships for the summer of 1995 for research at the Montana Historical Society. For the last two years, interest earnings from the endowment that funds the fellowships had only been enough to underwrite a single award.

Two $2,500 fellowships will be awarded. One fellowship is restricted to assisting a graduate student pursuing a master's thesis or doctoral dissertation in history, American studies, or some related field, while the second fellowship is open to applicants other than graduate students. Competition is not restricted to professional historians, but applicants must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write publishable historical articles.

For both awards, a person must be able to spend at least four weeks in Helena pursuing research in the Society's collections between June and November 1995. Recipients also agree to submit an article based on the research for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History within a year after the completion of research.

Deadline for applications is March 31, 1995. For further information, write Bradley Fellowship Committee, Montana Historical Society, P. O. Box 201201, Helena, Montana 59620-1201.

Christmas Home Tour Raises Funds For Original Governor's Mansion

More than six hundred people participated in the Fourteenth Annual Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour on December 4, 1994, in Helena. Fifty volunteers from the community assisted with the tour that raised about two thousand dollars this year. Proceeds from the tour, sponsored each year by the Original Governor's Mansion Board, helps fund the restoration projects at the Original Governor's Mansion, which is administered by the Montana Historical Society.

As in past years the highlight of the tour was the mansion built in 1888 that served until 1959 as home for Montana's governors.

Also on the tour was a home built in 1885 for Territorial Governor Samuel T. Hauser and presently owned by former Governor Tim and Betty Babcock; the 1993 high-tech, energy efficient home of Carol and Roger Novotne; the 1954 Alve and Charlotte Thomas home, adorned with stained glass pieces made by Charlotte Thomas; and the Browning, Kaleczyc, Berry & Hoven law office in the Goodkind Block, built in 1884 and one of the last remaining examples in Helena of early western commercial architecture.

Environment, Gambling, And Indian Cowboys

(Continued from page 1)

raged for a decade before the project was defeated in 1955. Along the way, disparate wilderness forces coalesced into an effective political force, and their fight against Echo Park Dam set the pattern for conflict that has persisted over development of western natural resources ever since.

In addition, University of Montana history professor Dan Flores considers the special relationship of environment and history as played out in northern New Mexico, Utah, and Montana and how the human response in these areas has affected some of the nation's most fragile property—the high country of the Rocky Mountain West.

Historian Peter Iverson, meanwhile, traces the evolution of Native American cattle ranching in the West as a means for cultural as well as economic survival and notes the irony of the modern-day parallel between Indian and non-Indian ranchers who have become hardpressed by a nation overwhelmingly preoccupied with urban rather than rural concerns.

Finally, Alan Weltzien, English professor at Western Montana University at Dillon, looks at the partner and collaborator Norman Maclean had in writing Young Men and Fire, Maclean's haunting story of Montana's tragic Mann Gulch fire of 1949.

Award Winners

(Continued from page 1)

later as a senator for twenty-two years; has been a director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City; and has been a long-time active member of the Carbon County Historical Society. Mackay's parents, Malcolm and Helen Raynor Mackay, donated their collection of Charles M. Russell art to the Society in 1952.

The Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History in 1994 was presented to William E. Farr, professor of history at the University of Montana, for his article, "Troubled Bundles, Troubled Blackfeet: The Travail of Cultural and Religious Renewal." The article appeared in the Autumn 1993 issue of Montana.

The Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award for best student essay submitted to the magazine in 1994 was presented to Peter Zmyj for "A Fight to the Finish: The Extermination of the Gray Wolf in Wyoming, 1890–1930." Zmyj, who currently is working on his doctorate degree at the University of Arizona, received one hundred dollars and a plaque.

For the first time in the award's history, a Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award was given this year for the best undergraduate essay to Julianne Miller, who received her bachelor's degree in history last summer from Idaho State University. Miller received fifty dollars for her essay, "The Indians Seem Reluctant to Have Their Children in School: Native Reactions to Anglo-Education at the Lemhi Reservation, 1885–1907." Miller entered the western and Native American graduate history program at Arizona State University in September 1994.

Grace Bates of Amsterdam received the Peter Yegan, Jr., Award presented by the Museums Association of Montana for excellence in fostering the collection, preservation, and interpretation of the state's heritage. Bates has done extensive work at the Gallatin County Historical Society in Bozeman.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery"The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery |
| Ongoing Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| January 24 | Exhibit opening and reception for "Riders Under the Big Sky" and "The Horse in Art," 7:30–9:00. Cowboy poetry by Mike Logan and old-time music by Mike and Terry Williams and friends |

Friends of the Society monthly meetings and programs, Haynes Auditorium, 10 A.M. Open to the public. Speakers are:

| | |
|---|---|
| February 15 | Doris Loeser, MSU Dept. of Media and Theater Arts, "'I'll Ride that Horse': Montana Women Bronc Riders" |
| April 19 | Sally Garrett Dingley, author of numerous Harlequin romances, "Creating Valid Fiction from Montana's Past" |

Brown Bag Lecture Series, Haynes Auditorium, noon. There will be a charge.

| | |
|---|---|
| March 8 | Connie Staudohar, "Una B. Herrick: Trailblazer in a Frontier College" |
| March 15 | Speaker to be announced |
| March 22 | Sue Hart and Lee Rostad, Montana Committee for the Humanities, "The Grace and Gwenna Show" |
| March 29 | Susan Rhoades Neel, "'All These Things through the Eyes of Love': Romance Fiction and the Tourist Experience in Yellowstone National Park" |

Winter and Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday—Friday, 8-5, Saturday, 9-5. Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Library/Archives | Monday—Friday, 8-5. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1-5. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | January—March, group tours by reservation only, call 444-4789; regular tours begin in April. |
| Capitol | Group tours by reservation only, call 444-4789. |

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

---

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

S
978.6
H6m
V. 32
NO. 3

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 32 No. 3 • Autumn 1994

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECT
DEC 30 1994
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

MHS Photograph Archives

B. Sconfienza, with daughter Lena and a customer, stands outside his Montana Bakery, founded at the turn of the century in Red Lodge.

Red Lodge Hosts History Conference

Separating the myth from the history in the life of Montana's cowboy artist Charles M. Russell will be the task of writer and former Newsweek editor John Taliaferro on Friday evening, October 14, when he provides the keynote address during the twenty-first annual Montana History Conference in Red Lodge.

Taliaferro's talk, titled "Charles M. Russell: The History of His Myth, the Myth of His History," will accompany the conference's annual awards banquet.

The conference, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society Foundation, the Alberta Bair Trust, the Center for the Rocky Mountain West, and the Carbon County Historical Society, will be held Friday and Saturday, October 14–15, at the Rock Creek Resort, four miles south of Red Lodge on Highway 212. Teachers participating in conference workshops and attending conference sessions may receive a maximum of thirteen renewal credits from the Montana Office of Public Instruction.

Conference-related activities will actually begin on Thursday, October 13, with a full slate of "how-to" historical workshops, and continue through Saturday afternoon, October 15.

Pre-conference workshops will include such topics as museums in the 1990s, starting a local archives, community oral history projects, and preserving family photographs.

continued on page 3

New Society Trustees Named

Ana Brenden and Ruby Settle have been appointed by Governor Marc Racicot to the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees. They were appointed in July.

Brenden is a farm wife from Scobey and has worked as a consultant for the Daniels Memorial Hospital Foundation. She will serve a one-year term, fulfilling the term of James Reger, who died on March 4.

Settle, a native Montanan from Wibaux, has worked as a librarian/director and a marketing director for a local restaurant. Settle will serve a three-year term and replaces Harold Poulsen, who resigned after serving on the Board since 1988.

Murals Evaluated

Randy Ash, paintings conservator of the Rocky Mountain Conservation Center of Denver, evaluated the condition of Capitol murals in Helena recently. She examined physical needs of the Pedretti murals in the Senate Chambers and Old Supreme Court Chambers (now a hearing room) in the State Capitol. Her study will assist in determining future needs for conservation treatment. Ash also presented a public program on conservation of the Poindexter Collection and other Society paintings.

The conservation assessment was funded in part by a 1994–1995 Montana Cultural Trust grant provided by the Montana Legislature.

Highways, Artists Highlight Autumn Montana

John Morrison, Sr., helped get Montana out of the mud.

Morrison was at the Montana Highway Department for 15 years, from 1930 to 1945. In that time he helped design hundreds of bridges and, with others, saw to the hard-surfacing of thousands of miles of Montana highways.

In an article for the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, Theodore E. Lang, head of the Civil Engineering Department in Montana State University, Bozeman, tells the story of John Morrison, Sr.'s, early years in Montana and the state's efforts to revolutionize its transportation system.

continued on page 4

Sn 48-5214

■ The Center for the Rocky Mountain West will present a painting exhibition by Julius Seyler, a German impressionist painter, titled "Seyler's Work Among the Blackfeet of Northern Montana, 1913–1916." The paintings may be viewed between 11 A.M. and 3 P.M., Monday thru Saturday, at the Gallery of Visual Arts in the Social Science Building, University of Montana, Missoula. The exhibit runs from October 24–December 17, 1994 with a reception planned for November 12. For information call (406) 243-2813 or 243-2231.

■ "A Woman's War Too: U.S. Women in the Military in World War II" will be the theme for a conference at the National Archives at College Park, Maryland, on March 3–4, 1995. The conference is designed to explore the vital contributions made by the approximately 400,000 women who volunteered to serve in the United States armed forces during World War II. Sheila A. Widnall, Secretary of the Air Force and the first woman service Secretary, will be keynote speaker. For registration information, write to National Archives (NEE), Room G-10 (WWII), Washington, D.C. 20408.

■ The Oral History Association's 27th annual meeting will be held October 27–30, at the Sheraton Old Town Hotel, in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Discussion topics will include ethnic diversity, civil and legal rights, land and water rights, women and community, and cultural history. In addition, an introductory oral history workshop and workshops on preservation, cataloging and access, grants and fundraising, and oral history standards are scheduled. Contact Jan Barnhart, local arrangements chair, OHA, P.O. Box 3968, Albuquerque, NM 87190-3968 or call (505) 277-8213.

■ The C.M. Russell Museum in Great Falls has opened a new exhibit titled "Bill Gollings: Ranahan Artist." The exhibit displays 71 pieces of art by Bill Gollings, Wyoming cowboy-turned-painter. The exhibit opened September 16, 1994, and will run through January 2, 1995. Gollings (1878–1932) painted the Cheyenne Indians, cowboys, horses, animals, and landscapes from southeastern Montana and northern Wyoming.

■ Call for papers. The Society of Military History will hold sessions as part of the 38th annual Missouri Valley History Conference, March 9–11, 1995 in Omaha, Nebraska. Send proposals for papers and sessions on military topics to Mark R. Grandstaff, History Department, Brigham Young University, 414 KMB, P.O. Box 2446, Provo, UT 84602.

■ The 48th annual Pacific Northwest History Conference will be held March 23–25, 1995, in Richland, Washington.

Proposals on the following or other topics are requested: World War II home front; the Cold War; Hanford's nuclear history; Hispano and women's history in the Columbia Basin; Pacific Northwest archaeology; transportation and Native American history; Lewis and Clark; and government documents. Deadline for proposals is November 15. Contact Professor Orlan J. Svingen, Department of History, Washington State University, Pullman, WA 99164-4030 or call (509) 335–5205 or fax (509) 335-4171.

■ The Paris Gibson Square Museum of Art in Great Falls will feature three exhibits on experimental artwork collectively titled "Seeing the Light." The three artists featured are: Dick Elliott, David Mathews, and Willem Volkersz. Each project explores the concept of "painting with light" and is on display through November 13.

Mathews currently works as a photo archivist for the Montana Historical Society and operates a photo studio business in Bozeman. His photographs have appeared in Society publications, including Montana The Magazine of Western History and Guide Book to the Milwaukee Road.

Museum Store Catalog Available Soon

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store catalog for 1994-1995 will be mailed to Society members mid-October. Recently published books listed in the new catalog include:

Killing Custer by James Welch, $25.00
Charles M. Russell, Sculptor by Rick Stewart, $95.00
Women in Waiting in the Western Movement: Life on the Home Frontier by Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, $17.95
Montana's Fur Trade Era by F. Lee Graves, $12.95.
For Everything There Is A Season by Frank C. Craighead, Jr., $16.95
Religion in Montana, Volume 2, edited by Lawrence Small, $19.95
Doc: Then and Now with a Montana Physician by R. E. Losee, $22.95
Plus children's selections by Paul Goble, story-teller and illustrator: Gift of a Sacred Dog; The Girl Who Loved Wild Horses; Beyond the Ridge; Star Boy

The Museum Store offers a comprehensive collection of western history and literature, notecards, and gift items for all ages. If you are looking for a book not listed in the catalog, wish to receive another catalog, or want to place an order, please call 1–800–243–9900.

Society Exhibits Available for Traveling

The Montana Historical Society now has two exhibits previously presented at the Society's museum in Helena available for loan to interested institutions at minimal cost. The exhibits are "Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana's Historic Places" and "Photographing Montana, 1894–1928: The World of Evelyn Cameron."

"Buildings" examines the importance of saving our historic places. The exhibit includes photographs, covers all areas of Montana, and features quotes from Montanans. It is sponsored by a grant from the National Park Service.

"Photographing Montana" premiered at the Society in 1990 and features Evelyn Cameron's photographs of eastern Montana's rural life, ranch characters, badlands, and wildlife.

On either exhibit contact Janet Sperry, MHS, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620 or call (406) 444-4710.

Russian Visual Arts Officials Visit Helena

Two high ranking Russian visual arts officials toured the Montana Historical Society recently and met with officials to discuss possible exhibit exchanges.

Nikolay Ponomarev, president of the Russian Academy of Arts, and Tair Salakhov, vice president of the Board of International Federation of Artists Russia, toured the Society's museum in Helena.

"Mr. Ponomarev and Mr. Salakhov share with us a strong belief that appreciation of each other's culture and heritage is an important first step in building understanding and better relationships between different peoples," Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

The Russians visited several high security arts and cultural facilities in Montana where Russian collections could be shown in future exchange programs.

Tom Cook

Society research historian Dave Walter prepares for taping a TV segment for "Montana Minutes" with KTVH Channel 12's Charlene Murdo and cameraman Greg Pace.

Society Brings History Alive on TV

The Montana Historical Society is working to bring Montana history into homes all across the state—live and on TV.

In the first phase of a project initiated by the Montana Historical Society in cooperation with KTVH Television of Helena, Society research historian Dave Walter and public information officer Tom Cook are developing a series of "history minutes" for television viewing.

With historical topics like the 100-year anniversary of the political controversy over location of the state's capital, Coxey's Army, Montana's turn-of-the-century photographer Evelyn Cameron, the Milwaukee Railroad, and fire in early Montana mining camps, Walter and Cook hope to kindle interest in Montana's colorful past. Their 50-second "spots" are crafted so that private-sector sponsors can present them on commercial television as a public service.

New Books From MHS Press

Three new books will soon be available from the Montana Historical Society press. Roberta Beed Sollid's classic Calamity Jane, originally published in limited edition by the Society in 1958, will be reprinted with a new introduction and afterword by contemporary scholars and a special foreword by former Society editor Vivian A. Paladin. It will sell for $14.95.

Also to be available through the Society's Museum Store before Christmas is Robert A. Harvie's Keeping the Peace: Police Reform in Montana, 1889-1918. Harvie's book looks at the transformation of frontier law enforcement in seven Montana towns—Glasgow, Miles City, Bozeman, Dillon, Hamilton, Kalispell, and Whitefish—and will sell for $19.95 hardcover and $11.95 softcover.

Already available from the Society is an all-new second edition of Montana's Historical Highway Markers, edited by Glenda Bradshaw and illustrated by Shorty Shope. The popular guidebook will offer for the first time the new Native American historical markers placed along state highways among the 170 interpretive roadside signs. It sells for $9.95.

For these and other Society publications, contact the Society's Museum Store in Helena or call 1-800-243-9900.

MHS Exhibits To Feature Horses

Two horse-related exhibits are scheduled to open at the Montana Historical Society late this year and early next year.

"Riders Under the Big Sky," a major temporary exhibit, will open on January 24, 1995, in the Society's Northeast Gallery. This exhibit will explore the use and importance of horses in Montana history and will include saddles, horse gear, and artifacts relating to the use of horses in military operations, recreation, work, and transportation. The exhibit will run for one year.

The Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit will host "The Horse in Art" exhibit beginning December 15. The selection of both two-and three-dimensional art works from the Museum's collections provides an overview on how the horse has contributed to Montana's development. A grand opening for both exhibits will be held on Tuesday, January 24, 1995. For information call the Museum at (406) 444-4710.

History Conference

(continued from page 1)

Regular conference activities will begin Friday morning with a special "State of the Society" presentation on current issues facing the Society by Director Brian Cockhill. Regular sessions later Friday morning will include presentations by Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, Peter Nabokov, and Society Trustee Bill Mackay and others.

At Friday's luncheon, Nabokov will discuss the historical landscape of the Crow tribe. A session on oral history's contributions to Red Lodge community history and a walking tour of downtown Red Lodge will follow that afternoon.

Activities continue Saturday with a breakfast presentation by James E. Sherow, Bradley Fellowship recipient, on Montana water policy and the state engineer's office. Concurrent sessions on homesteading women, Montana tribal histories, photographers of Yellowstone, gold mining, and railroads will follow.

Saturday's luncheon will feature University of Montana history professor David M. Emmons on Montana in the post-Anaconda era, followed by special field trips to the Bearcreek Mining District and Chief Plenty Coups State Park.

For registration information write to the Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 or call (406) 444-4794.

Christmas Tour

The annual Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour will be held on Sunday, December 4, 1994, from 1:00–5:00 P.M. This popular event will feature fine Helena homes and historic buildings decorated for the holidays. The home tour enables the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board to raise funds for restoration projects at the Mansion. Tickets are available from the Montana Historical Society Museum Store or at the Original Governor's Mansion the day of the tour. For information call the Museum at (406) 444-4710.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Modern Masters: The Poindexter Collection's Abstract Artists," Northeast Gallery, through December 20, 1994 |
| | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery, beginning January 24, 1995, and continuing for one year. |
| | "Cutapuis—The Man Who Talks Not: The Art of John L. Clarke," Montana Reflections Gallery, through November 26, 1994 |
| | "The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery, opening December 15, 1994 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 13–15 | Montana History Conference, Red Lodge, Montana |
| October 20–22 | Western History Association Conference, Albuquerque, New Mexico |
| December 4 | Original Governor's Mansion Annual Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing Street, 1–5 |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5; Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Library/Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Tuesday-Saturday, 12–5. Tours on the hour through 4 |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8–6 |

---

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MHS Purchases Fur Trade And Railway Microfilm

The Montana Historical Society Library has recently purchased two significant 35mm microfilm collections to aid fur trade, Great Northern, and Northern Pacific researchers.

Papers of the St. Louis Fur Trade is made available through the Missouri Historical Society and in cooperation with University Publications of America, Inc. The collection contains significant portions of Missouri's fur trade documents and manuscripts. The portion the Library purchased covers 1802–1871 and consists of 23 reels of documents from the American Fur Company.

The MHS Library has also purchased from the Minnesota Historical Society portions of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Company corporate records. The five reels of Great Northern records includes many materials on the early development of Glacier National Park and the three reels from the Northern Pacific records document the railroad's efforts to promote Yellowstone National Park and other sites.

Montana (continued from page 1)

Also for the Autumn issue, historian James P. Ronda offers a glimpse of the West in transition in the era of Lewis and Clark. September 1806, Ronda argues, was more than a time of imperial rivalries and intrigue, it was a singular moment—when the course of western history was molded by fateful decisions.

Also in the fall issue, western art historian Brian W. Dippie provides a detailed look at the life and work of George Catlin, while historian Michael Amundson provides the first-ever detailed biographical portrait of Merritt Dana Houghton, a little-known artist of turn-of-the-century Wyoming, Idaho, and Washington.

Montana writer James Welch offers an excerpt from his forthcoming book, Killing Custer, and in a provocative historical commentary, University of Montana history professor David M. Emmons considers the social and economic impacts of the demise of the Anaconda Company in Montana.

---

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6 W
V. 32
No. 3

BOUND WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 32 No. 3 • Autumn 1994

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 21 1994
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Bakery
Montana Bakery

MHS Photograph Archives

B. Sconfienza, with daughter Lena and a customer, stands outside his Montana Bakery, founded at the turn of the century in Red Lodge.

Red Lodge Hosts History Conference

Separating the myth from the history in the life of Montana's cowboy artist Charles M. Russell will be the task of writer and former Newsweek editor John Taliaferro on Friday evening, October 14, when he provides the keynote address during the twenty-first annual Montana History Conference in Red Lodge.

Taliaferro's talk, titled "Charles M. Russell: The History of His Myth, the Myth of His History," will accompany the conference's annual awards banquet.

The conference, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society Foundation, the Alberta Bair Trust, the Center for the Rocky Mountain West, and the Carbon County Historical Society, will be held Friday and Saturday, October 14–15, at the Rock Creek Resort, four miles south of Red Lodge on Highway 212. Teachers participating in conference workshops and attending conference sessions may receive a maximum of thirteen renewal credits from the Montana Office of Public Instruction.

Conference-related activities will actually begin on Thursday, October 13, with a full slate of "how-to" historical workshops, and continue through Saturday afternoon, October 15.

Pre-conference workshops will include such topics as museums in the 1990s, starting a local archives, community oral history projects, and preserving family photographs.

continued on page 3

New Society Trustees Named

Ana Brenden and Ruby Settle have been appointed by Governor Marc Racicot to the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees. They were appointed in July.

Brenden is a farm wife from Scobey and has worked as a consultant for the Daniels Memorial Hospital Foundation. She will serve a one-year term, fulfilling the term of James Reger, who died on March 4.

Settle, a native Montanan from Wibaux, has worked as a librarian/director and a marketing director for a local restaurant. Settle will serve a three-year term and replaces Harold Poulsen, who resigned after serving on the Board since 1988.

Murals Evaluated

Randy Ash, paintings conservator of the Rocky Mountain Conservation Center of Denver, evaluated the condition of Capitol murals in Helena recently. She examined physical needs of the Pedretti murals in the Senate Chambers and Old Supreme Court Chambers (now a hearing room) in the State Capitol. Her study will assist in determining future needs for conservation treatment. Ash also presented a public program on conservation of the Poindexter Collection and other Society paintings.

The conservation assessment was funded in part by a 1994–1995 Montana Cultural Trust grant provided by the Montana Legislature.

Highways, Artists Highlight Autumn Montana

John Morrison, Sr., helped get Montana out of the mud.

Morrison was at the Montana Highway Department for 15 years, from 1930 to 1945. In that time he helped design hundreds of bridges and, with others, saw to the hard-surfacing of thousands of miles of Montana highways.

In an article for the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, Theodore E. Lang, head of the Civil Engineering Department in Montana State University, Bozeman, tells the story of John Morrison, Sr.'s, early years in Montana and the state's efforts to revolutionize its transportation system.

continued on page 4

PLEASE RETURN

■ The Center for the Rocky Mountain West will present a painting exhibition by Julius Seyler, a German impressionist painter, titled "Seyler's Work Among the Blackfeet of Northern Montana, 1913–1916." The paintings may be viewed between 11 A.M. and 3 P.M., Monday thru Saturday, at the Gallery of Visual Arts in the Social Science Building, University of Montana, Missoula. The exhibit runs from October 24–December 17, 1994 with a reception planned for November 12. For information call (406) 243-2813 or 243-2231.

■ "A Woman's War Too: U.S. Women in the Military in World War II" will be the theme for a conference at the National Archives at College Park, Maryland, on March 3–4, 1995. The conference is designed to explore the vital contributions made by the approximately 400,000 women who volunteered to serve in the United States armed forces during World War II. Sheila A. Widnall, Secretary of the Air Force and the first woman service Secretary, will be keynote speaker. For registration information, write to National Archives (NEE), Room G-10 (WWII), Washington, D.C. 20408.

■ The Oral History Association's 27th annual meeting will be held October 27–30, at the Sheraton Old Town Hotel, in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Discussion topics will include ethnic diversity, civil and legal rights, land and water rights, women and community, and cultural history. In addition, an introductory oral history workshop and workshops on preservation, cataloging and access, grants and fundraising, and oral history standards are scheduled. Contact Jan Barnhart, local arrangements chair, OHA, P.O. Box 3968, Albuquerque, NM 87190-3968 or call (505) 277-8213.

■ The C.M. Russell Museum in Great Falls has opened a new exhibit titled "Bill Gollings: Ranahan Artist." The exhibit displays 71 pieces of art by Bill Gollings, Wyoming cowboy-turned-painter. The exhibit opened September 16, 1994, and will run through January 2, 1995. Gollings (1878–1932) painted the Cheyenne Indians, cowboys, horses, animals, and landscapes from southeastern Montana and northern Wyoming.

■ Call for papers. The Society of Military History will hold sessions as part of the 38th annual Missouri Valley History Conference, March 9–11, 1995 in Omaha, Nebraska. Send proposals for papers and sessions on military topics to Mark R. Grandstaff, History Department, Brigham Young University, 414 KMB, P.O. Box 2446, Provo, UT 84602.

■ The 48th annual Pacific Northwest History Conference will be held March 23–25, 1995, in Richland, Washington.

Proposals on the following or other topics are requested: World War II home front; the Cold War; Hanford's nuclear history; Hispano and women's history in the Columbia Basin; Pacific Northwest archaeology; transportation and Native American history; Lewis and Clark; and government documents. Deadline for proposals is November 15. Contact Professor Orlan J. Svingen, Department of History, Washington State University, Pullman, WA 99164-4030 or call (509) 335–5205 or fax (509) 335-4171.

■ The Paris Gibson Square Museum of Art in Great Falls will feature three exhibits on experimental artwork collectively titled "Seeing the Light." The three artists featured are: Dick Elliott, David Mathews, and Willem Volkersz. Each project explores the concept of "painting with light" and is on display through November 13.

Mathews currently works as a photo archivist for the Montana Historical Society and operates a photo studio business in Bozeman. His photographs have appeared in Society publications, including Montana The Magazine of Western History and Guide Book to the Milwaukee Road.

Museum Store Catalog Available Soon

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store catalog for 1994-1995 will be mailed to Society members mid-October. Recently published books listed in the new catalog include:

Killing Custer by James Welch, $25.00
Charles M. Russell, Sculptor by Rick Stewart, $95.00
Women in Waiting in the Western Movement: Life on the Home Frontier by Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, $17.95
Montana's Fur Trade Era by F. Lee Graves, $12.95.
For Everything There Is A Season by Frank C. Craighead, Jr., $16.95
Religion in Montana, Volume 2, edited by Lawrence Small, $19.95
Doc: Then and Now with a Montana Physician by R. E. Losee, $22.95
Plus children's selections by Paul Goble, story-teller and illustrator: Gift of a Sacred Dog; The Girl Who Loved Wild Horses; Beyond the Ridge; Star Boy

The Museum Store offers a comprehensive collection of western history and literature, notecards, and gift items for all ages. If you are looking for a book not listed in the catalog, wish to receive another catalog, or want to place an order, please call 1–800–243–9900.

Society Exhibits Available for Traveling

The Montana Historical Society now has two exhibits previously presented at the Society's museum in Helena available for loan to interested institutions at minimal cost. The exhibits are "Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana's Historic Places" and "Photographing Montana, 1894–1928: The World of Evelyn Cameron."

"Buildings" examines the importance of saving our historic places. The exhibit includes photographs, covers all areas of Montana, and features quotes from Montanans. It is sponsored by a grant from the National Park Service.

"Photographing Montana" premiered at the Society in 1990 and features Evelyn Cameron's photographs of eastern Montana's rural life, ranch characters, badlands, and wildlife.

On either exhibit contact Janet Sperry, MHS, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620 or call (406) 444-4710.

Russian Visual Arts Officials Visit Helena

Two high ranking Russian visual arts officials toured the Montana Historical Society recently and met with officials to discuss possible exhibit exchanges.

Nikolay Ponomarev, president of the Russian Academy of Arts, and Tair Salakhov, vice president of the Board of International Federation of Artists Russia, toured the Society's museum in Helena.

"Mr. Ponomarev and Mr. Salakhov share with us a strong belief that appreciation of each other's culture and heritage is an important first step in building understanding and better relationships between different peoples," Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

The Russians visited several high security arts and cultural facilities in Montana where Russian collections could be shown in future exchange programs.

Tom Cook

Society research historian Dave Walter prepares for taping a TV segment for "Montana Minutes" with KTVH Channel 12's Charlene Murdo and cameraman Greg Pace.

Society Brings History Alive on TV

The Montana Historical Society is working to bring Montana history into homes all across the state—live and on TV.

In the first phase of a project initiated by the Montana Historical Society in cooperation with KTVH Television of Helena, Society research historian Dave Walter and public information officer Tom Cook are developing a series of "history minutes" for television viewing.

With historical topics like the 100-year anniversary of the political controversy over location of the state's capital, Coxey's Army, Montana's turn-of-the-century photographer Evelyn Cameron, the Milwaukee Railroad, and fire in early Montana mining camps, Walter and Cook hope to kindle interest in Montana's colorful past. Their 50-second "spots" are crafted so that private-sector sponsors can present them on commercial television as a public service.

New Books From MHS Press

Three new books will soon be available from the Montana Historical Society press. Roberta Beed Sollid's classic Calamity Jane, originally published in limited edition by the Society in 1958, will be reprinted with a new introduction and afterword by contemporary scholars and a special foreword by former Society editor Vivian A. Paladin. It will sell for $14.95.

Also to be available through the Society's Museum Store before Christmas is Robert A. Harvie's Keeping the Peace: Police Reform in Montana, 1889-1918. Harvie's book looks at the transformation of frontier law enforcement in seven Montana towns—Glasgow, Miles City, Bozeman, Dillon, Hamilton, Kalispell, and Whitefish—and will sell for $19.95 hardcover and $11.95 softcover.

Already available from the Society is an all-new second edition of Montana's Historical Highway Markers, edited by Glenda Bradshaw and illustrated by Shorty Shope. The popular guidebook will offer for the first time the new Native American historical markers placed along state highways among the 170 interpretive roadside signs. It sells for $9.95.

For these and other Society publications, contact the Society's Museum Store in Helena or call 1-800-243-9900.

MHS Exhibits To Feature Horses

Two horse-related exhibits are scheduled to open at the Montana Historical Society late this year and early next year.

"Riders Under the Big Sky," a major temporary exhibit, will open on January 24, 1995, in the Society's Northeast Gallery. This exhibit will explore the use and importance of horses in Montana history and will include saddles, horse gear, and artifacts relating to the use of horses in military operations, recreation, work, and transportation. The exhibit will run for one year.

The Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit will host "The Horse in Art" exhibit beginning December 15. The selection of both two-and three-dimensional art works from the Museum's collections provides an overview on how the horse has contributed to Montana's development. A grand opening for both exhibits will be held on Tuesday, January 24, 1995. For information call the Museum at (406) 444-4710.

History Conference (continued from page 1)

Regular conference activities will begin Friday morning with a special "State of the Society" presentation on current issues facing the Society by Director Brian Cockhill. Regular sessions later Friday morning will include presentations by Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, Peter Nabokov, and Society Trustee Bill Mackay and others.

At Friday's luncheon, Nabokov will discuss the historical landscape of the Crow tribe. A session on oral history's contributions to Red Lodge community history and a walking tour of downtown Red Lodge will follow that afternoon.

Activities continue Saturday with a breakfast presentation by James E. Sherow, Bradley Fellowship recipient, on Montana water policy and the state engineer's office. Concurrent sessions on homesteading women, Montana tribal histories, photographers of Yellowstone, gold mining, and railroads will follow.

Saturday's luncheon will feature University of Montana history professor David M. Emmons on Montana in the post-Anaconda era, followed by special field trips to the Bearcreek Mining District and Chief Plenty Coups State Park.

For registration information write to the Society, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201 or call (406) 444-4794.

Christmas Tour

The annual Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour will be held on Sunday, December 4, 1994, from 1:00–5:00 P.M. This popular event will feature fine Helena homes and historic buildings decorated for the holidays. The home tour enables the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board to raise funds for restoration projects at the Mansion. Tickets are available from the Montana Historical Society Museum Store or at the Original Governor's Mansion the day of the tour. For information call the Museum at (406) 444-4710.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Modern Masters: The Poindexter Collection's Abstract Artists," Northeast Gallery, through December 20, 1994 |
| | "Riders Under the Big Sky," Northeast Gallery, beginning January 24, 1995, and continuing for one year. |
| | "Cutapuis—The Man Who Talks Not: The Art of John L. Clarke," Montana Reflections Gallery, through November 26, 1994 |
| | "The Horse in Art," Montana Reflections Gallery, opening December 15, 1994 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 13–15 | Montana History Conference, Red Lodge, Montana |
| October 20–22 | Western History Association Conference, Albuquerque, New Mexico |
| December 4 | Original Governor's Mansion Annual Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing Street, 1–5 |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday–Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5; Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Library/Archives | Monday–Friday, 8–5. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday–Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Tuesday-Saturday, 12–5. Tours on the hour through 4 |
| Capitol | Self-guided tours daily 8–6 |

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MHS Purchases Fur Trade And Railway Microfilm

The Montana Historical Society Library has recently purchased two significant 35mm microfilm collections to aid fur trade, Great Northern, and Northern Pacific researchers.

Papers of the St. Louis Fur Trade is made available through the Missouri Historical Society and in cooperation with University Publications of America, Inc. The collection contains significant portions of Missouri's fur trade documents and manuscripts. The portion the Library purchased covers 1802–1871 and consists of 23 reels of documents from the American Fur Company.

The MHS Library has also purchased from the Minnesota Historical Society portions of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway Company corporate records. The five reels of Great Northern records includes many materials on the early development of Glacier National Park and the three reels from the Northern Pacific records document the railroad's efforts to promote Yellowstone National Park and other sites.

Montana (continued from page 1)

Also for the Autumn issue, historian James P. Ronda offers a glimpse of the West in transition in the era of Lewis and Clark. September 1806, Ronda argues, was more than a time of imperial rivalries and intrigue, it was a singular moment—when the course of western history was molded by fateful decisions.

Also in the fall issue, western art historian Brian W. Dippie provides a detailed look at the life and work of George Catlin, while historian Michael Amundson provides the first-ever detailed biographical portrait of Merritt Dana Houghton, a little-known artist of turn-of-the-century Wyoming, Idaho, and Washington.

Montana writer James Welch offers an excerpt from his forthcoming book, Killing Custer, and in a provocative historical commentary, University of Montana history professor David M. Emmons considers the social and economic impacts of the demise of the Anaconda Company in Montana.

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.32
No.2

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 32 No. 2 • Summer 1994

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

Summer in Montana

Each day in spring 1893, an old man shuffled down to the Pine Ridge, South Dakota, post office to get his mail. While there, he would talk leisurely of the old days with a good friend, a French-Canadian trader. The old man was the famous Sioux chief Red Cloud, and the old trader, Sam Deon. Unknown to Red Cloud, the stories he told Deon were being conveyed to postmaster Charles Allen, who wrote them down as Red Cloud's autobiography.

Through a convoluted set of events involving a remarkable cast of people, Red Cloud's autobiography now rests on a library shelf in Lincoln, Nebraska, under a different title and with a white man listed as its author. In an article for the Summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, Nebraska historian Eli Paul unravels the complex genealogy surrounding the recorded story of one of the West's most famous Native American figures.

Also in the Summer issue, Lewistown historian Anna Zellick uses extensive oral history interviews to recapture the memories of South Slav immigrant children and poignantly depict their lives in Red Lodge and Bearcreek, Montana, in the early twentieth century.

continued on page 4

Fellowship Announced

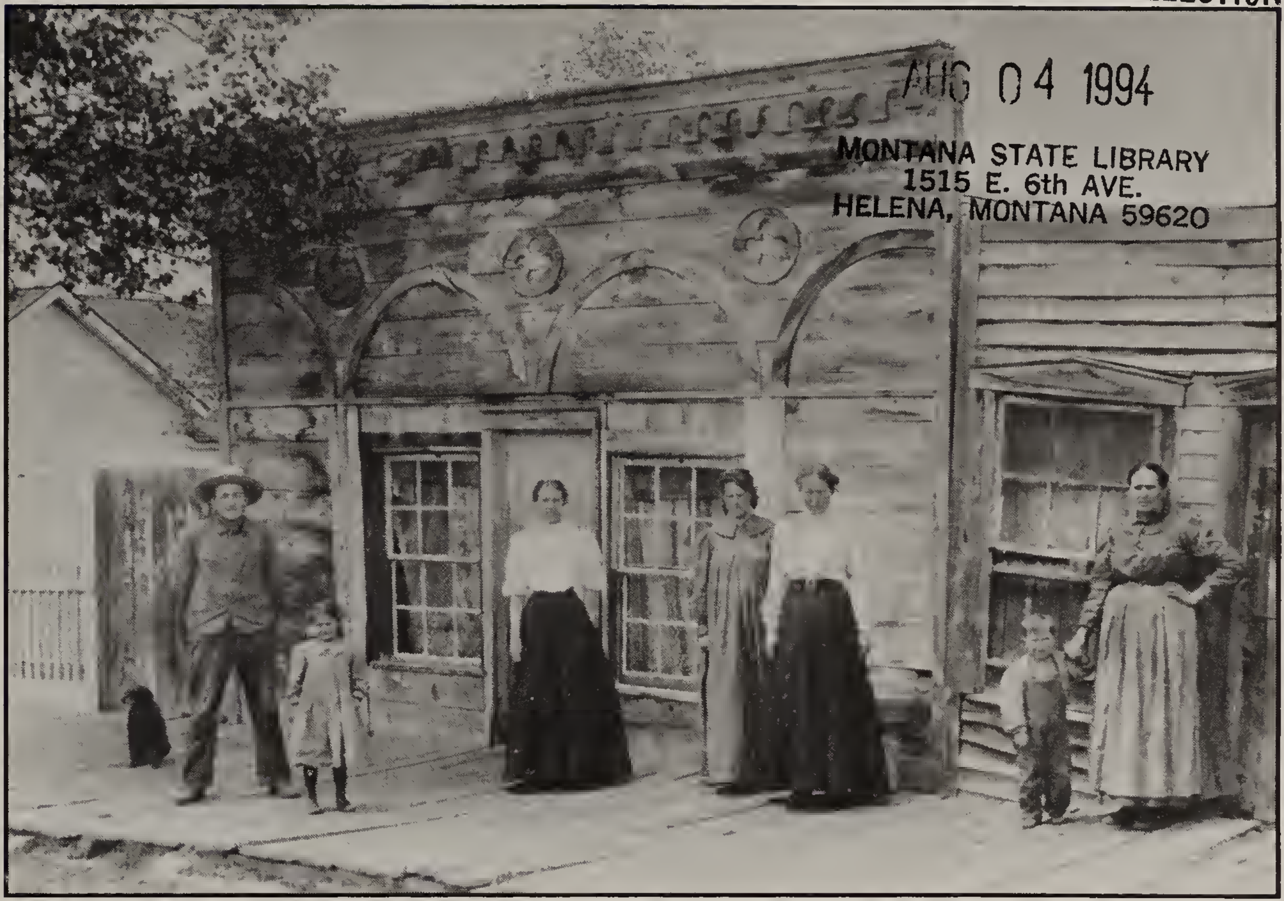
James E. Sherow, assistant professor of history at Kansas State University, is the 1994 Bradley Summer Fellow. The $3,000 stipend enables Sherow to spend four weeks this summer in the Society's library to study the influence of the state engineer's office on the distribution, use, and ownership of water in Montana. Bradley fellows are expected to submit an article to Montana The Magazine of Western History for possible publication.

Also, a $1,000 travel expense fellowship will be awarded to Thompson R. Smith, a doctoral candidate in American Studies at Yale, presently working on a grant project for the Flathead Tribal Cultural Committee in Charlo, Montana.



AUG 04 1994
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

This turn-of-the-century photograph of N. Wallace Street and others depicting the community, buildings, and people of Virginia City are included in the Bovey Collection recently acquired by the Montana Historical Society.

Bovey Collection Comes to MHS

The Montana Historical Society recently acquired a significant collection of records, photographs, and other material relating to the early days of Virginia City and territorial Montana. "With Virginia City as a major gold camp of the northern Rockies, territorial capital, and merchandising and transportation center for decades, its history is crucial to a larger understanding of the history of the region," Society Director Brian Cockhill said.

The collection was created by Charles and Sue Bovey and includes business ledgers, letters, diaries, bank records, photographs, and other material documenting individuals and businesses in the gold camp area from about 1865 through the

continued on page 4

Mark Your Calendar!

The twenty-first annual Montana History Conference will be held in Red Lodge, October 13–15. The conference will offer workshops, lectures, panels, and field trips related to a variety of topics in Montana history, including ethnicity and mining issues of south-central Montana.

John Taliaferro, a former bureau chief and senior editor of Newsweek and author of the forthcoming biography of Montana's cowboy artist, Charles M. Russell, will be this year's banquet speaker.

A schedule of events will be available in advance of the conference. For information call Joan Haefer, Society education officer at (406) 444-4794.

PLEASE RETURN

■ A traveling exhibit of the Mansfield collection is being offered to rural Montana communities by the University of Montana Mansfield Library in cooperation with the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Foundation. The collection contains works in bronze, lacquerware, ceramics, calligraphy, weaving, paper arts, silk arts, and paintings produced in traditional art and craft centers in Japan. For information call (406) 243-2215.

■ The newly refurnished Indian Trade House at Fort Union Trading Post is open to the public daily. Visitors to the trading post learn of Fort Union's role in the bison-robe trade and have the opportunity to purchase replica trade goods. Groups and schools wishing to visit Fort Union should call (701) 572-9083 to schedule tours. The Fort Union Trading Post National Historic Site is located twenty-three miles from Sidney, Montana, and twenty-five miles from Williston, North Dakota.

■ "At Home in the Tipi: Life on the Plains" will be the subject of demonstrations and discussions on Plains Indian life and culture in the late 1800s at the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls from June 29 to August 20. Native American Indian presenters Dulcy Valandra and Linda Kovar will explain the uses of objects and furnishings while sharing their knowledge of the Plains Indian cultures. A tipi will be erected and furnished with a variety of traditional items and artifacts. The program is made possible by a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities. For information call (406) 727-8787.

■ "Jefferson and the Changing West: From Conquest to Conservation" is the theme of a conference scheduled November 18–20 in St. Louis, Missouri. Scholars from diverse fields will reassess historical and contemporary aspects of Thomas Jefferson's contributions to the development of the American West in light of current environmental and human concerns. For information write Jefferson Conference, Missouri Historical Society, P.O. Box 11940, St. Louis, MO 63112-0040 or call (314) 361-9265.

■ A bullet riddled stagecoach that once traveled the treacherous route linking Fort Custer, Montana, with Rock Springs, Wyoming, and Fort Keogh, Montana, is now on permanent display at the Big Horn County Museum in Hardin, Montana. The Fort Custer stage, in its original condition, has been exhibited in Washington, D.C. and the Galeries Lafayette in Paris, France. For information about the Big Horn County Museum and State Visitors Center, call (406) 665-1671.

■ The "7th North American Fur Trade Conference" will be held May 24–28, 1995, at Halifax, Nova Scotia. Papers are invited involving the research of North American fur trade in the areas of native studies, women's studies, ecology and the sciences, comparative studies, history, anthropology, literature, or other pertinent subjects. A one-page abstract with title, name of author, and institutional affiliation should be mailed by August 31, 1994, to 7th NAFTC, Barry Moody and Bill Wicken, Gorsebrook Research Institute for Atlantic Canada Studies, Saint Mary's University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada B3H 3C3, or call (902) 420-5668, or fax (902) 420-5530.

■ Forty sessions will explore the theme "The West: Diverse Visions" during the thirty-fourth annual Western History Association conference October 20–23, 1994, at the Hyatt Regency in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Featured speakers include Alvin M. Josephy, Jr., WHA president, and David McCullough, Pulitzer-Prize winning author of Truman. Conference programs and registration forms will be mailed to members in late July. Non-members may request a copy of the program by writing to the Western History Association, University of New Mexico, 1080 Mesa Vista Hall, Albuquerque, NM 87131-1181, calling (505) 277-5234, or faxing (505) 277-6023.

■ The second annual Will James Society Invitational Western Art Show and Sale will be held in conjunction with the 1994 Will James Society Convention October 14–16, at the Nugget Hotel and Casino in Reno, Nevada. Featured artists include: Joe Beeler, Chuck DeHaan, Grant Speed, Duke Sundt, Jim Bramlett, Curtis Fort, and Jim Hauser. Original works of art by Will James will be displayed, and Will James books and memorabilia, as well as other Old West items, will be for sale. For information contact Will James Society, P.O. Box 8207, Roswell, NM 88202.

■ The fifth annual "Ride the Russell Trail," sponsored by the C. M. Russell Museum and the Circle Bar Ranch, will be held September 14–18. Participants will travel on horseback through the Judith Basin to the Circle Bar Ranch in the Pigeye Basin and into the Little Belt Mountains, following trails Charlie Russell rode.

A new trail ride, "Ride the Trail of the Buffalo People," offered September 21–25, explores the buffalo country of Judith Basin, including a prehistoric buffalo jump, Indian caves, and other sites. Horseback experience is essential for both rides. For information or reservations contact Jennifer Page at (406) 727-8787.

■ "Thriving on Change: Redefining the Field of State and Local History" is the theme of the fifty-fourth meeting of the American Association for State and Local History September 29–October 1 in Omaha, Nebraska. Topics include education and interpretation, preservation, technology, heritage tourism, regionalism, collections care and management, professional development, fund raising, and Native American issues.

A workshop, Exhibit Planning, Design, and Implementation, will be held September 28 at the Western Heritage Museum in Omaha. Participants are encouraged to submit exhibit project outlines that they are currently planning as a basis for the workshop.

Attendees must be AASLH members. For information contact AASLH, 530 Church Street, Suite 600, Nashville, TX 37219, or call (615) 255-2971, or fax (615) 255-2979.

■ The Cottonwood Festival, sponsored by the Cascade County Historical Society (CCHS), will be held September 9–11 at the Museum Annex of the Fairgrounds in Great Falls. The festival will include demonstrations, hands-on activities, antique cars, ethnic foods, the CCHS preservation dinner, and presentation of community Preservation Award winners. Admission is free to the public. For information call (406) 452-3462.

■ The James J. Hill Reference Library will award several grants of up to $2,000 to support research in the James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill papers. Deadline for applications is November 1, 1994, with awards to be announced in early 1995. For information contact W. Thomas White, Curator, James J. Hill Reference Library, 80 West Fourth Street, St. Paul, MN 55102.

■ The Pikes Peak Library District will sponsor the Great Pikes Peak Cowboy Poetry Gathering August 19-21 in Colorado Springs, Colorado. The event features poets; storytellers; musicians; street dance; barbeque; special childrens' programs; and western trade show, art auction, and fashion show. Most events are free. For information contact Judy Evans at (719) 531-6333, ext. 1150.

■ The thirty-eighth annual Missouri Valley History Conference will be held March 9–11, 1995, in Omaha, Nebraska. Send proposals for papers and sessions in all areas of history with a one-page abstract and vitae by October 15, to Dale Gaeddert, Chair MVHC, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Omaha, NE 68182.

Historical Society Volunteers Honored

The Montana Historical Society honored the Friends of the Society volunteer organization at the Society's annual volunteer appreciation luncheon in April. More than eighty volunteers provided nearly 4,000 hours of service in 1993, the equivalent to almost two full-time employees.

Volunteers assisted with a wide-range of projects, including decorating the Society at Christmas, assisting in the conservation lab, hosting Society functions, stuffing envelopes, preparing mail reports, proofreading, answering 1-800 calls in the museum store, and leading tours.

Pam Hulbert received the Director's Award for continuing efforts to develop volunteer services as president of the Friends of the Society. Those receiving Departmental Assistance Volunteer Awards and the hours they donated were: Doris Hitt (374); Mary Brewer (357); and Audrey Levitan (314). Mary Hunt, Marge Jacobson, and Betty LaSalle received Docent Awards for guiding student tours in the museum, and Barb Grimes received the Muse Award for supervising special events such as exhibit grand openings.

Others honored for departmental work were Helga Baussus, Charlotte Thomas, and Jane Addy, who volunteered more than one hundred hours each, and Bess Braun, Loretta Bible, and Hariot Van Tine, who volunteered more than two hundred hours each.

Two Capital High School seniors, Shanti Morell-Hart and Kristin Booke, were honored for their work with Mark Baumler, state archaeologist in the State Historic Preservation office.

For information about joining the Friends, please contact Joan Haefer, Society education officer at (406) 444-4794.

(left to right) Pam Hulbert, director's award recipient, Joan Haefer, Society education officer, with volunteer Kristin Booke of Capital High School, Mark Baumler, state archaeologist, and volunteer Shanti Morell-Hart of Capital High School.

Mathews Studies at National Archives

Dave Mathews, Montana Historical Society archival photographer, recently spent a week at the National Archives and the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., learning what is being done nationally with deteriorating negatives and how to transfer the Society's nitrate and acetate negatives to a more stable format.

Through a grant from the Montana Historical Society Foundation, Mathews worked with National Archives research scientist Steve Puglia, director of the special project division for still and motion films.

Montana History Day Winners Announced

Twenty-seven students representing four Montana schools were winners at the eleventh annual Montana History Day competition—"Geography in History: People . . . Places . . . Ideas"—held at the Montana Historical Society and the Capitol on April 23. The top two winners of each category attended the National History Day competition at the University of Maryland in College Park, June 12-16. They are:

C. R. Anderson Middle School, Helena—First place, Junior Group Media, "A Wild and Majestic River: The Significance of the Yellowstone Through Time," by Andrea Wardinsky, Elizabeth Addis, Mak Kakuk, Marken Orser, and Michael McCarvel; Second place, Junior Group Project, "Virginia City and Alder Gulch: Montana's Golden Legacy," by Melissa Poulsen, Ann McCauley, Elise Bailey, and Molly Simasko; Second place, Junior Group Media, "Evelyn Cameron: A Changing Landscape Captured in a Woman's Perspective," by Lisa Willis, Meridith Olsen, Mandy Martin, Kelly Keegan, and Rachael Barnes.

Somers School, Somers—First place, Junior Individual Performance, "Pictures From the Past—A Look at Butte," by Lindsay Louden.

Cayuse Prairie School, Kalispell—First place, Junior Historical Papers, "A Highway to History Movement," by Jenny Washtak; Second place, Junior Individual Performance, "People and Places in Time: Life in Bannack," by Dawn Gregg.

Montana City School—First place, Junior Group Performance, "A Chief Named Joseph," by Adrianne Mittelstaedt and RaeAnn Blodgett; Second place, Junior Group Performance, "The Last Cry," by Katie Suenram, DeLacy Williams, and Trisha Smith; First place, Junior Group Project, first place, "Copper: Was It Really King?" by Mark Ferriter and Erin Ferriter; First place, Junior Individual Project, "Montana's Water Resources and Top Industries: A Fragile Relationship," by Kim Tallent; Second place, Junior Individual Project, "Lewis and Clark Caverns," by Holle Ruffatto; Second place, Junior Historical Papers, "From Cabbage to Sauerkraut," by Lisa Patzer.

Other ribbon winners are: Corey Johnson and Jo Anna Miller, both of Helena; Jacob Peacock, Aaron Dana, Shayne Saylor, Mike Byers, Jason Basden, Kristy Dana, Mandy Adams, and Marrea McHenry, all of Kalispell; Katie Allen, Judith Gap; Molly Hoyne, Jennifer Schmitt, and John Murray, all of Montana City.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Modern Masters: The Poindexter Collection's Abstract Artists," Northeast Gallery, through December 20, 1994 |
| | "Cutapuis—The Man Who Talks Not: The Art of John L. Clarke," Montana Reflections Gallery, until November 26, 1994 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| August 24 | "The Art of Fixing Abstract Art: The Challenges of Conserving the Poindexter Collection," lecture by Randy Ash, paintings conservator at the Rocky Mountain Conservation Center of Denver |
| September 16 | "Modern Masters' Influence on Montana's Contemporary Artists," panel discussion with artists Neil Jussila, Harold Schlotzhauer, and Susan Stewart |
| October 13–15 | Montana History Conference, Red Lodge, Montana |
| October 20–23 | Western History Association Conference, Albuquerque, New Mexico |

Summer and Fall Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | To Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8–6, weekends and holidays, 9–5After Labor Day: Monday—Friday, 8–5, Saturday, 9–5; Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Library/Archives | Monday—Friday, 8–5. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday—Friday, 1–5. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | To Labor Day: Tuesday—Sunday, 12–5 (tours on the hour through 4)After Labor Day: Tuesday—Saturday, 12–5 (tours on the hour through 4) |
| Capitol | Through Labor Day: Monday—Saturday 10–5 (guided tours on the hour through 4); Sunday 11–4 (guided tours on the hour through 3). After Labor Day: Self-guided tours daily 8–6 |

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

Montana (continued from page 1)

In a separate article, El Paso historian Sherry Smith tells the story of Geraldine Lucas, one of the first women to climb Grand Teton Mountain, a holdout homesteader in what would become Grand Teton National Park, and "eccentric" of her day who insisted on living life on her own terms.

Jack Havard, recently deceased and author of an article on Rimini for the Winter issue of Montana, contributes another colorful reminiscence, this time of his work as a young laborer in the St. Lawrence Mine of Butte in 1930.

In addition, national prize-winning author Elmer Kelton considers the problems of applying political correctness to history in a commentary titled, "Granddad's Guilt," and Laramie historian Phil Roberts relates the story of Wyoming's first health care cooperative—an organization founded jointly by cowboys and cattlemen not in the health care-conscious 1990s but in the open range days of the 1880s.

Bovey Collection (continued from page 1)

early 1900s. From the 1940s until Charles Bovey died in 1978, the Boveys worked to preserve and restore Virginia City and Nevada City. Sue Bovey, a former Society trustee, died in 1988.

When the Society learned that the material was being sold as collectibles to raise money for Virginia City and Nevada City attractions, it negotiated to purchase the entire collection for $115,000, some $13,000 below its appraised value. "Once dispersed in the private sector as collectibles," Cockhill said, "the collection could never be recreated."

A fund drive is underway to cover the purchase price. Major contributions have been made by the Schnitzler Foundation, D. A. Davidson Company, Montana Power Company, and Montana native and longtime Society supporter William Sherman, now living in Oregon. Anyone wishing to contribute to the fund may contact the Society at (406) 444-4706 for information.

Archive staff members currently are sorting, cataloging, and preparing the collection for public access.

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 32
No. 1

PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 32 No. 1 • Spring 1994

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAY 4 1994
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

What's Next in Montana

History has largely forgotten John H. Fouch, a seemingly unremarkable man who arrived in Montana in 1877 and took the first photographs of the Little Bighorn Battlefield, Chief Joseph, Curley, Two Moons, Liver-Eating Johnson, Yellowstone Kelly, and other famous frontier figures. Until recently, Fouch's photographs have remained unknown or incorrectly attributed to other photographers.

In the Spring issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, however, Los Angeles psychiatrist and historical researcher James S. Brust rescues Fouch from undeserved obscurity to trace Fouch's remarkable career as a pioneer photographer of Montana and the West.

In addition, Wyoming historian and writer Bruce Hampton completes the heroic, tragic story of the Battle of the Big Hole in Part II of his two-part series on one of Montana's most famous

continued on page 3

John H. Fouch, photographer

This likeness of Chief Joseph is one of two portraits of the Nez Percé leader taken by John H. Fouch in late October 1877.

Society Archives Receives International Grant

The Montana Historical Society has been awarded an International Partnerships Among Museums grant to create closer ties with cultural and heritage groups in Alberta, Canada. The grant, from the American Association of Museums, funds the exchange of staff between the Society and the Historic Sites and Archives Service of Alberta.

The two-phase project will begin this summer when Frits Pannekoek, director of Alberta's historic sites and archives, and Glenn Matich, deputy director of historic sites and archives for southern Alberta, will spend four weeks at the Society.

This fall Society staff members Kathryn Otto, state archivist, and Patricia McLaughlin, grant manager and local government program coordinator for the State Historic Preservation Office, will work in Alberta for four weeks.

The exchange project focuses on heritage resource management, marketing, and promotion of heritage and cultural tourism.

Smithsonian Features Cameron Collection In Tokyo Exhibit

Artifacts and photographs from the Montana Historical Society's Evelyn Cameron collection of glass plates, film negatives, photographs, diaries, and personal effects will be part of the Smithsonian Institution's 1994 American History exhibition in Japan.

The exhibit of more than 250 objects will be displayed at the Makuhari Messe Center near Tokyo from July 9 to August 31 during the American History Festival. Many of the items, including those from the Evelyn Cameron collection, have never been exhibited outside the United States.

Cameron, an Englishwoman who moved to Montana with her husband in 1889, photographed the life, scenery, and wildlife of southeastern Montana from 1894 until her death in 1928. Photographing Montana, 1894–1928, an exhibit created by the Montana Historical Society, opened at the Society in 1991.

The Society also produced a traveling exhibit which is circulating throughout Montana and the United States. Information for booking the traveling exhibit is available through the museum program by calling (406) 444-4710.

James W. Reger, Society Trustee, Dies

MHS trustee James W. Reger died in Billings of a brain tumor March 4. A member of the Society's governing Board of Trustees since 1980, Mr. Reger and his wife Jane moved to Montana in 1953, when he and a partner formed an oil exploration company in Billings.

Reger was a veteran of World War II and a graduate of the University of Iowa law school. He was active in numerous Billings civic organizations in addition to his work on behalf of the Montana Historical Society.

Society Seeks Proposals for History Conference

The Montana Historical Society is seeking proposals for papers, panels, presentations, and workshops for inclusion in the twenty-first Annual Montana History Conference to be held October 13–15 in Red Lodge, Montana. Presentations may be on any aspect of Montana's heritage, although special consideration will be given to those topics dealing with the history of mining, ethnicity, winter recreation, and south-central Montana.

Historians, local museums, libraries, college students, and independent researchers are asked to send brief descriptions of papers, panels, or presentations and biographical information about the participants by May 15, 1994, to Joan Haefer, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

■ The city of Anaconda and the State Historic Preservation Office and the Anaconda Local Development Corporation are seeking volunteers to conduct a historical and architectural survey of Anaconda's neighborhoods and the historic downtown area. Anyone interested in assisting with the project should contact Kimberly Currie Morrison or Connie Ternes Daniels at 307 E. Park, Room 309, Anaconda, MT 59711 or call (406) 563-5538 or 563-8492.

■ Society archivists Kathryn Otto and Ellie Arguimbau will present papers at the fifth Annual Montana State Genealogical Conference in Missoula on April 22–24.

Otto will speak on "Preserving Your Paper Heirlooms" and Arguimbau will discuss "Hidden People in the Archives." For information about the conference contact Paulette Parpart at (406) 721-2665.

■ The Butte Historical Society announces a $1,500 Ray Calkins Memorial Research Fellowship.

The fellowship is offered biennially for research on a subject relating to the history of Butte and Silver Bow County, in which part of the research must be conducted at the Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives in Butte, Montana.

Independent historians, graduate student, or scholars may apply by May 1, with the winner to be announced on June 1. For information call the Butte Historical Society at (406) 723-8262, ext. 306.

■ The annual meetings of the Montana Archaeological Association (MAA) and the Montana Archaeological Society (MAS) will be held April 29–May 1 at the Heritage Inn in Great Falls. For information on the MAA meeting, contact Richard Perriman at (406) 494-2147 and for information on the MAS meeting, contact Jack Fisher at (406) 994-5250.

■ The fourth Annual Mullan Conference sponsored by the Mineral County Museum and Historical Society, Superior, Montana, will be held May 14, at 1:00 P.M. at the old hospital in Superior. Topics to be discussed will include Captain John Mullan and the current status of the Mullan Road in Idaho and Montana. For further information contact Deb Davis, Curator, Mineral County Museum, P. O. Box 533, Superior, MT 59872.

What Is Happening In Montana History?

The Montana Post would like to receive press releases from other Montana organizations. We report events and activities related to Montana history from across the state. The Post is quarterly and appears in March, June, September, and December. Send your information to Post Editor, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., P.O. Box 201201, Helena, 59620-1201.

■ Bannack State Park near Dillon, Montana, will present a series of historical, recreational, and natural resource lectures and workshops on topics such as the history of gold discovery at Bannack, ghost towns in Montana, fly tying and casting, and wildflower identification. The lectures will be Saturday nights at 7:00 P.M., June 4 through August 27 at the old church in Bannack. The lectures are free, however there is a $3.00 vehicle fee to enter the park. For information call (406) 834-3413 or write 4200 Bannack Road, Dillon, MT 59725.

■ The fourth Annual Conference of the Eastern Montana Historical Society will be held in Havre, June 9–11. The conference is co-sponsored by the Clack Museum in Havre. The conference will feature talks by Jim Dullenty, Gary Wilson, William Thackerary, and Mary Clearman Blew. For information write Eugene T. Carroll, 2605 Raymond Place, Billings, MT 59102, or call (406) 245-0193.

■ The Western Outlaw-Lawman History Association's (WOLA) 1994 convention will be held in Deadwood, South Dakota, July 20–23. Authors and researchers in outlaw-lawman history scheduled to speak include Don Weibert and Barbara Hegne.

For information call Jim Dullenty, WOLA Publications Editor, P.O. Box 853, Hamilton, MT 59840, (406) 363-2662 or the WOLA office at 500 W. Walnut Street, Rawlins, WY 82301, (307) 324-8822.

■ The thirty-fifth Annual Western History Association Conference will be held in Denver, Colorado, October 11–14, 1995. Proposals for sessions or individual papers on any aspect of North American western history must be sent by September 1, 1994, to the committee chairs, Peter Iverson, Arizona State University, Department of History, Tempe, AZ 85287-2501, (602) 965-5778, and Gail Nomura, University of Michigan, Department of History, Ann Arbor, MI 48109-1045, (313) 764-6305.

■ The third Annual Symposium of the Center for the Study of the Pacific Northwest will be held November 3–5, 1994, in Seattle. The theme for the conference is "Power and Place in the American West." Participants include William Cronon, David Gutierrez, Patricia Nelson Limerick, James Ronda, Virginia Scharff, and Richard White. For information, call the Center at (206) 543-5790 or (206) 543-8656.

■ The National Park Service, the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency, the Historic Preservation Education Foundation, and the Society for Commercial Archeology will sponsor a three-day program, "Preserving the Recent Past," on November 10–12, 1994, in Chicago. The program will address the challenges of identifying, evaluating, documenting, maintaining, and preserving twentieth-century historic properties. For information call Tom Jester or Carol Gould at (202) 343-9578.

Photography Contest

The Society's State Historic Preservation Office is seeking entries for its 1994 Montana Preservation Poster Contest. The juried competition to select a black-and-white photograph of outdoor sculpture in Montana is open to professional and amateur photographers.

The sculpture may be modern or historic, representational or abstract, ecclesiastical or secular, private or public owned, free-standing or mounted on a building. It must, however, be permanently located in an outdoor setting other than a cemetery. For information call (406) 444-7715.

1994 Burlingame–Toole Competition Announced

The Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1994 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award. The award, named in honor of two of Montana's most admired history professors, will be given to the best article-length manuscript written by an undergraduate or graduate student on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a plaque, cash award, and publication of the article in Montana.

To be eligible, students must be enrolled in a college or university and must be sponsored by a faculty member from their institution.

Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 15, 1994. For application information, write Burlingame–Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, Montana 59620-1201.

Jane Graham Memorial

A memorial honoring Jane B. Graham, who died November 28, 1993, has been established to purchase books for the Montana Historical Society library.

During her career as a Bozeman bookstore owner, Graham found and then bought for the Society several hundred out-of-print books such as titles for the Teakle Cattle Industry collection, C. M. Russell publications, and works listed in Ramon Adams's The Rampaging Herd.

For information about the memorial contact Bob Clark, Montana Historical Society librarian, (406) 444-4787.

Montana Receives Third "Wrangler" For Outstanding Western Magazine Article

An article about the writings rather than the art of Charles M. Russell written by Raphael Cristy and published by Montana The Magazine of Western History has been named the "Outstanding Magazine Article in 1993" by the National Cowboy Hall of Fame. Bronze "Wrangler" trophies were presented to Cristy and Montana at the Hall's thirty-third Annual Western Heritage Awards ceremony. Montana Associate Editor Marilyn Grant and Business Manager Tammy Ryan attended the ceremony in Oklahoma City on March 19.

Marilyn Grant, associate editor, and Tammy Ryan, magazine business manager, display Montana's bronze "Wrangler" and the magazine issue that contains the prize-winning essay.

Cristy's award-winning essay revealing "Charlie's Hidden Agenda: Realism and Nostalgia in C. M. Russell's Stories about Indians," appeared in the Summer 1993 issue of Montana. The essay describes how Russell's published stories about Indians enabled his nineteenth-century non-Indian readers to appreciate Native American cultures.

This is the third time Montana has received this prestigious award. Previous winners of the Western Heritage bronze "Wrangler" trophies have been Jerry Keenan for his article, "Yellowstone Kelly: From New York to Paradise," which appeared in the Summer 1990 issue, and Peter Hassrick, whose article, "Western Art Museums: A Question of Style or Content," was in the Summer 1992 issue of Montana.

Montana History Day

The eleventh Annual Montana History Day is scheduled for Saturday, April 23, at the Montana Historical Society. This year's theme is "Geography and History: People . . . Places . . . Time."

As in the past, students from dozens of schools in Montana will take part in the event. Winners will have the opportunity to attend National History Day on the campus of the University of Maryland, College Park, June 12–16.

Montana History Day is sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and endorsed by the State Office of Public Instruction. For more information, call Joan Haefer, (406) 444-4794.

---

Montana (continued from page 1)

Indian battles. Tennessee historian Emmett Essin, meanwhile, paints a colorful portrait of one of the frontier's most maligned yet indispensable adjuncts to the United States military—the army mule. Essin surveys the army's use of mules in campaigns across the West and around the world from mid-nineteenth century down to the present day.

Also in the Spring issue, retired Colorado lawyer Eugene C. Tidball recounts General William T. Sherman's march through Montana in 1883, when Sherman, just before retirement, toured the West to assess conclusion of the army's decades-long effort to make the frontier safe for white settlement. Tidball uses the diaries and memoirs of his distant relative, Colonel John C. Tidball, who accompanied Sherman, to tell the tale of the Sherman party's three-month, 11,000-mile trip through Montana and the West.

In companion historical commentaries, Michael P. Malone and George M. Dennison, presidents of Montana State University and The University of Montana respectively, trace the birth and evolution of Montana higher education from Montana statehood in 1889 down to the present, and western writer and English professor Mary Clearman Blew reviews the work of Montana author William Kittredge with special emphasis on Kittredge's most recent book, Hole in the Sky.

Society Recognizes Employees' Service

Montana Historical Society employees were honored for their service recently. Bob Clark, librarian, was honored for fifteen years of service; Joan Haefer, education officer, and Vivian Hayes, library assistant, for ten years of service.

Mark Baumler, state archaeologist; Ken Stockburger, museum information officer; and Glenda Bradshaw, Montana The Magazine of Western History assistant editor, were honored for five years of service each to the Society.

Rita Cortright is New Administrative Assistant

Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill has announced the appointment of Rita Cortright as administrative assistant to the director. Cortright, who previously worked at the Fiscal Analyst's Office and the Nature Conservancy in Helena, replaces Dolores "Dode" Brown, who retired in January.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Buildings in the Balance: Preserving Montana's Historic Places," Northeast Gallery, through June 20"Modern Masters: The Poindexter Collection's Abstract Artists," Northeast Gallery, July 7-December 20. Opening program July 7, 7-9 P.M."Cutapuis—The Man Who Talks Not: The Art of John L. Clarke," Montana Reflections Gallery |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| April 20 | Lyndel Meikle, "Deer Lodge Ranchers vs. the Anaconda Copper Mining Company," 10 A.M., Haynes Auditorium |
| April 23 | Montana History Day competition, grades 6-12, judging open to public from 10-12 A.M., Montana Historical Society and the Capitol |
| April 29-May 7 | Montana Archaeology Week |
| May 18 | Dr. Ron Loge, "The Medical Aspects of the Lewis and Clark Expedition," 10 A.M., Haynes Auditorium |
| May 21 | Family Day, Celebrating International Museum Day, 12:30-3:00 P.M., Montana Historical Society |
| May 25 | Friends of the Society annual field trip to Livingston |
| June 12-16 | National History Day, University of Maryland, delegation of Montana students will participate |

Spring and Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | April 1–May 28: Mon.–Fri., 8 A.M. to 5 P.M., Sat., 9 A.M. to 5 P.M., Closed Sun. and holidays. May 29–September 5: Mon. –Fri., 8 A.M. to 6 P.M., Sat., Sun. and holidays, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. |
| Library/Archives | Mon.–Fri., 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Mon.–Fri., 1 P.M. TO 5 P.M.Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | April 1–May 28: Tues.–Sat., noon to 5 P.M. May 31–September 4: Tues.–Sun., noon to 5 P.M. Tours begin on the hour; to arrange a tour call 444-4789. |
| Capitol | April 1–June 12: to arrange a tour call 444-4789.June 13–Sept. 5: tours begin on the hour, Mon.–Sat. 10 A.M. to 5 P.M., Sun. 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. |

Dave Walter and Ginger K. Renner Receive Honorary Doctorates From The University of Montana

Dave Walter, Montana Historical Society research historian, and Ginger K. Renner, a consultant on C. M. Russell art for Montana The Magazine of Western History, received honorary doctorate degrees from The University of Montana during Charter Day ceremonies February 17 in Missoula.

While a graduate student in The University of Montana's history department, Walter served as a teaching assistant to history Professor K. Ross Toole and as associate editor of the Montana University Press.

In addition to his Society work, Walter is the author of three books and numerous history and historiographical articles that have been published in a variety of newspapers and journals. Walter was the reference librarian at the Montana Historical Society for fourteen years before his appointment as research historian in 1993.

Renner, of Paradise Valley, Arizona, whose specialty is the art of C. M. Russell, is an art historian and a published author. She is the former owner of art galleries and has served as the honorary chairman of the C. M. Russell Auction of Original Western Art in Great Falls. Among her numerous awards are the Outstanding Service Award from the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, and the President's Award of Merit from The University of Montana.

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST

P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

~~Second Class Postage Paid at Helena, MT 59601 and Additional Mailing Offices~~

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 31
No. 2

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 31 No. 2 · Summer 1993

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JUL 26 1993
PLEASE RETURN
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Philanthropist Isabel Haynes Dies

Montana philanthropist Isabel Haynes died April 7 in Bozeman at the age of ninety-three. Her donations of money and special collections to libraries, schools, and museums, including the Montana Historical Society, contributed to the preservation of history and advancement of education across the state. Isabel Haynes was the wife of Jack Ellis Haynes (1884–1962) and daughter-in-law of F. Jay Haynes (1853–1921), both photographers renowned for their work in late nineteenth- and early twentieth-century Montana.

In 1978 Isabel Haynes donated to the Society photographs by her late husband and father-in-law, which included some 23,500 glass and film negatives as well as cameras, equipment, artifacts, and memorabilia used throughout their careers. F. Jay Haynes was the official photographer for the Northern Pacific Railroad (1884–1904) and for Yellowstone National Park (1887–1916).

"Montana and the entire nation owe a giant debt of gratitude to Isabel Haynes for keeping the history of Yellowstone National Park and the Northern Pacific Railroad alive," Society Director Brian Cockhill said. In addition, researchers recently have begun using the Haynes photographs to study vegetation and environmental changes in Yellowstone Park, according to Lory Morrow, Society photo archivist.

Upon Mrs. Haynes's death, the Society received $15,000 to help support the Haynes collection, a dining room set belonging to her husband's paternal grandfather, and a bookcase belonging to F. Jay Haynes.

Haynes photographs appear in Northern Pacific Views: The Photography of F. Jay Haynes (1983) and F. Jay Haynes, Photographer (1981), both published by the Montana Historical Society Press.

ynes Foundation Coll., MHS Photograph Archives

Photographer Jack Ellis Haynes and wife Isabel Nauerth Haynes (1960)

Summer Montana

What did Charlie Russell really think of Indians? Was Norman Maclean a Custer buff? And what exactly was the role of Crazy Horse in the Battle of the Little Bighorn?

These and other questions involving Native Americans and the literary West highlight the next issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Raphael Cristy has taken a close look at the writings, rather than the art, of Charles M. Russell to find that Russell had a hidden agenda toward Indians: at a time few Montanans and few westerners were particularly sympathetic toward Native peoples, Russell's stories argued implicitly not only for sympathy but for understanding between the races.

Joan Bishop, meanwhile, describes how Sister Providencia, in her labors on behalf of homeless Indians of Hill 57 near Great Falls, ultimately helped reverse federally mandated termination and relocation programs of the 1950s.

Shirley Leckie describes the final days of Elizabeth Bacon Custer's marriage to

continued on page 3

Bradley Fellow Announced

Evelyne Pickett, a doctoral candidate in the American history program in the University of Idaho in Moscow, is the 1993 Bradley Fellowship recipient. The $3,000 stipend enables Pickett to continue her research of transient labor on the frontier in Idaho, Montana, and western Canada in the Society's library for four weeks this summer. Bradley fellows also are invited to submit an article to Montana The Magazine of Western History for possible publication.

The Bradley Fellowship, funded by a private endowment, began in 1981. In recent years, two fellowships were awarded. Due to low interest rates, which have reduced income to the fund, only one was offered in 1993.

Mark Your Calendar!

Higher education, Native American issues, and "jerks" in Montana history will highlight the 1993 Montana History Conference in Missoula, October 21–23. The conference, held in conjunction with the celebration of the centennial of Montana higher education, will offer lectures and symposiums related to a variety of topics in Montana history.

Dayton Duncan, author of Out West and, most recently, Miles from Nowhere, will be this year's banquet speaker.

A schedule of events will be available in advance of the conference. For information call Joan Haefer, Society education officer, (406) 444-4794.

- "Images of the Oregon Trail: Yesterday and Today," is the theme of a symposium to be held September 16–18 at the Central Wyoming College in Riverton, Wyoming. Sponsored by the Wyoming Council for the Humanities, the symposium will include a guided tour of nearby Oregon Trail sites, lectures, art exhibit, and evening entertainment, all included in the $25.00 activity fee. For more information contact Central Wyoming College, Humanities Division, 2660 Peck Ave., Riverton, Wyo. 82501 or call (307) 856-9291, ext. 212 or 219.

- "Women in 19th-Century Rural America" is the focus of an interdisciplinary symposium sponsored by the Dinsmore Homestead Foundation in Florence, Kentucky, October 8–9. For program and registration information send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Symposium Committee, The Dinsmore Homestead Foundation, P.O. Box 453, Burlington, Ken. 41005 or call (606) 586-6127.

- The first convention of the Will James Society will be held at the Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico, September 24–26. The newly founded, nonprofit corporation is dedicated to preserving the life and works of the cowboy author and artist and to fund a permanent Will James Museum.

  Memberships to the society will include a subscription to the Society's newsletter, Cowboys North and South. For information about membership fees and the upcoming conference, contact the Will James Society, P.O. Box 8207, Roswell, N. Mex. 88202.

- Call for Papers. A colloquium of The Rupert's Land Research Centre (RLRC) will be held at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, May 25–27, 1994. The program committee extends an invitation to individuals or groups for submissions related to the Canadian West, with particular emphasis on the fur trade along the Saskatchewan, Athabasca, or Peace rivers, and in the Rocky Mountains. A banquet, musical evening, and tour of the Fort Edmonton archaeological dig are planned. Deadline for proposals is September 30, 1993. Inquiries should be directed to Professor I. S. MacLaren, Canadian Studies Program, The University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2E1 or call (403) 492-5086.

- The Montana Committee for the Humanities (MCH) will host a number of lectures, programs, and exhibits of historical interest in western Montana this summer and fall.

  Exhibits include "Sacred Encounters," currently at the Museum of the Rockies in Bozeman where it will remain through September. The exhibit explores contact between Father DeSmet and the Salish people. The Montana Agriculture Center in Fort Benton will feature "Landmarks in a Sea of Grass," a photographic exhibit of country grain elevators by Bruce Selyem. And beginning in July, the Polson Flathead Historical Museum will display historical pictures of the Mission Valley (circa 1850–1930).

  A "Celebration of Life Stories of American Indian Women" is a three-day event to be held in Polson September 16–18, and as part of the MCH Speakers Bureau program, Kathleen and Scott Crichton will present "Montana Memories: Folk Songs of Oral History" in Brockton, September 29.

  For more information contact Yvonne Gritzner, Montana Committee for the Humanities, P.O. Box 8036, Missoula, Mont. 59807 or call (406) 243-6022.

- The University of California, Berkeley, has established an oral history project titled "Western Mining in the Twentieth Century." The series provides comprehensive documentation of the contemporary minerals industry and includes specific volumes about Montana with recollections by key figures in Montana's mining industry. For more information write Eleanor Swent, Project Director, Western Mining in the Twentieth Century Series, Regional Oral History Office of The Bancroft Library, University of California, Berkeley, Berkeley, Calif. 94720 or call (415) 642-7395.

- The "Masters of the Taos Tradition: The Gerald Peters Collection" exhibit is currently on display at the C.M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. Paintings by seventeen renowned artists of the late nineteenth century, including Joseph Henry Sharp, vividly portray the variant landscape, distinctive light, and native populations associated with northern New Mexico and the village of Taos. The privately owned collection, seen for the first time in its entirety, will remain on display through September 6. For more information call (406) 727-8787.

- The Gallatin County Historical Society invites interested persons to submit papers for its Fifth Annual Pioneer Museum History Conference to be held November 6 at the Pioneer Museum, 317 West Main Street, Bozeman.

  Deadline for submissions is October 27. Suggested topics are family and business histories, personal accounts of growing up in the Gallatin valley area, early day education, farming, ranching, politics, public events, and tragedies and triumphs. In addition, a "how to" workshop on research methods and writing papers for the conference will be offered later this summer. For more information about the conference and workshop, contact Dennis Seibel, museum director, at (406) 585-1311 or Dan A. Johnson, conference chairman, at (406) 994-1895.

- A membership with the Anaconda Deer Lodge County Historical Society now includes a subscription to a quarterly six-page newsletter. The publication features stories about local personalities and events of historical significance to the area. For more information about the newsletter and membership, write the Anaconda Deer Lodge County Historical Society, City Hall Center, 401 E. Commercial, Anaconda, Mont. 59711.

- It's time for The Great Pikes Peak Cowboy Poetry Gathering, to be held August 13–15 in Colorado Springs, Colorado. This year's celebration of the West welcomes cowboy-poet-humorist Baxter Black and will include a western art auction, street dance, western trade show, activities for children, and presentations by storytellers, musicians, and artisans from across the United States. For more information contact the Pikes Peak Library District, P.O. Box 1579, Colorado Springs, Colo. 80901-1579 or call (719) 531-6333, extension 1150 or 1151.

What Is Happening In Montana History?

The Montana Post would like to receive press releases from other Montana organizations. We report events and activities related to Montana history from across the state. The Post is quarterly and appears in March, June, September, and December. Send your information to Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., P.O. Box 201201, Helena, 59620-1201.

Wallace Stegner's Literary Legacy Defines the West

"The passing of Wallace Stegner marked the end of a career that taught us many things about ourselves and the history of the West," said Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill in response to the author's death April 13 in Santa Fe, New Mexico. "Stegner's was a powerful voice not only of the West, but for the West," he added. "Whether or not one agreed with what he wrote and said, Stegner defined the landscape of the West and forced us to consider what development of its resources has meant to its physical and human history."

Stegner was born in Iowa in 1909, and his family homesteaded on the Montana-Saskatchewan border in 1915. After they went bust, Stegner's family moved to Great Falls, where they lived for a time before moving to other western communities.

Author of more than two dozen books including Angle of Repose, which won him a Pulitzer Prize in 1972, Stegner was honored as a writer, teacher, and historian. "We have to keep our ties with the past to learn and grow," Stegner said. "Cut loose from the past, and we become nothing." That lesson is an important one for the Society to remember, Cockhill said.

Stegner most recently appeared in the summer 1990 issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History. In an interview with historian Richard Etulain, Stegner said of Montana: "That's one of the reasons why Montana seems to me to get more and more characteristically western—it survives in the old fashion."

MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY
Where Montana's History Lives
Society operating programs:
Library Archives Program
Publications
Museum Program
State Historic Preservation Office

A stagecoach, by an unknown artist, with horses and riders crafted by John B. "Jack" Weaver (ca. 1956) and fabricated from plastic, wood, wax, and leather, is on display in the Capitol Case at the south entrance of the State Capitol. The art piece is on loan from the Montana Historical Society Museum. The display was created by Roberta Jones-Wallace, museum exhibition specialist.

Museum Receives Federal Grant

A $28,427 grant from the Institute of Museum Services (IMS), a federal agency that offers general operating money to museums, has supported work in the Society's museum over the past year.

A portion of the grant supports two Native American interns. Faith Bad Bear (Crow) and Denelle Bostwick (Blackfeet) have worked with museum staff in researching the history of cultural artifacts and assisted in their care and preservation. According to Sue Near, museum services administrator, the interns have provided great assistance to the museum and will return to their communities "with knowledge of Montana Historical Society museum operations." In addition, the grant money has sustained a part-time museum technician position to work with collections care and storage.

Remaining monies will help fund planning for future audience and visitor surveys to determine what the public enjoys most at the Society and what its future role should be in Montana's tourist industry.

Montana (continued from page 1)

her famous husband, George Armstrong Custer, in an excerpt from Leckie's new biography of Libbie Custer, and Greg Michno relies on Native American sources to counter the standard view of Crazy Horse's sweep to the north in the final defeat of Custer and his troopers atop Last Stand Hill.

In addition, Robert M. Utley tells of the Custer biography that Norman Maclean tried for ten years to write and never completed, and Fred Erisman takes a retrospective look at the series of five Montana-based novels of A. B. Guthrie, Jr., including The Big Sky.

History Day Winners Announced

Fifteen students representing three Montana schools were winners at the tenth annual Montana History Day held at the Montana Historical Society on April 24. "Communication in History: The Key to Understanding" was the central theme in presentations made by more than eighty students from across Montana. "This is a very demanding contest," Joan Haefer, Society education officer, said, "and we are very proud of the children and their teachers who put in the extra time to help these kids succeed."

The winners, who will attend the National History Day competition at the University of Maryland in College Park, June 13–17, are:

C.R. Anderson Middle School, Helena—Junior Historical Papers: "Mail Systems in Montana: Past to Present" by Sarah Nelson; Junior Individual Performance: "The War Between Us" by Hilary Fairbrother; Junior Group Media: "Montana's Copper Curtain of Silence" by Coy Egbert, Scott Bryan, Ben Alke and Johannah Heller, and "Indian Sign Among North American Indians" by Hannah Wong and Shannon McElroy.

Cayuse Prairie School, Kalispell—Junior Historical Papers: Fingers of Communication" by Ryan Benson; Junior Individual Project: "Custer: A Failure to Communicate" by Kelly Fosbery.

Montana City School—Junior Individual Project: "Braille, Communication for the Blind" by Sean Sichelstiel; Junior Group Project: "Navaho Code Talkers" by Allison James and Carmen Barnes, and "Montana Native Americans: How They Communicated" by Kimberly Tallent and Jaymie Keller.

Montana Historical Society Honors Friends at Spring Luncheon

(left to right) Society Director Brian Cockhill with Friends volunteers Betty LaSalle, Hariot Van Tine, Lora Vance, and Joan Haefer, Society education officer.

Members of the Friends of the Society volunteer organization were honored at a luncheon April 21 at the Colonial Inn in Helena. Society Director Brian Cockhill recognized sixty-two volunteers, praising their help in "providing the services the people of Montana deserve."

This year's Director's Award was given to Lora Vance, chairman of the Friends organization. In addition, Special Volunteer Awards were presented to Hariot Van Tine for the 396 hours she gave to the Society's library. Betty LaSalle was named for her work as a museum tour guide, and Loretta Lindell for organizing volunteers for special receptions and functions.

Other volunteers honored for their work in departments throughout the Society included Helga Baussus, Charlotte Thomas, and Forrest Jackson, all of whom volunteered more than 100 hours. Loretta Bible, Bess Braun, Mary Brewer, Jane Addy, and Doris Hitt all contributed more than two hundred hours, and Audrey Levitan volunteered more than three hundred hours.

Persons interested in joining the Friends should contact Joan Haefer at 444-4794.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana's Historic Places," in Northeast Gallery, celebrates historic buildings and preservation efforts in Montana |
| | "Montana's Many Faces" portraiture in art, Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit |
| | George Catlin lithographs from North American Indian Portfolio in the Montana Historical Society's lobby |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 21–23 | Montana History Conference, Missoula, Montana |

Summer Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 6 P.M.Weekends and holidays, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M.Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 P.M. Tours begin on the hour. Last tour at 4 P.M. Closed Monday. Closed after Labor Day except for tours made by appointment. |

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Bergetta Hubbard; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

S
978.6
H6m
V. 31
No. 4

SERIALS
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 31 No. 4 • Winter 1993

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
FEB 2 8 1994
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

John L. Clarke Exhibit Opens

Doug O'Looney

Jim Warner, museum preparator (right), and Roberta Jones-Wallace, museum exhibits designer (left), unveil the carved wood frieze A Blackfeet Encampment at the opening of "Cutapuis, The Man Who Talks Not" in the Society's Montana Reflections Gallery.

John L. Clarke, whose work is featured in the exhibit that opened December 4, carved the 4' x 14' frieze at the Society in the 1950s. The piece, which weighs about 1,000 pounds, was on loan to the Montana School for the Deaf and Blind in Great Falls until its return to the Society, where it will remain permanently.

Clarke (1881–1970), who was unable to speak or hear as a result of scarlet fever suffered as a toddler, worked in his studio at East Glacier. The Society's exhibit includes one hundred pieces of Clarke's art, including wood carvings, pastels, oils, watercolors, illustrated letters, and charcoal drawings.

Joyce Clarke Turvey, the artist's daughter, donated and loaned many items to the Society and assisted with other aspects of the exhibit.

Society Honors Award Recipients

Ivy Brubaker of Terry, Montana, the 1993 recipient of the Trustees Award, was honored at the Twentieth Annual Montana History Conference in Missoula in October. Trustees Award recipients are selected for their contributions to preserving and promoting Montana history.

Brubaker has recorded local histories in the Terry area, has been a leader of the Prairie County Museum, and spearheaded efforts to give the nationally acclaimed photographic work of Evelyn Cameron a permanent home in the Montana Historical Society.

The Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History in 1993 was awarded to John Phillip Reid, professor at New York University School of Law, for his article "Certainty of Vengeance: The Hudson's Bay Company and Retaliation in Kind Against Indian Offenders in New Caledonia." The article appears in the Winter 1993 issue of Montana.

The Merrill G. Burlingame/K. Ross Toole Award for best student essay was presented to John P. Herron for "No Colored Trade Solicited: Montana's Black Press and the Struggle for Civil Rights." Herron completed his master's degree at Montana State University and is now in the doctoral history program at the University of New Mexico.

Betty Blue Whiteman of Richey and Orville Quick of Circle received the Peter Yegan, Jr., Award presented by the Museums Association of Montana for excellence in fostering the collection, preservation, and interpretation of the state's heritage.

Two-part Series on Battle of Big Hole Begins in Winter Montana

If the battle of the Little Bighorn in 1876 is Montana's most famous Indian engagement, then the flight of the Nez Perces the following year should stand as the state's most poignant. And of the heroism, ironies, and tragedies bound up with that cross-country travail, few events encompass them all quite like the Battle of the Big Hole.

Using sources, descriptions, and viewpoints from both sides—Indian and white—Bruce Hampton retells the Battle of the Big Hole in the first of a two-part series in the Winter issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Also for the Winter issue, Laurie Mercier, former head of the Montana Historical Society's oral history program, assesses the late nineteenth and early

continued on page 3

Fellowship Encourages Research in Collections

The Society again will offer the James H. Bradley Fellowship to encourage research drawing on its archival and library collections. The $3,000 fellowship, funded by a private endowment, began in 1981.

Since then, fellowships have been awarded to senior researchers and graduate students in history or a related field. Competition is not restricted to professional historians, however. Applicants must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write historical articles. The recipient must be in residence at the Society for a minimum of four weeks between June 1 and September 30, 1994, and must submit an article for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Applications must be postmarked no later than March 28, 1994. For further information, write Bradley Fellowship Committee, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, Montana 59620-1201.

PLEASE RETURN

Society's Permanent Collections Grow in 1993

The Montana Historical Society received more than five hundred donations from more than two hundred fifty individuals, organizations, and businesses in 1993. The donations consist of photographs, books, library materials, personal and business papers, organization and government archival records, and museum artifacts.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals concerning procedures: Robert Clark, library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Lory Morrow, photograph archives (444-4714); or Kirby Lambert, museum (444-4710).

---

Alberta Culture
Alberta Culture/Canadian Plains Research Center
Alberta Historical Resources Library
Minerva Allen
Carol Alverson
Amon Carter Museum
Leroy "Andy" Anderson
R. Joseph Anderson
Catherine E. Armitage
Geraldine F. Austin
Grace Bates
Pat Beck
Dennis Becklin
Donald Becklin
Jeffrey Belcher
Ben Klindworth Agency
Umberto Benedetti
Leo A. Benolken
Billings League of Women Voters
Alice Blakely
Ron Boggs
Glenda Bradshaw
Ed Brady
Leah Brickett
Fred W. Britain
Joseph M. Brooke
Stephen Browning
Don Brunell
Martha J. Bruske
Buffalo Bill Historical Center
John J. Burke
Ron Burns
Edith Smith Cable
John Caffrey
T. J. Carnes
Burson D. Carpenter
Jack K. Castor
Central Nevada Historical Society
Champlain Society
Chico Museum
Margaret and Jack Chivers
Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints
City of Portland
City of Sacramento
City of Seattle
Robert M. Clark
Jim Coates
Sally Cockrum
Giles Cokelet
Stuart Conner
Donald D. Cook
Patti Kennedy Cox
Crowley, Haughey, Hanson, Toole & Dietrich
Mrs. Robert Cullen
Dorothy Curry
Victor C. Dahl
Daughters of the American Revolution
Philip D. Davis
Dave Davison
Sid Depner
Frank DeRosa
Sally Garrett Dingley
Ray Dockstader
Katherine Doeden
Barbara Duprel
Eastern Montana College Library
George Eddlemon
Kermit Edmonds
Margaret Johnson Edwards
Yvonne and Jim Ellis
Henry Elwood
Jane B. English
Emmett S. Epley
Gordon Evans
Florida Department of State
Jodie A. Foley
Nancy Marks Foote
John Fraley
James Franks
Friends of the Assiniboines Foundation
Friends of the Mansfield Library
Dr. Robert D. and Susan O. Friess
Paul Andrew Frisch
Lynn V. Fritchman
Donna Fritz
Paul F. Fugleberg
W. George Fultz
Mary M. Gabse
Kenneth H. Gardner
Genealogical Society of Utah
German Historical Institute
Donna L. Gilbert
Glenbow Museum
Gough, Shanahan, Johnson, and Waterman
Mary Maddox Grandell
Carole A. Granger
Lee Graves
Great Falls Public Library
David O. Gunn
Harding Antiques
Howard O. Hardy
Dorothy Harkins
Mike Harlow
Josephine Dawson Harris
Mr. and Mrs. James Hawks
Jack Hayne
Estate of Isabel M. Haynes
Heavy Dreamer Press
Helena Middle School
Inez R. Herrig
Whitney Hibbard
Richard Hines
Lena Hoch
Marvin C. Hoffer
Pat Holly
J. D. Holmes
Claude R. Hookman
Allan G. Hooper
John Hooten
Dora Howard
Illinois State Archives
Independent Order of Oddfellows
Pat Jacobs
Jeannette Rankin Peace Resource Center
Charles Jelinek
Bonnie E. Johnson
Coby Johnson
Blanche Judge
Rose Jurkovich
Frank H. Karlson
Dorthea Kennedy
Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives
Kern County Museum
Helen Johnson Kleffner
Eloyce Kockler
Adell F. Krebs
Robert R. Lacy
Kirby Lambert
Lawler-Lollar Genealogical Society
Julie Leonard
John Libby Family Association
Life of Montana Insurance Company Liquidation Estate, Charles E. Erdmann
Henry Loble
Madison County Clerk and Recorder
Madison Valley Library Board
Jana Maier
Masonic Lodge Ottawa 51
Steve McCarter
Troy McCormick
Harriett Meloy
Jerry Metcalf
Carolyn and Michael Mhoon, in memory of Marshall Edward Mhoon
Midnight Films
Miles City Genealogical Society
Miles City Public Library
Shirley Miller Estate, Clark Pyfer
Milwest
Mary Mollander
Montana Authors Coalition
Montana Committee for the Humanities
Montana Friendship Force
Montana Historical Society:
  Board of Trustees
  Director's Office
  Merchandising
Montana LPN Association
Montana League of Women Voters
Montana Library Association
Montana Preservation Alliance
Montana, State of:
  Department of Fish, Wildlife & Parks
  Governor's Office
Montana State Democratic Women's Club
Bob Morgan
Lory Morrow
Ed Morrow
National Archives and Records Administration
National Building Museum
National Park Service
Sue Near
Nebraska State Historical Society
Nuriel Nesbitt
Mr. & Mrs. Howard Ness
Laura Nicholson
Catherine P. Noel
Vi O'Connor
Yunosuke Ohkura
Jane Galbraith O'Neill
Elizabeth Osborne
Mrs. Nola Otte
Edith Palmer
Paris Gibson Square Museum of Art
Richard Parks
Malcolm Patten
Barbara Paul
Mrs. Forrest Payne
Mr. & Mrs. Gerald J. Pesman
Barnet Phillips III
Thomas H. Ploss
Mary K. Pollard
Barry Potyondi
Virginia Pruett
Orville M. Quick
Rand McNally & Company
Rebekah Assembly of Montana
Wayne Joseph Repac
Belle Richards
Rocky Mountain Laboratory
Clara Cramer Rogers, in memory of Norman Rogers
Dick Rogers
Merle Rognrud
Roosevelt County Library
Murray F. Rose
Mary Lou Skinner Ross
Lee Rostad
San Bernardino County Museum
Saskatchewan Archives Board
Elizabeth Denny Saxman
Margaret M. Scariano
Paul Schullery
Ann Seagraves
Bruce Selyum
Bill Sharp
W. J. Shell
Lee Silliman
Society of American Archivists
Janet Sperry
St. Paul's Methodist Church
Emmett A. Stallcop
Sue B. Steele
Rick Stewart
Peter R. Story
Ruth Strain
Bertha and Robert Sullivan
Bill Summers
Andrew R. Supplee
Sweetgrass
Dorothy Thayer
The Westerners Los Angeles Corral
Claudia E. Thomas
Donald Thompson
Tree Branches
Mrs. C. M. Tunstall
United States:
  Army Corps of Engineers
  Bureau of Reclamation
  Department of Agriculture
University of Montana
University of the State of New York
University of Washington
Lee Wagoner
Kenneth C. Walcheck
Dave Walter
Thomas R. Wessel
Betty Blue Whiteman
Michael Willing
World Museum of Mining
Yellowstone Association
Robert F. Zion

SOS! Montana Project Seeks Sculpture Sleuths

The Montana Historical Society, Museums Association of Montana, and Montana Arts Council are launching the Save Outdoor Sculpture in Montana project (SOS! Montana) to locate, document, and raise public awareness about the condition of more than five hundred outdoor sculptures in the state.

Volunteers are needed for activities ranging from identifying sculptures for study to photography, site visits, and research. The information gathered will be entered in the Inventory of American Sculpture, a permanent database at the Museum of American Art, Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

Training workshops for volunteers begin in January 1994 and continue for six months in cities throughout Montana. SOS! Montana is funded by a $25,000 grant from the Smithsonian Institution. For further information, contact Patricia Bik (444-7715) at the Montana Historical Society.

Veterans Describe Military Experiences for Society's Oral History Project

The Montana Historical Society has completed a two-year project to record and transcribe oral histories by Montana veterans. More than sixty-five veterans of World War II and the Korean, Vietnam, and other conflicts were interviewed as part of the "20th-Century Montana Veterans Oral History Project" supported with monies from the legislature's Cultural and Aesthetic Grants fund.

Specific topics in the project include training at Camp Rimini, use of war dogs for World War II reconnaissance missions, women veterans, discrimination, and Native American warrior traditions in relation to military service.

The oral history program plans to continue its interviews of Korean and Vietnam veterans. Anyone wishing to participate or knowing a veteran who might participate, should contact State Archivist Kathryn Otto at 444-4775.

Magazine (continued from page 1)

twentieth-century experience of Irish women in Anaconda. Mercier's work is based substantially on oral history interviews of Irish Anaconda men and women.

In addition, magazine editorial board member Clark C. Spence provides a look at the many plots, scams, and schemes used in western mining to defraud the unwary investor, and mining consultant Jack Havard writes of his experiences as a youth in working a mine near Rimini in the 1920s. Judith Fabry describes the development of Sun River irrigation settlements near Great Falls down to the 1920s, and Kalispell author John Fraley tells the story of Doris and Dan Huffine's first winter of marriage at a remote Montana outpost.

Society Museum Plans Saddlery Exhibit

Saddles and saddlemakers are the focus of an upcoming exhibit at the Society. Museum Collections Curator Kirby Lambert is seeking saddles or related gear made in Montana and used for stock, rodeo, cavalry, racing, and polo as well as saddles made and used by Native Americans.

If you have such equipment made or used in Montana that you would loan to the Society for the exhibit, please call Kirby at (406) 444-4711.

Two Society Employees Retire at Year's End

Dolores "Dode" Brown, administrative assistant to Montana Historical Society Director Brian Cockhill, is retiring after twenty-two years of service to the State of Montana. Brown's first job at the Society was in the library. She has served with seven directors since coming to the Society in 1971.

Also retiring after nineteen years of service is Jim Warner, Montana Historical Society museum preparator. Warner originally began preparing museum exhibits for the Libby Dam Visitor Center in 1974. He has worked on numerous exhibits for the Society, including the Haynes and the Montana Homeland exhibits.

Montana Historical Society photograph archivist Delores "Lory" Morrow was presented a twenty-year pin recently commemorating her service to the Society.

BULLETIN BOARD

■ The Friends of Fort Union Trading Post and the Fort Union Trading Post National Historic Site announce a $1,000 Fort Union Fellowship for 1994. The annual fellowship supports a researcher wishing to explore and produce an article or monograph on an aspect of Fort Union Trading Post history. Applications must be postmarked by February 1, 1994. For additional information contact Paul Hedren, Chair, Fort Union Fellowship Committee, Fort Union Trading Post NHS, RR 3 Box 71, Williston, ND 58801 (701) 572-9083.

■ A special symposium titled "Little Bighorn Legacy" will be held at the Sheraton Hotel in downtown Billings August 3–6, 1994. The symposium will feature presentations from leading historians and scholars of the 1876 Battle of the Little Bighorn, including Alvin Josephy, Paul Andrew Hutton, Brian W. Dippie, Paul Hedren, Raymond Demallie, Jerome Greene, Joseph Porter, Doug Scott, Richard Fox, and Paul Stekler. The symposium also will include special luncheons, evening banquet, and tour of the Little Bighorn National Battlefield Monument. Registration information and other details will be forthcoming in this and other publications.

■ Call for papers. The Plains Indian Museum of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, will hold its Plains Indian Seminar September 29–October 2, 1994, addressing the theme "Power and Beauty: Horses of the Plains Indians."

Individuals are invited to submit, by April 15, 1994, an abbreviated resume and a 450-word abstract or completed papers for presentations on topics such as historical patterns of horse use, horses in art and oral traditions, Plains riding gear, and contemporary roles of horses in tribal communities.

Send materials to Lillian Turner, Public Programs Coordinator, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, P. O. Box 1000, Cody, WY 82414, or call (307) 587-4771, ext. 248.

■ WANTED: Kodachrome slides of everyday life of family or friends taken by non-professional photographers in the post-World War II years, 1945-1965. Slides will be considered for a book and national exhibition titled Americans in Kodachrome: Photographic Folk Art, 1945-1965. For more information call or write: Guy Stricherz, 23 Prince Street, New York, NY 10012 (212) 226-3399.

Society's Museum Store Offers Clarke Bronzes, Stegner Tapes, Comprehensive Montana Index

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store will display and sell bronzes sculpted by John L. Clarke during the exhibit of works by the East Glacier artist.

* * *

Audio tapes of essays in tribute to Wallace Stegner presented by scholars at the Stegner Symposium are also available in the Museum Store. The Stegner Symposium, sponsored by the Society and the Center for the Rocky Mountain West at the University of Montana, was held in September 1993 in Missoula, Montana. It was later broadcast over KUFM, Public Radio, Missoula.

* * *

The Montana Historical Society announces publication in early January of the comprehensive forty-year index covering 1951-1990 for its history journal Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Founded in 1951, Montana was first published in 6" x 9" format but within two years was changed to its present oversized $7^{3}/_{4}$" x $10^{3}/_{4}$" format to accommodate historical as well as other illustration and cartography. Since 1955, the magazine has provided full-color reproductions of quality western art on its covers and frequently has included full-color reproductions on inside pages as well.

A ten-year index to the magazine was issued in 1961 and annual and biannual indexes thereafter through 1981. No indexes for issues of the magazine since 1981 have been available until now. Annual indexes to Montana for 1991, 1992, and 1993 will be available by mid-1994. Montana circulates in all fifty states and fifteen foreign countries.

* * *

The Museum Store also offers a comprehensive collection of western history and literature for all ages, including many history books for the young reader.

The three Stegner audio tapes are $20 plus $2.50 postage. The price of the 400-page, hard bound, forty-year index is $39.95 plus $2.50 postage. Special pre-publication price, good until January 15, 1994, is $34.95 plus $2.50 postage. To place an order or to request a catalog, call the Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900 or (406) 444-2890, or mail orders to P. O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana's Historic Places," Northeast Gallery"Cutapuis—The Man Who Talks Not: The Art of John L. Clarke," Montana Reflections GalleryTraditional Plains Indian Ledger Art, Lobby Exhibit |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| January 13 | Allen Chronister, "Plains Indian Ledger Art," 7:00 P.M. |
| | Friends of the Society monthly meeting and programs, Haynes Auditorium, 10 A.M. Open to the public, speakers are: |
| January 19 | Bob Swartout, "Montana's Forgotten Pioneers: The Chinese Experience in Montana" (this session will be held at 9:30) |
| February 16 | Kirby Lambert and Rita Kauneckas, "Care of our Native American Collections" |
| April 20 | Lyndel Meikle, "Deer Lodge Valley Ranchers vs. the Anaconda Copper Mining" |
| | Women's History Month Brown Bag Lecture Series, Haynes Auditorium, noon. There will be a charge. |
| March 9 | Josephine A. Jones, "The Mystery of Sacajawea" |
| March 16 | Joan Bishop, "Sister Providencia: Making More Sparks Fly" |
| March 23 | Julia Watson, "Writing a Woman's Life" |
| March 30 | Mary Murphy, "Bootlegging Mothers and Drinking Daughters: The Effect of Prohibition on Women in Butte" |

Winter and Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Saturday, 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M.Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion | January–March, tours by appointment, call 444-4789; regular tours begin April 1 |
| Capitol | Tours by appointment, call 444-4789 |

Montana Historical Society • (406) 444-2694
225 North Roberts St. • Helena, MT 59620

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620. ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class Postage Paid at Helena, MT 59601 and Additional Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD MAIL
Documents
Montana State Library
P.O. Box 201800

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.31
No3

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
NOV 03 1993
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 31 No. 3 • Autumn 1993

Montana History Conference

Governor's Office, Helena

Governor Marc Racicot at MSU's centennial celebration February 4, 1993

Four presidents and the governor will speak during opening sessions of the twentieth annual Montana History Conference, October 21-23 in Missoula. Friday morning presidents George Dennison, University of Montana; Mike Malone, Montana State University; Matthew Quinn, Carroll College; and Carol Murray, Blackfeet Community College, will discuss the history of higher education in Montana. Governor Marc Racicot will address some contemporary concerns of higher education in the state at the Friday luncheon.

Concurrent sessions scheduled Friday afternoon include a tribute to the career of Montana historian K. Ross Toole; university students discussing environmental issues in the context of cultural revitalization on the Fort Belknap Reservation, Mission Mountains tribal wilderness, and winter tourism in West Yellowstone; and a panel presentation of college life at the end of World War II, college administrators as substitute parents, and education in small towns.

Dayton Duncan, author, reporter, humor columnist, editorial writer, chief of staff to a governor, and press secretary for presidential campaigns, will speak at the Friday evening awards banquet. Duncan is the author of Miles From Nowhere: Tales From America's Contemporary Frontier, Out West: American Journey Along the Lewis and Clark Trail, and Grassroots: One Year in the Life of the New Hampshire Presidential Primary.

Awards to be announced Friday evening are the Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article published in Montana The Magazine of Western History during

continued on page 3

Governor Names New Society Trustees

Professor Thomas A. Foor, Anne Hibbard, and Vicki A. McCarthy were appointed by Governor Marc Racicot to the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees in July.

Foor is chairman of the Department of Anthropology at the University of Montana, Missoula. He has worked for the State Historic Preservation Office as state archaeologist and as project director for the Montana Department of Justice.

Hibbard, a journalism graduate from the University of California, Berkeley, worked at the Sacramento Bee prior to moving to Montana. She is a charter member of the Helena/Lewis and Clark Historic Preservation Commission and is active in numerous civic and cultural organizations.

McCarthy, a Billings certified public accountant, received her undergraduate degree in accounting at Eastern Montana College and her master's degree from the University of Montana.

Chase Hibbard of Helena, Charmaine Fisher and Stuart Conner of Billings, and Helen Hornby of Livingston resigned after serving on the Board since 1991, 1989, 1987, and 1983 respectively. Fisher's replacement has not yet been appointed.

---

Autumn Montana Honors Wallace Stegner

A series of commentary essays in tribute to historian, novelist, and essayist Wallace Stegner, one of the West's most important twentieth-century spokesmen, will highlight the Autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Ivan Doig, William Kittredge, and Wallace Stegner's son, Page Stegner, are among the contributors to this issue. Other essayists are Patricia Nelson Limerick, Jackson Benson, Richard W. Etulain, Elliott West, and Dan Flores. Their essays will consider the diversity of issues Stegner wrote on during his life. Born in 1909, Stegner died earlier this year in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

These special essays on Stegner have been drawn from presentations given during a two-day symposium at the University of Montana September 17-18. The symposium was sponsored jointly by the Montana Historical Society and the Center for the Rocky Mountain West at the University.

Also featured in the Autumn issue will be articles by William E. Farr on

continued on page 4

Wallace Stegner in his study about 1970

PLEASE RETURN

■ The Oral History Association's 1994 annual meeting will be held November 4–7, 1994, at the Birmingham Raddison Hotel in Birmingham, Alabama. Proposals for papers, panels, workshops, media presentations, or entire sessions must be submitted by December 1, 1993. Inquiries or submissions should be directed to Professor Kim Lacy Rogers, Program Chair, Dept. of History, Dickinson College, Carlisle, PA 17013-2896.

■ The Journal of Unconventional History is calling for papers for the Spring 1994 issue (deadline January 1, 1994). Past topics include Mormon polygamy, origins of language, museums as teachers of history, clothing as an instrument of repression in Puritan New England, historical examples of mooning, and medieval and modern criminal prosecutions and punishments of animals. Please send your submissions to Journal of Unconventional History, P.O. Box 459, Cardiff-by-the-Sea, CA 92007, with a cover letter explaining why you consider your work to be unconventional.

■ The State Historic Preservation Office is moving from its downtown office in the Masonic Temple building on Broadway to an office located in the State Capitol office complex north of the parking lot across Sixth Avenue from the Historical Society headquarters. The office telephone numbers (444-7715; fax 444-6575) will remain the same as will its mailing address, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Museum Store Catalog Available

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store Catalog for 1993–1994 was mailed to Society members in mid-September. Among the new 1993 books in the catalog are Ivan Doig's Heart Earth, Brian W. Dippie's Charles M. Russell Word Painter, Dayton Duncan's Miles from Nowhere and Robert M. Utley's The Lance and the Shield.

Pictured in full color on the catalog's front cover are two limited edition bronzes, Bucking Bronc and Contest Rider by Earl E. Heikka, available through the Museum Store. For additional information or a brochure describing the two bronzes, contact Richard Boyd, Montana Historical Society Museum Store, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, MT 59620-1201 or call 1-800-243-9900 or (406) 444-2890.

The Museum Store offers a comprehensive collection of western history and literature for all ages, including many history books for the young reader. If you want a book not listed in the catalog or wish to receive another catalog or place an order, please call 1-800-243-9900.

■ The Mining History Association is seeking articles treating aspects of the development of mining in history or prehistory. Text should follow guidelines in The Chicago Manual of Style. Manuscripts should be mailed by January 31, 1994, to John M. Townley, Editor, Great Basin Studies Center, 5480 Goldenrod, Reno, NV 89511.

■ A committee of scholars, museum specialists, business and civic leaders are developing the Women of the West Museum in Boulder, Colorado. The museum will consist of artifact-based and hands-on exhibits, school and public educational programs, and a library/archival study center.

The current emphasis is on raising planning funds, developing the exhibit content and design, possible educational programming, library and archives focus, and state support committees. For further information contact Toni Dewey, President, Women of the West Museum, 250 Bristlecone, Boulder, CO 80304 or call (303) 443-2846.

■ The C.M. Russell Museum has the following events scheduled: October 4, Cascade Quartet Concert; October 13, Charlie's Friends "Fall Round Up"; October 14, Exhibition: "Language of the Robe: American Indian Trade Blankets." For more information call (406) 727-8787 or write to C.M. Russell Museum, 400 13th Street North, Great Falls, MT 59401.

■ The Western Wyoming Resource Conservation and Development Area is sponsoring a comprehensive four-day grant-writing workshop November 15-18, 1993, in Jackson, Wyoming. Workshop participants will learn how to identify sources of grant support, conduct a funding search, and query potential sponsors. Each participant will receive a training manual, which includes a guide for proposal writing and background resources for grant-seekers.

For further information or to register, contact Western WY RC&D Area Office at 1471 Dewar Drive, #106, Rock Springs, WY 82901 or call (307) 382-3982.

■ The 37th Annual Missouri Valley History Conference will be held in Omaha, Nebraska, March 10-12, 1994. Proposals for papers and sessions in all areas of history are welcome. Such proposals, accompanied with one-page abstract and vitae, should be sent by October 15, 1993, to: Dale Gaeddert, Chair, MVHC, University of Nebraska, Omaha, NE 68182.

■ WANTED: documents, photographs, reminiscences, or other information for a historical article on Dr. Alan L. Hart, a novelist and public health physician who lived and worked in Huntley, Montana, from 1919 to 1921. If you can help, please contact Gerard Koskovich, P.O. Box 14301, San Francisco, CA 94114-0301, (405) 252-8956.

Magazine 40-year Index

Orders are now being taken for the 40-year index to Montana The Magazine of Western History, which is expected from the printers in early January. The volume, covering issues from 1951 through 1990, will be $39.95. Special pre-publication price—$34.95. To place your order, call the Museum Store at 1-800-243-9900.

■ The Western Heritage Center in Billings recently unveiled a new exhibit, "Our Place in the West: Places, Pasts, and Images of the Yellowstone Valley, 1880-1940."

The exhibit, funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, tells the stories of the Yellowstone River valley's many inhabitants and will be on display for several years. A book and a series of symposiums on exhibit themes will be produced by the Center. For more information contact the Western Heritage Center at 2822 Montana Avenue, Billings, or call (406) 256-6809.

■ Charlie Russell's log studio, closed for restoration on August 2, 1993, is scheduled to reopen June 1, 1994. The C. M. Russell Museum and the Russell home will remain open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Monday through Saturday and from 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Sunday.

■ Gerard A. Baker is the new superintendent of the Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument in Montana, where Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer fell to Sioux and Northern Cheyenne warriors in the Battle of the Little Bighorn in 1876.

Baker, a Mandan-Hidatsa Indian who grew up on the Fort Berthold Indian Reservation in North Dakota, was formerly an assistant district ranger at the Custer National Forest. Before moving to Montana he worked for the College of Redwoods in California, the Theodore Roosevelt National Park and the Forest Service at the Little Missouri National Grasslands in North Dakota.

Baker succeeds Barbara Booher, a Cherokee-Ute, who accepted a directorship at the Park Service's Denver office.

■ Fall lectures begin at the University of Montana's Center for the Rocky Mountain West October 28 at 8:00 P.M. in the Montana Theatre. Guest lecturer will be Leslie Fiedler, retired University of Montana English professor and author of "The Face of Montana" in The Last Best Place. November 11 at 3:00 P.M., Mark Baumler, archaeologist with the State Historic Preservation Office, will discuss archaeological research at the Missouri headwaters.

The Center for the Rocky Mountain West sponsors public programs focusing on regional identity and cultural traditions of the Rocky Mountain West.

Dave Walter is Society's First Research Historian

Montana Historical Society reference librarian Dave Walter has been promoted to the newly-created position of research historian. Walter, a fourteen-year Society employee, is one of the foremost experts in Montana history and original resource materials for researching it.

Walter is a graduate of Wesleyan University in Connecticut and as a graduate student worked with historian K. Ross Toole at the University of Montana.

Brian Shovers, with master's degrees in history from Montana State University and library science from the University of Wisconsin–Madison, was hired to fill Walter's previous position. Shovers was most recently manuscripts cataloger at Temple University in Philadelphia.

Jodie Foley is New Oral Historian at Society

Jodie Foley, archives technician at the Montana Historical Society since June 1990, has assumed the duties of oral historian. The oral history office will focus on enhancing access to the collections, pursuing follow-up interviews to those already in the collections, and conducting workshops throughout the state. John Terreo, oral historian for the Society since 1988, resigned in April to accept the position of oral historian at Edwards Air Force Base near Bakersfield, California.

Connie Geiger, formerly circulation director at the Spokane County Library in Spokane and at the Lewis and Clark Library in Helena, was hired to fill the archives technician position.

The Friends of the Society Seek New Members

The Montana Historical Society's volunteer organization, The Friends of the Society, is recruiting people interested in Montana history, art, and culture.

The Friends of the Society supports three groups of volunteers. Docents lead tours of the museum, the Original Governor's Mansion, and historic districts in Helena and give classroom presentations and similar special programs. Muses plan receptions and greet the public in conjunction with gallery openings and other special functions. Departmental assistance volunteers commit a specific period of time

continued on page 4

History Conference (continued from page 1)

1993, the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award for the best student article submitted to Montana, and the Board of Trustees Award recognizing a Montanan who has made significant contributions to the study of Montana history.

Evelyne Pickett, 1993 Bradley Fellowship recipient, will discuss her research on "'Boes Across the Border': Itinerant Labor in Montana and Canadian Resource Industries," at the Saturday morning Bradley Breakfast.

Following the breakfast will be the popular "Jerks in Montana History" session featuring Edward Morrissey, Sir St. George Gore, the Carlin Hunting Party, and Deer Lodge ranchers versus Anaconda Copper Mining Company. Other concurrent sessions include a panel discussion on "Who Owns the Stories: Historical Research Using Native American Materials" and "Montana Biographies" on Wellington Dunkin Rankin, Frank B. Linderman, and Norman Maclean.

Margaret Szasz, University of New Mexico history professor, will address "Native American Literature as History" at the Saturday luncheon. Szasz is the author of Education of the American Indian Since 1928, editor of The Cultural Broker: Link Between American Indian and White Worlds, and a contributor to Montana.

Field trips to the Nine Mile Ranger Station and to various locations on a "Discover Missoula" tour are options for Saturday.

Pre-conference workshops on Thursday offer a variety of "how-to" ideas for the care of heirlooms, clothing, photographs, letters, and diaries; completing oral history projects; using historical records in the classroom; publishing local history; and an all-day session on protecting natural resources while attracting tourists. An additional fee will be charged for some workshops. Teachers participating in the workshops and attending conference sessions may receive up to thirteen renewal units from the Office of Public Instruction.

Co-sponsors of the History Conference include the Montana Historical Society Foundation, Alberta Bair Trust, Center for the Rocky Mountain West, and The University of Montana. Conference programs have been mailed to Society members. For additional information or programs, call (406) 444-4794.

Native American Interns Work in Museum

Two Native American college students, Denelle Bostwick (left) and Faith Bad Bear (right), recently completed a ten-week internship with the Montana Historical Society Museum working with the Society's Native American collections.

Bostwick, an enrolled member of the Blackfeet Tribe in Browning and a student at Carroll College in Helena, and Bad Bear, of Crow Agency and a master's student in art education at Eastern Montana College, Billings, worked at the Society under a grant from the Institute of Museum Services.

Kenneth N. Owens Receives Fellowship

Kenneth N. Owens, professor of history, California State University, Sacramento, is the recipient of the first-ever Montana Historical Society Foundation/Publications Fellowship.

The fellowship, worth $1,750 this year, was provided jointly by the Montana Historical Society Foundation and the Society's publications program to assist qualified scholars with research at the Society that contributes toward book and magazine publication.

Professor Owens completed five weeks of research at the Society in July and August. He finalized preparation of a book manuscript of the reminiscence of Edward Purple, a Montana goldseeker who lived in the Virginia City/Bannack area in the early 1860s and wrote of his experiences, including those connected with Henry Plummer and the Montana vigilantes. The book will be published in 1994 by the Montana Historical Society Press.

He also did research in the papers of Montana's early state governors in connection with a larger work on western state politics at the turn of the century. Owens will prepare an article on the early growth of state institutions for a future issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Autumn Montana (continued from page 1)

the Blackfeet Indians and by Vivian A. Paladin on Montana sculptor E. E. Heikka. Farr assesses the implications and consequences of the 1989 sale of the Robert Scriver collection of Blackfeet artifacts to the Provincial Museum in Alberta, Canada, and former Montana editor Paladin looks at the life and work of the tremendously talented but tragically short-lived Heikka.

In addition, John Monnett reassesses the Battle of Beecher Island through the eyes of one of the battle's participants, Sigmund Shlesigner, and Paul LeBlonde looks at one of the West's most peculiar mysteries—sea serpents off the Pacific Northwest Coast.

Friends (continued from page 3)

to work with one or more programs of the Society. Applicants should have the ability to perform such work as clerical duties, graphics, typing, calligraphy, or merchandising.

For more information call the education program at the Montana Historical Society at 444-4794.

Steve Platt, Department of Transportation archaeologist, shows Archaeology Week participants how to make primitive instruments out of rocks. Archaeology Week was held August 16-20 at the Montana Historical Society.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana's Historic Places," a look at historic buildings from across Montana and ways that they can be saved and enjoyed. Exhibit up through the fall. |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 12 | After school program with Native American theme |
| October 21-23 | Montana History Conference, Missoula, Montana |
| December 4 | "Cu-Ta-Pu-Ie: The Man Who Talks Not: The Art of John L. Clarke." Exhibit features carvings, paintings, sketches, and illustrated letters of John L. Clarke. Exhibit up approximately one year. |
| December 5 | Original Governor's Mansion Annual Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing, 1-5 P.M. Proceeds benefit mansion restoration projects. |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Saturday 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M.Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion, 304 N. Ewing | Closed until further notice |

Montana Historical Society
P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the*Post* provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Pam C. Otto; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, P.O. Box 201201, Helena, MT 59620.

ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
P.O. BOX 201201
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 31
No. 1

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 31 No. 1 · Spring 1993

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR 1993
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

1992 Flying D Archaeological Project crew discuss Elk Mountain prehistoric site. (Left to right, Mark Baumler, John Vollertsen, Troy Helmick, and Brenda Sholes.)

Turner Grant Sustains Research

A $75,000 research grant from the Atlanta-based Turner Foundation will allow archaeologists from the Montana Historical Society's State Historic Preservation Office to continue research of historic and prehistoric sites on the Flying D Ranch, owned by Ted Turner. A similar grant awarded in 1992 initiated the study program that will continue next summer.

The 120,000-acre Flying D ranch, currently home to some 3,000 bison, lies between the Madison and Gallatin rivers and is bordered at the southern end by the Gallatin National Forest. Archaeological research last July confirmed that the area holds a rich variety of prehistoric artifacts that can reveal "how the land was used and what effect man had on it," according to Society archaeologists Mark Baumler and Dave Schwab, who are overseeing the study. Mark Baumler is project director. Native Americans from across Montana assisted researchers.

This particular area of Montana was attractive to native peoples because of its topography, rich plant and animal life, and natural phenomena such as stone outcroppings, which contain silica and quartz that were used to make arrowheads and other tools.

Ninety-five sites have been discovered by research teams on approximately 9,500 acres along Cherry and Pole creeks flowing through the southwest section of the ranch. Generally known as lithic scatters, the sites range from a quarry workshop where tools and arrowheads were made or repaired to a fireplace hearth where a temporary camp was located. Other lithic scatters may have served as a hunting camp, lookout site, or base camp for people at different times. In addition, two tepee rings, a pictograph, and rock piles, some of which may be associated with prehistoric trail landmarks, were discovered. Also identified were approximately three hundred

continued on page 3

PLEASE RETURN

Call for Proposals

The Montana Historical Society is seeking proposals for papers, panels, presentations, and workshops for inclusion in the 20th Annual Montana History Conference to be held October 21–23 in Missoula. Historians, local museums, libraries, college students, and independent researchers are asked to send a brief description of the papers, panels, or presentations and biographical information on the participants. Presentations may be on any aspect of Montana's heritage, though special consideration will be given to those dealing with the history of higher education in Montana and the history of western Montana. Proposals should be mailed by May 15, 1993, to Joan Haefer, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59620-1201.

Coming in Spring Montana

The image of the West has long been one of an undisputed scenic wonderland in which the landscape is huge and wild and the human impact upon it either an improvement or negligible. This view of the West is largely refuted in a collection of essays and articles in the next issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

In a path-breaking essay, National Park Service historian Richard West Sellars shows how early national park management policies dealing with wildlife, flora, and public access all were weighted toward public use, even as such policies were touted as preserving wilderness in a pristine state.

continued on page 3

Montana History Day is April 24

The tenth annual Montana History Day is scheduled for Saturday, April 24, at the Montana Historical Society. To address this year's theme, "Communication in History: The Key to Understanding," participants will analyze the impact that various forms of communications and technology have had on individuals and communities in the nation's history.

As in the past, students from dozens of schools in Montana will take part in the event. Winners will have the opportunity to attend National History Day on the campus of the University of Maryland in College Park, June 13–17.

Montana History Day is sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and endorsed by the State Office of Public Instruction. For more information, call Joan Haefer, (406) 444-4794.

■ Malta, Montana, will be the site of the third annual Eastern Montana Historical Society (EMHS) conference to be held Friday and Saturday, June 11–12. Highlights of the conference will include a lecture by EMHS board member Stan Bradley of Park City on outlaw Kid Curry and historian Charles Barnard of Malta who will speak about the Malta area and the Circle C Ranch.

For membership and conference information write Eugene T. Carroll, 2605 Raymond Place, Billings, Mont. 59102 or call (406) 245-0193.

■ The Phillips County Historical Society is collecting histories to be published in the second edition of Yesteryears. Similar to the first edition, published in 1978, the second edition will contain stories about early day settlers and homesteaders in Phillips County as well as more current histories dating to the 1950s and the post World War II era. Persons interested in submitting a family history may contact Terry Lodmell, Box 398, Malta, Mont. 59538 or call (406) 654-1407.

■ Two programs remain as part of the University of Montana's Center for the Rocky Mountain West "Works in Progress Series." Art historian Ginger Renner will present "Charlie Russell and the Persistence of His Art," on Thursday, April 15, and author Ivan Doig will present "Making a Book: Discussion of a Work in Progress" on Wednesday, April 21. Both lectures will begin at 3:00 P.M. in the Mansfield Library, Room 285, on the University of Montana campus in Missoula.

The Center for the Rocky Mountain West was created in 1992 as a forum to explore, examine, and articulate an inclusive regional history and culture using a variety of disciplinary approaches.

■ The 1994 Western History Association is preparing for its 34th Annual History Conference to be held in Albuquerque, New Mexico, October 20–23. The 1994 program committee currently is accepting session proposals, which should consist of a brief summary of prospective papers, participant names, and a brief paragraph about each presenter, chair, and commentator. Proposals should be mailed by September 1, 1993, to Melody Webb, Committee Chair, P.O. Box 308, Moose, Wyo. 83012.

■ Special Offer: The Montana Historical Society Foundation extends an open invitation to Montana Historical Society members as part of the "Members' Summer 1993 Montana Ghost Town Tour." Local historians will contribute their knowledge of ghost towns in southwestern Montana throughout the seven-day tour that will include visits to Helena, Butte, Bannack, Dillon, Virginia City, and Three Forks. For more information write the Montana Historical Society Foundation, P.O. Box 863, Helena, Mont. 59624.

■ The Battle of the Little Bighorn will be reenacted in five performances June 25–27 in Hardin, Montana, to commemorate the 117th anniversary of Custer's defeat. Tickets ($8 adults, $4.50 children six and up) and more information are available from the Hardin Chamber of Commerce, 200 N. Center, Hardin, Mont. 59034, (406) 665-1672.

■ A report by the National Park Service regarding management and possible future development of the Wounded Knee site in South Dakota has been completed. The report is the result of an extensive study project that involved members of the Oglala Sioux and Cheyenne River Indian tribes and the state of South Dakota.

Copies of the study are available through the National Park Service, Wounded Knee Study Team, P.O. Box 25287, Denver, Colo. 80225-0287.

■ "Scandinavians in Montana: An Annotated Bibliography," has been donated to the Society's library by Bonnie E. Johnson, head of collection maintenance at Montana State University's Renne Library and compiler of the bibliography. The annotated listings include books, journal and newspaper articles, manuscripts, tape recordings, newspapers, and one map that pertain to the history and settlement of Scandinavians in Montana.

Listings in the bibliography are from special collections in the Montana Historical Society, University of Montana, and Montana State University libraries.

Copies of the bibliography are available for $3.50, copying and postage charges, at the Montana Historical Society Library, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, Mont. 59620-1201.

■ "Mirror, Mirror on the Wall: Reflections on Cultural Heritage" is the theme of the 25th Annual Meeting of the Museums Association of Montana to be held April 22–24 in Livingston. Participants are invited to attend lectures and workshops on a variety of topics. Conference-goers can also tour the Park County Museum, Livingston Depot Center, and numerous art galleries. For information contact Dianne Keller, Museum Program, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, 59620-1201 or call (406) 444-4710.

■ Fort Phil Kearny, Wyoming, and the Bozeman Trail Association will host the 1993 Bozeman Trail Days, June 18–20. This year's celebration marks the 130th anniversary of the Bozeman Trail as well as the 150th anniversary of the Oregon Trail. Among the activities planned are tours of Fort Reno and Fetterman Ridge, and presentations by symposium speakers Susan Badger Doyle, Joe Marshall, and Pete Story, former state senator of Montana. Advanced reservations are recommended. For more information write FPK/BTA, P.O. Box 5013, Sheridan, Wyo. 82801 or call (307) 684-7629.

■ The James J. Hill Reference Library will award a number of grants of up to $2,000 to support research in the James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill papers. Deadline for applications is November 1, 1993, and the awards will be announced in early 1994. For more information, contact W. Thomas White, Curator, James J. Hill Reference Library, 80 W. Fourth St., St. Paul, Minn. 55102 (612) 227-9531.

■ Old Faithful Inn in Yellowstone National Park was one of eighteen buildings in the United States to receive the 1992 National Historic Preservation Award, the highest honor for federally assisted preservation achievements. The awards program exists under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (NHPA) and is administered by the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation.

Constructed in 1903, rustic Old Faithful Inn was part of a ten-year restoration effort by the National Park Service that included renovation of its roof, kitchen, electrical system, and removal of asbestos hazards. In addition, a roof-mounted fire sprinkler system was added that successfully protected the structure during the devasting Yellowstone fires in 1988.

Turner (continued from page 1)

species of plants—two hundred of which are used in native culture including camas, a blue, lily-like plant that was a food staple to some western Indian tribes, and sneezeweed, a medicinal plant used by the Northern Cheyenne for sinus and respiratory infections.

Archaeologists and scientists involved in the project applied recent technology in gathering information. "These systems allow us to gather more information in less time with minimal impact on the environment," noted Baumler, "as well as the opportunity to detect patterns in the landscape that help us predict where other archaeological sites may exist and why."

A report detailing the scope of the study and its conclusions will be available to the public in early 1994.

Mansfield Forum Focuses on Cold War in Asia

"Ending the Cold War in Asia" is the theme of the 1993 Mansfield Spring Conference. Sponsored by the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Center at the University of Montana, the conference will be held April 26–28, during the University's centennial celebration.

Five keynote speakers with extensive diplomatic, academic, and practical experience in Asia will speak.

All lectures will be in the Montana Theater on the university campus and are free and open to the public. For a schedule of events, call (406) 243-2988 or write The Maureen and Mike Mansfield Center, University of Montana, Missoula, Montana 59812.

New Exhibit on Preservation

Preparations are underway for a new exhibit in the Society's Northeast Gallery, scheduled to open May 18, which coincides with International Musuem Day and National Preservation Week.

"Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana's Historic Places" will explore the importance of preserving Montana's historic buildings. Members of the State Historic Preservation Office staff as well as Lory Morrow, Montana Historical Society photograph archivist, are assisting Kirby Lambert, curator of collections, in the research and interpretation of materials that will appear in the exhibit.

In preparation for the exhibit, questionnaires were mailed to over six hundred people in Montana asking their opinions about architectural preservation. Respondents' quotes, incorporated into the exhibit, reveal the extent to which Montanans value historic structures and preservation efforts. For example, Cindy Kittredge of Great Falls wrote that Paris Gibson Square was "an incredible example of priorities. It was conceived of as the first high school when Great Falls was only six or seven years old. Here was a very young town sinking an incredible amount of money into a school for its children. I feel it really speaks to the values held by the community."

Photographs from the Society's archives and architectural fragments from the museum collection will be on display, including samples of stained glass windows and a copper gargoyle from the Homer Block in Helena. As part of the exhibit, children will be invited to "touch and feel" architectural materials such as granite, limestone, and brick. A traveling version of the exhibit is also planned.

Montana (continued from page 1)

In another essay titled "Landscapes of Opportunity" historian Carlos Schwantes shows how the great continental railroads not only created an image of the West as a scenic marvel or productive Eden, but also how such promotion changed over time to maintain credibility with a skeptical public. Accompanying this article is a photo essay by Dale Martin on the life, times, and legacy of one of the northern West's best-loved transcontinental railroads, The Milwaukee Road.

In addition, Barbara Love and Frances Love Froidevaux provide an excerpt from the turn-of-the-century journals of Ethel Waxham, a young, genteel woman who, like Molly Wood of Owen Wister's classic novel, The Virginian, went to Wyoming to teach in a one-room school and eventually married the consummate western man.

Historian Lewis O. Saum offers a fascinating look at the daily life of traveling humorist Robert Burdette as Burdette toured Montana in the 1880s, and in a special commentary urban historian Carl Abbott discusses what we might expect of the urban West in the twenty-first century.

Staff Recognized

Three Montana Historical Society staff members were presented pins commemorating their service to the Society. Archivist Ellen Arguimbau received a fifteen-year pin, and Sue Near, museum services administrator, received a ten-year pin. Katherine Huppe, historic survey reviewer with the State Historic Preservation Office, received a five-year pin.

State Archivist Kathryn Otto points to a document as she answers questions from legislators, pages, and members of the general public during the Montana Historical Society's open house held on February 2. About two hundred persons attended the event. Director Brian Cockhill thanked volunteers from the Friends of the Society for leading tours, serving refreshments, and helping make the event a success.

MSU to Establish Stegner Chair

Montana State University has launched a campaign to establish an endowed Wallace E. Stegner Chair in Western American Studies. The chair will be interdisciplinary.

The endowment campaign has obtained almost one-third of its $1.5 million goal. In connection with the Stegner Chair, MSU will sponsor a bus trip, June 25–30, through Montana and a portion of North Dakota. The “Sense of Place” tour will include evening talks and stops at such places as Pompey’s Pillar, the Range Riders Museum in Miles City, the MonDak Heritage Center near Sidney, and the Charles Russell Wildlife Refuge. For more information call Jane Ratzlaff, (406) 994-2053 or 1-800-457-1696.

Museum Director Sue Near Elected to National Board

Sue Near, museum services administrator, has been elected to the American Association of Museums Board of Directors. Near will serve a three-year term on the board and its governing council, representing the nine-state region served by the Mountain-Plains Museum Association. The American Association of Museums has over 12,000 individual members and 2,600 institutional members.

Student Papers Sought

The Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1993 competition for the Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award. The award, named in honor of two of Montana’s most admired history professors, will be given to the best article-length manuscript written by an undergraduate or graduate student on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a plaque, cash award, and publication of the article in Montana.

To be eligible, students must be enrolled in a college or university and must be sponsored by a faculty member from their institution.

Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 15, 1993. For application information, write Burlingame-Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, P.O. Box 201201, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, Montana 59620-1201.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | “Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana,” a look at the history of health care, in Northeast GalleryOpening May 18: “Buildings in the Balance: Saving Montana’s Historic Places,” in Northeast Gallery, celebrates preservation efforts in Montana“Montana’s Many Faces” portraiture in art, Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit“A Stitch in Time,” observes Women’s History Month (March) with a display of women’s traditional textile crafts from the Society’s Permanent Collection. Exhibit runs through May 1993. |
| Permanent Exhibits | “Montana Homeland,” the story of Montana’s history“F. J. Haynes, Photographer”The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| April 24 | Montana History Day |
| April 22–24 | Museums Association of Montana 25th Annual Meeting, Livingston, Montana |
| April 23–25 | Montana Archaeology Society Annual MeetingButte, Montana |

Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Saturday 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor’s Mansion304 N. Ewing | Closed until further notice |

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Associate Editor: Bergetta Hubbard; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title “Montana Post” is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana’s first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 30 No. 4

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

Montana Post

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
FEB 1993
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 30 No. 4 · Winter 1992

Trustees Select Award Winners

Recipients of the 1992 Trustees Awards were honored at the 19th Annual Montana History Conference in Miles City October 23–24. Those recognized by the Montana Historical Society and its Board of Trustees were Crow tribal historian Joe Medicine Crow and Fort Benton museum director and teacher John Lepley. Helena teachers Sandy and Gary Barker were presented a special award. Trustees Award recipients are chosen for their contributions to preserving and promoting Montana history.

Greeted by the awards banquet crowd with a standing ovation, Joe Medicine Crow, author of From the Heart of Crow Country (1992) as well as numerous scholarly papers, is credited with recording more than one hundred oral histories of Crow tribal elders over the last fifty years. "The questions which Joe Medicine Crow has answered about Crow history and ethnography for Crow people and for non-Indians number like the stars of the Milky Way," said Stuart Conner, Board of Trustees president, who praised Medicine Crow's efforts to find common ground for Native and non-Native Americans.

John Lepley, director of the Museum of the Upper Missouri and the Museum of the Northern Great Plains in Fort Benton,

continued on page 3

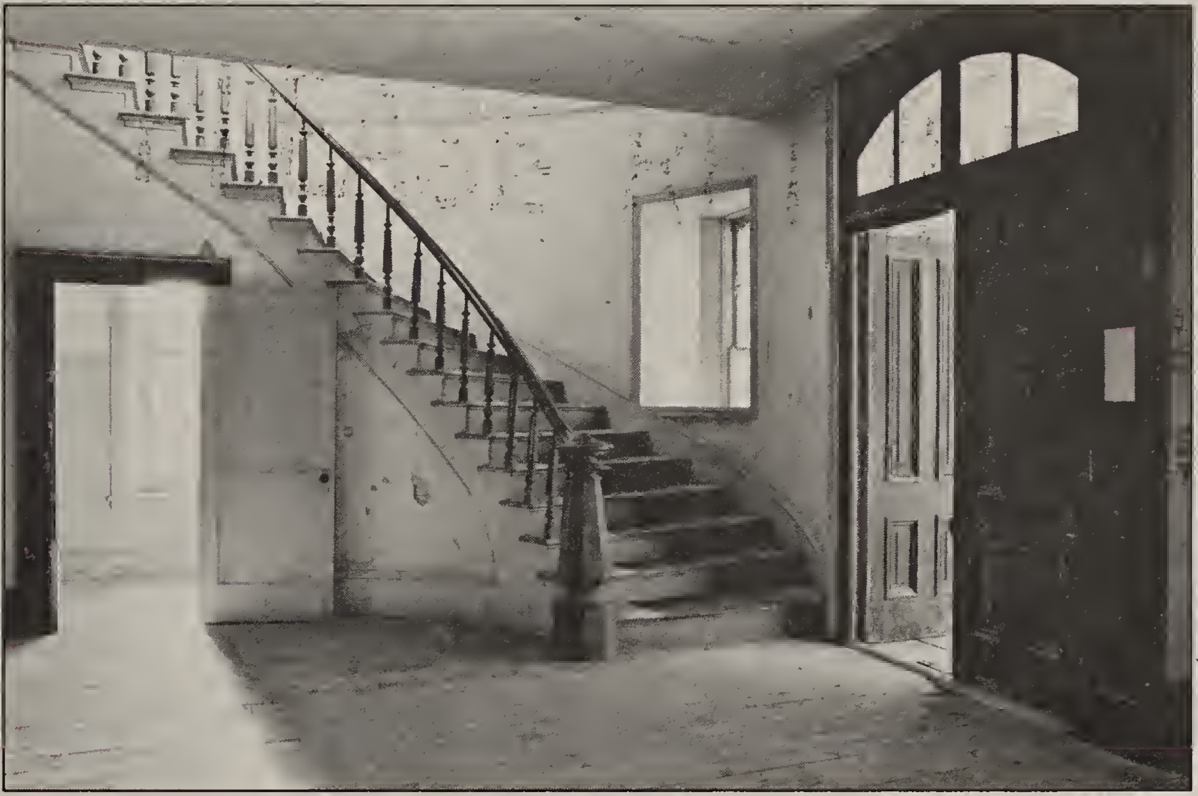
Light and Form Create Winning Image of Bannack's Hotel Meade



David F. Brown, Great Falls

A photograph of Hotel Meade in Bannack State Park by David F. Brown of Great Falls is the winner of the 1992 historic preservation photo contest sponsored by the Montana Historical Society's State Historic Preservation Office. This year's contest, opened for the first time to the public, drew fifty-four entries from around the state.

The winning photograph captures light from four sources, underscoring the importance of natural lighting in early Montana architecture. Hotel Meade was built in 1876 and served as the Beaverhead County Courthouse until 1881. The photograph will appear as the ninth in a series of posters that encourage preservation of Montana's important historic buildings and places.

Montana Winter Issue Explores the Fur Trade

The time before railroads, settlement, and western gold seekers was an ambiguous age. In the far West of the early nineteenth century, international rivalries vied with traditional Indian life, free trappers contended with giant corporate trading companies, and myths were just being born. The next issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History considers this long-lost age in a special theme issue devoted to the fur trade.

Acclaimed historian James P. Ronda assesses the on-going historical significance of the era, while constitutional law scholar John Phillip Reid contrasts the supposed "humane and protective" treatment native peoples received under British rule in Canada with the Hudson's Bay Company policy of swift, certain, and brutal retribution for Indian trespass.

Fur trade scholar William R. Swagerty reconstructs daily life and expectations among the common employees of the Upper Missouri Outfit of the 1830s, and John Barton tracks the elusive Reed Trading Post in northeastern Utah, the first such post west of the Continental Divide. Will Bagley brings as much light as possible to the shadowy tale of Lou Devon, a man who, according to his chronicler, lived among the Mandan Indians during that tribe's "lost years," and Fred Gowans narrates the life of prominent fur trade figure, Andrew Henry. In addition, literary scholar Fred Erisman takes a retrospective look at the five novels of Montana writer A. B. Guthrie, Jr., including Guthrie's classic, The Big Sky.

You won't want to miss this issue.

Society's Permanent Collections Grow in 1992

The Montana Historical Society received over three hundred donations from individuals, organizations, and businesses in 1992. Donations included a yellowed and fragile 1914 issue of the Carter, Montana, Chronotype (the only issue known to exist), "Jeannette Rankin for Congress" button, Hutterite apron, Hornaday Buffalo Group bronze, and vintage clothing. In addition, photographs and manuscripts were donated to the library and photo archives' permanent collections, which are available to scholars and other researchers at the Society.

The Society welcomes donations and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals concerning policy and procedures: Robert Clark, library (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Delores Morrow, photo archives (444-4714); John Terreo, oral history (444-4774); or Susan Near, museum (444-4710).

---

Adams Memorial Hall Museum
Ruby Adamsen
Jane Addy
Wayne Agee
William R. Allen
American Association of University Women, Helena
Jessie Anderson
John T. Anderson
LeRoy Anderson
Bernice Andrews
Michael J. Andrews
Archie Bray Foundation
Robert D. Armstrong
Tim Babcock
Kenneth Bailey
Venus Bardanouve
Richard Bates
John Baule
Norma Baumann
Estate of Marion Emma Beall
Beaverhead County Museum Association
Jean Bishop
Thelma Bone
Richard Boyd
Bozeman Area Chamber of Commerce
Perry Brackett
Glenda Bradshaw
Stuart Brockway
Buffalo Bill Historical Center
Susan Burnham
Richard S. Buswell
Lew L. Callaway, Jr.
Campbell Farming Corporation, Phoebe Knapp
Bruce B. Cannady
Jean Carlson
Carver County Historical Society
Bob and Betsy Clark
Clark City Press
Donald Coburn
Brian Cockhill
Columbia Falls High School
Jim Combs
Compass American Guides, Inc.
Chris and Carmen Compton
Elinor Compton
Stuart Conner
Conrad Public Library
Marian Cooke
Rod Coslet
Ardell and Grace Countryman
Frank and Joyce Coupal
Raphael Cristy
Joan Crum
Margaret S. Davis
Esther Dean
Delta Kappa Gamma Society, ETA chapter, Missoula
L. James Dempsey, University of Alberta, Edmonton
Dollarhide Systems
Ron Dooley
Berkley Dowd
Harriet Dusenberry
Helen Duvall-Arthur
Earth First!
Ed and Marilyn Eberly
Kermit Edmonds
Paul E. Eich
Frances C. Elge Estate, Mary Craig, Personal Representative
Lewis K. Ferguson
Kenneth J. Feyhl
Pat Finley
Kathleen Flowers
Henry W. Fox
Jim Franks
Carol Frasier
Paul Fugleberg
Blanche Gemperli
Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum
Susan Gibb
Glacier Park Company
Alice Gleason
Glenbow-Alberta Institute
Jack Gordon
William F. Gowen
Steven Leroy Grafe
Grandstreet Theatre
Alma Greenwood
Gary Guthrie
Florence E. Hall
Edwin L. Hall
Mark J. Halvorson
Jean Tyree Hamilton
Kay Hansen
Gladys Hardin
Anna Simpson Hardy
Arthur B. Harris
Leona L. Hassen
Jack Hayne
Pearl Melton Hazel
Healthy Mothers, Healthy Babies
Helena Quilters' Guild
Hellgate High School
Inez Herrig
Mrs. Frank P. (Florine) Heston
F. H. Hoell
Marv Hoffer
Joan Holter
Dennis Homer
Helen Hornby
Gordon Irion
Irish Brigade Association
Alma Jakobson
U. S. James
Terry C. Johnston
Blanche Judge
Warren Kaiser
Rita Kauneckas
William Kittredge
Sam Kitzenberg
Marc Korting
Lena and Harold Kuney
Bonnie Lambert
Kirby Lambert
John Lamphier III
Mrs. Harrison Lane
Arlie Lane
William L. Lang
Gwen Lankford
Mrs. A. M. Lanstrum
Mrs. Charles Larsen
Juanita Larson
Vivian La Salle
Charles Nelson Leach, Carolyn Leach Gorman, and Nancy M. Leach in memory of Florence Dixon Leach
Robert A. Lentz
John G. and Sue Lepley
Lewis and Clark County Extension Office
Lewis and Clark Interpretive Association
Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation
Little Bighorn College
Connie Lord
Florence Lutzenhiser in memory of Earl Lutzenhiser
Dr. Everett Lynn
N. A. Lyon
Tom Malee
Michael Malone
Steve Mandeville
David Mathews
Robert E. Matkins
Marshall Mayer
Howard A. McKinney
Mrs. Ben McKinnie
Mick A. McMillan
Doris McMurray
E. J. McNicol
Harriett Meloy
Emily Jane Melton
Perry S. Melton, Jr.
Jay K. Merritt
MHS Board of Trustees
Doreen Milbrandt
Miles City Genealogical Society
Miles City Public Library
Timothy Earl Miller
Ann O. Miller
John O. Miller III Family
Mary Montana
Montana Army National Guard, 103rd Public Affairs Detachment
Montana Audubon Council
Montana Authors Coalition
Montana College of Mineral Science and Technology
Montana Federation of Historical Society Workers, Local #4367
Montana Highway Patrol
Montana Kiwanis Clubs
Montana Library Association
Montana Nurses Association
Montana Oral History Association
Montana Power Company Library
Montana Power Company
Montana State University
  School of Art
  International Business Program
  Department of Earth Sciences
Gareth C. Moon
Bonnie Morgan
Shirley Manning Mouat
Ellen McKelvey Murphy
Susan R. Near
Nebraska State Historical Society
Earlene Nevins
New York Genealogical and Biographical Society
Rick Newby
Sue Thompson Newell
Harry Nichols
Laura Nicholson
Viola O'Connor
Maude O'Neal
Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board
Paris Gibson Square Museum of Art
Clara Lorene Park
Family of Irene Shepherd Parry

Roger Phillips
Carl F. Ploeger
Powell County Genealogical Society
Tom Power
Walt Preis
Norma Te Selle Prophet
Lenore McKelvey Puhek
Grace Purcell
Shirley J. Quick
Ronald L. M. Ramsay
Tom Read
Mary Green Reilly
Bernice Andrews Reig
Lois Reinemer
Howard Reiquam
Lois Reynolds
Robert Rheem
Bob Richard
Celeste River
Mercedes MacGinniss Rockwell
Lois Rognrud
Sarah Finch Maiden Rollins
Rosebud County Museum
Mary Lou Skinner Ross
Louisa Rothfus
Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henry Rowan, Jr.
Dave and Helen Ruggles
Milo Rynda
Joan W. Sadler
Margaret Sammick
F. James Sauer
Richard L. Schaertl
Kathryn Schoknecht
Scholarly Resources, Inc.
Catherine Schroeder
Lewis J. Schroeder
Betsy and Leland Scifers
Dr. Diana Scollard
Terry Scow
Susan Sharkey
Bill Sharp
Jeffrey Allen Sinnott
Randi Bry Smith
Social Security Administration
Lawrence and Barbara Sommer
Janet Spencer
Janet Sperry
State of Montana
 Department of Commerce
  Travel Montana
  Film Office
 Department of Transportation
  Preconstruction Bureau
 Fish, Wildlife & Parks
Stearns County Historical Society
Hal Stearns
Sue B. Steele
Victoria Sterling
Greg Stevens
Ruth Strain
Ruth Stucky
Summit Independent Living Center, Inc.
Elizabeth Sundberg
Dick Swanson
Dorothy Thayer, in memory of Louise Margaret Thayer
Gayle Draper Thomason
Dick Thweatt
Charles and Dorothy Tode
U.S. Bureau of Land Management
U.S. National Forest Service, Libby and Missoula offices
U.S. National Park Service
University Campus Bookstore, Missoula
University of Montana
Robert M. Utley
Richard Van Nice
Barbara Van Cleve
Lora Dillon Vance
Mona Vanek
Paul Verdon
Dorothy Averill Vincent
Gerald Vosberg
Donna Wahlberg
Bob Wallace
David Walter
Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Walters
Virginia Walton Estate, Jean Smith, Executor
Margaret Warden
Waukesha County Genealogical Society
A. Ray Westby Family
Hal Wheat
Richard S. Wheeler
John Wheeler
Omar W. White
Charles A. Willard
DeWayne Williams
Judy Williams
David A. Willson
Wood FIRE Ashes Press
Margaret S. Worden
Wyoming State Archives
Yellowstone Gateway, Inc.
Bequest of Lucy C. Young
Anna Zellick
Nestor Zurita

MHS NEWS AND NOTICES

Trustees (continued from page 1)

is an award-winning science teacher who has worked as preservationist, museum curator, researcher, administrator, and most recently as organizer of the new Montana Museum of Agriculture in Fort Benton. President Conner thanked Lepley for his many contributions and acknowledged his seemingly endless energy "in working to preserve Montana history." Sue Lepley, his wife, also was honored for making possible her husband's diverse pursuits and contributions.

An award presented to husband and wife teaching team Gary and Sandy Barker from C. R. Anderson Middle School in Helena cited their years of helping students prepare for the History Day Competition sponsored by the Montana Historical Society.

The Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History in 1992 was awarded to Brian W. Dippie for his essay, "Photographic Allegories and Indian Destiny." The article, which appears in the Summer 1992 issue of Montana, describes how white photographers saw Native Americans at the turn of the century. Dippie is professor of history in the University of Victoria in Victoria, British Columbia, and an editorial board member of Montana.

Trustees Award recipients at the History Conference included (front, left to right) John C. Ewers, Washington, D.C. (1987); Joe Medicine Crow, Crow Agency (1992); Anna Zellick, Lewistown (1990); Sandy Barker, Helena (1992); (back, left to right) Gary Barker, Helena (1992); Claire Rhein, Stevensville (1986); John Lepley, Fort Benton (1992); and Stuart Conner, Billings (1985).

MHS Offers Bradley Fellowship

The Society will again offer a James H. Bradley Summer Fellowship to encourage research drawing on its archival and library collections. One $3,000 fellowship will be awarded for 1993.

Although most fellowships in the past have gone to academic faculty or graduate students in history or a related field, the competition is not restricted to professional historians. Applicants, however, must demonstrate the ability to conduct research in source materials and write historical articles. The recipient must be in research residence at the Society for a minimum of four weeks between June 1 and September 30, 1993. The recipient also will be expected to submit an article for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Bradley fellowships, funded by a private endowment, began in 1981. In recent years, two fellowships were awarded. Due to low interest rates, which have reduced income to the fund, only one can be offered for this coming summer.

Applications must be postmarked no later than March 29, 1993. Write Bradley Fellowship Committee, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, Montana 59620-1201 for complete application information.

Missouri River Float Inspires Exhibit Art

Last July eleven Montana artists and scholars were invited to float the Missouri River from Coal Banks Landing to Judith Landing to gather inspiration for works of art and scholarship for an exhibition scheduled February 9–March 21, 1993, at Paris Gibson Square Museum of Art in Great Falls.

The exhibit, "Paintings, Prose, Poems and Prints: Missouri River Interpretations," will feature scholars, visual artists, and creative writers. Participants include Sandra Alcosser, Michael Crummett, Debra Earling, Jack Fisher, Stephen Glueckert, Philip Maechling, Vickie Meguire, Temi Rose, Susan Stewart, Betty Waddell, and Ted Waddell.

Historic images of the upper Missouri region that will appear with the modern interpretations are: Karl Bodmer aquatints from 1833, lithographs printed in 1855–1860 from Isaac Stevens's Pacific Railroad Survey, and historic photographs from the Montana Historical Society Photograph Archives.

"Missouri Interpretations" is funded, in part, by grants from the Montana Committee for the Humanities and Montana Power Company/Entech Foundation. For information about the exhibit call Barbara Racker, (406) 727-8255.

Deadwood Hosts Film Festival

South Dakota's Black Hills will be home to the First Annual Deadwood Film Festival, January 8–10. "Year of the Indigenous People" is the theme of the program, which will honor Native American filmmakers. Independent filmmaker Paul Stekler (Midnight Productions, Boston) will speak about his latest film, Last Stand at Little Bighorn. Stekler's essay about filmmaking and history is in the Autumn 1992 Issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

The festival program also includes feature films, videos, short films, works in progress, related workshops and panels, a juried art show, fashion show, and a traditional Lakota encampment.

The Historic Deadwood Arts Council and the Lakota Film Commission are festival sponsors. For more information write P.O. Box 81, Deadwood, South Dakota 57732 or call (605) 578-1076 and 1-800-999-1876 regarding lodging.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | Christmas display of antique toys—MHS Lobby |
| | "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana," a look at the history of health care, in Northeast Gallery |
| | "Montana's Many Faces" portraiture in art, Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit |
| | "Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The World of Evelyn Cameron," photographs by eastern-Montana photographer on display through February 1993 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

Friends of the Society Monthly Programs
Haynes Auditorium, MHS, 225 N. Roberts St. 10 A.M.
Open to the public, speakers are:

| | |
|---|---|
| January 20 | Senator Harry Fritz, University of Montana |
| February 17 | Mike Korn, Fish, Wildlife and Parks |
| March 17 | Lynne Redfield, Curator, Conrad Mansion |
| March 10, 17, 24, 31 | March Lecture Series, "How Montanans See Themselves and How Others See Us," noon–1 P.M., brown-bag lunch, Haynes Auditorium, MHS, 225 N. Roberts St. (406) 444-4794 |
| April 22–24 | Museums Association of Montana 25th Annual Meeting, Livingston, Montana |

Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Saturday, 9 A.M.–5 P.M. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 to 5 P.M. Morning hours by appointment only |

---

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Assistant Editor: Bergetta Hubbard; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

---

MONTANA POST

225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD MAIL /m
Montana State Library
1515 E. Sixth Ave.

S
978.6
H6m
V.30 No.3

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 1 1992
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 30 No. 3 · Autumn 1992

Autumn Montana

In the gilded age of the "robber barons," when profit meant incorporation and power flowed not from ownership but from membership, the more independent in spirit sought fortunes in the West. Their degrees of success varied, from perpetual bankruptcy to eternal fortune, from hardscrabble survival in an unforgiving frontier town, to the creation of prosperity with the City Beautiful. The Autumn 1992 Montana The Magazine of Western History, with a special introduction by historian and Montana State University President Michael P. Malone, considers these versions of western pioneering and, in this Columbian Quincentenary year perhaps especially appropriate, provides a forum for essays on Native American reactions to the westering entrepreneur.

William G. Robbins relates the story of Helena banker and financier Samuel Hauser, whose outdated, wildcat business methods led him to financial ruin as the century turned. Jeanette Rodda demonstrates that mining magnate William A. Clark knew the value of his United Verde workers and treated them right, at the same time increasing an already vast fortune. Richard B. Roeder's Paris Gibson demanded parks and trees for Great Falls so that the city he built would be both prosperous and beautiful.

Fortune hunters of all types came west,

continued on page 3

Annual Montana History Conference Convenes in Miles City in October

"William Clark on the Yellowstone" is the theme of the keynote address to be presented by James P. Ronda on Friday evening at the 19th Annual Montana History Conference, October 23–24, in Miles City.

Ronda is H. B. Barnard Professor of Western American History in the University of Tulsa and an editorial board member of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Conference headquarters will be the Olive Hotel where L. A. Huffman photographed these cowboys sometime early in the twentieth century.

Two awards also will be announced during the evening, including the Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana, and the Contributions to Montana History Award given by the Montana Historical Society and its board of trustees.

The 1992 Bradley Senior Fellow John P. Langellier of the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum will discuss African-American military experiences in Montana at the 7:30 A.M. Bradley Breakfast on Saturday. Concurrent sessions that day include morning presentations on the fur trade and exploration by Fred Gowen, Barton Barbour, and Paul Hedren, while John C. Ewers, L. T. Eaton, and Curly Bear Wagner address the historical significance of works by Montana artists J. K. Ralston, O. C. Seltzer, and William Standing.

Afternoon sessions include discussions by Dan Vichorek on the environmental impact of homesteading in eastern Montana, Dan Flores on the impact of environment on the southern buffalo herd, and John Lepley about William T. Hornaday and the Hornaday buffalo. Intercultural contact, Indian perspectives on the Indian Wars, Crazy Horse, and Northern Cheyenne health issues are some of the topics to be discussed by William Tallbull and Gregory Campbell during the final conference panel Saturday afternoon.

Other speakers include George Frison, Richard Fox, Ted Birnie, and Jerry Clark, who will examine the archaeological sites of Mill Iron, Fort Manuel Lisa, Fort Keogh Outpost, and the Power River Depot; and Ellen Sievert will speak of the Ursuline Sisters and their Miles City convent. Jerome Greene will tell the story of Nelson Miles, for whom Miles City is named; and

continued on page 4

Jeanne Eder Joins Board of Trustees

Jeanne Eder joined the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustees in July, replacing Richard B. Roeder who resigned after serving on the board since 1989.

Eder, currently on leave from Western Montana College in Dillon, is pursuing a doctorate in American and public history. Eder's undergraduate work at Carroll College in Helena was followed by a master's degree from Montana State University in 1983. Prior to moving to Dillon, Eder taught Native American Studies at Eastern Montana College in Billings.

Roeder, who teaches history at Carroll College and the College of Great Falls, is an editorial board member of Montana The Magazine of Western History. He is the author of numerous works on Montana history, including Montana: A History of Two Centuries, recently revised and reissued by the University of Washington Press.

PLEASE RETURN

Museum Store Mails Catalog

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store catalog for 1992–1993 has been mailed to Society members. Enthusiasts can look forward to new works on old favorites such as Charles M. Russell and George Armstrong Custer along with the museum store's broad selection of classic and often hard-to-find western history and literature. In addition, the recently published Guide to The Milwaukee Road in Montana offers readers comprehensive and useful information on the railroad's history in Montana. Holiday shopping can be fun and easy by choosing from the museum store's selection of quality gifts for young people and adults, including C. M. Russell prints, specialty T-shirts, and tote bags. Call toll-free, 1-800-243-9900. At right is the Society Press's latest book, Guide to The Milwaukee Road in Montana, featured in the catalog.

■ Environmental historian Dan Flores, former professor of history at Texas Tech University, has been named Hammond Professor of Western History in the University of Montana. Flores, who will participate in the 1992 Montana History Conference in Miles City, has published extensively on the history of the southern Rockies, with special interest in bison populations on the southern plains. He is currently undertaking similar research and study of the northern Rockies.

■ Western art collectors and enthusiasts are invited to the J. K. Ralston Western Art Show and Auction in Billings, Montana, at the Sheraton Hotel on October 16. More than one hundred pieces of original art by C. M. Russell, J. K. Ralston, O. C. Seltzer, and others will be for sale. Proceeds from the auction will be used by the Ralston Studio for continued development of a Western Art Center on the campus of Rocky Mountain College in Billings. There will be a free public showing from 1–4 P.M.

A western buffet, "quick draw" contest, and auction will begin at 8:00 P.M. Tickets are $25 per person. For additional information, write P.O. Box 1499, Billings, Mont. 59103, or call Mary Hawkins at (406) 252-2622.

■ "The Cowboy West: 100 Years of Photography" currently is on display at the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. Mountain landscapes, cowboys, and the West as a way of life are portrayed by contemporary and historic photographers Barbara Van Cleve, Jay Dusard, Bank Langmore, L. A. Huffman, Charles Belden, and Erwin Smith. The photographs will be on display at the museum, 400 13th St. North in Great Falls, until January 3, 1993.

■ The Gallatin County Historical Society's fourth annual History Conference will take place Saturday, November 7, from 9 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. at the Pioneer Museum in Bozeman. Gallatin County residents are invited to present papers related to local or family history—presentations should be limited to approximately twenty minutes. Registration is $10 and includes lunch. Submit information about your topic to the Pioneer Museum, 317 W. Main, Bozeman, Mont. 59715 or call (406) 585-1311 for more information.

■ WANTED: Early photos or stories for a book on Bozeman's historic homes prior to 1940. If you can help or would like more information about the project, contact Laura Smith, 522 S. Third Ave., Bozeman, Mont. 59715 (406) 586-7957 or Jennifer L. S. Mitchell, 122 S. Church Ave., Bozeman, Mont. 59715, (406) 587-1082.

■ The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Foundation and Texas Christian University Press are offering a $1,000 prize for the outstanding unpublished book manuscript on the history of ranching in the American West.

The newly created, biennial "Cattle Raisers Award for Ranch History" will be announced September 1, 1993. Manuscripts, due by June 1, 1993, should be between 150 and 300 double-spaced typewritten pages. In addition, authors are to follow the Chicago Manual of Style and clearly document their work; photocopies of original photographs or art work may accompany manuscripts, and authors are not to submit their work elsewhere until the award is announced. For more information on contest rules, write TSCRF Competition, A. T. Row, Editor, TCU Press, Box 30783, Fort Worth, Tex. 76129.

■ The Southwest Museum in Los Angeles will host a special pre-holiday Intertribal Marketplace November 6–8. The celebration of Native American Indian artisans will feature demonstrations by master craftsmen as well as exhibitions of music and dance by Plains, Pueblo, and Apache Indians. A wide variety of traditional and contemporary designs in jewelry, pottery, baskets, and beadwork will be available for sale. Contact Kathleen Whitaker at (213) 221-2164 or write Southwest Museum, P.O. Box 41558, Los Angeles, Calif. 90041-0558 for additional information.

■ The Montana Historical Society Archives has a surplus of archival storage boxes to give away. The boxes are used and may no longer be acid-free. Letter and legal, full- and half-size boxes are available. Any Historical or Genealogical Society in the state that is interested may contact Kathryn Otto (406) 444-4775 for more information. The boxes must be picked up and transported by recipient.

■ Attention historians, genealogists, and family-tree growers! Historic Resources, Inc. offers affordable county-by-county United States Census Indexes for a limited number of states. Write P.O. Box 329, Bountiful, Utah 84011-0329 for information or call 1-800-657-9442.

■ In an effort to establish a resource on Montana women artists, the Missoula Museum of the Arts and the University of Montana have formed the Montana Women Artists Research Project. The organization is asking for information and contributions of historical and contemporary examples of fine art, folk art, and Native American art. Do not send original artwork. Photographs, slides, or xerox copies of the original art are sufficient. If you are interested in working on the project in your community or would like more information, call Claudette Ross, Project Administrator, Missoula Museum of the Arts, 335 N. Pattee, Missoula, Mont. 59802, (406) 721-3440.

■ The Oral History Association's 1993 annual meeting will be held November 4–7 at the Birmingham Raddison Hotel in Birmingham, Alabama. Proposals for papers, panels, workshops, media presentations or entire sessions must be submitted by December 1, 1992. Inquiries or submissions should be directed to Professor Kim Lacy Rogers, Program Chair, Dept. of History, Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. 17013-2896.

Hornaday's "Last" Buffalo Story Began a Century Ago Near Miles City

In 1886 William T. Hornaday, chief taxidermist of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., made two expeditions to Montana Territory where he and a scouting party shot and killed what reputedly were the last of the West's free buffalo (some buffalo were confined in Yellowstone Park). Hornaday's mission—to secure specimens, skins, and bones of the nearly extinct mammal for the Smithsonian's collections—was successful. Hornaday returned with twenty-four dead buffalo and one live calf that later died. Six of the buffalo were preserved and lent authenticity to a Smithsonian museum exhibit of indigenous grasses, soil, and prairie plants brought from Montana.

The Montana Historical Society and State Historic Preservation Office began compiling data on the Hornaday camp site north of Miles City—known as "The Big Open"—on Big Porcupine Creek, where the buffalo were killed. In March 1991, the site was placed on the National Register of Historic Places. John Lepley, director of the Museum of the Upper Missouri and the Museum of the Northern Great Plains in Fort Benton, will discuss William T. Hornaday at the 1992 Montana History Conference in Miles City on Saturday, October 24, beginning at 1:00 P.M. at the Eagles Club.

William Hornaday (right) and photographer L. A. Huffman (center) visited Max Sieber (left) in 1901 at his cabin near the site of Hornaday's 1886 buffalo hunt.

When the Smithsonian exhibit closed in 1957, the Hornaday buffalo were returned to the University of Montana, where they were displayed in the fieldhouse. A lack of funding forced some of the buffalo into storage. Eventually the group was divided among several locations around the state. Only the 1,700-pound bull, shot by Hornaday himself, has remained on display at the Museum of the Upper Missouri in Fort Benton.

Currently, the Bureau of Land Management and the Museum of the Upper Missouri are working together to reunite the Hornaday buffalo. Private funding has been advanced with the help of writer Douglas Coffman and western sculptor Bob Scriver, whose sale of fifty limited-edition bronze replicas of the original Hornaday exhibit has contributed to restoration efforts. The entrance to the future Bureau of Land Management's Visitors Center in Fort Benton will be home to the buffalo, which are currently under the care of internationally recognized Atcheson Taxidermy in Butte. Completion of the project is expected to take several years.

Rocky Mountain Lecture Series Underway

The University of Montana's Center for the Rocky Mountain West fall lecture series has commenced. An evening lecture on Wednesday, October 21, will feature Lewis and Clark authority James P. Ronda from the University of Tulsa, who will present "Thomas Jefferson: Empire in the West," at 7:30 P.M. in the Liberal Arts Building, Room 11, on the University of Montana campus. "Culture Change is Not for the Timid: Large Questions in Small Places" is the title of a lecture by Rachel Craig, coordinator of the Inupiat Ilitqusiat Northwest Arctic Borough in Kotzebue, Alaska. The lecture will take place on Thursday, November 19, at 3:00 P.M. in University Hall.

The Center for the Rocky Mountain West sponsors regular public programs focusing on regional identity and the cultural traditions of the Rocky Mountain West. Lectures and presentations scheduled for spring 1993 will be listed in the winter issue of the Montana Post. Additional information may be obtained by calling the Center for the Rocky Mountain West, (406) 243-2231.

Cameron Exhibit Returns to MHS

In response to popular demand, the museum is again exhibiting the Montana Historical Society's collection of photographs by early twentieth-century pioneer Evelyn Cameron. One of two traveling exhibits produced by the Museum will return to the Society lobby November 1, 1992, and remain through January 1993. The collection, with Cameron's personal diaries, photography equipment, and clothing, made its debut at the Society in December 1990.

Over the past two years the traveling exhibits, consisting of forty-seven large-format photographs, have appeared in such locations as the Museum of the Great Plains in Lawton, Oklahoma; Sun Valley Center for the Arts in Sun Valley, Idaho; Colorado State University in Fort Collins; and the Sheridan Public Library in Sheridan, Wyoming. Within Montana, the collection has been enjoyed by visitors at the Hockaday Center for the Arts in Kalispell, the MonDak Heritage Center in Sidney, and the Glacier County Historical Society in Cut Bank.

The exhibits may be booked for up to six weeks with no fee charged to in-state museums or libraries. For information regarding exhibit availability and out-of-state fees call Museum Registrar Janet Sperry at (406) 442-4719.

Donna M. Lucey's book about Cameron's life in Montana, Photographing Montana 1894–1928 and a reprint of an article by Lucey that appeared in the Summer 1991 issue of Montana are available through the Museum Store.

Montana (continued from page 1)

and eventually their civilization would have to acknowledge from whom that wealth was often taken. Robert M. Utley returns to the Mark H. Brown/Harry H. Anderson debate of our 1962 volume to further discuss the Black Hills, gold-fever, and the Great Sioux War.

Broadening this context, Margaret Connell Szasz reflects on the five-centuries-old debate over the meaning of European/Native American interaction.

Paul Stekler, producer and director of Last Stand at Little Bighorn, comments on the making of his film, which will air nationally on PBS in November. Co-written by novelist James Welch, the film reexamines the legendary battle from both white and Indian perspectives.

State Budget Cuts Affect Mansion and Capitol Tours

Beginning September 7 the Historical Society discontinued regular scheduled tours of the Original Governor's Mansion and Capitol complex as a result of budget cuts enacted by the special session of the Montana legislature in July.

However, the popular Christmas Home Tour will take place December 6 from 1:00 to 5:00 P.M., according to Museum Director Sue Near. In addition, volunteers from the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board and the Friends of the Society will offer self-guided tours of the mansion on Saturday, October 17, and again on Saturday, November 21, from 1:00 to 5:00 P.M.

Tours of the Capitol complex, traditionally offered through the Montana Historical Society's education office during the summer months and during legislative sessions, have been suspended. Special group tours also are unavailable.

For information regarding schedule changes, special tour arrangements, or tickets for the annual Christmas tour, contact Sue Near (406) 444-4710.

Montana History Conference

(continued from page 1)

Susan Gibb will address the 1949 Montana Historical Society Reorganization.

Three special-interest groups, the Montana Oral History Association, the Montana Preservation Alliance, and the Board of Directors of the Museums Association of Montana will meet at the Eagles Club Friday morning. A reception and open house at the Custer County Art Center and the Range Riders Museum also are on the agenda.

The history conference closes Saturday evening with a "grand finale progressive party" at a variety of historic landmarks in Miles City. The evening's festivities will begin with dinner at the Olive Hotel and end with dessert at the Ursuline Convent.

Additional sponsors for the Montana Historical Society's 1992 history conference are the Alberta Bair Trust, the Bureau of Land Management, and the Montana Historical Society Foundation.

Conference programs listing session schedules, speakers, and registration information have been mailed to Society members. For additional information or programs, call (406) 444-4794.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana," a look at the history of health care, in Northeast Gallery |
| | "Montana's Many Faces" portraiture in art, Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit |
| | "Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The World of Evelyn Cameron," photographs by eastern-Montana photographer opens November 1 in MHS lobby |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 23–24 | Montana History Conference, Miles City, Montana |
| December 6 | Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing, 1–5 P.M. |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Saturday 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 A.M. to 5 P.M.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 P.M. to 5 P.M.Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Closed until further notice |

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Assistant Editor: Bergetta Hubbard; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD MAIL
Montana State Library
1515 E. Sixth Ave.

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.30, No.2

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 30 No. 2 · Summer 1992

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
AUG 13 1992
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Brian Cockhill Appointed New MHS Director

Brian Cockhill, deputy director of the Montana Historical Society, was named Society director by unanimous vote of the Society's Board of Trustees at the Trustees' quarterly meeting July 10. Cockhill, who has been with the Society since 1971, replaces Lawrence J. Sommer, who resigned to become director of the Nebraska State Historical Society in Lincoln.

Cockhill, a native of Butte, was named deputy director a year ago and has administered agency fiscal policy, served as Society personnel officer, and acted as liaison with the legislature. He came to the Society as assistant archivist in 1971 after earning a master's degree in western American history at the University of Montana, and was promoted subsequently to state archivist and later to head of the agency's centralized services.

The Board of Trustees interviewed four finalists for the director's position before electing Cockhill director.

Sommer, meanwhile, left the Society this month to assume new duties in Nebraska. The Montana Historical Society, he said, "is one of the West's great institutions. I am personally very proud of the excellent staff that is in place to carry on the work of the Society."

Sommer said he "is pleased with the improvements and accomplishments made at the Society over the past three years," which include a more efficient administration that utilizes a management and professional staff team approach, an emphasized outreach and community service program, and increased support for historic preservation.

Lawrence J. Sommer began his assignment with the Nebraska Historical Society on July 20.

Bradley Fellowships Announced

Recipients of the 1992 James H. Bradley Fellowships have been announced by the Society's Bradley Fellowship committee.

Dr. John P. Langellier, director of research and publication at the Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum in Los Angeles, was awarded the Bradley Senior Fellowship, which carries a stipend of $2,500. The author of multiple publications on military history, Langellier's research will focus on the African-American military experience in Montana during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

continued on page 3

Coming in Montana

Should western art be evaluated for its artistic merit or its factual representation of history? Is western art a product of creative genius working in isolation or the cultural biases and ideological assumptions of its times? These questions are explored in the summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Museum director Peter H. Hassrick traces the rise of major museums of western art during the twentieth century and considers how these museums seek to influence perceptions of the works they display. Brian W. Dippie writes on the allegorical nature of early twentieth-century photographs of Native Americans, and archaeologist James Keyser considers the origins and manifestations of prehistoric Indian rock art in western Montana.

Museum curators William Truettner and Alex Nemerov comment on the ideological content of the 1991 Smithsonian exhibit, "The West as America," and Ron Tyler reviews the most recent major western art exhibit, "Discovered Lands, Discovered Places," which opened in mid-June in Cody, Wyoming.

When and where is the West? A full report by historian Walter Nugent on his national survey of western historians, writers, and journalists answers this question and provides a fascinating guide to what many people think the West and its history represent today. Accompanying Nugent's essay are contemporary photographs drawn from the "Montana Reflections" photography exhibit, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society.

Miles City to Host History Conference

Miles City, Montana, will be the site of the 1992 Montana History Conference, October 23 and 24.

Presentations on homesteading, townbuilding, the fur trade, and Native American perspectives of Indian warfare are among the topics that will be featured at the conference. Author and historian James P. Ronda, Barnard Professor of Western American History in the University of Tulsa, will deliver the keynote address, "William Clark on the Yellowstone" at the awards banquet Friday night. Several historic buildings, including the Olive Hotel and Ursaline Convent, will be visited during a progressive dinner on Saturday.

Session speakers will be listed in the Autumn Post, and a schedule of events will be available in September. For more information contact the Society's education office at (406) 444-4794.

■ The Pacific Northwest Booksellers Association awarded the 1992 Book Awards to authors Tom Spanbauer for The Man Who Fell in Love with the Moon; Arthur Kruckeberg for The Natural History of Puget Sound Country; Deirdre McNamer for Rima in the Weeds; and Mary Clearman Blew, for All But The Waltz: Essays on a Montana Family. Blew is coeditor of The Last Best Place: A Montana Anthology, published by the Montana Historical Society Press in 1988. Special recognition was given to Talking Leaves: Contemporary Native American Short Stories, edited and introduced by Craig Lesley.

■ Veterans of the 1st Cavalry Division, U.S. Army, will gather in Billings, August 5–9, for their forty-fifth annual reunion. The Cavalry Division Association is organizing a three-day wagon train ride from Busby, Montana, following the same trail the 7th Cavalry Regiment took to the Little Bighorn 116 years ago. (The 7th Cavalry Regiment was one of the first assigned to the 1st Cavalry). For information, write HQ, 1st Cavalry Division Association, 302 N. Main, Copperas Cove, Tex. 76522-1799 or call 1-800-234-9313.

■ The James J. Hill Reference Library will award $2,000 grants to support research in the James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill papers. Deadline for applications is October 1, and awards will be announced in early 1993. For more information, contact W. Thomas White, James J. Hill Reference Library, 80 W. Fourth St., St. Paul, Minn. 55102 or call (612) 227-9531.

■ The Montana Historical Society was honored by the Montana Committee for the Humanities for its long-standing commitment to public humanities programs. Society Director Lawrence Sommer accepted a certificate of appreciation at MCH's twentieth anniversary celebration April 24 at the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. Also accepting a certificate of appreciation was Society oral historian and archivist John Terreo, president of the Montana Oral History Association.

■ The Montana Historical Society's State Historic Preservation Office is sponsoring a photography contest to select the 1992 historic preservation poster. The winning entry will receive $200. Photographers' subjects must deal with a Montana historic site. The contest deadline is August 28. For more information call the State Historic Preservation Office at (406) 444-7715.

New Publications from MHS Press

Fans of Montana The Magazine of Western History will soon have easy access to past articles with the publication of a forty-year comprehensive index to the magazine. The index will be available by midwinter 1993.

Train enthusiasts will delight in Steve McCarter's Guide to the Milwaukee Road in Montana. The paperback guidebook follows The Milwaukee Road's main line through Montana from east to west and includes maps, a brief history of the railroad, an essay on its legacy by historian Dale Martin, as well as photographs of remaining Milwaukee structures and sites.

Montana Heritage: An Anthology of Historical Essays, published in March 1992 by the MHS Press, is a collection of sixteen essays that reveal the important role played by Native Americans, women, immigrant groups, and the environment in Montana's history. Edited by history professors Robert R. Swartout, Jr., (Carroll College, Helena) and Harry W. Fritz (University of Montana, Missoula), the book draws on some of the best articles to appear in Montana and contains more than thirty photos and illustrations.

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store's 1992–1993 catalog will be mailed by late September. Inquiries or orders regarding books and gifts may be made by calling the Store's toll-free number, 1-800-243-9900.

■ The tenth anniversary of the sister-state relationship between Montana and Kumamoto, Japan, will be celebrated July 18–26 in Bozeman. Japanese artists and musicians will attend the week-long symposium and celebration of Japanese culture. Activities will include a Cultural Congress focusing on international exchange for artists and arts organizations, original dance and music, weaving demonstrations, slide lectures, and panel discussions. For a schedule of events and more information contact the Montana Arts Council, 316 N. Park Ave., Helena, Mont. 59620 or call (406) 447-8390.

■ The Powder River Press, publishers of The Big Horn–Yellowstone Journal, is an information resource for obscure and often hard-to-find sources on United States soldiers and military expeditions during the Indian wars. The quarterly journal frequently contains illustrations and articles that have not been reprinted since their original publication. Military and Indian history buffs and other researchers may learn more about Powder River Press by writing Karen L. Daniels or E. Elden Davis, 218 McCarthy St., Howell, Mich. 48843 or call (517) 546-4647.

■ The Bureau of Land Management will host a dedication ceremony at Pompey's Pillar, twenty-eight miles northeast of Billings, on July 25 at 11:00 a.m. The landmark is the only physical evidence of the Lewis and Clark Expedition in existence today. For information about the dedication and other events scheduled that day, call Sandra Sacher, (406) 657-6262.

■ The Great Pikes Peak Cowboy Poetry Gathering is set for August 14, 15, and 16 in Colorado Springs, Colorado. A popular family event, the gathering will feature a western trade show, storytelling, street dance, music by Waylon Jennings, and children's programs in addition to cowboy poetry reading. For more information contact Judy Evans, Pikes Peak Library District, P.O. Box 1579, Colorado Springs, Colo. 80901-1579 or call (719) 531-6333, extension 1150.

■ "100 Years of Western Literature" is the theme of a conference sponsored by the University of Wyoming American Heritage Center to be held September 24–26 in Laramie. Writers, film producers, and experts on western literature, film, and culture will trace the beginnings, development, and current status of western writing through panel discussions, presentations, and films. For more information contact the American Heritage Center, P.O. Box 3924, Laramie, Wyo. 82071 or call (307) 766-4114.

■ "American Encounters: Lewis and Clark, the People, and the Land" is the theme of a regional conference to be held in Missoula September 10–13 as part of the Columbian Quincentenary.

Historian and Lewis and Clark scholar Gary Moulton will deliver the keynote address, "Lewis and Clark: Journals, Editors, and Edition."

The conference is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities. For more information, write the Montana Committee for the Humanities, P.O. Box 8036, Missoula, Mont. 59807.

Textile Conservator Completes Grant

Rita Kauneckas, a professionally-trained textile conservator from Long Island, New York, will conclude her work at the Montana Historical Society in July.

As part of a ten-month grant from the Institute of Museum Services in Washington, D.C., Kauneckas evaluated nearly three thousand items in the museum's collections, offering recommendations regarding care, cleaning, and storage. Volunteers at the Society assisted her by packing textiles in acid-free boxes with acid-free paper, which provides proper padding and support. Volunteers also constructed padded hangers for some garments.

"Conservation," Kauneckas pointed out, "is different from restoration in that the objective is to conserve the art work or textile in its original form and condition without changing evidence of its history." Original stitching would not be removed from a dress, for example, even if only small fragments of thread remained. These threads could indicate the original seams in a dress, especially if it had been altered in later years.

Kauneckas, who did conservation work at the Society in 1988, is a graduate of the State University of New York at Oneonta. She has been an intern at several museums including the Museum of American Textile History in North Andover, Massachusetts, and the Textile Museum in Washington, D.C. Most recently she upgraded the storage of the African hat collection at the Costume Institute at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Rita Kauneckas

Historical Society Recognizes Volunteers

Doreen Milbrandt displays her certificate while Brian Cockhill (far left), Joan Haefer (second from right), and Friends of the Society Chairwoman Mary Hunt (far right) look on.

Some sixty-six members of the Friends of the Society volunteer organization were honored at the Society's annual volunteer appreciation luncheon in April. The 4,032 hours volunteered in 1991 increased since last year, Deputy Director Brian Cockhill noted, adding that the Friends' work time equals that of two full-time employees.

Volunteers were involved in a wide range of projects, including decorating the Society at Christmas, assisting in the conservation lab, hostessing Society functions, stuffing envelopes, answering 1-800 calls in the Museum Store, leading tours, and even translating quotes from German to English for Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Doreen Milbrandt was awarded the annual Director's Award for her six years of service to the Society. Departmental Assistance Volunteer Awards went to Loretta Bible, Audrey Levitan, and Doris Hitt. Betty LaSalle received the Docent Award for guiding the most student tours and Denise Pennington received the Muse Award for supervising special events at the Society.

Anyone interested in joining the Friends should contact Society Education Officer Joan Haefer at 444-4794.

Bradley Fellowships

(continued from page 1)

Laurie K. Mercier, MHS oral historian from 1981 to 1988 and currently a doctoral candidate in history in the University of Oregon, received the Bradley Graduate Research Fellowship and a $1,500 stipend. Her topic centers on labor strife and solidarity in Montana between 1934 and 1967.

Bradley recipients use the Society's library and archival collections and submit manuscripts to the Society for possible publication in Montana The Magazine of Western History.

The James H. Bradley Memorial Fellowships, established in 1983 with funds from an anonymous benefactor, are named for Lieutenant James H. Bradley, a nineteenth-century amateur ethnologist and recorder of Montana history who was killed in 1877 at the Battle of the Big Hole.

Exhibition Specialist Joins Staff

Roberta Jones-Wallace joined the Montana Historical Society museum staff on June 26 as exhibition specialist. A graduate of Montana State University in Bozeman, Jones-Wallace has worked in exhibition planning and graphic design at the M. W. Strong Museum in New York and, most recently, at the Museum of the Rockies in Bozeman.

Jones-Wallace will work with Museum director Susan Near and staff in the design and preparation of future exhibits at the Society.

1920 Census Arrives

Data from the 1920 federal census is now available at the Montana Historical Society Library for genealogists and other researchers.

The census, consisting of fifty-eight microfilm reels, has a formal index. While a statistical summary of population figures in Montana from 1920 has been available for years, complete census schedules (released every seventy-two years by the federal government) contain such personal information, "as names of individuals, their ages, race, occupations, and more," according to Society librarian Bob Clark.

Persons interested in using the census microfilm may visit the library's reference room at the Historical Society in Helena or call (406) 444-2681.

History Day Winners

Dedication and hard work paid off for twenty-three students who were winners at the ninth annual Montana History Day competition held April 4 in Helena.

In addition Gary and Sandy Barker, husband and wife teaching team from C. R. Anderson Middle School in Helena, were awarded the Montana Teacher of Merit Award for their years of dedicated effort helping students prepare for the competition. The award qualifies recipients to compete for the national History Day Teacher of the Year award.

Students participating in this year's competition submitted projects in numerous categories relating to the 1992 National History Day theme, "Discovery, Encounter, Exchange in History: The Seeds of Change." Winners are:

Butte High School—Senior Historical Papers: "Establishing the Idaho/Montana Border" by Damian Bradley and "The Northern Cheyenne: A Changing People" by Zachary Cain.

Cayuse Prairie School, Kalispell—Performance: "Carry Nation in Enterprise" by Windy Holden, Jessie Carson and Lacey Jensen; Junior Historical Paper: "Montana: The San Salvador of the West" by Kelly Fosbery; Junior Historical Paper: "Encounter with the Europeans: Discovery of Iroquois, Exchange of Ideas" by Lacey Martin.

C.R. Anderson Middle School, Helena—Individual Media: "Women's Protective Union: Changing the Way People Think" by Jake McCall; Group Media: "Electrification of Anaconda Copper Mining: Let There Be Light" by Michael Downs, Patrick Burns, Jon Alke, Robert Rivers, and Janine Willis; Group Media: "Montana's Black Gold: Yesterday's Power Working Toward Tomorrow" by Katrina Miller, Richard Burnside, and Bonita Stephens; Junior Group Project: "The Mining Law of 1872: Westward Expansion and Development" by Jennifer Addison, Emily Bergeron, and Elizabeth Rigney; Group Project: "St Mary's Mission 1840–1850: Medicine of the Black Robes" by Chris Schweitzer, Mary Skjelset, Leslie Phillips and Cristy Maffit.

State winners were eligible to attend the national competition in the University of Maryland June 14–18. Among those attending, the presentation by Jennifer Addison, Emily Bergeron, and Elizabeth Rigney won fourth place in the Junior Group Project as "An outstanding entry from Montana."

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana," a look at the history of health care, Northeast Gallery |
| | "Montana's Many Faces" in the Reflections Gallery of the Montana Homeland exhibit |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 23–24 | Montana History Conference, Miles City, Montana |

Summer Hours

(Memorial Day to Labor Day)

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Weekends and holidays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Monday. Closed after Labor Day except for tours made by appointment.* |

*Group tours may be arranged by calling 444-4794 at least two weeks in advance.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Marilyn Grant; Assistant Editor: Bergetta Hubbard; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th Ave.

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.29
No.4

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 29 No. 4 · Winter 1991

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JAN 1 6 1992
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620
PLEASE RETURN

Montana's Winter Issue

"Stories are places to live, inside the imagination . . . and we're in big trouble when we don't know which one is ours. Or when the one we inhabit doesn't work anymore, and we stick with it anyway." The West, argues William Kittredge in an essay appearing in the Winter issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History, needs a new story.

William Kittredge

Kittredge's essay, drawn from the inaugural lecture of the University of Montana's "Series on the Rocky Mountain West," delivered in Missoula in November, is joined by another lecture/essay in the Winter issue delivered by senior western historian Robert M. Utley on changing the name of Montana's Custer Battlefield. Utley, whose essay constituted the keynote address to this year's Montana History Conference in Helena, looks at the Little Bighorn battlefield as a shrine, important to white and Native American cultures alike. "For the past

continued on page 4

Martin Ridge and Montana The Magazine of Western History are co-recipients of the Western History Association's Ray Allen Billington Award for the best article on western history to be published in 1991. The prize was awarded during the WHA's annual conference in Austin, Texas, last October for Ridge's article, "The Life of an Idea: The Significance of Frederick Jackson Turner's Frontier Thesis," which appeared in the Winter 1991 issue of Montana. Ridge is director of research at the Huntington Library in San Marino, California, and is a Montana editorial board member.

Historical Society Presents Publication and Trustees Awards at Annual History Conference

Four Montana women, dedicated to the restoration of St. Mary's Mission founded in Stevensville in 1841, received the 1991 Contributions to Montana History Award given by the Montana Historical Society and its Board of Trustees. The presentation was made at the 18th Annual Montana History Conference. Also presented during the conference were awards for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History in 1991 and for the best student essay submitted for possible future publication.

Trustees Award winners Lucylle Evans, Mary Vandehey, Martha Burke, who died this year, all from Stevensville, and Mary LaWare, formerly of Stevensville and now living in Arizona, began their work on the historical building in 1983.

They spent countless hours refinishing furniture, painting, constructing display cases, and directing other work at the mission, which attracts 8,000 visitors annually. "During the past eight years these volunteers have accomplished a truly astounding amount of work," Society Trustees President Stu Conner said as he presented the award and a plaque.

Trustees Award recipients are chosen for their contributions to preserving and promoting Montana history.

Paul Andrew Hutton won the 1991 Vivian A. Paladin Award for his essay, "'Correct in Every Detail': General Custer in Hollywood," which appeared in the Winter 1991 issue of Montana. Hutton is associate professor of history in the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque and executive director of the Western History Association.

The Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award for the best student essay was awarded to Laurie K. Mercier, for her article "'We Are Women Irish': Working-Class Irish Women of Anaconda, Montana." Mercier is a doctoral student in the University of Oregon in Eugene and was head of the oral history office at the Montana Historical Society until 1988. Recipients of both awards received a cash prize and a plaque.

DEN HILL ANTI
HELENA MT

Session breaks during the Montana History Conference last October in Helena gave time to relax.

Society Collections Grow with Variety of Donations

The Montana Historical Society received 250 donations from individuals, organizations, and businesses across the state in 1991. Donations varied from photographs, books, oral histories, and western art to Girl Scout memorabilia, Indian artifacts, and Desert Storm trading cards. The wide range of artifacts, private and business records, and other printed material received each year by the archives, museum, library, and oral history departments become part of the Society's permanent collections. Scholars, genealogists, students, authors and others have access to the collections for their research.

The Society is grateful to these donors and encourages anyone interested in donating items to contact the following individuals concerning policy and procedures: Robert Clark, library, (444-4787); Kathryn Otto, archives (444-4775); Delores Morrow, photo archives (444-4714); John Terreo, oral history (444-4774); or Susan Near, museum (444-4710).

---

Margaret E. Adams
Ruby Adamsen
Don "Cheese" Akerlow
William R. Allen
Todd Allison
American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees
American Legion of Montana
American Simmental Association
Camilla M. Anderson
Arizona Historical Society
J. Hugo Aronson
Willea Atkinson
Jon Axline
Esther Barnhart
Eunice Barrow
Sue Bartlett
Andrea Bateen
Donald Becklin
Benevolent Protective Order of the Elks, Missoula Lodge
Leo Benolken
Norma Berry
Mary E. Bever
Big Sandy Historical Society
Jean Bishop
Bozarts Press
Mrs. O. J. Bristow
Ivy Brubaker
John J. Burke
Merrill G. and Virginia Burlingame
Burlington Resources
Susan Burnham
Dr. Richard Buswell
Maria Calabough
L. L. Callaway, Jr.
Campbell Farming Corporation
Bruce B. Cannady
Canyon Resources Corporation
Elwood Chambers
Roberta Carkeek Cheney
Mrs. Ken Christian
Robert M. Clark
Toneybeth Clark
Donald L. Coburn
Brian Cockhill
Stan B. Cohen
George Colgan
Mike Collins in memory of Jack Jackovac
Commission on Preservation and Access, Washington, D.C.
Nan Compton
Richard Conn
Stu Connor
Robert F. Coombs
Cooney Convalescent Home, Helena
Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coslet
Rodric J. Coslet
Frank and Joyce Coupal
Conrad Cox
Scott and Kate Crichton
Carolyn Cunningham
Gloria Curdy
Dacotah Prairie Museum
Catherine Dailey
Daly Mansion Preservation Trust
Deborah J. Davis
Dawson County Historical and Genealogical Society
John Delano
Delta Kappa Gamma, Eta Chapter, Missoula
Mary Callaway Doering
Ivan Doig
Julia and Howard Dullum
Sandra A. Ekins
Marlin L. Erb
Christina K. Erickson
Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, Bannack
Charmaine R. Fisher
Dick Flood
Meriette Foreman
Henry W. Fox
Michael H. Francis
Carol Doyle Frasier
Friendship Force
Paul Fugleberg
Earl Ganz
Anne Garner
General Society of Mayflower Descendants, Montana Chap.
Jan Gerke
Carol Godwin
William M. Grier, Jr.
JoAnn Gunderson
George Hagerman
Bob and Willa Hall
Danita Hane
Katherine L. Hansen
Victoria A. Harden
The Children of Ben Hardin, Jr.
Hope Harper
Harrison Women's Club
Thomas E. Hayward
Virginia Held
Helena Weavers and Spinners Guild
Elizabeth Herrin
Frank H. Hoel
E. Corrine Hoffert
Mrs. Carl R. Hoffman
Virge Holliday
Mrs. Brantley Holt
Gary Holt
Joan Holter
Dennis Homer
Peggy Huser
George A. Inglis
Rick Jackson
Johns Hopkins University Press
Lance K. Johnson
Patricia Johnson
Terry C. Johnston
Greg Keeler
Dorene Kershner
Warren Kingsbury
Lillian Kitzenberg
Phil Korell
Lee Kuhr
Robert R. Lacy
Margaret J. LaMay
Kirby Lambert
Last Chance Earth Day Committee
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee
B. Richard Lennington, M.D.
Audrey Levitan
Loretta Lindell
Florence Lowrance
Gary and Marcia Luther
Stan Lynde
Bill Mackay
S. Gertrude Malone
Bill Marquis
Mason County Historical Society
Peggy McCloud
Patricia Ann Hoagland McEwen
Judy McFarlane
Doris McMurray
Jo Measure
Harriett C. Meloy
Dorothy Meserva
Minnesota Historical Society
Minnesota Society of the Sons of the American Revolution
Montana Arts Council
Montana Centennial Office
Montana Cowbelles/Montana Cattlewomen
Montana Human Rights Network
Montana Land Reliance
Montana Logging Association
Montana Navy Mothers
Montana Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association
Montana Women's Political Caucus
Montana Writers Association/ Dillon Authors Association
Gayle Morin
Delores Morrow
Don Morrow
Helen B. Murphy
National Honor Society/ Hinsdale Chapter
Susan Near
Ernest A. Neath
Alistair Neely
Frank S. Newman
Lynette Niland
Office of the Governor
Oklahoma Historical Society
Old Trail Museum
Carle F. O'Neil
Original Governor's Mansion Board
John Osterberg
OX-5 Aviation Pioneers
Clara Park
Frieda Austin Park
Benjamin Miller Peckham
Petroleum County Public Library
Del Phillips
Pioneer Nursing Home
Wes and Marion Plate
Larry Poepping
Susan Polley
Polson City Library
Frances Poor Family
Clarence Popham
Harold M. Price
Andrew Prinzing
Jeanette Prodgers
Datus C. Proper
Marvin W. Ratcliff
Velma Reber
Mickey Richards
Richard Roeder
Charles Roth
Rupert's Land Record Society
Vivan Ryan
Bob Saindon
St. Peter's Episcopal Cathedral
Margaret A. Sammick
Margaret Sammiell
Diane Sands
Lloyd Scholer
Ted Schwinden

Dr. Jim Scott
Roy Scow
Bill Sharp
John H. Sherman
Edward Simons
Naomi Smith
Lawrence and Barbara Sommer
Iona M. Sowa
Special K Ranch
Hal Stearns
Jan Sternhagen
Greg Stevens
Eva B. Sullivan
Leslie Noelle Sullivan
William Summers
Sun River Electric Cooperative
Walt Thayer
Melanie Rae Thon
Sara Toubman
Phyllis Trang
Chris Treichel
William D. Trethewey
Yvonne M. Unruh
Mona Vanek
Mrs. Joseph Virag
Francis Clara Briggs Waddell
Shirley Wales
Bill Walker
David Walter
Joseph T. Ward
Phoebe Warren
Alvina Welliver
Richard S. Wheeler
John Wheeler
Robert White
Estate of Janet Williams, donated by Claire J. Caylor, William R. Deppe, Janet McCulloch
Audrey Wilson
Mrs. Frederick Y. Wiselogle
Walter Wohleter
Agnes Jean Wood
Betty Jean Wood
Yellowstone County District Court
Joyce Young
Harold R. Youngland
Anna Zellick

MHS NEWS AND NOTICES

Bessie L. Frary Estate Benefits Society Foundation

Longtime Cut Bank resident Bessie L. Frary, who passed away in October 1991, has bequeathed a generous portion of her estate to the Montana Historical Society Foundation.

The donation, totaling between $60,000 and $75,000, will become part of the Society's permanent endowment fund. The gift will be matched on a one-to-three basis by a National Endowment for the Humanities Challenge Grant, which the Foundation hopes to complete by 1993, according to Society Director Lawrence Sommer. Approximately $500,000 must be raised to fulfill terms of the grant.

Mrs. Frary inherited the estate of her husband, Cut Bank businessman Gerald S. Frary, who died in 1980. More than $1 million of the estate was donated to scholarship funds, charitable corporations, and nonprofit organizations in Cut Bank and across the state of Montana. Mrs. Frary was 87 years old at the time of her death.

Bradley Fellowship Forms Available

The Montana Historical Society will award James H. Bradley fellowships to two scholars to conduct research on some aspect of Montana history at the Society during the summer of 1992 and to write articles based on their research.

A $2,500 Senior Fellowship is open to all applicants and a $1,500 Graduate Research Award is open to candidates for advanced degrees in appropriate fields.

Recipients of both awards are expected to be in residence at the Society weekdays for a minimum of four weeks between June 1 and September 25, 1992. Each recipient also will be expected to submit an article for possible publication in the Society's quarterly journal, Montana The Magazine of Western History.

To request a flyer explaining application procedures, write or call Bob Clark, Chair, Bradley Fellowship Committee, MHS, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, Montana 59620, (406) 444-4787. Applications must be postmarked by March 27, 1992.

Two Biographies Win Awards for Excellence

Photographing Montana, 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Evelyn Cameron (1990) received the best nonfiction award at the second annual regional book awards ceremony of the Mountain Plains Booksellers Association in Denver, Colorado, in October.

The biography, written by Donna M. Lucey, is based on the Cameron collection of photographs and diaries recently donated to the Society and recounts the life of eastern Montana pioneer, photographer, and diarist Evelyn Cameron.

Thomas O. Larkin: A Life of Patriotism and Profit in Old California (1990), by Harlan Hague and Dave J. Langum, was awarded the Caroline Bancroft History Prize. The award, presented annually by the Denver Public Library, honors Caroline Bancroft, a chronicler of Colorado history and a major benefactor of the Denver Public Library's Western History Department.

Both books are available in the Society's Museum Store (1-800-243-9900).

Photo Historian Seeks Slides from 1945–1965

New York photographic historian Guy Stricherz is looking for old Kodachrome slides to become part of a book and a proposed national exhibition titled, "Americans in Kodachrome: Photographic Folk Art, 1945–1965." The collection of 150 photographs will portray the ethnic and cultural diversity in post–World War II America.

The artist is seeking images taken between 1945 and 1965 of groups and individuals in Montana as well as other states. Photographers, whose work is accepted, will be credited in the book and exhibition and will receive a 16″ x 20″ Dye Transfer print. All slides will be handled carefully and returned promptly. For more information call collect or write Guy Stricherz, 23 Prince St., New York, N.Y. 10012, (212) 226-3399.

Lecture Series to Feature Bevis

The University of Montana in Missoula will continue to feature speakers as part of its "Series on the Rocky Mountain West." William Bevis, professor of English in the University of Montana, and author of Ten Tough Trips: Montana Writers and the West, will present "Power and Place: Questions about Regional Identity," on January 9, 1992, at 3:00 p.m. in University Hall, Room 210.

The monthly series of lectures will continue through May 1992 and will include lectures by Patricia Nelson Limerick, Gregory Campbell, Paul Steckler, James Welch, and Robert A. Williams, Jr. For additional information, call William Farr, University of Montana, Dept. of History, (406) 243-2231.

Society's Education Director Resigns

Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, director of education, has announced her resignation, effective January 2, 1992, after fifteen years of service at the Montana Historical Society.

Thompson's first position in 1976 was curator/director of the Montana Historical Society's Libby Branch museum. Four years later she relocated to Helena, where she accepted the newly-created position of curator of education.

Education projects initiated by Thompson include slide shows and curriculum materials, which are distributed to Montana schools; museum tours for students in kindergarten through high school; and sponsorship of Montana History Day. The education office also is responsible for the annual Montana History Conference and coordinates the volunteer program, which has grown from twenty to seventy-two volunteers during Thompson's tenure.

Thompson will work as an independent consultant for cultural agencies throughout the Northwest and will serve as director of education at Plymouth Congregational Church in Helena.

Montana (continued from page 1)

Robert M. Utley

twenty years," writes Utley, "and for the indefinite future, this place where historic site and shrine come together has been, is, and will continue to be a battleground between two patriotisms."

Also included in the Winter issue is Kenneth N. Owens's article on the diaries of Mormon immigrants on the Mormon-Carson Trail through the high Sierras; William Seraile's essay on Theophilus Gould Steward, a black army chaplain stationed in Montana in the late nineteenth century; and William Pratt's look, based on newly released FBI records, at twentieth century radicalism in the northern West. Keith Edgerton reviews the long neglect and attempted reforms that sparked the 1959 Montana prison riot, and Walter Fleming reviews the expanding interest in literature by Native American authors as reflected in the growing number of their publications.

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana," a look at the history of health care, in Northeast Gallery"Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions," a juried photography exhibit |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |
| | Special Events |
| April 30–May 2 | Museums Association of Montana 24th Annual Meeting, Sidney, Montana |
| March 1992 | March Lecture Series focusing on Medicine in Montana, Haynes Auditorium, 12:00–1:00 p.m., brown-bag lunch, MHS, 225 N. Roberts St.March 4: "Moo, Haw, Hiss: The Changing Practice of Veterinary Medicine in Montana"March 11: "Native Traditions in Health Care and Medicine"March 18: "Dr. Caroline McGill: A Biography"March 25: "Women's Secrets: A History of Making Choices About Family" |
| | Winter Hours |
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion 304 N. Ewing | Closed until further notice |

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD MAIL 1/91
Montana State Library
1515 E. Sixth Ave.

S
978.6
H6m
V. 29
No. 3

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 30 1991
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 29 No. 3 · Autumn 1991

History Conference Will Address Impact of Military Conflict on the West

Nationally and regionally recognized speakers and panelists will consider the many facets of military conflict in Montana and the West at the eighteenth annual Montana History Conference in Helena October 24–26.

Robert M. Utley, retired chief historian for the National Park Service and senior authority on the frontier military, will discuss the current ideological struggle for the Custer battlefield during his keynote address at the Conference banquet Friday evening. Utley is the author of many books and articles on the military in the West, including Custer and the Great Controversy: Origin and Development of a Legend, and the Book-of-the-Month Club and History Book Club selection, Cavalier in Buckskin: George Armstrong Custer and the Western Military Frontier. He is currently writing a biography of Sitting Bull. Utley also will participate in a plenary session on the Great Sioux War Friday afternoon.

Other conference sessions will address the effects of both World Wars on Montana, the roots of Indian-white conflict, war hysteria on the home front, medicine in the Montana military, and traditions of Native American warriors.

Concurrent western crafts workshops are scheduled for Thursday afternoon. Thursday evening the opening reception

continued on page 4

Autumn Issue Features Exploration and the American West

Few human endeavors excite the imagination as compellingly as exploration, and the American West is one of the few places that still invites the contemporary sojourner to see the landscape largely as early explorers viewed it. The autumn issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History combines exploration and the West to produce a special theme issue on man's quest for discovery.

James P. Ronda leads off with a look at the significance of the Lewis and Clark expedition as a product of Enlightenment thinking. Next, Carlo Rotella considers a more subjective West through the eyes and newly discovered letters of Edwin James, who accompanied Stephen H. Long across the central plains to the Colorado Front Range in 1820.

Also in this issue, Joseph C. Porter details the 1833 expedition to Montana of Prince Maximilian of Wied and artist Karl Bodmer. Susan Badger Doyle then recounts the short-lived history of the

continued on page 4

Frederic Remington's illustration of the Lewis and Clark expedition appeared in the May 12, 1906, Collier's Weekly magazine as part of a series, "The Great Explorers."

Helen Hornby, Society Director Lawrence Sommer (center), and Stuart W. Conner

Board of Trustees Elects New Officers

Stuart W. Conner, a retired Billings attorney and advocate for the preservation of prehistoric sites and Native American history and culture, is the new president of the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustees. Conner succeeds Helen Hornby, Livingston, who served two, two-year terms as board president.

Helena attorney Ward A. Shanahan is the new vice president of the fifteen-member board, and Susan McDaniel, executive director of the Custer County Art Center in Miles City, is secretary. Newly appointed to five-year board terms by Governor Stan Stephens are Montana educator Virginia Lucht, Bigfork; Chase Hibbard, Helena businessman and rancher; and homemaker and community volunteer Jean Birch, Great Falls.

Members who retired from the board at the Trustee meeting in Livingston are: Bruce L. Ennis, Billings, who served from 1982 to 1991; Leif Erickson, Bigfork, who served from 1984 to 1991, and Harold G. Stearns, Helena, who served two terms, from 1967 to 1973 and 1984 to 1991.

PLEASE RETURN

■ The Nez Perce National Historic Trail Foundation, devoted to establishing a marked trail through four states commemorating the 1877 flight of the Nez Perce Indians, was organized in Missoula last July. The foundation has launched a national drive for members as well as to raise money for trail designations and research into Nez Perce history. Professor Harry Fritz of the University of Montana's history department is the foundation's first president, and Montana Historical Society Director Lawrence Sommer sits on the Membership Committee.

■ "Sapatqayn: Twentieth-Century Nez Perce Artists," a major art exhibit commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the National Park Service and National Native American Heritage Month, will open November 16 in Spalding, Idaho. The first-of-its-kind exhibit, sponsored by the Nez Perce National Historical Park, will include traditional and contemporary art, beadwork, guest speakers, and demonstrations by Nez Perce artists. The exhibit will run through January 12, 1992. For information and a schedule of events, write Marie Marek or Susan Buchel, Nez Perce National Historical Park, P.O. Box 93, Spalding, Idaho 83551 or call (208) 843-2261.

■ Josh Wood, Emily Nay, and Erik Turner of C. R. Anderson Middle School in Helena were awarded the "Outstanding Entry from Montana" at the National History Day Competition in June at the University of Maryland, College Park. Selected from the Junior Group Media category for their slide and taped sound tract presentation, "Ft. Missoula, The Italian Internment of World War Two," the students were chosen from the sixteen Montana students attending the national gathering of 3,000 students from across the nation.

Schools interested in the 1992 National History Day competition should contact the education office at the Montana Historical Society, (406)444-4794.

■ A Certificate of Achievement was awarded to the Montana Historical Society by the Helena Advertising Federation for the Society's brochure. The brochure, describing the museum's exhibits, location, and visitation schedule, was compiled by Glenda Bradshaw, publications office; designed by Annette Finstad, Finstad Visual Design in Helena; and printed by Artcraft Printers in Bozeman.

Museum Store Mails Catalog

The Montana Historical Society Museum Store's 1991–1992 catalog will be mailed to Society members this week, and for the first time, the Store is offering toll-free order service to customers. To place your order—or to ask for more information—simply dial 1-800-243-9900, and store personnel will do the rest for you.

The Museum Store, specialists in current and classical western history and literature for adults and young people, also carries a fine selection of other western gifts, cards, posters, and prints of seventy-two Russell originals.

This holiday season ask the Museum Store to help you with your gift selections by dialing 1-800-243-9900.

■ John Terreo, Montana Historical Society oral historian and archivist, recently received a special certificate of appreciation from the U.S. Forest Service. The certificate recognizes Terreo for organizing and conducting a series of oral history workshops for Region One, the four-state division of the U.S. Forest Service headquartered in Missoula.

■ The Oral History Association requests proposals for papers, panels, media presentations, or entire sessions for its 1992 annual meeting, October 15–19, 1992, in Cleveland, Ohio. Proposal deadline is December 1, 1991. Inquiries can be directed to Donna Deblasio, program chair, Youngstown Historical Center of Industry and Labor, P.O. Box 533, Youngstown, Ohio 44501, (216) 743-5934.

■ The thirty-fifth Annual Missouri Valley History Conference, to be held in Omaha, Nebraska, March 12–14, 1992, welcomes proposals for papers and sessions in all areas of history. Mail proposals, a one-page abstract, and vitae by November 1, 1991, to William C. Pratt, coordinator, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Omaha, Neb. 68182.

■ Friends of the Society, the organization for volunteers who give their talents, energy, and time to help the Society's many outreach programs, is seeking new members for the 1991-1992 season.

If you like to work with young people, lead museum tours, help with exhibit openings, or work with staff members behind the scenes, call the education office at (406) 444-4794.

■ The Gallatin County Historical Society's third annual History Conference will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday, November 9, at the Pioneer Museum in Bozeman. The Society invites Gallatin County residents to present papers, of approximately twenty minutes, about family history or local events. Registration is $10 and includes lunch. Send information about your topic to the Pioneer Museum, 317 W. Main, Bozeman, Mont. 59715 or call (406) 585-1311 for more details.

■ Through the combined efforts of the Montana Historical Society and the State Library, the public now has access to books written to help amateurs and professionals develop museums and build and preserve collections.

Some ninety books and technical pamphlets about administrative and technical aspects of museum work, ranging from fund raising to preservation of collections, may be borrowed from libraries across the state through a new interlibrary loan program. Information about the program is available at local libraries or through Sue Near, the Society's museum services administrator, at (406) 444-4710.

Another resource, the Guide and Resources for Archival Strategic Preservation Planning, published by the National Association of Government Archives and Records Administrators, may be borrowed from the Society Archives by contacting Kathy Otto, (406) 444-4775.

■ Financial grants totaling $124,199 have been awarded by the State Historical Preservation Office to local governments and organizations across Montana. The grants represent a portion of federal funds received from the National Park Service Historical Preservation Fund.

History of Medicine Museum Exhibit Opens October 24

The history of medicine in the West is the theme of "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana," a new exhibit scheduled to open during the Montana History Conference at the Society on October 24.

"The exhibit is about how people from ancient to modern times dealt with and deal with being sick or injured in the great open spaces of Montana," Museum Services Administrator Sue Near said.

The exhibit depicts the many health hazards for those traveling and living in the West, where "injury and disease were a greater threat . . . than renegades and desperados," according to Near.

Displays include examples of Native American environmental medicine, European remedies that integrated the Native American's knowledge and use of plants, the methods of Chinese herbal doctors, patent medicines, and modern medicine—the most famous perhaps being the vaccine for Rocky Mountain spotted fever developed by the U.S. Public Health Service Laboratory at Hamilton, Montana.

Tax Law Change Can Benefit Donors

A one-year change in how the federal tax law applies to certain donations could help donors while helping the Montana Historical Society add to its collections during 1991.

The tax law change affects how some taxpayers may deduct the fair market value of appreciated property donated to organizations such as the Society. Included in the tax benefit are contributions of art, manuscripts, photographs, antique furniture, and similar items.

Interested donors should ask their tax advisors how this tax law change may benefit them. The Society is not allowed to provide tax advice or appraise anything donated to its collections.

Individuals interested in donating items under this tax benefit should contact Society Director Lawrence Sommer at 225 No. Roberts St., Helena, Mont. 59620.

Society Archives Receives Records of Farm Corporation and Survey Books

Documents, aerial photographs, financial records, and correspondence dating to 1918 that trace the development of Montana's largest farming operation have been donated to the Society's archives.

The Campbell Farming Corporation (CFC) in Hardin was started by Thomas Campbell to help alleviate food shortages following World War I. Initially Campbell leased Indian reservation lands near Poplar and Hardin, then consolidated his operation at Hardin in 1922. By 1923 the CFC employed 100 men and cultivated 10,000 acres. Eventually the corporation owned or leased 120,000 acres.

Rows of combines worked fields of the Campbell Farming Corporation near Hardin, Montana.

Phoebe Warren of Billings, Montana, granddaughter of Thomas Campbell, assisted archivists Kathryn Otto and Ellen Arguimbau in retrieving nearly 100 cubic feet of the corporation's records.

The Society also has acquired 430 survey books of detailed topographical maps and notes belonging to the Northern Pacific Railroad. "In many cases these surveys provide the only source of detailed information on land use and other descriptions . . . of Montana during the first half of this century," according to Otto. Herm Leibinger, Billings, who worked as an assistant land examiner said that surveyors, beginning in 1908, made notes on the location of water ways, crops, livestock, buildings, roads, old trails, and ". . . anything that could have a possible affect on potential land values."

The survey books had been held at the Glacier Park Land Company Office in Miles City.

Rocky Mountain West Lecture Series Begins

The University of Montana is sponsoring a series of lectures on the Rocky Mountain West that will commence this November in Missoula.

William Kittredge, professor of English and widely known Montana author, will present the first lecture titled, "Storytelling and Western Identity," at 8 p.m. Thursday, November 8, at the Montana Theater on the University of Montana campus. Kittredge's lecture will be followed on Friday, November 9, by a panel discussion including Governor Ted Schwinden; Missoula Mayor Dan Kemmis; Jeanne Eder from Western Montana College, Dillon; and Jeremy Mouat from Athabasca University, Athabasca, Alberta. The panel discussion, moderated by Margaret Kingsland of the Montana Council for the Humanities, will be held from 9 to noon.

Further explorations of regional history, titled "Critical Matters in Progress," to be held after the first of the year, will include such speakers as William Bevis, Patricia Nelson Limerick, Robin Williams, Charles Joyner, and Jeanne Eder.

Society Patrons Die

Two Montanans who made important contributions to the Montana Historical Society passed away this summer.

Malcolm S. (Bud) Mackay, Jr., who donated his collection of Charles M. Russell paintings to the Montana Historical Society in 1952, died in Red Lodge on July 17.

Mackay's knowledge and appreciation of western art grew from his interest in the collection of Russell art owned by his father.

George W. O'Connor, a member of the Society's Board of Trustees from 1980 to 1988 and president of the board from 1983 to 1985, died in Butte on July 18. O'Connor was a former legislator and Montana Power Company executive.

State School Children Learn History at Society

From kindergartens through high schools the Historical Society's education office reaches out to Montana's public school students.

Educational tours begin with kindergartners who learn about history by handling artifacts or reproductions of artifacts in the Society's collections. For older students field trips to the Society focus on Montana Indians, home and community, and work and technology.

An activity guide, prepared by the education office, is completed by elementary youngsters in their classrooms. When they visit the museum, they may select a tour showing how Native Americans adapted to twentieth-century Montana or one about changes in domestic and community life from caves to sheep wagons to modern-age homes.

Junior and senior high students explore work and technology in Montana's history, beginning with the atlatl, a spear throwing tool, to factory-produced tools used by farmers, ranchers, and urban settlers.

Schools interested in tours should contact the Society's education office at (406) 444-4794.

History Conference (continued from page 1)

and program will be at the Montana Historical Society in conjunction with the opening of the museum exhibit, "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana." During the reception authors participating in the Conference will be available to autograph their books.

Program sessions will be held at the Colonial Inn. Conference programs with a complete listing of sessions and a registration form have been sent to Society members. For additional information or programs, call (406) 444-4794.

Autumn in Montana (continued from page 1)

Bozeman Trail, based on extensive research in the diaries of trail emigrants, and John L. Kessell adds a historical commentary on the extent of Spanish exploration throughout the trans-Mississippi West.

The issue also offers book reviews on western exploration and reproductions of period illustrations, western art, and a half dozen maps.

MHS CALENDAR

| | |
|---|---|
| MHS Exhibits | "Curing Ills and Healing Wounds: Medicine in Montana," a look at the history of health care, opens Thursday, October 24, 1991, in the Northeast Gallery. |
| Temporary Exhibits | "Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions," a juried photography exhibit |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 22–26 | Mountain Plains Museum Association Meeting Albuquerque, New Mexico |
| October 24–26 | 18th Annual Montana History Conference, Helena |
| October 24 | Opening of "Medicine in Montana" exhibit and reception, 7:30–9:00 p.m. |
| December 8 | Original Governor's Mansion Christmas Home Tour, 304 N. Ewing, 1–5 p.m. |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion 304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sunday, Monday, and holidays. Closed January through March except for tours made by appointment. |

*Group tours may be arranged by calling (406)444-4794 two weeks in advance.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

DEADHEAD MAIL
Montana State Library
1515 E. Sixth Ave.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

S
978.6
H6m
V. 29
No. 2

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 29 No. 2 · Summer 1991

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

JUL 11 1991

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Margaret Davis

PLEASE RETURN

History Day Winners

These five Montana City School scholars receiving posters from Larry Sommer, director of the Montana Historical Society, were among the seventeen winning contestants at the Montana History Day held in Helena in May. Nearly seventy students from throughout the state prepared media presentations, papers, projects, and performances for the event, which is sponsored by the Historical Society. State winners were eligible to attend the National History Competition in the University of Maryland, College Park, in June.

Entrants selected for the national contest included:

Montana City School, Montana City—"Suzette LaFlesches' Fight for Indian Rights," by Alison James, Namie Prouty, Carmen Barns, Beth Christofferson, and Karrie

continued on page 3

Bradley Fellowships Announced

The Montana Historical Society has awarded $7,000 in research fellowships this year as part of the James H. Bradley Research Fellowship Program, including a special lifetime achievement award to longtime Society sponsor and consultant John C. Ewers.

Ewers, ethnologist emeritus with the Smithsonian Institution, received a $1,500 award to study the frontier newspaper as an ethnological resource.

Also receiving Bradley fellowships were William G. Robbins, professor of history in Oregon State University, and Judith Fabry, doctoral candidate in Iowa State University.

Professor Robbins will receive a $3,000 senior fellowship to study Montana entrepreneur Samuel T. Hauser. Fabry will receive a $2,000 junior fellowship to study the history of irrigation in Montana as it applied to the Fort Shaw unit of the Sun River Project.

In addition, a special Montana student fellowship of $500 was awarded to University of Montana graduate student Bonnie Christensen to do research at the Society on the Dearborn Canal.

Brian Cockhill is Society's New Deputy Director

Brian Cockhill, administrative officer of centralized services at the Montana Historical Society since 1984, has been appointed deputy director of the Society, a position he held previously from 1980 to 1982.

In announcing the appointment, Society Director Larry Sommer said the deputy director would be responsible for administering agency fiscal policy and would serve as personnel officer and as liaison with the legislature.

Cockhill joined the Society September 1, 1971, as assistant archivist. Two years later he became Society archivist and in 1982 was appointed state archivist. Before coming to the Society, he worked as an archivist in the University of Montana where he earned his Master of Arts degree in western American history.

Shortly after coming to the Society, Cockhill and Dale L. Johnson, University of Montana archivist, compiled and edited Guide to Manuscripts in Montana Repositories (1973).

Coming This Summer in Montana

"I wish I could lead a life worthy to look back upon." So thought Evelyn Jephson Cameron, a gently bred Englishwoman who lived a rigorous life of ranching, photography, and adventure in turn-of-the-century eastern Montana.

Cameron's worthy life will be looked back upon in the summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History in a special article and photo essay by Donna Lucey, former Time-Life Books editor and author of Photographing Montana, a biography of Cameron.

Cameron moved to Montana in 1889 and for the next four decades took hundreds of photographs of eastern Montana and maintained extensive diaries.

Also featured in the summer issue: Clyde Milner's article on how four Montanans, including author Joseph Kinsey Howard, established western identities;

continued on page 3

■ The University of New Mexico, Center for the American West, has published an extensive environmental bibliography, The Environment in the Twentieth-Century American West: A Bibliography. Thomas Jaehn has compiled over 700 essays, books, and dissertations relating to all areas of environmental study. To order send $15.00 (cloth) or $7.50 (paper) to the Center for the American West, Dept. of History, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N. Mex. 87131.

■ The first issue of Sign-Talker, official newsletter for friends of the future Frank Bird Linderman Society, has been published. The Society's main interest is in reviving the many works of writer Frank Bird Linderman. If you would like a copy of the newsletter or would like to help establish the new Linderman organization, contact Friends of FBL, c/o Celeste River, 309 McLeod, Missoula, Mont. 59801, (406) 721-7528.

■ Diane Glancy, a Cherokee writer, poet, and teacher at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minnesota, won the first annual North American Indian Prose Award. The award, co-sponsored by the University of Nebraska and the University of California, Santa Cruz, and University of California, Berkeley, recognized her collection of essays and poems, Claiming Breath. In it she writes of her travels, marriage, Native American heritage, and the struggle by women throughout history to be heard. Along with a $1,000 cash prize, Glancy's manuscript will be published by the University of Nebraska Press.

■ The James Jerome Hill Reference Library in St. Paul, Minnesota, will award a number of grants of up to $2,000 to support research in the James J. Hill and Louis W. Hill papers. Deadline for applications is October 1, 1991. For more information, contact W. Thomas White, Curator, James Jerome Hill Reference Library, 80 West Fourth Street, St. Paul, Minn. 55102.

■ Poets and Poetry-lovers: The Montana Cowboy Poetry Gathering will meet in Lewistown ("in Kid Russell country") August 15–17. For more information contact the Lewistown Area Chamber of Commerce, Box 818, Lewistown, Mont. 59457, (406) 538-5436.

■ The fourteenth annual Western Rendezvous of Art will be held at the Holter Museum of Art in Helena August 15–18. Paintings and bronzes by artists from thirteen states and Canada may be purchased on Saturday, August 17. Additional art also will be displayed by members of the Northwest Rendezvous Group. For information call or write the Helena Arts Council, 12 East Lawrence Street, Helena, Mont. 59601, (406) 442-6400.

■ The Irish Research Fund, a program of the American Cultural Institute in St. Paul, Minnesota, dedicated to preserving Irish culture, offers grants from $1,000 to $5,000. The Fund welcomes scholarly projects from all disciplines. Submission deadline is August 1, 1991. For more information contact the Irish American Cultural Institute, 2115 Summit Ave., University of St. Thomas (Box 5026), St. Paul, Minn. 55105, (612) 647-5678.

■ The Montana Historical Society Library joined the Montana State Library and State Law Library for a two-day Reference Institute in June. The program, funded by a grant from the Montana State Library, brought together fifty public and school library personnel from across the state for training in Montana-related reference work and research. Society Library Director Bob Clark discussed the Society's holdings, policies, and services.

■ Historic preservationists will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the National Historic Preservation Act at the 45th National Preservation Conference October 16–20 in San Francisco, California. Write to V.P., Programs, Services and Information, National Trust for Historic Preservation, 1785 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, for more information.

■ Two hundred collectors and dealers will display quality artifacts—some museum quality— from the Old West at the Western Americana Collectors Society Old West Show July 13–14 at the HERBST Pavilion at Historic Fort Mason in San Fransisco. American Indian treasures, cowboy paraphernalia, fine firearms, and antiquities are included. For more information write the Western Americana Collectors Society, P.O. Box 620417, Woodside, Calif. 94062, (415) 851-7188.

■ The 1991 Oral History Association conference will be held at Snowbird Resort in the Wasatch Mountains near Salt Lake City, Utah, October 10–13. For more information about the 4-day conference contact Richard Smith, OHA, 1093 Broxton Ave., #720, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024 or the Institute for Oral History, P.O. Box 97271, Baylor University, Waco, Texas 76798. The OHA also requests proposals for papers, panels, media presentations, or entire sessions for its 1992 annual meeting, October 15–19, 1992, in Cleveland, Ohio. Proposal deadline is December 1, 1991. Inquiries or submissions can be directed to Donna Deblasio, Program Chair, Youngstown Historical Center of Industry and Labor, P.O. Box 533, Youngstown, Ohio 44501, (216) 743-5934.

■ The sixth annual North American Fur Trade Conference is scheduled for September 25–29 at the Grand Hotel, Mackinac Island, Michigan. Anthropologists, historians, geographers, museum professionals, and scholars from around the world will present papers and share information about the fur trade. For information write Sixth North American Fur Trade Conference, Mackinac State Historic Parks, P.O. Box 873, Mackinaw City, Mich. 49701.

Montana History Conference

Mark your calendar and plan now to attend the Montana History Conference October 24–26 in Helena. Following special meetings and workshops on Thursday, an evening reception and program is planned at the Society in conjunction with the opening of the exhibit, "Medicine in Montana."

Plenary sessions on Friday and concurrent sessions and activities Saturday morning will examine the conference theme, "Montana's Response to Conflict." The conference will conclude Saturday afternoon with a tour of Fort Harrison, home of the First Special Service Force during World War II.

Keynote and session speakers will be listed in the Autumn Post, and a printed schedule of events will be available in September. For more information contact the Society's education office at (406) 444-4794.

"Photographing Montana" Exhibit Is Ready to Travel

A traveling exhibit of forty-seven large-format photographs taken by Evelyn Cameron of eastern Montana in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries is available for booking through the Society museum program.

The photographs are from the remarkable collection of photos, glass plates, film negatives, diaries, and personal belongings of Cameron, which inspired the book, Photographing Montana, 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Evelyn Cameron, by Donna Lucey.

The collection recently was donated to the Society by heirs of Janet Williams, who had been Cameron's best friend. An exhibit based on the book and including personal items of Evelyn and of her husband, Ewen, currently is on display in the Society.

Institutions interested in booking the traveling exhibit may contact Sue Near, museum services administrator, at the Society or call (406) 444-4710. Orders for Donna Lucey's biography of Cameron, who left behind her life as a genteel Englishwoman to become a rancher near Terry in Fallon County, may be placed in writing or by calling the Society's Museum Store at (406) 444-2890 or 1-800-243-9900.

William Tallbull Earns Preservation Award

For his efforts to preserve the traditions, culture, and history of the Northern Cheyenne as well as those of all Native Americans, William Tallbull received the Montana Historic Preservation Award during special ceremonies in Helena in May.

Tallbull, a Northern Cheyenne spiritual leader and professor at Dull Knife College in Lame Deer, was instrumental in convincing Congress to return, to tribal heirs, Native American sacred objects and skeletal remains held in the Smithsonian Institution.

In selecting Tallbull for the award, the Preservation Office and the State Historical Preservation Review Board praised his willingness to work with government agencies and private groups to protect Native American culture.

In addition to his work at the national level, the award recognizes his lifelong interest in and his work within his tribe to learn about and insure the preservation of Northern Cheyenne ways and his dedication to sharing with others their history.

Society Director Appointed to National Board

Society Director Larry Sommer has been appointed to a three-year term on the Board of Advisors of the National Trust for Historic Preservation. He joins Montanan Ellen Sievert of Great Falls on the national board.

Sommer, who has been Society director since July 1989, has been professionally involved in historic preservation planning, architectural history, and cultural resources management since 1968.

Kathryn Otto Attends Institute

State Archivist Kathryn Otto recently returned from the University of Pittsburgh where she was one of twenty archivists selected nation-wide for the Institute on Advanced Administration for Government Archivists. Participants at the two-week session focused on the impact of electronic media on government archives and the development of state information policies.

Otto's attendance was made possible by a stipend from the National Association of Government Archives and Records Administrators and a grant from the Montana Historical Society Foundation.

Book Club Selection

The Great Sioux War, 1876–77, published by the Montana Historical Society Press this spring, has been chosen as an alternate selection by both the History Book Club and the Military Book Club. Edited by Paul Hedren, The Great Sioux War is an anthology of fifteen articles from Montana The Magazine of Western History.

The book sells for $27.50 (cloth) and $11.95 (paper) and may be ordered from the Museum Store, 225 No. Roberts St., Helena, Mont. 59620 (add $1.80 postage for one book and $.50 for each additional book) or phone 1-800-243-9900.

Montana, from page 1

Jerry Greene's essay on the confrontation between Colonel Nelson Miles and Sitting Bull at Cedar Creek in late 1876; and Gordon Bakken's story of how Deer Lodge valley farmers and ranchers fought the Anaconda Company and lost in a turn-of-the-century battle over environmental pollution; and Henry Stamm's award-winning essay on Wyoming's Wind River Reservation.

Stonemason Display

A collection of stonemason's tools, recently added to the permanent history exhibit of the Montana Historical Society, introduces museum visitors to turn-of-the-century city life in Montana.

The tools were used by Matt Z. Tuss and Vinko Kalafatic, Croatian stonemasons of Lewistown and were donated to the Historical Society by Mr. and Mrs. Anton "Tony" Tuss and Mrs. C. E. Huffine. Lewistown area historian Anna Zellick assisted in arranging the donation.

History Day Competition, from page 1

Holmquist and "Hutte-Rights and State Rights," by Miranda Logan.

Trinity Lutheran School, Kalispell—"Dred Scott Decision," by Rachael Schmidt.

Somers School, Somers—"Amish Schooling Rights," by Jill Cook and Melissa Shelton.

C. R. Anderson Middle School, Helena—"Rights of the Mentally Ill—From Restraints to Recovery," by Julie Hanson and Shaunna Griffin, and "Ft. Missoula, The Italian Internment of World War Two," by Josh Wood, Emily Nay, and Erik Turner.

Cayuse Prairie School, Kalispell—"The Right to Smoke Tobacco vs. the Right to Breathe Fresh Air," by Yohana Weaver, Kristi Burns, and Sarah Crowell.

Historical Society Honors Volunteers

Tom Cook

Betty LaSalle (left) shares a laugh with Joan Haefer, education program assistant.

At its annual volunteer appreciation day in April, the Montana Historical Society honored more than sixty volunteers who shared with the Society their talents and nearly 4,000 hours of their time last year. That, Society Director Larry Sommer told the gathering of staff and volunteers, "is the equivalent of two full-time employees."

Seven Helena-area women received special recognition for their service to the Society. Marjorie Sharp, B. J. Wood, and Rita Sheehy were given Director Awards for providing the volunteer organization with strong leadership for many years.

Department Assistance Awards were given to Loretta Bible, who contributed more than 305 hours, and to Doris Hitt, who gave 287 hours. Hitt also received the Muse Award for her help with public functions sponsored by the Society.

The Docent Award, recognizing work with Museum tours and special presentations, was given to Betty LaSalle.

Anyone interested in volunteering and joining the Friends of the Society should contact Jennifer Thompson, head of the Society's education office and of the volunteer program, at (406) 444-4794.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions," juried photography exhibit, through September 7, 1991 |
| | "Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Lady Evelyn Cameron," photographs and possessions of a Montana photographer from the turn of the century, extended to run through September 7, 1991 |
| | Landscape Paintings by Western Artists through Labor Day |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| Fall 1991 | "Medicine in Montana" exhibit |
| By appointment* | "Montana Homeland" exhibit group tours |

Summer Hours

(Memorial Day through Labor Day)

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Weekends and holidays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Monday. |

*Group tours may be arranged by calling 444-4794 at least two weeks in advance.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD MAIL
Montana State Library
1515 E. Sixth Ave.

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 29, No. 1

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR [illegible] 1991
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620
PLEASE RETURN

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 29 No. 1 · Spring 1991

Cameron Collection Donated

The stunning early twentieth-century photographs of Evelyn Cameron, featured recently in a segment of "CBS Sunday Morning with Charles Kuralt" and the subject of hot-selling biography by former Time-Life Books Editor Donna Lucey, have been acquired by the Montana Historical Society.

The Cameron collection of nearly 5,000 glass plates, film negatives, and photographs documents the life, scenery, and wildlife of southeastern Montana from 1894 to 1928. Cameron, an Englishwoman who moved to Montana with her husband in 1890, settled on a ranch near Terry and recorded the region and its changes for nearly three decades.

"The value of the Cameron collection," says Society photoarchivist Delores Morrow, "goes beyond Evelyn's remarkable photographs because she left behind diaries that recount her daily life and record details of her professional life as a photographer." Also donated to the Society were Cameron's photographic equipment, photo albums, books, and personal effects such as clothing, rifle cases, and a trunk. Many of these items along with a number of her vivid photographs, are on display currently in a special exhibit in the Society museum.

Society acquisition of Cameron's photographs, diaries, and personal effects was made possible through the generous donation of Claire J. Caylor, Janet McCulloch, and William R. Deppe, heirs to the collection, which originally had passed from Cameron to her best friend, Janet Williams.

A traveling exhibit of forty-seven large-format Cameron photographs is available for booking through the Society museum program. Contact Sue Near at the Society or call (406) 444-4710. Orders for Donna Lucey's biography of Cameron, Photographing Montana, may be placed in writing or by calling the museum store at (406) 444-2890.

Ewen Cameron

Janet Williams and Evelyn Cameron

Next Issue of Montana to Feature Western Women

A torrid turn-of-the-century Butte divorce case and how rural Montana women in the early twentieth century depended largely on each other rather than on medical professionals for help with childbirth and related matters, are featured in the spring Montana, a special issue devoted to the history of western women.

Among articles appearing in the next issue of Montana will be Julie Roy Jeffrey's insightful biographical portrait of early nineteenth-century missionary, Narcissa Whitman, and a historical narrative highlighting selected letters of Jessie Benton Frémont, wife of the famed western explorer, John Charles Frémont.

Also featured is Paula Petrik's colorful depiction of John and Ella Bordeaux's ten-year battle for divorce. Mary Melcher uses oral history to explore the intimate concerns of rural Montana women, while Jo Measure describes her 125-mile backpack trip through the Bob Marshall Wilderness in 1929.

Tax Law Change Encourages Donations

A temporary change in federal tax law encourages the donation of certain types of appreciated property, such as art, historical artifacts, and manuscripts, to museums and historical societies.

The provision says that for taxable year 1991 only, "If a taxpayer makes a charitable contribution of tangible personal property (other than inventory or other income property, or short-term capital gain property), the use of which is related to the donee's tax-exempt purpose, the taxpayer is entitled to claim a deduction for both regular tax and alternative minimum tax purposes in the amount of the property's fair market value (subject to present-law percentage limitations)." The alternative minimum tax rate will rise to 24 percent in 1991.

"Tangible personal property" does not include securities or land, but does include works of art, manuscripts, furniture, and other "collectibles."

If you have been considering the donation of a work of art or historical artifact, 1991 may be a good time to make such a gift. Contact the Montana Historical Society director's office, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59620, or call (406) 444-2694.

■ "Guns and Wild Roses," the 1991 annual conference of the Historical Society of Alberta, will be held in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, May 9–12, and will emphasize military history.

Write "Guns and Wild Roses," Historical Society of Alberta, P.O. Box 4481, Station "C," Calgary, AB, Canada T2T 5N3.

■ The Western Heritage Center's Western Heritage Press announces its first publication, Images of Billings: A Photographic History, by Carroll Van West. It recounts the city's past and includes over fifty photographs of Billings, many never published before. The book ($5.95 plus $1.50 postage) is available from the Western Heritage Center, 2822 Montana Ave., Billings, MT 59101, (406) 256-6809.

■ The Battle of the Little Bighorn will be reenacted in five performances June 21–23 and 25 in Hardin, Montana, to commemorate the 115th anniversary of Custer's defeat. Tickets ($8 and $4.50, children) are available from the Hardin Chamber of Commerce, 200 N. Center, Hardin, MT 59034, (406) 665-1672.

■ "Beyond Columbus: The Re-Discovery of the Americas" is the title of a conference sponsored by the Columbus Re-Assessment Group, Hellgate Writers, and Helena Presents, scheduled for April 11–13 in Helena. The conference will examine Native American creation stories, Native American art, and Columbus and the coming of the white man. Featured speakers include Native American author Louise Erdrich, author Kirkpatrick Sale, and Flathead artist Jaune Quick-To-See-Smith, and numerous Montana scholars and tribal leaders. The conference, funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities, will be at the Colonial Inn and the Myrna Loy Theater. For information, call Richard Chapman at (406) 728-5581.

■ Fulcrum Publishing of Golden, Colorado, is accepting submissions for the 1991 Fulcrum American Writing Award for the best unpublished history or historical biography manuscript pertaining to the western United States and/or Canada. Suggested topics include women's history, Spanish-American and Native North American histories, and histories of immigrant groups and western expansion. Entries must be submitted by September 30, 1991. The winner will receive $2,500 upon signing a publication contract with Fulcrum. Manuscripts can be mailed, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to American Writing Award, Fulcrum Publishing, 350 Indiana St., #350, Golden, CO 80401.

■ Cascade County Historical Society and the C. M. Russell Museum will host the twenty-third annual Montana Association of Museums meeting in Great Falls April 25–27. The theme is "Museums as Community Catalysts." Contact Cindy Kittredge, Cascade County Historical Society, 1400 1st Ave. N., Great Falls, MT 59401, (406) 452-3462.

■ The Coalition for Western Women's History announces a new prize for the best article published in 1990 about the history of women in the trans-Mississippi West. A cash prize will be awarded at the Western History Association's 1991 meeting. Submit three copies or offprints (postmarked by June 1) to Mary Murphy, History Department, Montana State University, Bozeman, MT 59717.

■ The seventh annual quilt show sponsored by the Helena Quilters' Guild will be held April 6–14 at the Lewis and Clark County Library, 120 South Last Chance Gulch in Helena. Quilts will be dipslayed on the mezzanine Monday–Thursday—10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday—10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday—1 p.m. to 5 p.m. To display a quilt or for more information, call Doreen Williams at (406) 442-1903.

■ To help mark its twenty-fifth year in 1989, the Frontier Gateway Museum recently published a brochure about its seven-building complex east of Glendive. The brochure tells the history of the museum and describes its contents.

At the museum's annual meeting this April, members will vote for three officers and one trustee. Officers whose terms expire are Jim Carter, Ella Schloss, Janet Meland, and trustee Irma Adams.

■ Montana The Magazine of Western History is going more international all the time. Added to our subscription list this year was the Pakistan Historical Society, which requested Montana for its Hamdard University Library in Karachi, Pakistan.

■ The Plains Indian Museum of the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyoming, is requesting papers pertaining to Canadian Plains Indian art or artistic comparisons between Plains tribes. Accepted papers will be presented at the Plains Indian Seminar October 4–6. Abstracts or completed manuscripts should be sent by April 19 to Lillian Turner, Public Programs Coordinator, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, P.O. Box 1000, Cody WY 82414, (307) 587-4771.

Society Magazine Wins Prestigious National Award

Montana The Magazine of Western History won the National Cowboy Hall of Fame's Western Heritage Award for the best magazine article to appear in 1990. The prestigious award went to Montana as publisher and Jerry Keenan as author of "Yellowstone Kelly: From New York to Paradise," from the summer 1990 issue of the magazine.

The award, which includes a foot-tall bronze statue of a western wrangler, was presented to Keenan and the magazine during the National Cowboy Hall of Fame's lavish annual awards ceremony in Oklahoma City March 16.

Keenan and Montana were among winners in fourteen categories of western literature, television, film, and music. Honorees in other literary categories this year included Larry McMurtry for Buffalo Girls as outstanding novel, Alan Axelrod for Art of the Golden West for outstanding art book, Candia Coleman for No Roof But Sky for outstanding poetry, and Richard Slatta for Cowboys of the Americas for outstanding nonfiction book.

In addition to literary awards, Kevin Costner's Dances With Wolves was named outstanding motion picture; Bill Armstrong's Custer's Last Trooper was honored as outstanding documentary; MGM/UA Television Production Group's "Requiem For A Hero" episode, The Young Riders, for ABC-TV won outstanding television drama; and Michael Martin Murphy's song "Cowboy Logic" was honored for preservation of authentic western music.

Previous Cowboy Hall of Fame honorees have included John Wayne, John Ford, James Stewart, Louis L'Amour, J. Frank Dobie, and Sidney Pollack.

This photograph by Dave Mathews of Bozeman is featured on the 1990 Historic Preservation poster (available for $6.00 ppd. from the MHS Museum Store).

Milwaukee Road Project Underway

Railroad enthusiasts will be able by next year to trace the history as well as the roadbed of the Milwaukee Road in Montana with a new guidebook currently being prepared by the Montana Historical Society Press. The booklet will describe the historical significance of the road, officially known as the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Pacific Railroad, on the economic, geographic, and social development of Montana. Travelers also will be able to locate specific areas where remaining Milwaukee Road features can be seen and studied.

Funds for the guidebook are from the Federal Highway Administration and the Montana Department of Highways provided through an agreement with the State Historic Preservation Office and the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation to help preserve sections of the Milwaukee Road that will be affected by highway construction. Steve McCarter, East Helena, is researching and writing the guidebook, and Dale Martin, Bozeman, is research consultant for the project. The guidebook will be published in the spring of 1992.

New PR Specialist

Thomas W. Cook, Jr., Helena, recently was appointed publicity specialist for the Society. Cook, a Helena-based freelance writer, has more than fifteen years experience with newspapers in Montana.

Cook will work with the media and other institutions to inform Montanans of Society events, programs, and services.

Employees Honored

Seventeen Montana Historical Society employees recently were honored for their service with the state. Delores Morrow received a fifteen-year pin. Receiving ten-year pins were Pat Bick, Robert Clark, Dennis Homer, Rebecca Kohl, Dave Walter, and Diana Wilkison. Five-year pins were awarded to Mary Ann Bannon, Joan Haefer, Vivian Hayes, Lisa Holshue, Kirby Lambert, Sharon McCabe, Patricia McLaughlin, George Oberst, Tammy Ryan, and Dave Schwab.

Gulf Gets Montana

Montana The Magazine of Western History donated Centennial sets of the magazine to Montana troops who are serving in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. With peace negotiations underway, some of them may have time to enjoy them.

Otto New State Archivist

Kathryn Otto has become the new Montana State Archivist. Otto began duties in her new position with the Society in late February. Most recently, Otto has worked in the Special Collections Department in the University of Kansas, Lawrence, where she also worked toward a master's degree in American history, and was the first director of the Johnson County Archives just outside Kansas City.

Otto headed two major grant projects while with the Montana Historical Society in the early 1980s, including a three-year survey and cataloging of the state's newspapers as part of the National Endowment for the Humanities U. S. Newspaper Program, and a two-year project to catalog the Society's extensive map collection.

Looking Forward, Looking Back

The exhibit "Looking Forward—Looking Back: The Montana Centennial," was prepared for the Society's legislative open house, January 23.

For most Montanans the state's centennial ended with the close of 1989. For the Society the work had just begun. The centennial office transferred official centennial records and items to the Society to be preserved so that future generations can see how proudly the state celebrated its first one hundred years.

Visitors can see the exhibit through April 13.

History Day

The Bicentennial of the Bill of Rights provides the theme, "Rights in History," for the 1991 National History Day. Montana students will meet in Helena on May 4 for the eighth year of participation in this competition. Sponsored by the Montana Historical Society, the competition encourages use of local historical materials, especially those found in archives, county courthouses, and oral histories.

Montana History Day winners will go to the national competition at the University of Maryland, College Park, June 9–14. In past years Montana students have won a variety of awards.

New Press Books

The greatest of all Indian wars is the subject of the Montana Historical Society Press' newest publication. To be available in April, The Great Sioux War, 1876–77, brings together fifteen classic articles on the conflict from Montana The Magazine of Western History. Edited by Paul Hedren, the book sells for $27.50 (cloth) and $11.95 (paper).

The Press' popular state history guide, A Traveler's Companion to Montana History by Carroll Van West, will be reissued this spring with a new cover. It sells for $10.95.

Both are available from the Museum Store, 225 North Roberts St., Helena, MT 59620 (add $1.50 postage for one book and $.50 for each additional book) or phone (406) 444-2890.

Student Award Announced

The Montana Historical Society and Montana The Magazine of Western History announce the 1991 competition for the annual Merrill G. Burlingame–K. Ross Toole Award. Named in honor of two influential and admired Montana history professors, this award is given to the best article-length manuscript on Montana or western history written by an undergraduate or graduate student. The award includes a plaque, cash award, and publication of the article in Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Students must be enrolled in a college or university and sponsored by a faculty member. Students in disciplines other than history or enrolled in colleges and universities outside of Montana also are eligible. Deadline for submitting manuscripts is July 15, 1991. Write to Burlingame-Toole Award, Montana The Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59620.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions," juried photography exhibit, through September 7, 1991 |
| | "Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Lady Evelyn Cameron," photographs and possessions of a Montana photographer from the turn of the century, extended to run through September 7, 1991 |
| | "Looking Forward—Looking Back: The Montana Centennial," through April 13, 1991 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| April 14 to 22 | Montana Archaeology Week—See local media for activities and events in your community. |
| May 4 | Montana History Day Student Competition |
| By appointment* | "Montana Homeland" exhibit group tours |

Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sunday, Monday, and holidays. Closed January through March except for tours made by appointment |

*Group tours may be arranged by calling 444-4794 at least two weeks in advance.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Associate Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.
ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Deadhead

Montana State Library
Circulation

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 28, No. 4

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

JAN 14 1991

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 28 No. 4 · Winter 1990

Trustees Honor Zellick, Werner

Anna Zellick of Lewistown and Wilbur Werner of Cut Bank are the 1990 recipients of the Trustees Award presented annually by the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustees for significant contributions to preserving and promoting the interests of Montana history.

Since 1978, when Merrill G. Burlingame, professor emeritus of history in Montana State University, was the first Trustee Award winner, twenty Montanans have been so honored.

Anna Zellick, who was born and raised on a homestead east of Lewistown, is a member of the Montana Historical Society and the Central Montana Historical Society and works throughout the state to preserve historic buildings. A descendant of Croatian homesteaders, she is especially interested in buildings constructed by Croatian stonemasons in the Lewistown area. Zellick is author of three articles in Montana The Magazine of Western History, published by MHS.

Wilbur Werner was a member of the Society's Board of Trustees from 1969 to 1989 and its president from 1972 to 1975. He was a member of the Montana Centennial Commission, served on the Lewis and Clark Trail Advisory Council, and is a past president of the Lewis and Clark Trail Foundation. A Cut Bank attorney, Werner is a former prosecutor for Glacier County, former Glacier County Attorney, and former U.S. Magistrate.

(continued on page 6)

Photo courtesy of Paul Andrew Hutton

Theater advertisement for the 1941 film, They Died With Their Boots On

Coming in the Next Montana

From silent film to Walt Disney, from John Ford's Death Valley westerns to Little Big Man, George Armstrong Custer has had a long career in the movies. Over time, Custer's celluloid image has gone from absolute hero to unmitigated villain.

With the ABC-TV movie, Son of Morning Star, scheduled to air in February 1991, Paul Andrew Hutton assesses the many faces of Custer in the movies in a special article and photographic essay for the Winter issue of Montana.

Also featured in the next issue of Montana will be articles by Paul Hedren on three infantrymen who won the medal of honor for carrying messages across dangerous open country during the Great Sioux War, 1876–1877, and by Brian W. Dippie on why so many books on so many phases of the Custer story continue to appear.

Also in the Winter issue will be an extended excerpt from an interview with Montana Indian educator Minerva Allen and an assessment of Frederick Jackson Turner's famous essay on the closing of the American frontier as a masterpiece of historical writing.

Christmastime in Montana

Christmas in Montana has a history. And Dave Walter, research historian for the Montana Historical Society, has compiled it.

Walter's 144-page book, Christmastime in Montana, including 47 pages of full-color illustrations, records the numerous ways and circumstances in which Christmas has arrived and been celebrated in the Treasure State since Lewis and Clark observed it in 1805.

Just about everybody has observed Christmas in one way or another. Charlie Russell's depictions of Christmas arriving at lonely ranches are among a number of long-time favorties.

Published by the American Geographic Publishing Company of Helena, Christmastime in Montana sells for $19.95 and may be obtained from the Montana Historical Society Museum store (include $1.50 for shipping).

■ The Anaconda-Deer Lodge Historical Society is offering a video tape titled "Legendary Mountain, Anaconda Company Operations in Butte, Anaconda, & Great Falls, Montana, 1974." The video also covers smelting operations from 1959 to 1960. The tape may be ordered from the Anaconda-Deer Lodge Historical Society, City Hall Center, 401 E. Commercial, Anaconda, MT 59711, for $19.95 plus $2 shipping.

■ Audiovisual materials are now available through interlibrary loan from the Instructional Materials Services at the University of Montana. The collection of about 60,000 items includes film strips, slides, CD and cassette audio recordings, 8 mm loop films, and study kits. Access to the material is through the Western Library Network on-line, WLN LaserCat, or WLN Resource Directory (microfiche). A fee is charged for videos and 16 mm films in the IMS collection. For information, call Linda Harris or Pat Turnage at (406) 243-5976.

■ "Law for the Elephant/Law for the Beaver," a transboundary conference on the legal history of the North American West and Northwest is scheduled for February 21–23 at the University of Victoria. Write to Transboundary Conference, Conference Services, University of Victoria, P.O. Box 1700, Victoria, B.C., Canada V8W 2Y2.

■ The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation announces its 1991 training schedule. The three-day course, "Introduction to Federal Projects and Historic Preservation Law," is designed to teach the basics of the project review process mandated by the National Historic Preservation Act. Hosting cities in this area include Denver on July 9–11 and Seattle on August 6–8. For more information, contact Shauna Holmes, Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, 1100 Pennsylvania Ave. NW, #809, Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 786-0505.

■ Papers are requested for the twenty-third annual Dakota History Conference to be held at Augustana College in Sioux Falls, May 30–June 1. Topics on any aspect of the history, literature, and cultures of the Dakotas and the northern plains are welcome. Submit paper titles by February 28 to Herbert Blakely, conference co-director, Box 762, Philip, SD 57567. For information on the conference, contact the Center for Western Studies, Box 727, Augustana College, Sioux Falls, SD 57197, (605) 336-4007.

■ The Center for Great Plains Studies invites scholars to submit proposals on the topic, "Exploring the Great Plains: Continuing the Columbian Legacy," which interpret the idea of exploration in its widest sense. Submit proposals of 150-250 words by July 1 and include a brief resume. If accepted, final papers are due by February 1, 1992, and may be published by Great Plains Quarterly or Great Plains Research, the Center's journals. Contact Gary E. Moulton, Center for Great Plains Studies, 1213 Oldfather Hall, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Lincoln, NE 68588-0314, (402) 472-3082.

■ Homestead Shacks Over Buffalo Tracks, a 516-page history of northeastern Fergus County, was published recently by the Roy History Committee. Current and long-gone towns, with homesteaders' stories, mining, and Missouri River history, are featured. The book sells for $40 from the Committee c/o Jessie Komarek, Box 31, Roy, MT 59471.

■ National Forest History and Interpretation, a symposium/workshop in Missoula, Montana, June 20–22, will focus on historical origins and significance of the National Forest System and the techniques of interpreting its history. Topics include a view of the land management policy begun in 1891, miners' reactions to forest preserves, Indian management of resources before white settlement, and others. For details, contact the Center for Continuing Education, University of Montana, Missoula, MT 59812, (406) 243-4623 or 243-2900.

■ The Gallatin County Historical Society's research resources were expanded recently with the addition of an organized photograph collection to the Solveig Sales Memorial Library. Fifteen hundred photographs have been photocopied and filed in notebooks for public viewing and a card file of identification information compiled. Cataloging continues as more photographs are donated to the collection, such as three notebooks of slides from the Bozeman Camera Club and a portrait of Albert Gallatin.

■ The Montana Law Enforcement Museum at the Old Montana State Prison will open a new wing featuring collections of uniforms and weapons used in crime and law enforcement from around the state. Donations of appropriate artifacts are welcome. Write to the museum, P.O. Box 107, Deer Lodge, MT 59722-0107.

■ The Arizona Historical Society with the Arizona Bar Foundation Legal History Project announces a research grant of $1,000. The grant must be used for research on Arizona legal history in the archival collections of the Arizona Historical Society and other archival repositories in the state. Applicants should submit a proposal and a project outline, tentative schedule, and three references with addresses and telephone numbers. Send to Adelaide B. Elm, Archivist, Arizona Historical Society, 949 E. 2nd St., Tucson, Arizona 85719 by March 15.

■ Following the Nez Perce Trail by Cheryl Wilfong is a traveler's guide to the trail taken by 800 Nez Perce as they retreated from U.S. soldiers in 1877. The trail winds through 1,500 miles of Oregon, Idaho, and Yellowstone Park, ending in Montana. The guide tells the story of the Nez Perce through personal accounts and sixty-five photos and contains sixteen maps. It may be ordered ($35 cloth, $19.95 paper, plus $2.50 postage) from Oregon State University Press, 101 Waldo Hall, Corvallis, OR 97331.

■ Evergreen State College is the setting for the Pacific Northwest Labor History annual conference May 17–19. The meeting will explore the decade immediately following World War II and the lessons this historical period holds for today's unions. Contact the Pacific Northwest Labor History Association, P.O. Box 75048, Seattle, WA 98125.

■ The Northwest Oral History Association and the Southwest Oral History Association will cosponsor a conference titled "The Evolving West" May 2–4 in Reno, Nevada. The conference will emphasize contemporary developments in the western regions of Canada, the United States, and Mexico from a historical perspective. Papers and presentations are invited. Send a 250-word proposal and brief overview by January 15 to either Laurie Mercier, 120 SW Church St., Pullman, WA 99163, or to Art Hansen, Department of History, California State University, Fullerton, CA 92634.

■ The forty-fourth annual Pacific Northwest History Conference will be held at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington, April 4–6. For information, write to the Pacific Northwest Conference Planning Committee, Department of History, Whitman College, Walla Walla, WA 99362.

Society Receives Hundreds of Donations in 1990

Approximately 265 individuals, families, businesses, organizations, and institutions donated books, photographs, letters and diaries, records, and objects—ranging from fine art to a sheep hook to a toddler's dress—to the Montana Historical Society in 1990. These donations have joined others in the rich lode of resources on the history of Montana and the West that are in the Society's permanent collections.

Donations play an important role in the Society's mission to acquire, preserve, and protect "historical records, art, archival and museum objects. . . ." Occasionally some objects are displayed in museum exhibits. Most are carefully processed and preserved as records of how Montanans have lived.

For example, the sheep hook, once a common tool, now introduces the uninitiated to the work of sheep ranchers. A toy sleigh helps us understand how people celebrated Christmas in 1885. Books and other printed material, often not available in other libraries, as well as photographs, business records, letters, diaries, and oral histories contain information used by scholars, genealogists, students, authors, and others.

The Society is grateful to these donors and urges others to consider the Society as the repository for books, papers, and objects of historical value. For information about the Society's collection policy and procedures, please call: Robert Clark, library, (444-4787); William Summers, archives (444-4774); Delores Morrow, photo archives (444-4714); John Terreo, oral history (444-4779); or Susan Near, museum (444-4713).

---

Margaret Adams
Linda Adkins
Karma Alfredson
American Association of University Women
Anaconda Chamber of Commerce
Ancestry Publishing
Norma Ashby
Jean Baucus
Jahnna Beecham
Leo Benolken
Pat Bick
Mary Clearman Blew
Louise Bobier
Sharon Bodkins
Roy Boles
Miss Rose Braunlich
Nancy Breuninger
Jim Brooks
June Brosten
Laura Brown
Kirby E. Brumfield
Susan Burnham
Jack Burris
Mary Bushing
Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives
Caird Engineering Works
Lew L. Callaway, Jr.
Colin S. Campbell
John W. Cebull
Russell Chatham
Joyce Jorgensen Christie
Clark City Press
Tony Beth Clark
Thomas B. Clark
Robert M. Clark
Brian Cockhill
Coles County Historical Society
Nan Compton
Stuart Conner
Joyce and Frank Coupal
Jean T. Covalt
Shirley Walton Cozad
Joe Cross
Crosswhite Family
Joan Crum
Custer County Transit Association
Victor C. Dahl
Deaconess Foundation
Marie Deegan
Rick DeMarinis
Hugh Dempsey
Brian W. Dippie
Dr. G. L. and Mary Doering
Dorothy Dryden
Earl J. Duncan
Terry Dwyer
Kermit Edmonds
Jim Eighorn
Robert V. Eldridge
Henry Elwood
Bob Emerson
Della Emmett
Paul English
Richard Etulain
Federal Reserve Bank
C. Ferris
Alice Finnegan
Hazel K. Flanagan
Forestvale Cemetery Association
Carol Doyle Frasier
Charlotte Topping Freyler
James L. Fuller
Virginia Garrity
Karen Hartman Gee
Jan Gerke
Curtis E. Gjengdahl
Glenbow-Alberta Institute, Museum
A. F. Gorsich
Newell Gough, Jr.
Stan Graber
Elizabeth Graham
Adam Granger
Eleanor Gray
Joe Green
Margaret Dickey Greiner
Lance Grider
Earl Griffith
Henry Haaven
Antoinette R. Hagener
Bill Haglan
Frank B. Hanes
Katherine Hansen
Ben Hardin Family
Arlene Puutio Harris
Anthony Hatzenbeler
John Hawkins
Jack Hayne
Frances E. Olsen Heath
Hamilton Woman's Club
Helena High School Library
Hemingway Western Studies Center
Laro Blevins Hensley
Heritage Research Center
Heritage Foundation
Mary Hill
Malcolm Hillgartner
Ripley J. Hoffman
Paul S. Holbo
Helen Hornby
John Hudecek
Marian Hudnall
Mark Hufstetler
Ripley S. Hugo
Paul Andrew Hutton
Idaho Historical Society
George A. Inglis
Isaak Walton Inn
James R. Dickinson Library
Ann Jancic
Jeannette Rankin Peace Center
George Jimmerson
Chere Jiusto
Patricia L. Johnson
Nina Johnson
Elizabeth Johnston
Betty Jones
Helen Kaeding
Harold Kaiser
Howard T. Kelsey
J. William Kerr
Sister Virginia King
Mark Kleffner
Patty Kluver
Robert Kroger
Vicki Kyler
Margaret J. LaMay
Kirby Lambert
Jackie A. Larsen
Audrey Levitan
Lewis and Clark County Commission
Esther Lordeman
Dorothy E. Lowe
Curtis Lucier
Malcom MacCalman
Michael P. Malone
Rob Marion
James A. Martin
Helen Kilburn McAndrews
Dennis McBride
Elsie McGaffick
Dr. J. E. McGreevey
Evadne McKinley
Mary McNally
Harriet Meloy
Dorothy Merig
Daniel Y. Meshter
Jack Milburn, Jr.
Don Millegan
Lloyd and Eudora Millegan
Roy E. Millegan
Mrs. C. Marc Miller
Harriet Miller
Roy Milligan
Montana Mining Association
Montana Nurses Association
Montana Centennial Office
Montana Arts Council
Montana Society of Pathologists
Montana Cattlewomen
Montana College of Mineral Science and Technology
Montana Association of Counties
Lory Morrow
Claudette Morton
Modie Young Mosley
Gene Moss
Ester Johansson Murray
Susan R. Near
Northern Pacific Depot Railroad Museum
George O'Connor
Doug Olson
Ivan L. O'Neil
Louise Hanson O'Neill
Vivian Paladin
Paris Gibson Square
John Park
Doris Peterson
June Phillips
Evelyn Pippett
Mary Pollard
Clarence Popham
Marc Potvin
Hal Price
Roberta Pullen

Mindy Quivik
Chuck Rafferty
Marvene L. Raunig
Raymond Reunion Committee
Joe Reber
Shirley Alling Renders
JoAnne B. Ries
Amelia Louise Ringwelski
Louise M. Ringwelski
Dave and Helen Ruggles
Jane Jeffers Rybus
Gilman Sagen
Marian Saint
Oren Sassman
Myra R. Schapps
Scholarly Resources, Inc.
Karen Shacklett
Bill Sharp
Mrs. Doug Shaw
Rita Sheehy
Julia A. C. Smith
J. W. Smith
Lawrence and Barbara Sommer
Judy Space
Janet Sperry
Hal Stearns
Dan Sullivan
Bill Summers
Margaret Summers
John Terreo
Barbara Terreo
William Y. Terrill, Jr.
Texas State Library
Mrs. David Thatcher
Frances I. Thomas
Tom Trusky
Ellen Tschache
Garrie L. Tufford
J. A. Turnage
Elizabeth Turner
Clara Turner
Emmett Typolt
U.S. Weather Service
U.S. West Foundation
Uniquest Publishing
University of Nevada, Special Collections
Lora Dillon Vance
Mona Vanek
Kathleen VanMeter
Robert D. Vine
Shirley Wagner
Hal Waldrup
Bill Walker
Avery Wall
Dave Walter
Virginia Walton
Jim Warner
Ed Weber
Lois M. Welch
Wilbur Werner
Western Federal Savings Bank
Western Montana Retired Teachers Association
Betty Preat Wetzel
Sister Noemi Weygant
Niki Whearty
Wade C. Wightman
Homer D. Wilkes
Gary Williams
Spencer Wilson
Gilbert D. Wing
Audie W. Woodard
Randle C. Woodard
Margaret Clark Wunsch
Edgar P. Wyman
Yellowstone Genealogy Forum
Anna Zellick
George Zimmerman
Robert Zupan

MONTANA POST · WINTER 1990 · MHS NEWS

More Awards

Richard B. Roeder and Elliott West, editorial board members for Montana The Magazine of Western History, won awards recently. Roeder is also a member of the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees.

Carroll College gave the Borromeo Fellowship Award to Roeder, an adjunct history faculty member at Carroll. The Borromeo award is given each year to a member of the Carroll College faculty or staff or to a student who researches and presents a program on an aspect of the college's heritage and tradition for Carroll College Founders Day.

Roeder delivered a lecture in November on Senator Thomas Walsh for the Walsh Lecture Series, one of Carroll's most important yearly cultural events, which was founded by Senator Walsh.

West has won the Denver Public Library's 1990 Caroline Bancroft History Prize for his book, Growing Up with the Country: Childhood on the Far Western Frontier (1989). West is professor of history in the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Cowboy Poet Honored

Poet-cowboy and Montana rancher Wallace McRae received a warm welcome from a Washington, D.C., audience in September when he was awarded one of thirteen Heritage Fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Chosen from among 197 traditional artists nominated by their peers, McRae, outfitted in boots, jeans, and bandana, delighted his eastern, urban audience with stories and verse about the West. The NEA fellowship carries a $5,000 cash award.

Poindexter Evaluated

When the report from Harold Rowe—the Chicago art appraiser who appraised the Society's Poindexter Collection—arrives at the Society in January, museum staff will begin work on a long-range plan for the collection.

The post-World War II abstract and figurative expressionist paintings were donated to the Montana Historical Society by Elinor and George Poindexter. Poindexter was raised in Dillon but spent most of his adult life in New York City. Poindexter wanted to encourage an appreciation for this art style in his native state. "Part of the long-range plan," Susan Near, museum director said, "is to determine how best to use the collection for traveling exhibits and for use by the state's universities and colleges. We want to give people the opportunity to see the collection," she added.

Other sections of the plan, to be partially determined by the report, include establishing a priority list for conservation and determining ways the Montana Historical Society can use the collection in thematic museum exhibits. Among the better-known artists represented in the collection are Willem DeKooning, Franz Kline, and Jackson Pollock.

Thompson Appointed to National Board

Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, curator of education, was elected to the National History Day Executive Committee last fall. She represents seven western states in establishing policy, reviewing programs, and advising program staff.

Montana students have an excellent record of participation in the Society-sponsored National History Day on a state and national level. History Day for 1991 is scheduled for Saturday, May 4. The theme will be "Rights in History" in honor of the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights. For more information, write to Thompson at the Society, or call 444-4794.

New Brochure Available

The Oral History Program has a new brochure that outlines its history and describes previous and current oral history projects, including "The New Deal in Montana" (1987-1989), Native American Educators" (1987-1989), and "Montana Women as Community Builders: Montana Womens' Organizations" (1987).

The brochure also explains the volunteer projects and services provided by the oral history program, such as tape duplication and photocopying of transcripts for a nominal charge. For a copy, write to John Terreo at the Society.

Montanans Win Awards

Two Montana history professors won awards from the Western History Association this past October for their publications on Montana and western history.

David M. Emmons of the University of Montana won the 1990 Robert G. Athearn Award for the best book published on western history for his book, The Butte Irish; Class and Ethnicity in an American Mining Town, 1875–1925 (1989).

Michael P. Malone, soon to become acting president in Montana State University, won the Oscar O. Winther Prize for the best article to appear in the organization's journal, Western History Quarterly, during the past volume year. Malone's article, "Beyond the Last Frontier: Toward a New Approach to Western American History," appeared in the November 1989 issue of the WHQ.

Also honored at the WHA's annual conference in Reno was Wallace Stegner, who received the Western History Association Prize for 1990 for lifetime contributions to western history. Stegner, Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist and respected historian, has been a contributor to Montana The Magazine of Western History and lives in Palo Alto, California.

Historic Sites Study Done

The Historic Sites Study Commission recommended additional funding to improve Montana's historic parks in its November 1990 report to Governor Stephens. The commission noted the deteriorating condition of Montana's archaeological and historic sites, the need for an inventory and assessment of the state's historic resources, the need for professional caretakers, and the potential of historic sites becoming major tourist attractions. The report was prepared by the State Historic Preservation Office.

Jiggs Remembered

Eleanor "Jiggs" Dickey, former circulation manager of Montana The Magazine of Western History, died November 18, 1990, following a short illness. She served the Montana Historical Society for almost twenty years. Former editor Vivian Paladin remembers her as a good friend and hard worker. Her fabulous stories of Butte characters and her fabled Butte Irish humor will be missed.

Western FRIED
HAM
BEEF
PORK
OPEN

"Red and White Dairy Drive-In, Butte" (1990), silver gelatin print

Photo Contest Winners Announced

Montana's vast landscape and rigorous climate either nurture or overwhelm those who live here. The best work of twenty-four contemporary photographers explores this theme in Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions, a juried photograph exhibit now on view at the Society in Helena.

The abandoned bank at Two Dot, cowboys on the Centennial Cattle Drive, and Minuteman missile sites are among subjects represented in the exhibit's forty-seven photographs. Jurors Rudi Dietrich of Montana State University and John Smart of the Montana Historical Society selected images for the show based on appropriateness of theme, visual impact, technical excellence, and creativity.

"Best of show" prizes were awarded in two categories—color and black and white. The best color photograph was awarded to Charlotte Trolinger for "Sale Lots Between Hauser Lake and Lake Helena." David Mathews' image, "Red and White Dairy Drive-In, Butte," won the top prize for black-and-white photography.

Publications Awards Presented

The Montana Historical Society presented four awards related to publications during the Society's annual history conference in Kalispell in October, including awards for the best article to appear in Montana The Magazine of Western History, best student article, and best publication on local Montana history to appear during the last two years.

Albert L. Hurtado, associate professor of history in Arizona State University, won the 1990 Vivian A. Paladin Award for best Montana article for his essay, "Public History and the Native American; Issues in the American West." Henry E. Stamm IV, doctoral student in history in the University of Wyoming, won the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award for the best student article submitted to Montana for his essay, "James Irwin and the Peace Policy Experiment at Wind River Reservation, 1871–1877." Stamm's article will appear in the summer 1991 issue of the magazine.

A dual presentation was made for the winner of the first-ever William L. Lang Award for writing on local Montana history to Celeste River of Missoula and Robert Vine of Anaconda. River received a plaque and cash award for her insightful study of Frank Bird Linderman. Vine also received a plaque and cash award for his book, Women of Washoe; Anaconda's First Smelterwomen (1989).

The Society received sixteen entries for the local Montana history award. Judging among a number of excellent publications was difficult. The Society wishes to thank all those who participated in the competition.

Call for Bradley Applications

The Montana Historical Society will award two James H. Bradley fellowships for summer 1991 for research and production of articles on some aspect of Montana history. A $3,000 Senior Fellowship is open to all applicants and a $2,000 Graduate Research Award is open to candidates for advanced degrees in appropriate fields. Recipients of both awards are expected to be in residence at the Society weekdays for a minimum of four weeks between June 3 and September 20, 1991. Each recipient will also be expected to submit an article for possible publication in the Society's quarterly journal, Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Applications must be postmarked by April 1, 1991. For information, write or call Bob Clark, Chair, Bradley Fellowship Committee, MHS, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620, (406) 444-4787.

Foundation Board President Dies

Howard Kelsey

Howard Kelsey, president of the Montana Historical Society Foundation Board of Directors and long-time Montana rancher, died October 8, 1990, at Bozeman Deaconess Hospital.

Born in Brook Park, Minnesota, in 1912, Kelsey was owner of the Nine Quarter Circle Guest Ranch in the Gallatin Canyon and had directed the Centennial Train, which traveled to New York for the World's Fair in 1964 and 1965. He also was past president of numerous organizations, including the Montana Dude Ranchers Association and Montana State Chamber of Commerce, and had received numerous honors and awards, including being named Montana Small-Businessman of the Year in 1972.

Awards (continued from page 1)

The Trustees Award is presented each fall at the Montana History Conference sponsored by the Historical Society's Office of Education to further the public's knowledge of and interest in Montana and western history.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions," juried photography exhibit, October 25, 1990–August 31, 1991 |
| | "Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Lady Evelyn Cameron," photographs and possessions of a Montana photographer, December 1, 1990–May 3, 1991 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| January 23 | Legislative open house, 7–9 p.m. |
| March 6, 13, 20, 27 | History Lecture Series, "Pioneer Women," noon to 1 p.m. |
| By appointment* | "Montana Homeland" exhibit group tours |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sunday, Monday, and holidays. Closed January through March except for tours made by appointment. |

*Group tours may be arranged by calling 444-4794 at least two weeks in advance.

---

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Associate Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

---

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

MT State Library ✓
1515 E. 6th-Documents
Helena, MT 59620

S
978.6
H6m
V.28 No.3

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

PLEASE RETURN

IC

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 28 No. 3 · Autumn 1990

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

OCT 4 1990

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Eldridges Donate Pair of Russells

Two companion portraits of a Blackfoot brave rendered by Charles M. Russell in watercolor more than ninety years ago and in private possession since then have been donated to the Montana Historical Society Museum.

Donated to the Society by Shirley Eldridge on behalf of her late husband, Robert V. Eldridge, and the Eldridge family, the stunning watercolors were hung in the museum's Mackay Gallery August 13 for public viewing.

Each portrait depicts a male Blackfoot Indian, one as he appeared in 1858, and the other as he appeared in 1898. Blackfoot Brave of 1858 is alternately titled Old Indian, while Blackfoot Brave of 1898 is also known as New Indian.

As Robert Eldridge observed while arranging for donation of the two watercolors before he died, both

(continued on page 4)

Blackfoot Brave of 1858

Blackfoot Brave of 1898

Autumn Montana

Turn eastern Montana and much of the rest of the Great Plains back into a sprawling buffalo range? That's what Deborah and Frank Popper of Rutgers University in New Jersey want to do.

The Great Plains are not without their problems, but adverse economic and demographic trends in the late twentieth century hardly require that they be abandoned to roaming herds of bison.

So writes Frederick C. Luebke, former director of the Center for Great Plains Studies in Lincoln, Nebraska, in a historical commentary for the autumn issue of Montana.

Also included in the upcoming issue will be a series of essays on art and architecture. The fall Montana is the fourth of four special centennial issues, each published in the fall since 1987. Earlier issues focused on politics, economics, and society and culture.

Also included in the fall issue will be articles on western artist Joseph Henry Sharp, Crow Indian beadwork, Montana's false front architecture, and the state's historical monuments.

Pulitzer Prize Winner To Speak at History Conference

Pulitzer prize-winning journalist and former correspondent for the New York Times J. Anthony Lukas will be the featured speaker at the seventeenth annual Montana History Conference in Kalispell October 25–27.

Lukas is preparing a book on the trial of Big Bill Haywood, which grew out of labor strife in the Coeur d'Alene mining district at the turn of the century and the assassination of former Idaho Governor Frank Steunenberg. When miners blew up the Bunker Hill Mine in 1899, federal troops pursued suspected bombers into Montana. Lukas will focus on this and other dimensions of Haywood's nationally celebrated trial.

The three-day conference also will feature speakers on other aspects of northwestern Montana history, from the fur trade to fire and forest management, Indian agents on the Flathead Reservation to the Great Northern Railroad, and Charlie Russell on Lake MacDonald to the military in Glacier National Park.

The session on "jerks" in Montana history (made popular last year) will be back with a Ku Klux Klansman, an Episcopalian minister, a pioneer gold miner, and several Montana Indian agents as topics.

Concurrent workshops on Indian art, oral history, and National History Day are scheduled for Thursday, October 25, and field trips to local attractions including Glacier National Park architecture, Kalispell and the Conrad Mansion, and local cemeteries are planned for Saturday afternoon, October 27.

The conference is sponsored by the Montana Historical Society with assistance from Flathead Valley Community College, the Hockaday Art Center, and the Kalispell Community Development Office, and will be held at the Outlaw Inn. Programs with full details and registration information will be mailed later this fall to all Society members and subscribers to Montana. For more information, call (406) 444-4794.

■ The second volume in a series of books of essays on Montana women is available through the Montana Division of the American Association of University Women (AAUW). The book, Women of Montana Essays, 1986–1990, edited by Diane Sands, includes the winning essays written by Montana high school students for the organization's annual essay contest for the past five years. Volume one includes student essays from 1981 to 1985. Two thousand students have written essays in the past ten years as part of the AAUW essay contest.

Volume two ($6) and a limited number of copies of volume one ($5) may be ordered from the Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620, (406) 444-2890. Add $1.50 postage for first book and $.50 for each additional book.

■ A three-day conference commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the execution of labor organizer and troubadour Joe Hill will be held in Salt Lake City November 15–17. Sponsored by the AFL-CIO Labor Center and the University of Utah, the conference, titled "Joe Hill, the IWW, and Western Labor Militancy," will feature presentations by a number of recognized scholars. Registration is free but required. Contact John Sillito, Weber State College, Ogden, Utah 84408-2901, (801) 626-6416 by October 15.

■ The Gallatin County Historical Society is requesting papers for its second conference on the history of Gallatin and surrounding counties to be held November 3. All topics and time periods will be considered. Submit title and description by October 15 to History Conference, Gallatin County Historical Society, 317 W. Main St., Bozeman, Mont. 59715. For more information, contact Dan A. Johnson, (406) 587-2135, or the Society, (406) 585-1311.

■ A new exhibit, "The Family Car," at the Montana Agricultural Center and Museum in Fort Benton features three automobiles, restored gasoline pumps, metal signs from gas stations and car dealers, and Montana license plates from various eras. The museum is open by appointment after September 15. Call Steve or Sharalee Smith at the Vielleux Insurance Agency, (406) 622-5133, or write to Box 308, Fort Benton 59442.

■ Celeste River of Missoula is collecting letters, stories, and recollections about Montana pioneer and author Frank Bird Linderman as part of a study of Linderman's life and writings. River recently completed a history master's thesis relating the influence of Linderman's role in creating the Rocky Boy Reservation to his literary career. River will acknowledge contributions. Contact her at 309 McLeod, Missoula, Mont. 59801 or (406) 721-7528 (leave message).

■ Frances Senska and Bob and Gennie DeWeese are raising funds for a traveling exhibition of prints by longtime Montana State University art professor Jessie Wilber. Titled "Jessie Wilber: Prints and Preliminaries," the exhibit, available in January 1991, will consist of eighteen silk-screened prints, preliminary drawings, and collages. Funds raised will match a grant from the Montana Arts Council. Contact the MIA Foundation, Box 1872, Bozeman, Mont. 59771.

■ The most extensive bibliography on twentieth-century women and families in the West has been compiled by Pat Devejian and Jacqueline J. Etulain. Titled Women and Family in the Twentieth-Century West: A Bibliography, it lists more than 800 essays, books, and doctoral dissertations. It may be ordered for $7.50, postpaid, from the Center for the American West, Department of History, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N.M. 87131, (505) 277-7688.

■ The East Helena Kiwanis Club has renovated the Manlove cabin, one of the oldest structures in Lewis and Clark County. Jonathan and Elmira Manlove came to Prickly Pear Valley in 1864 from Iowa. Part of East Helena was once their potato field. The Kiwanians also planted trees near the log cabin, located on the south side of U.S. Highway 12 in East Helena, and refurbished the site's historical marker.

■ Clancy artist Tucker Smith captured the Prix de West purchase award for his oil painting, The Return of Summer, at the eighteenth annual National Academy of Western Art Exhibition at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City in June. Smith was also named a new member of the National Academy of Western Artists.

Carroll Dies

John M. Carroll of Bryan, Texas, a nationally renowned expert on General George A. Custer, died of a heart attack on July 14, 1990. Carroll authored or edited over sixty books on Custer and the western military frontier. His Custer collection, assembled with friend Robert Aldrich, is probably the most extensive in the world. Carroll was historical consultant for the forthcoming ABC television movie, Son of the Morning Star, and was noted for his generosity.

■ Organizers of the Missouri Valley Historical Conference welcome proposals for papers and sessions in all areas of history. The meeting will be held in Omaha, Nebraska, March 14–16, 1991. Proposals, accompanied by abstracts and vitae, should be sent by November 1, 1990, to William C. Pratt, Program Coordinator, MVHC, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Omaha, Neb. 68182.

■ Building the Herd by Bryan Hilger tells the story of the Hilger family and ranch near the Gates of the Mountains north of Helena. Hilger's narrative (told to writer Wendy Woollett) is illustrated with photographs by sister, Babe Hilger. Their uncle David Hilger served as MHS librarian from 1923 to 1937. The book is available for $14.95 (plus $1.50 postage) from the Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620, (406) 444-2890.

■ The Southwest Labor Studies Association will hold its seventeenth annual conference, "Labor in the Era of World War II," March 22–23, 1991, at the University of the Pacific. Send proposals for panels, presentations, discussions, and workshops by December 1 to Sally M. Miller, Department of History, University of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif. 95211.

■ Washington State Historical Society's Center for Columbia River History welcomes conference proposals from all disciplines for papers, panels and media presentations on the history of the Columbia River Basin, from British Columbia to Oregon and from prehistory to contemporary times. Participants will receive travel plus generous honorariums. Contact Great River of the West Conference, Washington State Historical Society, 315 N. Stadium Way, Tacoma, Wash. 98403, (206) 593-2830.

Eastern Montana Photographs on View

For more than thirty years spanning the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, Evelyn Jephson Cameron photographed eastern Montana's rural life, badlands, ranch characters, and wildlife.

Cameron, an Englishwoman who, with her husband Ewen, founded a ranch near Terry, Montana, in 1890, took thousands of views before and during eastern Montana's great homestead boom.

Of these photographs more than 1,400 glass-plate negatives and vintage prints have survived and many will be on display in a special exhibit at the Montana Historical Society Museum beginning December 1. The exhibit will run through May 3, 1991.

Titled, "Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Evelyn Cameron," the exhibit is based on the book of the same title by New York City writer Donna M. Lucey, who has been working on a biography of Cameron since 1984. Lucey, who has an article appearing in the November Smithsonian magazine, will be at the Society for the exhibit opening on December 1.

Prints made from Cameron's original glass negatives will travel as an exhibit in 1991 to Montana museums and art centers. For information on the traveling exhibit, write to Museum Services, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620, or call (406) 444-4710.

MHS Photograph Archives

Cameron—self portrait, standing on Jim, n.d.

New PR Officer at MHS

William C. Hanson has been named publicity specialist for the Society. An experienced journalist, Hanson reported on state governmental affairs for the Helena Bureau of United Press International for fifteen years. He will return to Helena after working most recently for the Great Falls Tribune and the Bismarck Tribune.

Hanson will work with the media and report on Society news to keep Montanans informed about the historical and cultural resources and programs available at the Society through press releases and other types of announcements.

Anniversary Poster

A special 18" x 24" full-color poster by Jerry Inman of Helena has been created in celebration of the MHS's 125th anniversary. Depicting a collage of Montana history events, the poster will be presented formally at the Montana History Conference in October in Kalispell. Those attending the conference will receive the poster when they register. It also will be sold through the Society's museum store for a nominal price.

Archives Papers Catalogued

The personal papers of Joseph Kinsey Howard, including some of his early writings from the 1930s and correspondence with his mother and his girlfriend, comprise one of several significant archival collections better prepared recently for research and inspection by Society patrons and researchers. Howard authored Montana High, Wide, and Handsome in 1943.

Also inventoried and catalogued recently were the records of the Eagle Coal Company, which operated in Carbon County, Montana, from 1918 to 1938. The company's records, which comprise one of the best coal mining collections in the Society's archives, are part of the Hubert A. Simmons Papers, donated to the Society by Mrs. Hubert A. Simmons and Hubert A. Simmons, Jr., Simmons' wife and son. Simmons practiced law in Red Lodge and served as a Montana state senator from 1933 to 1947. The Simmons collection includes letters from his constituents.

Records of the Caird Engineering Works, a Helena-based metal works company, also have been prepared for easier access. The company's 78 linear feet of records, the archive's most extensive engineering collection, cover the firm's operations from 1890 to the present.

Photos Catalogued

A three-year project to catalog more than 160,000 photographs for the Society's Photograph Archives is nearing an end.

Funded by the Burlington Northern Foundation, the photograph cataloguing work is part of a larger project also funded by the BN Foundation to improve the care and accessibility of historical collections at the Society.

Cataloger Vivian Hayes will continue her cataloging work in the Photograph Archives until November. Before the project was begun, only 40,000 of a total collection of 200,000 images had received some form of cataloguing.

Eldridges (continued from page 1)

Shirley and Bob Eldridge

paintings "exemplify Russell's heart-felt empathy for the Indians and the loss of their aristocratic heritage in that brief period from 1858 to 1898."

Russell painted the portraits at about the same time. Blackfoot Brave of 1858 depicts a male Indian wrapped in a buffalo hide robe. Blackfoot Brave of 1898 depicts the same Indian forty years later wrapped in a red, white, blue, and yellow blanket. Pencil lines are visible on both watercolors.

Russell sold the watercolors to Louis Eldridge, Robert Eldridge's grandfather, in 1898 while on a trip to Lewistown. Louis Eldridge had been a rancher in the Lewistown area since 1882 and retained the portraits at his ranch until his death in 1929. The companion Russells then passed on to Robert Eldridge.

The Society provided special recognition to Shirley Eldridge and her family August 13 at the Helena museum in appreciation of her generosity and to mark the first time the two watercolors have ever been put on public display. The portraits actually came into the Society's possession earlier this summer to allow time for standard conservation, including surface cleaning, de-acidification, and preparation for mounting prior to being hung in the Society's museum.

Shirley Eldridge said the family was most pleased that the two Russells would be accepted "in a place where they will be preserved and appreciated and at the same time enjoyed by the public."

Special Issues Available

The four special centennial issues of Montana The Magazine of Western History, including the most recent issue on art and architecture, will be available as a set for a special price beginning in November. The four issues, appearing each fall since 1987, focus on politics, economics, society and culture, and art and architecture for Montana and the northern West. The four issues will be available as a set for $14 postage paid from the Society, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, 59620, (406) 444-2890.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Waiting for a Chinook: A History of Montana Winters," June 19–November 24, 1990"Montana Reflections: Contemporary Photographs—Historic Visions," juried photography exhibit, beginning October 25, 1990"Photographing Montana 1894–1928: The Life and Work of Lady Evelyn Cameron," December 1, 1990–May 3, 1991 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history"F. J. Haynes, Photographer"Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 2–6 | Mountain Plains Museum Association Meeting, Museum of the Rockies, Bozeman |
| October 25–27 | 17th Annual Montana History Conference, Kalispell |
| December 1 | Opening of photography exhibits and MHS Christmas Reception, 7:00–9:00 p.m. |
| December 2 | Original Governor's Mansion Home Tour |

Fall and Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sunday and holidays |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays. Saturday hours have been delayed |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion 304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sunday, Monday, and holidays. Closed January through March except for tours made by appointment. |

Group tours may be arranged by calling 444-4794 at least two weeks in advance.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles from the Post if MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Associate Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

MT State Library
1515 E. 6th-Documents
Helena, MT 59620

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V.29, no2

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 28 No. 2 · Summer 1990

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JUL 31 1990
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

LISTED IN THE NATIONAL REGISTER
OF HISTORIC PLACES
BY THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR
•
IN COOPERATION WITH THE
MONTANA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Signs Available for Historic Places

The Society's State Historic Preservation Office has launched an ambitious program to mark the more than five hundred historic and prehistoric buildings, sites, and districts currently listed in the National Register of Historic Places with specially designed, standardized signs.

The program is supported wholly by a portion of the very limited accommodations tax dollars assigned to the Society by the Legislature.

Purpose of the program is to enhance immediate public recognition of historic places, improve general awareness of Montana's historic places, and encourage others to seek such designation.

The Society's preservation office has developed two kinds of signs—a larger sign that provides space for a description of the historic property, and a smaller, matching sign to mark properties that contribute to historic districts listed in the register.

Larger signs cost about $600. Owners or sponsoring organizations must contribute $100 of the total cost. The preservation office will develop the 150- to 200-word text for each interpretive sign with review by applicants before final sign preparation. Smaller signs marking properties within districts cost $175 each. They must be paid for by local owners and groups.

For more information or a sign brochure, contact the preservation office at (mail: 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620; street: 102 Broadway, Helena 59620) or call 444-7715.

Bradley Winners Announced

The Montana Historical Society has awarded $5,000 in research fellowships for the summer of 1990 as part of the James H. Bradley Research Fellowship Program. The Bradley fellowships, established in 1983 by a private donor, seek to encourage serious scholarship in Montana history and attract talented researchers to the Society's collections.

Two Bradley Fellowships were awarded this year. The senior fellowship, worth $3,000, went to Gordon Morris Bakken, professor of history at California State University, Fullerton. The first-ever graduate fellowship was made available to candidates for advanced degrees in history and other pertinent disciplines. Worth $2,000, it went to Susan Badger Doyle, doctoral candidate in American Studies at the University of New Mexico.

Each fellowship requires four weeks of resident research at the Society and submission of an article-length manuscript within one year to Montana The Magazine of Western History for possible publication. Awards are competitive and are judged on a number of criteria, including how

(continued on page 4)

©John Smart

This photograph taken near Ingomar will illustrate the Stegner article.

Summer in Montana

"It's a helluva good life but a poor living." That's the way Pulitzer Prize-winning author and noted historian Wallace Stegner sums up the quality of life in Montana as of 1990 in an informal yet wide-ranging "conversation" in the summer issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Drawn from a series of interviews with University of New Mexico history professor Richard W. Etulain, Stegner's comments are sympathetic yet realistic as he discusses Montana, the West, and Montana's special literary tradition.

Also featured in the summer issue will be a series of essays assessing the "new western history," which seeks to break with traditional views of the western past, and articles on businesswomen in Montana small towns and the role of Walla Walla, Washington, as a gateway to the interior of the Pacific Northwest. Also part of the summer issue is a biographical portrait of Yellowstone Kelly and a look at the U.S. Army's role in anti-Chinese violence in Wyoming in 1885.

©Leo Holub

Stegner

PLEASE RETURN

■ The National Park Service will sponsor the annual Fort Union Fur Trade Symposium September 13–15, 1990, to explore the business and biography of the Upper Missouri fur trade and the vital role Fort Union Trading Post played in that enterprise. The symposium includes presentations by internationally known scholars and guided tours. For more information, write to Paul Hedren, Superintendent, Fort Union Trading Post National Historic Site, Buford Route, Williston, ND 58801.

■ Free-lance writer Debra Munn is collecting Montana ghost stories (all supposed to be true) for a book. She is interested in first- and secondhand accounts, as well as published or printed materials on the subject of Montana ghosts. The stories may be old or new and involve persons living or dead. The book will be a sequel to her Ghosts on the Range: Eerie True Tales of Wyoming, published last fall by Pruett Publishing Company, Boulder, Colorado. Write Munn at 516 S. Ingalls, Powell, WY 82435 or call (307) 754-5557 after 10 a.m.

■ The Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation will hold its twenty-second annual meeting July 29 to August 2 at the Ramada Inn in Lewiston, Idaho. Activities will include field trips to the Lewis and Kooskee rivers, Chief Timothy State Park, Nez Perce National Historic Park, Weippe Prairie, and campsites on the lower Lolo Trail; a Nez Perce Pow Wow; and a float trip on the Clearwater River. For more information, write to James R. Fazio, 1049 Colt Road, Moscow, ID 83843.

■ The Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation is also seeking ideas for observance of the 200th anniversary of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. Commemorative events will begin in the year 2004 and continue through 2006. Contact Arlen J. Large, Bicentennial Committee, 120½ Rumsey Court, S.E., Washington, DC 20003.

■ The Coalition for Western Women's History (CWWH) invites papers for its fourth Women's West Conference, "Suspect Terrain: Surveying the Women's West," to be held in August 1991 at the Center for Great Plains Studies in Lincoln, Nebraska. CWWH seeks presentations that explore the meaning of region for western women. A two-page proposal and a short resume should be sent by December 1, 1990, to Center for Great Plains Studies, 1213 Oldfather Hall, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska 68588-0314, or contact Paula Petrik, History Department, University of Maine, Orono, MA 04473, (207) 581-1907.

■ The Gallatin County Historical Society will have a quilt show at the Pioneer Museum in Bozeman during the Sweet Pea Festival July 30 to August 4. For more information call (406) 585-1311.

■ Mountain Plains Museum Association will hold its annual meeting at Montana State University in Bozeman October 2-5. Conference theme is "Breaking New Trail" in the last decade of the 1900s. Contact Shelley Abbey, Museum of the Rockies, Montana State University, Bozeman, MT 59717, (406) 994-2251.

■ The authors of a book on Charles M. Russell prints, authorized for publication during his lifetime, are seeking information about Russell prints, especially dates of issuance and photocopies. The authors promise to reply to all communications and to acknowledge contributions in the book. Write to Peggy and Harold Samuels at SR Box 1281, Corrales, NM 87048.

■ The Oregon–California Trails Association (OCTA) wants papers on the gold rush and its transportation network for its 1991 Annual Convention to be held August 14–18 at the Radisson Hotel in Sacramento. Contact John M. Townley, program chairman, 1945 Fourth St., #21, Sparks, NV 89431 by April 1, 1991.

■ The Colorado Genealogical Society has announced its third annual "Black Sheep Writing Contest, Including Wild and Woolly Subjects," which it sponsors to encourage genealogists to research and write on interesting people and subjects. Authors need not be related to their subjects to enter. For rules and instructions, send a SASE to Black Sheep Writing Contest, Colorado Genealogical Society, Box 9218, Denver, CO 80209.

■ Carol Frasier is the new editor and Nancy Maxson the new assistant editor of the Montana Oral History Association newsletter. Frasier works in the Montana Historical Society library and Maxson is program assistant at the Montana Committee for the Humanities in Missoula.

■ The C. M. Russell Museum of Great Falls has won the 1989 Montana Addy Award for its full-color catalog on its permanent collection. Silver Tip Production of Helena also received the 1989 Addy for its television videos on the Bovey Restoration in Virginia City.

■ The Alberta Family Histories Society will present "Seminar 1990—The British Heritage Forum" October 26–27, 1990, in Calgary. The seminar will offer lectures for genealogists researching ancestry from the British Isles. For more information, write Rene Dussome, 752–80 Avenue S.W., Calgary, Alberta, Canada T2V OV1.

■ The Wyoming Centennial Wagon Train will start a week-long wagon journey this year on September 3 from Ucross to the Big Horn Mountains. Much of the trip will follow the Bozeman Trail. Contact Bea Hutson, Wagon Circles, Inc., Box 7061, Sheridan, WY 82801, (307) 672-8594.

■ Resident research fellowships for one to three months are available from the William A. Clark Memorial Library in Los Angeles. The library's fellowship committee meets twice a year to consider applications for both types of fellowships (Short-Term for one to three months and American Society for Eighteenth Century Studies for one month). Applications are due on October 1 and April 1. Write to Fellowship Secretary, Clark Library, 2520 Cimarron St., Los Angeles, CA 90018.

■ The Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum will hold a one-day seminar on Captain Myles Keogh, who died with George A. Custer in the Battle of the Little Big Horn. The seminar will be held in Los Angeles on July 28. Conference results will be published later in an illustrated anthology, Myles Keogh: The Life and Legend of an Irish Dragoon with the Seventh Cavalry. For more information, contact the museum, 4700 Zoo Drive, Los Angeles, CA 90027, (213) 667-2000.

■ Travel grants worth up to $750 for research in forest history are available from the Forest History Society in Durham, N.C. The grants, offered through the Alfred D. Bell, Jr., visiting scholars program, are intended to encourage research in the Forest History Society's library and archives. Contact Harold K. Steen, 701 Vickers Avenue, Durham, NC 27701, (919) 682-9319.

MHS Photograph Archives

Ella Allerdice near Big Sandy, spring 1925

Board Member Wins Award

Elliott West has won the Western Heritage Award in nonfiction from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame for his book, Growing Up With the Country: Childhood on the Far Western Frontier (1989). West is professor of history in the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, and is a member of the editorial board for Montana The Magazine of Western History. His book, published by the University of New Mexico Press, reconstructs the lives of children who grew to become the first truly western generation.

History Day Winners Go To Nationals

Twenty-one young Montana scholars traveled to the University of Maryland June 10–14 to compete in the National History Day Competition with two thousand other students from across the nation. The Montana students advanced to national competition after winning the Montana History Day competition sponsored by the Montana Historical Society in May.

Winners and their projects included (by school):

Cayuse Prairie School in Kalispell—"Hungry Horse Dam, Past and Present," by Kalie Hansen, Kari Sweet, and Jody Snell; "Hello World, Are You Out There?" by Lyndsey Fosbery; and "Leonardo Da Vinci: Scientist and Inventor," by Chris Miller.

Somers School in Somers—"Changing Technology Affecting Fire Fighting in Rural Montana," by Casey Bertram; and "Hitch Your Ideals to the Stars," by Megan Louden.

C. R. Anderson Middle School in Helena—"Rocky Mountain Laboratory: The Center of Discovery," by Chanda Wong, Laura Ottoson, Kiara Kukes, and Gwen Barkemeyer; "From Scrub Survivors to Scientific Selection," by Amber Moreen, Jami Wing, Chris Keegan, Sara Boutilier, and Valerie Park; and "Lumbering: The Transformation of an Industry," by Lars Skjelset and Nicole Johnson.

Helena Middle School—"Holter Monitor: State of the Heart Technology," by Chris Nicholson, Maureen McNellis, Peter Brown, Kirsten Mozer, and Rachel Jamison.

Montana students have competed in this contest since 1984 and have earned first, second, and third place prizes in national competition, as well as several special awards.

Nine Montana Historic Places Win Grants

Nine Montana buildings and structures on the National Register of Historic Places have been awarded federal aid for physical restoration and improvements, thanks to a pilot program launched this year by the Society's State Historic Preservation Office.

The projects and their awards were: the University Apartments in Missoula, $3,965; the Jacobs House in Butte, $10,000; the St. Lawrence Community Center in Walkerville, $7,484; the Helena firetower, $5,000; the Lockey-Leiser Building, also in Helena, $5,000; the Becker home in Bozeman, $2,500; Ullr's Adventure Sportswear, $4,450, and the Judith Lodge, $5,000, both in Lewistown; and the Kendrick House, in Hardin, $2,350.

The project was made possible when Congress lifted restrictions on use of historic preservation funds for actual construction. Previously, such funds could only be used for inventories and educational projects. The state preservation office set aside $45,000 to fund projects this year and accepted applications from organizations or individuals within communities that had certified local preservation ordinances and commissions. Federal funds invested in such projects had to be matched in cash by the grant recipient.

In making the awards, the preservation office looked for construction proposals that met the Secretary of Interior's standards for such projects and set especially good examples for using a limited amount of money to make substantial, visible improvements, stopped deterioration, or prevented serious loss of building features. For more information about this program, contact the preservation office, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620, (406) 444-7715.

New Exhibits at the Society

Cool off this summer with a visit to the new museum exhibit, "Waiting for a Chinook: A History of Montana Winters."

From June 19 through November 24, the Northeast Gallery will be filled with art, artifacts, and photographs of wintertime activities in the state, covering such topics as work, transportation, recreation, leisure, and keeping warm. Among the artifacts on display are items from the War Dog Training and Receiving Center at Rimini, sleighs, dog sleds, Jack Haynes' fur-lined sleeping bag, and a variety of skis, skates, and sleds.

Following the "winter" show will be an exhibit on photographer Lady Evelyn Cameron (1868–1928). The exhibit will include original photographs, archival-quality prints from glass negatives, and Cameron's personal belongings. Cameron, who lived in Fallon County at the turn of the century, took photographs of landscapes, everyday life, and ranching. The exhibit will coincide with publication of Donna Lucey's biography of Cameron.

New Manager in Museum Store

Richard Boyd is the new manager for the Society's museum store. Boyd began work late in May and will replace Rosie Wynkoop who is leaving the Society in July to attend graduate school at the Kansas City Art Institute. Wynkoop has been with the Society for ten years, the last eight as museum store manager.

Boyd, who attended Dawson College in Glendive and Montana State University in Bozeman, brings extensive retailing experience to the museum store.

Also at the Society

- The Society's archives staff and volunteers have completed the processing of thirty-two linear feet of Montana State Prison records, making a wealth of information on some of Montana's most notorious characters more accessible than ever. Dating from 1870 to the 1960s, the records include prisoner description sheets (on twenty-three rolls of microfilm), Board of Prison Commission documents, and Board of Pardons records.
- Northwestern Montana topics ranging from Native American languages to Glacier National Park will be featured at the 1990 Montana History Conference October 25 to 27. Sponsored by MHS with the assistance of the Flathead Valley Community College, the Hockaday Art Center, and the Kalispell Community Development Office, the conference will be held at the Outlaw Inn in Kalispell. A complete agenda will be mailed with registration information later this summer. For more information, contact the Society.
- Two Montana Historical Society Press books, The Last Best Place, A Montana Anthology, edited by William Kittredge and Annick Smith, and No Step Backward by Paula Petrik, are now available in paperback from the Society museum store. The unabridged Last Best Place is $22.50 (plus $2.50 postage), and No Step Backward is $12.95 (plus $1.50 postage). If you order both, postage is $3.00. Write or call the museum store at 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620, (406) 444-2890.

Bradley

(continued from page 1)

extensively research fellows will use unpublished, primary source material in the Society's collections.

Bakken will study Montana's role in the development of western mining law and the impact that body of law has had on the environment. Bakken has written many books and articles on aspects of western legal history, including The Development of Law on the Rocky Mountain Frontier, 1850-1912 (1983), and his forthcoming book, Practicing Law in Frontier California.

Doyle, who won the 1989 Burlingame-Toole award for the best student article submitted to Montana, will continue her study of Bozeman Trail immigrants' diaries as part of her dissertation.

This was the first year Bradley Fellowships have been offered on an annual basis. It was also the first time a special category of competition has been designed to assist graduate student research.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits | "Waiting for a Chinook: A History of Montana Winters," an exhibit featuring art, artifacts, and photographs of wintertime activities, June 19 to November 24, 1990 |
| | "The Photography of Lady Evelyn Cameron," photographs and possessions of a Montana photographer from the turn of the century, December 1, 1990, to March 30, 1991 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," the story of Montana's history |
| | "F. J. Haynes, Photographer" |
| | Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| June 25–27 | Rocky Mountain Chautauqua, Haynes Auditorium and MHS front lawn |
| October 25–27 | Montana History Conference, Kalispell |

Summer Hours

(Memorial Day through Labor Day)

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Weekends and Holidays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. |
| Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Photograph Archives | Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Morning hours by appointment only |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sunday |

Group tours may be arranged by calling 444-4794. Tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

---

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post, appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Associate Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Business Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST
225 N. ROBERTS ST.
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

MT. State Library
Documents

Printed on recycled paper

S
978.6
H6m
V. 28, no1

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
Vol. 28 No. 1 · Spring 1990

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR 6 1990

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Post Redesigned

The Montana Post, the Montana Historical Society's official newsletter, has an all-new look. We hope you will find it both pleasing and useful.

Among the changes is a more abbreviated format, one that allows us to provide more items of historical news from around the state. We also have added color and reorganized the pages of the Post to help you find items of interest quickly.

Page two is the new "Post Bulletin Board." It is a compilation of news from around the state and region about events and activities related to Montana and western history. Our goal is to keep you informed of what other historical agencies, organizations, and people are doing.

A primary purpose of the Post has always been to keep Montana Historical Society members informed of news about the Society. We have not abandoned that purpose. Indeed, we hope to expand on it. On page one, readers will continue to find various items of significance relating to Society activities. In this issue of the Post, for example, are items on the celebration of the Society's 125th anniversary and on articles of special significance to Montana history appearing in the Spring issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History. But that's not all. On pages three and four, you will find additional items related to Society activities, such as founding of the Lang Award to recognize exemplary local history publications.

We have worked hard to redesign the Post to have it better serve your needs and interests. We are even using recycled paper. Let us know what you think.

Photo courtesy of A. F. Gorsich

South Slav prosperity figures significantly in Zellick's article.

Coming in the Montana Spring Issue

Among the many ethnic groups to come to Montana during the past century have been Slovenians, Croatians, and Finns. What brought these European peoples to the Treasure State and what kinds of communities they helped establish here are the topics of two articles to appear in the next issue of Montana The Magazine of Western History.

In her extensively illustrated article, Anna Zellick, a Croatian descendant and Montana historian, describes the concentration of South Slavs in Roundup, Klein, and other south central Montana communities. Based on extensive use of oral and local history sources, Zellick's article explores how these people enjoyed a sense of ethnic community at the same time they grew increasingly Americanized in the coal mining towns along the Musselshell.

In another article, Erika Kuhlman, a humanities instructor in the University of Montana, considers the experiences of Finnish coal miners in Red Lodge. Based on Finnish correspondence translated into English, Kuhlman's article describes why Finns involved themselves so readily in union activities and socialistic enterprises.

Also part of the Spring issue of Montana is Lee Whittlesey's history of the Excelsior Geyser, the world's largest, most powerful geyser of record. Whittlesey, also author of Wonderland Nomenclature and Yellowstone Place Names, documents the history of Excelsior's eruptions, including the geyser's most recent eruption in 1985, and relates them to the history of Yellowstone National Park.

Other articles will consider the newspaper humor of L. Frank Baum, author of The Wizard of Oz, the overlooked lightheartedness of Mormon history, the significance of public history to Native Americans, and a first-person account of a telephone operator in Darby in 1929.

Society Celebrates 125th Year

The Montana Historical Society, the West's oldest state historical society, will celebrate its 125th year with special events and activities commencing in May.

To kick off the celebration May 18, Governor Stan Stephens will sign a special proclamation designating the day as Montana Historical Society day. The celebration, being held in conjunction with International Museum Day, will feature a lobby exhibit commemorating the Society's key events and past achievements.

Also to commemorate its founding by the territorial legislature in 1865, the Society will sponsor a juried photo competition and exhibit, "Reflections on

(continued on back page)

■ The twenty-second annual C. M. Russell Auction of Original Western Art will be held in Great Falls on March 22-25. Sponsored by the Great Falls Advertising Federation, Box 634, Great Falls 59403, (406) 761-6453, the auction benefits the CMR Museum.

On July 21-22, the first Shadows of the Past Art Auction will be held in the Choteau City Park. Proceeds will go to the Old Trail Museum for funding public museum projects. Artists are invited to submit two works. For information, call Will Rasmussen, Choteau Jaycees, (406) 466-2855.

■ The Montana Agricultural Center and Museum of the Northern Great Plains, located in Fort Benton, opened its doors last summer to 4,303 visitors. The site and buildings for the Center, a museum, homestead-era village, library, and archives, was purchased by the State of Montana with state funds and donations made by Choteau County residents. It is the official museum of agriculture for the state. The museum's scope is regional and covers three generations of farm families.

■ The National Cowboy Hall of Fame announced that Billings Bound is the winner of the Western Heritage Award in the factual narrative category. Billings Bound is a 27-minute film by Bob Kane of Ontario, New York. The production documents the historic Great Montana Centennial Cattle Drive, which moved over 2,800 head of cattle from Roundup to Billings in September. The TV mini-series Lonesome Dove won the television feature film category.

■ If you happen to be moseyin' by Pikes Peak, Colorado, on May 25-26, drop by and recite a few rhymin' lines in memory of Dick Spencer, editor/publisher of Western Horseman magazine. "The Great Pikes Peak Cowboy Poetry Gathering," sponsored by the Pikes Peak Library District to raise money to develop a western book collection, will feature poetry recitals, an old-fashioned square dance, a western trade fair, and a performance by Baxter Black, Jim Easterbrook, Darrell Arnold, Butch Morgan, Don Wood, and others. For more information, write or call Public Information Officer Nancy Downs, Pikes Peak Library District, Box 1579, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80901-1579, (719) 531-6333 ext. 120.

■ The first joint meeting of the Alberta and Montana Archaeological societies will be held May 3-6 in Waterton Lakes National Park, Alberta, Canada. Rights of the dead, sacred objects and geography, differing cultural values, medicine circles, and other internationally significant Native American archaeological issues will be considered during the conference from both Native American and white perspectives.

The conference will include a field trip May 6 to the Piegan Nation and the Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump. For information, write to the Kunaitapii Conference, Alberta Historical Resources Foundation, 102-8th Avenue S.E., Calgary, Alberta, Canada T2G 0K6, or call (403) 297-7320.

Montie Montana in Fort Benton in 1976

■ Wolf Point native Montie Montana has been inducted into the Rodeo Hall of Fame at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame. Montana received the honor last November 26, in ceremonies held at the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. Montana left Wolf Point at the age of fifteen to perform trick riding and roping. He has performed before audiences in nearly every major rodeo in the United States and Canada during the past sixty years.

■ The twenty-second annual meeting of the Montana Association of Museums will be held May 3-5, 1990, at the Museum of the Rockies in Bozeman. Program topics will include museum administration, public relations, fund raising, security, and conservation. Write or call Program Chairman Dave Swingle, Museum of the Rockies, Montana State University, Bozeman, 59717, (406) 994-5257.

Veterans Honored

Governor Stan Stephens has proclaimed March 29 "Women in Military Service Day" to honor Montana's women veterans. A memorial is being constructed in the Memorial Gate area at Arlington National Cemetery to recognize women who have served in the U.S. armed forces since the Revolutionary War.

Any woman veteran who has served or is serving in the armed forces may register or be registered with a contribution of $25.00 per name. Write or call Doris Brander, Box 414, Avon, Montana 59713, (406) 492-6478 or Women in Military Services for America Memorial Foundation, Department 560, Washington, D.C. 20042-0560, (800) 222-2294.

■ The Plains Indian Museum has issued a call for papers for its fourteenth annual Plains Indian Seminar to be held in Cody, Wyoming, September 27-30. Sioux Indian art and the Ghost Dance will be this year's theme. Those interested should submit 450-word abstracts or completed papers by April 6, 1990, to George Horse Capture, Curator, Plains Indian Museum, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, Box 1000, Cody, Wyoming 82414.

■ The Forty-Third Annual Pacific Northwest History Conference will be hosted by the Idaho State Historical Society on April 19-21, 1990, in Boise. For information, write to Judith Austin, Idaho State Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Drive, Boise, ID 83702-7695 (208) 334-3428.

■ The Oral History Association will hold its 1990 annual meeting November 8-11 in Cambridge, Massachusetts. For program information, write to Richard C. Smith, 1093 Broxton Avenue, #720, Los Angeles, California 90024.

The organization is also soliciting proposals for papers, panels, and speakers for its 1991 meeting, which will convene at Snowbird, near Salt Lake City, on October 10-13, 1991. Themes of particular interest are women, ethnicity, and the American West. Send proposals by December 1, 1990, to Jay M. Haymond, Utah State Historical Society, 300 Rio Grande, Salt Lake City, Utah 84101.

Montana Has New Assistant Editor

Marilyn Grant will become assistant editor for the Montana Historical Society Publications Program in early April. Grant, currently a resident of Bozeman, replaces Marianne Keddington, who left the Society in December to move to Oregon.

Grant has operated her own communications/public relations consulting firm, Communications Imprint, for the past six years and has taught adult education courses on business writing, public relations, and print production for the Bozeman public schools. Before that, she was associate editor of the Wisconsin Magazine of History for five years and worked in various capacities for the Wisconsin Historical Society for four years prior to becoming associate editor.

In addition, Grant has presented workshops and programs on writing women's history and on women in business, has received a number of citations and awards, and has been active in community service programs.

Grant will become assistant editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History and editor of the Montana Post. She also will serve on the Montana Historical Society Press Advisory Committee.

Chautauqua Returns to Montana

The Montana Historical Society will sponsor the Rocky Mountain Chautauqua on June 25-27. The three-day and three-night series of entertainments will focus on the history, literature, and art of the Rocky Mountain West.

Six personalities from the last third of the nineteenth century will be recreated on the Chautauqua stage. The scholar/performers will appear as Charlie Russell, cowboy artist and down-home philosopher; Anne Ellis, an extraordinary ordinary woman; Owen Wister, myth-making author of The Virginian; Carrie Adell Strahorn, railroad publicist and boom-town booster; William Henry Jackson, pioneer photographer and park promoter; and Ida Hamilton, bawdy house entrepreneur.

Organized by the Wyoming Chautauqua Society and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Rocky Mountain Chautauqua follows a tradition initiated on the shores of Chautauqua Lake in western New York in 1874. Like the first one, it is dedicated to the idea that learning can be fun.

The program will also appear in Billings on June 21-23 and Dillon on June 28-30. For information, contact Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, MHS, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620, (406) 444-4794.

Library Gets Grant

The Montana Historical Society Library has received a $15,000 grant from the Montana State Library to add approximately one thousand pre-1940 territorial and state publications to the Western Library Network. The project is expected to take about six months.

The Western Library Network is a regional automated database used by most Montana libraries. When completed, the project will furnish an index by which Montana libraries can measure the completeness of their own state collections and provide a finding aid for librarians and library patrons who want to locate state publications.

The Society's grant, a portion of nearly $170,000 received from the Federal Library Service Construction Act (LSCA), will pay for the salary of a project cataloger. LSCA has funded twenty similar cataloging projects in Montana. The Billings Parmly Library also has received $15,000 to catalog the last-resort fiction collection, which the Billings library maintains for other state libraries.

Young Historians to Compete

Young scholars from across Montana will meet for History Day in Helena on Saturday, May 12, to examine the past from the perspective of scientific and technological change. This is the seventh year that Montana has participated in the contest, which attracts 300,000 students nationwide.

Winners at Montana History Day in May will advance to the National History day competition, which will be held at the University of Maryland in June. Montana students have received superior and excellent ratings in past years for their entries. Student groups have placed first, third, and seventh and have won several special awards for their work. For information, contact Joan Haefer, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620, (406) 444-4789.

Call for Bradley Applications

The Montana Historical Society will award two James H. Bradley fellowships this summer for research and production of articles on some aspect of Montana history. A $3,000 Senior Fellowship is open to all applicants and a $2,000 Graduate Research Award is open to candidates for advanced degrees in appropriate fields. Recipients of both awards are expected to be in residence at the Society weekdays for a minimum of four weeks between June 4 and September 14, 1990. Each recipient will also be expected to submit an article for possible publication in the Society's quarterly, Montana The Magazine of Western History.

Applications must be postmarked by April 13, 1990. For information, write or call Bob Clark, Chair, Bradley Fellowship Committee, MHS, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620, (406) 444-4787.

Traveling Exhibit Available

The Montana Historical Society and the Montana Highway Department are preparing an exhibit, "A Pictorial History of Roads and Bridges in Montana," which may be borrowed for display in Montana communities. Themes include men and machines, early transportation, getting out of the mud, bridges, roads to railroads, and roads.

The exhibit, available beginning April 15, will require a space twelve by twelve feet. For more information write or call Mitzi Rossillon, Montana Highway Department, 2701 Prospect, Helena 59620, (406) 444-6258.

What Is Happening In Montana History?

The Montana Post would like to receive newsletters, annoucements, and press releases from other Montana organizations. We want to report events and activities related to Montana history from across the state. The Post is quarterly, and appears in March, June, September, and December. Send your information to Glenda Bradshaw, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620. Let us hear from you.

Award to Recognize Best in Local History

The Montana Historical Society will recognize deserving publications in local history at the annual history conference in Kalispell this October with a new award.

Named in honor of William L. Lang, who left the Society last year after ten years as director of publications and editor of Montana The Magazine of Western History, the award recognizes Lang's long commitment to local and oral history. The author or sponsoring agency of the winning publication will receive a certificate of achievement and a cash prize.

Any publication relating to local history in Montana is eligible, including books, articles, and pamphlets appearing between July 1, 1988, and June 30, 1990. Works may be related to the centennial, to locale, such as city, town, or county histories, or to specific events or topics. Whatever their theme, works on local Montana history nominated for the award will be judged on the extent of their contribution to our understanding of Montana's past.

Anyone may enter—organizations, agencies, or individuals—but no publication connected with MHS is eligible.

To be considered, send a copy of the published work and a brief cover letter explaining the circumstances of the project or research that produced it, along with the name of the publisher and date of publication, to Lang Award, Publications Program, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620. Nominations for this award must be received no later than August 31, 1990. A selection committee composed of Society members will review the nominations and announce the winner.

125th, (continued from page 1)

Montana's Heritage." The competition seeks to encourage photographers, amateur and professional alike, to submit black-and-white photographs taken after 1980 that best reflect changes in Montana caused by past events and people. Contest submissions, which must be received by August 31, will be judged by a special committee. The best photos will appear in a traveling photo exhibit. The best of show will receive a cash award and the winning photographer will be honored at the Montana History Conference in Kalispell in October. For details, contact Sue Near at 444-2694.

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibit | "Women's Work: The Montana Women's Centennial Art Survey Exhibition, 1889-1990," March 5-June 3 |
| Permanent Exhibits | "Montana Homeland," history exhibit"F. Jay Haynes: Photographer"Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| March Wednesdays noon-1 p.m. | History Lecture Series, Haynes Auditorium Call 444-4794 for information. |
| May 12 | Montana History Day Student Competition |
| May 18 | Montana Historical Society Day, in honor of the Society's 125th anniversary |
| June 25-27 | Rocky Mountain Chautauqua, Haynes Auditorium and MHS front lawn |

Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. (except photograph archives 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.) Closed weekends and holidays. |
| Original Governor's Mansion 304 N. Ewing | Closed through March except by appointment. Opens April 1, Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sundays, Mondays, and holidays. |

Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society (MHS), the Montana Post appears quarterly. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that MHS is credited. Editor: Charles Rankin; Assistant Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. The Post is not a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name begun in Virginia City in 1864. Second class postage paid at Helena, MT, and additional mailing offices. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

MONTANA POST

225 N. ROBERTS
HELENA, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, MT
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

MT State Library
1515 E. 6th-Documents
Helena, MT 59620

PLEASE RETURN

S
978.6
H6m
V.27 no 2

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Vol. 27 No. 2 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Summer 1989

New Director Joins the Staff of the Montana Historical Society

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
SEP 18 1989
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

From the Director

I do not come to Montana or the Montana Historical Society as a total stranger. I have traveled the state on several occasions, and I am familiar with the work of MHS. Indeed, it was the Society's excellent reputation that attracted me to the organization in the first place. I look forward to being associated with such a highly respected institution and to meeting the Society's many members and friends.

Next year marks the Society's 125th birthday. It is a good time to reflect on where the Society has been and to plan a course for moving into the twenty-first century. I am aware of the pride Montanans have in their heritage and want the Montana Historical Society to play an ever more prominent role in preserving and interpreting the state's rich heritage.

Larry Sommer

In June, Larry and Barbara Sommer visited MHS, and met with Society staff members.

Lawrence J. Sommer is trading the hills of Duluth, Minnesota, for the hills of Helena, Montana, when he moves here in July to become the new director of the Montana Historical Society. "Larry has a commendable combination of experience in administration and fund raising," said Board of Trustees President Bruce Ennis. "He has an easy-going, western manner, a remarkable amount of energy demonstrated by his professional achievements, and an enthusiasm for Montana."

Sommer has been director of the Lake Superior Museum of Transportation and the St. Louis County Historical Society in Duluth for eight years and has experience in historic preservation and city planning. He holds a master's degree in history and historic preservation studies from the University of Minnesota. His book, The Heritage of Dubuque [Iowa]: An Architectural View, won a commendation award from the American Association for State and Local History in 1976. He also edited Duluth: Sketches of the Past, A Bicentennial Project and has written over thirty articles and technical reports.

"He certainly comes highly recommended by all those we contacted," commented Ennis. "This is a critical time for the Society, with the largest fund-raising effort ever attempted underway, outreach services to improve and expand, and traditional services to maintain. We feel fortunate to have attracted Larry to Montana to lead the Society into a new decade."

Sommer and his wife Barbara, who was also a historical society administrator for eight years, have vacationed in Montana since they were children. They have been bringing their own three children with them in recent years, and the entire family anticipates their move with enthusiasm and expectation.

PLEASE RETURN

Montana History on the Roads Again

Montana's roadside markers have entertained and educated travelers through the state for fifty-four years. It was in 1935 that author and historian Bob Fletcher began writing copy for the signs, which would be illustrated by artist Shorty Shope and constructed by craftsman Ace Kindrick. All three worked for the Montana Highway Department, and together they produced most of the 156 historical markers that would eventually stand alongside Montana's highways.

Fletcher's signs—along with those that the Highway Department has put up since he retired in 1941—are presented in a new book compiled by Glenda Clay Bradshaw and published by the Montana Historical Society. Called simply Montana's Historical Highway Markers, this 88-page book tells about the origin of the road signs, gives background on their creators, presents the texts of all 156 markers, and provides a few words by former State Folklife Project Director Michael Korn on their place in Montana's folk history.

Most of the credit for the signs belongs to Fletcher, traffic engineer and lover of history, who convinced the Highway Department in 1935 that Montana's colorful history would be a popular tourist attraction on the roadways. A surveyor before joining the Highway Department in the 1920s, Fletcher had many stories that he had collected from old-timers who had experienced Montana's history firsthand. He wanted to share those memories with travelers, writing the text for the road signs simply and in a distinctly Montana voice.

In 1935, Fletcher hired Shorty Shope to draw western scenes and artifacts to illustrate the new markers and to create a historical map (a portion of which is used as the cover of Montana's Historical Highway Markers). Ace Kindrick, the sign shop manager for the Department, lent his layout and crafting skills as the final element in the operation. He researched, experimented, and found the combination of wood and technique that was best suited for the signs.

When the state of Montana decided in 1987 to renovate the existing 133 signs and add a few new ones, there was an overwhelming demand from Montanans to preserve as much of the original character of Fletcher's signs as possible. So, in the tradition of Fletcher, some of the new signs used the talents of old-timers, such as cowboy poet D. J. O'Malley, historian Joseph Kinsey Howard, and Fletcher himself, as poet.

As a related project, the Montana Historical Society reprinted the 1937 map that Fletcher and Shope created. The map is available from the Society's Museum Store for $4.50 (plus $1.50 shipping).

Montana's Historical Highway Markers is for sale in the MHS Museum Store for $8.95 (plus $1.50 shipping). For further information, write Museum Store, MHS, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620 or call (406) 444-2890.

Dude Ranch Added to the National Register

Dude ranchers were among the earliest entrepreneurs to recognize the lure of Montana's incomparable scenery and wildlife. The first dude ranches in the West evolved from working cattle outfits that took in paying guests to keep ranch finances out of the red. Others, like Camp Senia, were created as recreational havens for eastern visitors. Regardless of their origin, dude ranches survived on old-fashioned western hospitality, mountain scenery, and outdoor activities, such as horseback riding, camping, and fishing.

Camp Senia was the first dude ranch and fishing camp for tourists developed in the Beartooth Mountains. Its remaining eighteen buildings were added to the National Register of Historic Places last year. As the only intact survivor of four historic dude ranches in the Beartooths, Camp Senia illustrates an early ranch's development and its relationship with the surrounding wilderness area.

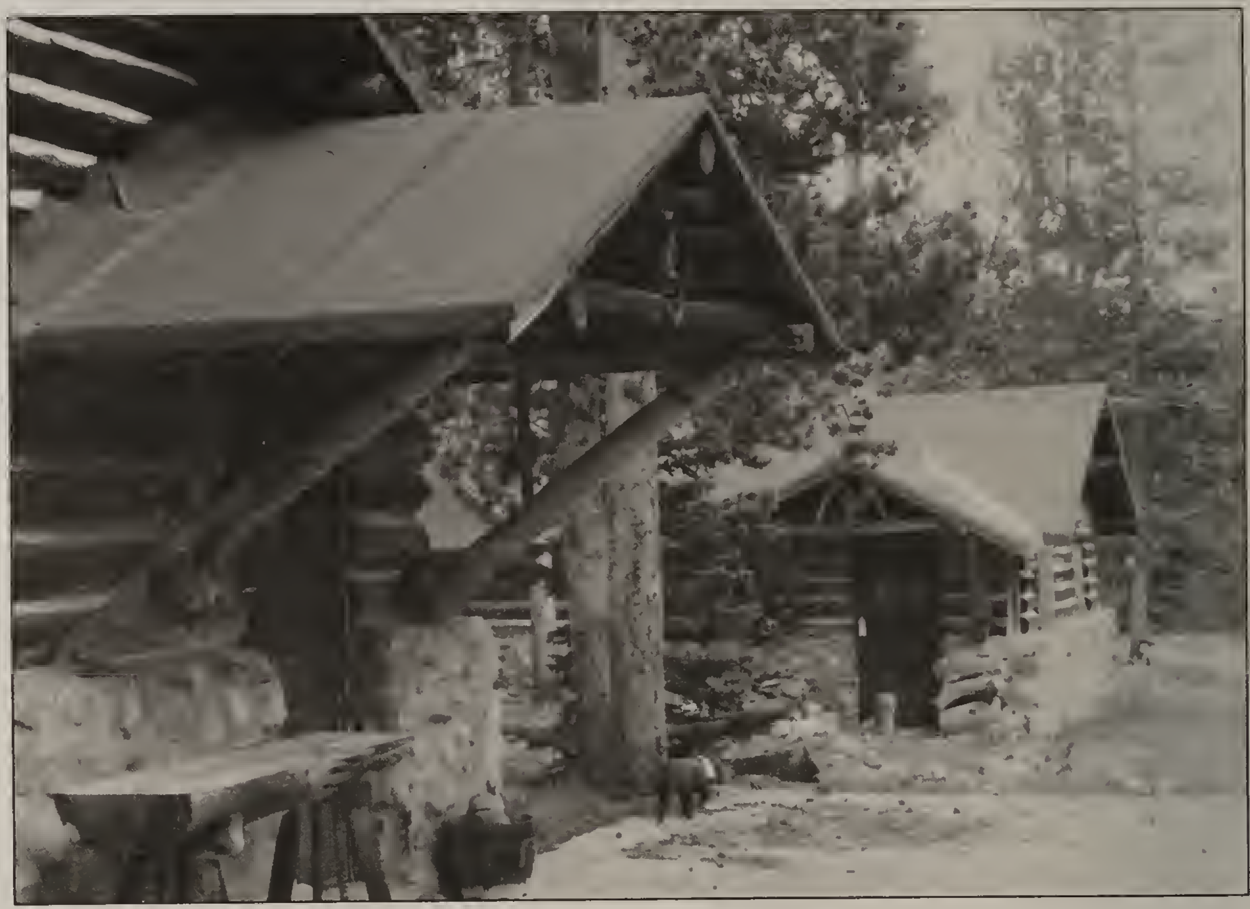

Photo by Edrie Vinson

Alfred and Senia Croonquist built Camp Senia on leased U.S. Forest Service land on the West Fork of Rock Creek, about sixteen miles from Red Lodge. They started construction in 1917, but were interrupted when World War I began. They resumed building in 1919 and completed the main lodge. For the next decade, the Croonquists operated the dude ranch during the summer months, adding tent platforms and log cabins as time and money permitted. The log and stone cabins that remain are well-crafted examples of the western rustic style.

The summer of 1929 was a record-breaking year for dude ranches, but the stock market crash in October had an immediate and devastating impact. All standing reservations at Camp Senia were canceled. After a decade of steady cabin building, the Croonquists could not repay construction loans with empty cabins. Following a series of financial reorganizations, the Camp Senia Corporation purchased the camp in 1938. The cabins are used as private summer residences and the land remains in U.S. Forest Service ownership.

Editor Bill Lang Says Goodbye to the Montana Historical Society

Executive Editor William L. Lang is leaving the Montana Historical Society after twelve years of directing Montana, The Magazine of Western History, the Montana Post, and the Montana Historical Society Press. The staff at MHS will miss his friendship, his considerable knowledge of Montana and western history, and his willing assistance on countless projects. He wrote the following message to say goodbye to his many friends and colleagues in the Montana history community of which he is such an integral part.

by Bill Lang

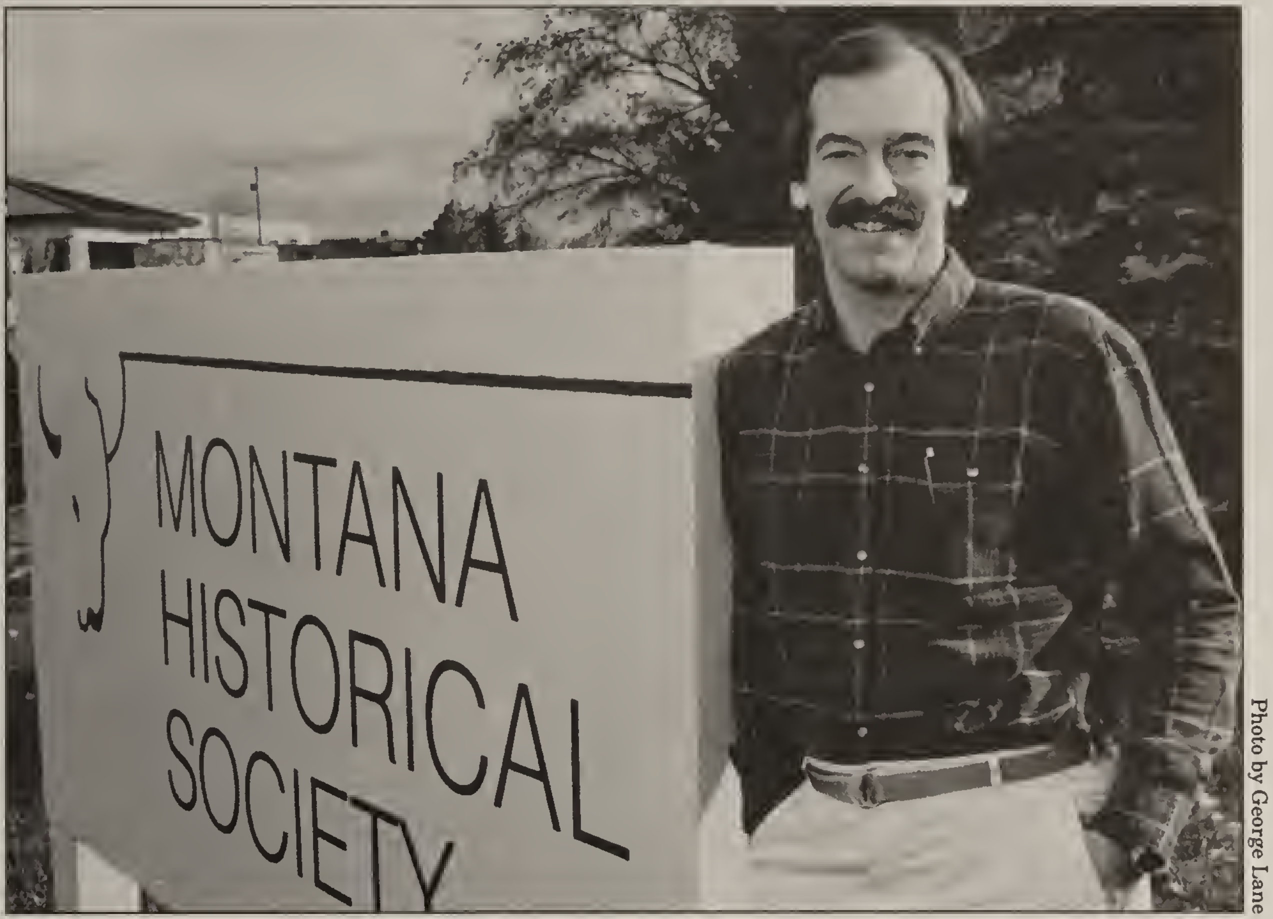

Photo by George Lane

When I think about leaving the magazine and the Montana Historical Society, especially after twelve years of working with some of the greatest people in the state, I remember a kind of squirrelly incident not long after I had become editor of Montana. A phone call came through from an irate subscriber, someone who wanted to yell about the contents of one of our articles. As I held the receiver away from my ear and winced at the criticism, I thought about a caveat former editor Vivian Paladin had whispered to me when I joined the Montana staff. "This is sometimes perilous business," she warned me, "but it is worth every damn bit of the headaches." I wondered about that, as the caller rolled into the second paragraph of complaints, but once he had spit out all of his criticisms and we started trading stories and talking about Montana history I realized how right she had been.

That has been the best part of this job and the thing I will miss the most—poking into the history of our state and sharing it with others. I have always maintained that Montana history is really a branch of family history, and a lot of us approach it from that angle. There is also an enthusiasm for Montana history that sometimes verges on the fanatical, and fortunately we indulge it in ourselves and in friends. Here at MHS, Dave Walter, Marianne Keddington, Lory Morrow, Jennifer Thompson, Laurie Mercier, Brian Cockhill, and other old-timers (I use that term to remind myself that when we first joined this outfit we all thought Viv Paladin, Bob Morgan, and their generation were the "old-timers" and couldn't imagine moving into that category ourselves) know that it is sharing what we have learned about Montana history that is the best reward.

So, I am going to miss Montana and the pure fun we have had putting together the magazine. I will especially miss our readers and authors, the two groups that have had the most to do with the character of Montana. Our hawkeye subscribers have always kept us honest and often sent us back to the library to check on some detail. I remember one reader who wondered why we had labeled a picture of a riverboat loaded with cotton as docked at the Fort Benton levee. That stumped us, too; somehow we had overlooked the boat's cargo, but it sure wasn't buffalo hides. After digging around we found out that not only did the picture show a boat docked at Memphis on the Mississippi, but it also turned out to be the wrong boat.

Some of my best memories come from our annual Montana History Conference, when local historians, professionals, and history buffs gather to share ideas and argue about details of Montana history. We could always count on local historians like Al Hooper, George Mueller, Anna Zellick, Irma Owings, and others to alert us to important topics we had not covered and angles we had not considered. They were usually right. Those discussions always drove home a central point for me: All history is to some extent local history, and the best historical studies pay attention to it. And who can resist the camaraderie that we have had at the history conferences?

Deciding to leave all of this has been difficult, but after editing Montana for more than a decade it was time to return to research and writing projects that have been nagging at me for years. I am beginning a large research project in Oregon, but I can't imagine not being involved in Montana history. I will probably take every excuse that comes along to return to Montana and to contribute something to the enterprise. I will miss it all immensely.

Centennial Is Focus for 1989 History Conference

The sixteenth annual Montana History Conference is scheduled for October 26-28, 1989, at the Colonial Inn in Helena. This year's theme is "Centennial Montana," although the conference will not be limited to Centennial topics. Proposals for papers, panels, presentations, and workshops are being accepted by Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620 (406) 444-4794.

Rare Clovis Points Available for Study and Viewing at MHS Museum

One of the first things you see when you visit the new "Montana Homeland" exhibit is a large, flat case full of prehistoric projectile points, bone implements, and other flaked tools. The people who made these tools lived in Montana between 10,500 and 11,500 years ago, when glaciers still intruded in the Yellowstone River Valley. Archaeologists have labeled the culture from this period "Clovis," after a New Mexico discovery of a mammoth kill with datable artifacts of this style and age. The Clovis projectile points in the MHS Museum collection range from two and a half to seven inches long and were probably used as spear and atlatl points. Some of the larger tools may have been knives and scrapers, and the bone cylinders were probably parts of atlatl shafts. All of the tools were found at the same place near Livingston, Montana.

The Society's Historic Preservation Office and Museum Department, with the assistance of Montana archaeologist Larry Lahren and former Governor Ted Schwinden, secured the collection for the new exhibit from Dr. and Mrs. Melvyn Anzick, Mrs. Fay Case, and Mr. Calvin Sarver. The group of artifacts is called the "Anzick cache" after the landowners on whose property it was found.

Twenty-one years ago, two construction workers uncovered the cache of ancient stone and bone tools. Archaeologists had mixed reactions to the discovery, because the tools had been removed from their original location without documentation or study. But scientific examination of the site of discovery and the tools themselves convinced the archaeological community that the artifacts are authentic.

The Anzick collection is intriguing. It contains an unusually large number of items dating from only one time period, and the tools were covered with a layer of red ochre, which is a sacred earthen paint for Native Americans. The knapping, or flaking, of the tools is very consistent, indicating that they could all be the work of one craftsman or of a small group of artisans. Individuals or groups in the Clovis community may have specialized in making the tools, using their particular skills and talents cooperatively to benefit the welfare of all.

The Anzick cache artifacts include (from top) a large preform, a blade, another preform, two projectile points, and (on left) part of an atlatl shaft. The preforms are partially flaked tools that could have been made into points or blades as needed.

The Anzick artifacts and those from another Clovis site discovered two years ago in a Washington apple orchard provide an invaluable resource for study into the lives of the Clovis people, who inhabited the Northwest just after the last ice age. Research on the Anzick cache began years ago. Lahren and Rob Bonnichsen, director of the Center for the Study of the First Americans, have published on several aspects of the collection. More recently at the Society, anthropologist Phil Wilke from the University of California at Riverside and two associates from Lithic Analysts of Pullman, Washington, began to study the collection. They will publish an article on their findings.

"The Society is very pleased that the Anzick collection owners made this archaeological treasure available for the new Montana Homeland exhibit," said State Archaeologist David Schwab. "It is critically important that this unique collection stay in Montana for the education and enjoyment of Montanans."

Society Chooses Bradley Fellows

James H. Bradley came to Montana in 1871 to serve with the 7th U.S. Infantry at Fort Shaw and Fort Benton. Intensely interested in history, he talked to the oldtimers and recorded the early history of Fort Benton and the fur trade, keeping journals that chronicled the area's military activities and the reactions, activities, and histories of the tribes that his regiment encountered.

Two modern Montana historians are following Bradley's precedent this summer as winners of fellowships named in his honor. The Montana Historical Society awarded the $4,000 James H. Bradley Fellowship to Keith Edgerton, a humanities instructor at the University of Montana in Missoula. Also a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Washington, Edgerton is studying the history of the Montana State Prison in Deer Lodge from 1871 to 1979, focusing on the 1959 prison riot. Two prisoners, disgruntled with prison reforms, killed the deputy warden, then turned their failed escape attempt into a general riot. Edgerton has interviewed the warden, two guards, and two inmates who experienced the riot firsthand, and he has talked with the assistant attorney general who investigated the incident. He will use the Society's rich and extensive resources to complete his study of the riot and the prison.

The Bradley local history fellowship of $1,000 was awarded to Marina Brown-Weatherly of Stevensville, Montana. She is currently writing a biography from taped interviews of Susie Walking Bear Yellowtail (1903-1981), a respected Crow elder who devoted her life to preserving Crow traditions and promoting better health, education, and welfare for her people. Brown-Weatherly is researching early twentieth century Montana and Native American history in order to place Mrs. Yellowtail's story in proper historical context and to provide a link between historical and modern Indian ways of life in Montana.

The two scholars are doing their work at the Montana Historical Society this summer and fall. Edgerton will write and submit an article developed from his research to Montana, the Magazine of Western History next spring.

MHS Photo Lab Serves Society and Others

The Historical Museum at Fort Missoula, Gene Autrey's Western Heritage Museum in Los Angeles, the Big Horn County Historical Museum in Hardin, the Joachim Regional Museum in Dickinson, North Dakota, the Clay County Historical Society in Moorhead, Minnesota, the Billings Gazette, the British Broadcasting Corporation, Montana, the Magazine of Western History, Mountain Press in Missoula, the Washington State Centennial Commission, and the Smithsonian Institution—what do all these institutions have in common? From exhibits and books to centennial moments on television and special newspaper editions, all have used photographs from the Montana Historical Society Photograph Archives during the past year.

"Madison Buffalo Jump in the Madison Valley, 1988," photographed by John Smart, appears in the "First People" section of the "Montana Homeland" exhibit at the Montana Historical Society.

This enormous demand for photographs does reflect some increase because of the centennial, but even in normal years Photograph Archives is kept very busy. The Montana Historical Society is the only historical institution in the state that routinely offers photo reproduction services.

For nearly eight years, MHS has had a photographer and photography laboratory to prepare prints for patrons, to make reference and archival prints, and to document Society events. John Smart was the Society's first staff photographer, and he has remained to meet the increasing demands made on the Society's Photograph Archives.

Smart produces exhibition-quality prints for exhibits and documents pieces of art and artifacts from the Museum collections. He photographs rare manuscripts and fragile documents from the Library and Archives, and documents prehistoric sites and historical structures in Montana for the Historic Preservation Office. He also produces publication-quality prints for Montana, the Magazine of Western History, the Montana Post, and other Society publications.

Most of Smart's duties involve making prints from vintage photographs or taking pictures of artifacts, but he also takes photographs for Society projects. For example, his photograph of Elkhorn appears on the Historic Preservation Office 1988 poster, his series of prehistoric site photos are in the new "Montana Homeland" exhibit, and he has documented the renovation of the Old Governor's Mansion.

In addition to his work at the Montana Historical Society, Smart has also produced a series of landscape and historic bar photographs for Montana Spaces, a book of essays published by the Montana Land Reliance; the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art is acquiring two of his images for their permanent collection; and John Gere's Tibet House in New York City is planning an exhibition of photographs of Tibetan exiles that Smart took in 1973 and 1974 in northern India and Nepal.

The photo lab provides invaluable services to the Montana Historical Society and those who use the Society's photographs, but ultimately it is the public that benefits from Smart's efforts through the preservation and presentation of photographic images of our past.

Summer at the Society

Join us on the lawn in front of the Montana Historical Society at 12:00 noon. All events are free and open to the public.

| | |
|---|---|
| July 12 | "Piye: The Legend of Star Boy"—Indian dancing and story telling by the Auh-tah-kwoi Performing Arts Ensemble, Great Falls |
| July 19 | "Natural Heritage of Montana"—walking tour of trees and plants in the Capitol complex by The Nature Conservancy |
| July 26 | "The Lady from Montana: Jeannette Rankin"—play by Judy S. Hiatt and the Great Falls Centennial Players |
| August 2 | "Montana History in Theater"—skits and one-act plays by Mike Casey, Ed Noonan, and others |
| August 9 | "Bronc to Breakfast"—cowboy poetry by Mike Logan |
| August 16 | "Collectors Day"—displays of local collections, including baseball cards, dolls, clothing, china, railroad trivia, etc. Everyone is welcome to bring collectibles. |

MHS ACCESSIONS

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks Film Center, Helena | 476 glass negatives, views of birds, animals, and buildings |
| Dorothy E. Lowe Tacoma, Washington | 750 photographs, negatives, and slides, views of Anita Thompson's family and friends in Great Falls and Bozeman, 1890s-1970s |
| Peter Lener Brooklyn, New York | 2,000 negatives and photographs, views of people, businesses, schools, etc., in the Havre area, 1940s-1970s |
| Mrs. E. N. Adam Bozeman | 61 photographs, views of the construction of Morony Dam on the Missouri River, 1928-1929 |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Gary Holt Missoula | Glen Blakesley papers, 1923-1930 |
| Clarence L. White Milwaukie, Oregon | Colorado Mining Company/Pipestone Ditch Company ledger, 1895 - 1917 |
| Alice Gifford Lynchburg, Virginia | Manuscript by Kathryn E. Stephen recounting car trip from Charlo to California in 1922 |
| Gladys Miller Tillotson Bellevue, Washington | Robert Miller papers, 1923-1950 |

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Walter T. Vanaman Riverdale, Maryland | 41 artifacts from pictograph cave excavated during the 1930s |
| Carol Robinson Battenfeld Hamburg, West Germany | Leggings, beaded belt, knife sheath, pipe bag, buckskin tunic, jewelry |
| Helen B. Robischon San Diego, California | Crazy quilt made by the family of Etta Kendall Harmon, Bozeman, c. 1890 |
| Chris Matteson Galata | Ballot box from Philipsburg |
| S. K. Construction Co. Helena | Section of water flume from Avon |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Ray Watson Havre | Campaigning in the Philippines |
| Montana Bankers Assoc. Helena | Treasure State Treasury, Montana Banks, Bankers, and Banking |
| Roger Dunsmore Missoula | Blood House, Sharp-shinned Hawk, On the Road to Sleeping Child Hot Springs, Laszlo Toth, gift of the author |
| Elliott M. Miller Miles City | Mostly Looking Back, gift of the author |

Montana Centennial Sites Recorded

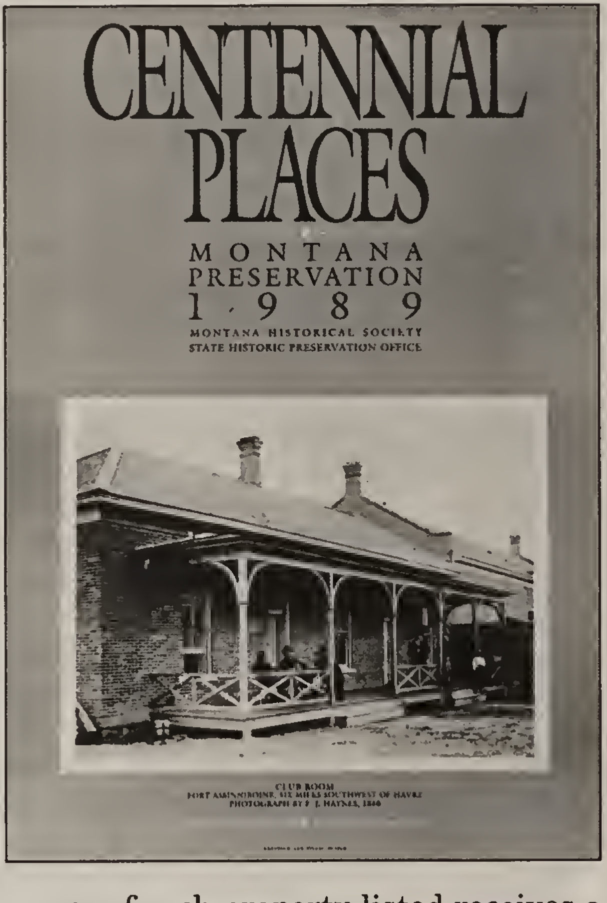
From Wibaux to St. Ignatius, Montanans have listed with the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) over one hundred properties that were built between 1864 and 1889. The diverse list from twenty-two counties includes ranches, homesteads, forts, churches, houses, stage stations, a railroad depot, a trading post, and a buffalo jump. There are also steamboat landings on the Missouri, the magnificent round barn where the "spirit horse" Spokane was raised, the Big Hole Battlefield, merchant I. G. Baker's house in Fort Benton, Fort Maginnis, the New Northwest newspaper office in Deer Lodge, the St. Xavier Mission school on the Crow Indian Reservation, and the Montana Territorial and State Prison.



CENTENNIAL PLACES
MONTANA PRESERVATION
1 · 9 8 9
MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY
STATE HISTORIC PRESERVATION OFFICE
CLUB ROOM
FORT ASSINNIBOINE, SIX MILES SOUTHWEST OF HAVRE
PHOTOGRAPH BY F. J. HAYNES, 1880

The SHPO began the "Centennial Sites" program in 1988 to register buildings and sites that are one hundred or more years old. The information gathered will add to Montanans' knowledge of where Montana's statehood began. Overwhelming response last summer convinced the SHPO to continue the program though the centennial year. If you own or know of buildings or sites dating from Montana's territorial period, forms are available from the SHPO at 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (or call 444-7715). The owner of each property listed receives a centennial sticker to display.

The SHPO has made a further tribute to the centennial with the 1989 Historic Preservation poster, which depicts a photograph of the Fort Assinniboine Club Room taken by F. J. Haynes in 1880. The poster (16"x 24") is available for $2.75 at the Museum Store or it can be ordered from the Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (or call 406-444-2890).

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

Trustee Branson Stevenson Remembered

During his eighty-eight years, Branson Stevenson may have done more than any other person to encourage the growth of the artistic community in Montana. When Stevenson died in Great Falls on May 27, artists and educators lost an advocate and a friend. Stevenson served on the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees for ten years beginning in 1963, bringing to the Society his extensive background in fine arts He was a member of the Board's executive committee for seven years and continually shared his knowledge with Society staff members, especially when decisions involving the MHS art collection had to be made. "He had the gentle gift of making you think," said Board Member Hal G. Stearns, who remembers how valuable Stevenson's judgments were when the Society was considering acquiring artworks for the MHS collection or pondering what should be the Society's role in Montana.

A native of Georgia, Stevenson came to Montana in 1920 after living and studying art in Central and South America for several years. He worked in Great Falls for Swanzey Advertising Agency and Sunburst Oil and Refining Company and was Montana manager of Mobile Oil Company from 1931 to 1960. He was a founding member of the Montana Institute of the Arts, the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls, and the Archie Bray Foundation in Helena. He also was Chairman of the Board of Lay Regents and a charter member of the President's Council of the College of Great Falls.

Photo courtesy of the Archie Bray Foundation

Branson Stevenson (center) posed with Archie Bray (left) and Peter Meloy in 1953.

Stevenson was also a versatile artist, excelling in printmaking, ceramics, watercolor and oil painting, photography, and jewelry making. He invented at least two mediums, emulsion wax watercolor and clay-in-clay inlay, and experimented with Montana minerals in pottery glazes. His works were exhibited at the Library of Congress, the National Academy in New York, the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, the Seattle Art Museum, the Los Angeles Museum, the San Francisco World's Fair, the Denver Art Museum, and the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. The MHS Museum collection contains several of his lithographs and etchings of Montana landscapes and wildlife.

When he retired from the MHS Board in 1974, Stevenson was named a life member of the Society. At that time, Board President Wilbur Werner wrote to him: "You have great warmness, Branson, and a sly touch of humor that lent something to every board meeting and this is just one more reason why you will be missed." Stevenson will always be remembered by his friends and by those who have benefited from his many contributions to the arts in Montana.

Old Quilts Follow New in Society Gallery

During the Victorian era, women often filled their parlors with an exotic variety of decorative arts. A single room might contain a rococo settee, a gothic table, art nouveau wallpaper, Japanese screens, Chinese porcelain, Turkish fringe, and a dozen other ornaments. These women also expressed their tastes in the crazy quilts that became popular during the late 1800s. Quilt-makers stitched silks, satins, velvets, and other fine fabrics in random combinations and embellished them with intricate embroidery. The quilts have rich color and texture and reflect the artistic mood of the Victorian parlors, which was inspired by the Aesthetic Movement that followed the 1876 centennial celebration and continued into the early twentieth century.

From June 28 through July 30, 1989, a selection of crazy, appliqued, pieced, embroidered, and puff-patch quilts from the Montana Historical Society Museum collection will be part of the exhibit, "Warm Traditions: A Century of Quilts."

Montana Pioneer Margaret Howell decorated this "crazy" quilt square in 1889 (detail).

The Museum has a fascinating collection of early crazy quilts. Montana pioneer Mary Jane Haskell, who headed to Alder Gulch in 1864 in search of gold and ended up in Helena, made a crazy quilt of velvets and silks in 1883 and 1884. She embroidered a Japanese tea tray, birds, an Oriental still life, and flowers on its colorful pieces. Helenan Minnie Fligelman, mother of Frieda Fligelman and Belle Fligelman Winestine, made a small, framed crazy quilt in about 1889, using samples from her husband's merchandise cart. She embellished the quilt with embroidery, padded satin rosebuds, and the slogan, "In Union There Is Strength."

This exhibit follows the "Montana Centennial Quilt Competition and Exhibition," which left the Society to tour the state for over a year. Its first appearance is at the Museum of the Rockies in Bozeman where it can be seen in July and August. Afterwards it will be at the following locations: MonDak Heritage Center in Sidney, September 1989; Western Heritage Center in Billings, November and December 1989; Historical Museum at Fort Missoula, April through mid-June 1990; Daly Mansion in Hamilton, mid-June through July 1990; Hockaday Center for the Arts in Kalispell, mid-August through September 1990; and Cascade County Historical Society in Great Falls, October and December 1990. Please get in touch with the individual institutions for the exact dates of exhibits.

FROM THE EDITOR'S FILE

"Against the Darkness," a documentary film on coal mining in Montana, combines historic movie footage, vintage photographs, and interviews with coal miners to tell the moving story of this largely unfamiliar aspect of mining in Montana. The Department of State Lands and the Peabody Coal Company funded the Silver Tip film production, and Montanans did the historical research, script, and music. The film may be purchased in video (VCR) or borrowed for a fee. Write Susan McAnally, Abandoned Mine Reclamation Program, Department of State Lands, Capitol Station, Helena 59620.

The Institute of Multicultural Resource Development is calling for proposals for PLENUM '89, a forum that will showcase innovations in multicultural training and development. The forum will be held in Calgary on November 19-21, 1989. People who have been involved in programs, projects, and initiatives related to multicultural change, cross-cultural service delivery, employment equity, and related topics are encouraged to write the Institute of Multicultural Resource Development, Alberta Culture and Multiculturalism, #302, 525-11 Avenue S.W., Calgary, Alberta, T2R 0C9, Canada, or call (403) 297-8407.

Oral History and the Law, the first volume of the Oral History Association's Pamphlet Series, is now available. Author John A. Neuenschwander, a history professor and a practicing attorney, discusses defamation, copyright, and contracts and offers specific examples and suggestions on how to avoid legal problems when doing oral histories. The pamphlet is available for $4 (or ten copies for $30) from the Executive Secretary, Oral History Association, 1093 Broxton Avenue, #720, Los Angeles, California 90024.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Montana
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Preservation Workshop Scheduled

People interested in learning how to record buildings and structures for the Historic American Building Survey or the Historic American Engineering Record (HABS/HAER) are encouraged to attend the workshop on August 24, sponsored by the Montana State Historic Preservation Office and the Rocky Mountain Regional Office of the National Park Service. The sessions will cover the history of the HABS/HAER program, documentation and recording methods, large format photography, and the National Park Service review procedures.

For a complete agenda and registration information write to the Montana Historic Preservation Office, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620. Registration is required by July 31, 1989.

MHS CALENDAR

| | |
|---|---|
| | MHS Exhibits |
| Northeast Gallery | "Warm Traditions: A Century of Quilts," June 28-July 30"William Andrews Clark: Treasures of a Copper King," August 15-October 8 |
| Museum | "Montana Homeland," permanent exhibition of Montana history |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |
| | Special Events |
| July and August | Summer at the Society, see full schedule inside |
| May 5-July 30 | "William Andrews Clark: Treasures of a Copper King," Yellowstone Art Center in Billings |
| August 24 | Historic Preservation Workshop, see description at left |
| | Summer Hours |
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.Weekends and holidays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion 304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.Tours begin on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m.Closed Mondays. |

Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

S
978.6
H6m
V27no3

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

3c

MONTANA POST

Vol. 27 No. 3 | Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society | Autumn 1989

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
NOV 29 1989
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Exhibit Celebrates 150 Years of Photography

Squaws and Pappoose

If you had lived one hundred and fifty-one years ago, you would have had to hire an artist to draw or paint the likenesses of your loved ones. But the invention of photography in 1839 made realistic images available on an unprecedented scale and, as the technical processes were refined, increasingly available to the general public. Because of this fascinating new process many early Montana settlers could forestall their loneliness with pictures of their families in the form of daguerreotypes, ambrotypes, and tintypes.

Some of these early images and many of the photographs that Montanans later took and saved will be in "'Secure the Shadow Ere the Substance Fades': A Celebration of Photography," an exhibit at the Montana Historical Society this fall and winter. Photograph Curator Lory Morrow and Museum Curator Susan Near are preparing the exhibition from the Society's collections to commemorate the sesquicentennial of photography.

A letter from the Society's Archives shows how valuable early portraits were to their owners. In 1866, miner F. L. Kirkaldie wrote to his family: "I had the misfortune to lose my memorandum book, which contained all the family likenesses—I miss them very much—and if you can afford the expense—I would be very glad if you will have the picture taken which I mentioned to you last summer and send it as soon as is practicable—I feel lost without even the shadow of my family to look at occasionally."

(continued on page 2)

PLEASE RETURN

(continued from page 1)

The photographs in the exhibit will trace the development and use of the photographic medium in Montana and will emphasize the effects of popular demand and the limitations of technical processes. The differences between the work of studio photographers and that of amateurs, the ways in which photographs were presented and sold, and the ways people used photographs are also important aspects of the exhibit. Vintage photographs, cameras and photographic equipment, albums and stereoscopes, and buttons, badges, and commemorative ribbons will be included.

The photograph of the Assiniboine women and children reproduced on the Post cover will be in the exhibit. Taken by Fort Benton photographer Dan Dutro before 1889, it is a cyanotype, printed with one of the most enduring processes developed during the early days of photography. The bright blue color is produced by the chemical reaction of the iron compounds in the photographic emulsion that is used during the printing process. Cyanotypes, which were very popular from 1880 to 1920, declined in popularity after the turn of the century because many professional photographers disliked the color. But they did not disappear completely. Blueprints used by architects, engineers, and draftmen to copy drawings and specifications are based on the same process. The Dutro cyanotype also reveals some other studio techniques: the furnishings on the sides and in the background are light reflectors and studio props. In other prints from the same negative, Dutro cropped these items from the photograph.

"Secure the Shadow Ere the Substance Fades" was a phrase frequently used by nineteenth century photographers to advertise their services. The sentiment applies to the photographs themselves as well as to the subjects of the camera's lens, because photographs are as impermanent as the people captured in them. A photograph is composed of a base or support upon which an emulsion or image-bearing layer is coated. Common support materials used over the years have included metal, glass, paper, and plastic film. Emulsions have included platinum, pigments, dyes, and gelatins. Inherent instabilities of the materials, as well as chemical instabilities due to processing and damage caused by careless handling, contribute to the loss of photographic materials. The vintage photographs in the exhibit will illustrate some of the diverse material combinations used over the 150-year history of photography.

"Secure the Shadow" will be on exhibit at the Society from October 19 through February 24, 1990. There will be an opening reception on October 26 that will also be part of the sixteenth annual Montana History Conference. For more information, write to Susan Near, Curator, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620, or call (406) 444-4713.

New Editor Joins Montana Staff

Photo by Paul Hutton, Albuquerque, New Mexico

Charles E. Rankin, Associate Editor of the New Mexico Historical Review, is leaving the sun-drenched mesas of Albuquerque to become the editor of the Montana Historical Society's quarterly journal, Montana, the Magazine of Western History and of the MHS Press. "The magazine is one of the best things that we do here," said Society Director Larry Sommer, "and as a western historian and journalist, Rankin is well-prepared to carry on the mission of Montana and of the Press."

Rankin, who is completing his doctoral degree in history at the University of New Mexico, said "Montana is not only a great western history magazine, it is an institution, and MHS Press publications are achieving the same deserved recognition for high quality, integrity, and popularity." He added, "I hope to maintain the fine traditions the Society's editors and directors have established over the years and to strengthen the publication program's position with the public and the historical profession."

Rankin also has taught English, journalism, and history at the University of New Mexico and studied for a master's degree in history at Colorado State University, where he taught journalism and history as well. Prior to that he worked in Colorado as a newspaper reporter and editor, a radio news director, and a public information officer. With his extensive writing and editing background, combined with his administrative experience and familiarity with magazine editing and design, Rankin is well-qualified to maintain the traditional high quality of Montana and other Society publications.

Rankin has written two articles that will be published in the upcoming months. "Kinship and Opportunity: Nova Scotians on the Wyoming Frontier" will appear in the fall issue of Montana, and "Teaching: Opportunities and Limitations for Wyoming Women" will appear in the spring 1990 Western Historical Quarterly. His dissertation considers the role of journalism as an institution in the Rocky Mountain West, including Montana, from 1849 to 1929.

Sixteenth Annual History Conference Celebrates the Centennial

The announcement of statehood came to Montana via telegram from President Harrison on November 11, 1889. But the good news was overshadowed by complications of the election of 1889, one of the bitterest political imbroglios in Montana history. The final result—one that gained Montana nationwide publicity—was the election of four United States senators, only two of whom were eligible to represent the new state in Washington, D.C.

One hundred years have passed since that less than auspicious beginning, and the state has seen much growth and change. On October 26-28, the Montana History Conference in Helena will examine the centennial legacy and how it will influence Montana's future. Participants will discuss Montana communities in the context of change and adaptation; projects such as publications, films, exhibits, and student pageants developed to celebrate the centennial; Montana literature; sacred places and artifacts; the New Deal; scoundrels in Montana history; and one hundred years of photography in Montana. All those interested in Montana history are encouraged to attend the conference and to join in the centennial celebration.

On Thursday, October 26, concurrent workshops will be offered on oral history and genealogy research. Participants will be able to choose from one morning and one afternoon session on each topic. MHS Oral Historian John Terreo will discuss interviewing techniques, with an emphasis on equipment, legal concerns, pre-interview preparation, and post-interview responsibilities, and Patty Borneman will talk about summarizing and transcribing oral history tapes. Joel Barker, director of the National Archives Record Association for the Rocky Mountain Region, will present a workshop on the sources for genealogy and related research in Montana records at National Archives branches in Denver and Seattle. Dave Walter and Ellie Arguimbaugh of the MHS Library will describe genealogy resources available in the Montana Historical Society Library and Archives collections as well as in other state agencies.

Other special activities of the conference include the official opening of the MHS sesquicentennial photography exhibit; field trips to Forestvale Cemetery, St. Helena Cathedral, and Marysville; the fifth and final '89ers dinner and program; and a reception honoring the Montana Historical Society Foundation's First Century Families. "Against the Darkness," a film that explores the personal experiences of Montana coal miners, will be shown, along with "Home to Montana," which traces an Easterner's search for family roots in the Glasgow area, and "Betrayed," a Hollywood film about a white supremacist group. The showing of "Betrayed" will complement Friday's luncheon address by historian Eckard Toy who will talk about the mythology surrounding ultraconservative movements and the farm crisis and political protest of the 1980s. A two-image slide presentation, "Centennial West: Celebrations of the Northern Tier States' Heritage," summarizes the histories of the six states with statehood anniversaries in 1989 and 1990.

Three special awards, the Vivian Paladin Award, the Board of Trustees Award, and the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award, will be presented at Friday's banquet. Afterwards, the Montana Repertory Theatre members will perform portions of "Out West," a reader's theater adaptation of The Last Best Place: A Montana Anthology, published by the Montana Historical Society Press.

The conference will be held at the Colonial Inn Best Western in Helena. For program and registration information, write to Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620, or call (406) 444-4794.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

New Trustees Join Board

The Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees has three new members. Appointed by Governor Stan Stephens in July, Charmaine R. Fisher and Susan R. McDaniel will serve on the Board for the next five years, and Richard B. Roeder will serve the three years remaining in the term of historian Michael P. Malone.

Charmaine R. Fisher of Billings has been clerk of court in Yellowstone County for sixteen years. Originally from Washington, she moved to Montana over thirty years ago and developed a deep interest in Montana history. A Billings resident, she belongs to the Yellowstone County Historical Society, the Peter Yegen Museum, and the Soroptimists.

Susan R. McDaniel is the executive director of the Custer County Art Center in Miles City. She was principle investigator last year for the Custer County Society for Preservation and is the author of Miles City: An Architectural History and Beautiful City of Miles. Her background is in art history, architecture, and Italian language, and she has taught Italian, English, literature, and humanities at colleges in the East and in New Mexico.

Richard B. Roeder was professor of history at Montana State University for many years and is currently teaching at Carroll College in Helena. He is on the editorial board of Montana, the Magazine of Western History, is a member of the Montana Committee for the Humanities, and is editor of the Montana Historical Society Press Reprint Series. Roeder is the co-author of Montana: A History of Two Centuries (1976) and was on the editorial board of The Last Best Place: A Montana Anthology. He is also a two-time recipient of the Montana Committee for the Humanities Humanist Award.

MHS Board trustee Helen Hornby was elected president of the Board, succeeding Bruce L. Ennis of Billings. Hornby, a Livingston-area resident, is president of the Schnitzler Corporation, a ranching firm in northeastern Montana, and director of the Eastern Montana Publishing Company, which owns the Livingston Enterprise.

Centennial West Program Continues with Community Forums

Over four hundred people from Seattle, Washington, to Vermillion, South Dakota, were in Billings, Montana, last June to attend "Centennial West: Celebrations of the Northern Tier States' Heritage," sponsored by the Montana Historical Society. Participants came from twenty-two states and one Canadian province to celebrate the statehood anniversaries of Washington, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming.

This fascinating conference provided a singular opportunity for scholars, researchers, and artists to meet and share their insights with an interested citizenry. This fall, community forums will repeat this opportunity in eleven towns in the six Northern Tier states. Each program will begin with a multi-screen slide presentation illustrating the landscape and history of the Northern Tier. Three speakers with expertise on the history of the region will address one of the following topics: natural resources, Native American culture, political traditions, folklore, or art and literature that have been inspired by the region's landscape. The formal presentations will be followed by questions and discussion between the audience and the speakers.

Participants at the local forums will receive a book that has been published for those interested in the history of the region. Beginning with an essay on the history of the Northern Tier region by William L. Lang, former editor of Montana, the Magazine of Western History, the 48-page book presents an essays on each state's history written by a leading historian.

Ivan Doig, Michael Dorris, and Louise Erdrich read from their novels at the Centennial West program in Billings.

The remaining forums will be held in the following Northern Tier towns:

| | |
|---|---|
| October 20, 21 | Bismarck, ND |
| October 20, 21 | Cody, WY |
| October 27, 28 | Laramie, WY |
| November 3, 4 | Tacoma, WA |
| November 10, 11 | Grand Forks, ND |
| November 17, 18 | Butte, MT |

The Centennial West programs are free of charge and all members of the communities are encouraged to attend. For more information, write to Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Education Department, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620, or call (406) 444-4794.

MHS Accesssions

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Lewis L. YarlettGainesville, Florida | 95 photographs and negatives, views of schools, teachers, and children in Montana, 1920s-1950s |
| Richard Fox MaxwellCoronado, Costa Rica | 305 photographs, views of Kendall, the Moore flume, drilling at Kendall mines, the Fox ranch, and 16 Mile Canyon, c. 1910 |
| Faye WiegensteinRedford, Missouri | 11 photographs, views by J. A. Wintermute & Son and D. McMillion of Bimetallic mill, Granite and Philipsburg |
| Lauri OlsenBozeman | 170 photographs, mostly by A. E. Wartena, views of WPA activities in Montana, 1938 |
| Rita Dorn for Henry Hansen's EstateLas Vegas, Nevada | 18 photographs, construction of Fort Peck Dam, blasing and drilling Snake Butte, and hunting coyotes in northeastern Montana |
| Robert A. ReutherGrosse Point Woods, Michigan | 19 photographs, views of Helena and surrounding area in the 1880s-1890s, some by photographers Arthur Canning and Ralph DeCamp |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Charles C. PattonSpringfield, Illinois | E. E. "Boo" and Edna MacGilvra letters, 1972-1981 |
| Mary JelinekSan Francisco, California | Reminiscence by Fred Buck, "Experiences of the Fred Buck Family in the Helena Earthquakes of 1935" (including photographs) |
| Elmer L. JonesSalina, Kansas | Letter from J. C. Cooper to A. J. Willis, 1864 |
| Mary MartinsenHardin | D. W. Slayton letters, 1885-1886 |
| Scott SteenButte | KGIR (Butte) Fiftieth Anniversary interview tapes with Ed Craney and others |
| Chris ClancyLivingston | Montana Hunters and Anglers Project oral history interviews |
| Anna ZellickLivingston | Croatian Brotherhood records, Roundup, 1916-1980 |

Representative Pat Williams Speaks at Clark Exhibit Opening

With praise for copper baron William Andrew Clark's generosity in donating his remarkable art collection to a public museum, U.S. Representative Pat Williams opened "William A. Clark: Treasures of a Copper King" at the Montana Historical Society. "Art has been and remains a vibrant part of all our lives," Williams reminded the audience gathered for the August 15 opening, and the Clark exhibit brings into Montanans' lives art from European traditions that is rarely accessible in this part of the country.

Williams and other members of the Montana congressional delegation worked with the Montana Historical Society and the Yellowstone Art Center in Billings to arrange for the exhibit from the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., and to obtain a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to finance it. Additional funding was provided by US WEST, the Independent Record in Helena, and the Billings Gazette.

Until October 7, visitors to the Society had the unusual opportunity to see Thomas Gainsborough's "A Market Cart," painted in about 1786; Gilbert Stuart's famous portrait of George Washington, painted in about 1800; "The Advocate," drawn by Honore-Victorin Daumier in 1860; "School of Ballet," an oil painted by Hilaire Germain Edgar Degas in about 1873; and about sixty other paintings, sculptures, and ceramics.

Society Director Larry Sommer and Pat Williams visited at the Clark exhibit opening in August.

To tell visitors more about the Copper King and his heritage, MHS Photograph Archivist Lory Morrow curated a collection of historical photographs of Butte taken from 1880 to 1910. With text by historian Michael Malone, the thirty-three images depict scenes of the city, the Butte mines, and the miners at work. The photograph exhibit will hang in the Society's lobby until February 24, remaining on exhibit through the "Secure the Shadow" exhibit described on pages one and two.

An exhibit catalogue, The William A. Clark Collection, Treasures of a Copper King, includes twenty color plates and nineteen black-and-white photographs of the art from the exhibition and an essay by Clark's grandson, Lewis Hall. The catalogue is available for $5.00 (plus $1.50 shipping) from the Museum Store, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620.

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Jane Power Tobin FamilyHelena | Rug, crib, dressing table, ribbons, ephemera, etc. |
| Gene MossOrange, Texas | Duffel bag and contents carried aboard the USS Helena, 1951-1953 |
| Trevellion-Johnson MemorialsButte | Collection of tools and related items from the Butte Tombstone Company, 1900-1970 |
| Richard and Julia Thurman HammGreat Falls | Archeological artifacts (addition to the John L. Thurman Collection) |
| Leonard GoettlichPolson | Pair of tooled leather cuffs made by Charles Goettlich |
| Robert WilliamsSausalito,California | Leather portfolio which belonged to James H. Bradley |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Ruth M. StephensonLivingston | Abigail, gift of the author |
| Jack HayneDupuyer | School Days, Good Old Golden Rule Days |
| Montana Hospital Assoc.Helena | Montana Hospitals, A Heritage in Transition |
| James MuhnBillings / Denver | Opportunity and Challenge, The Story of BLM |
| Margaret WordenGreat Falls | Montana Territory History and Business Directory, 1879, Illustrated; Resources of Madison County, Montana; Following Old Trails |
| Sheryl Moore MurrayBozeman | Silver Handbook, Montana Federation of Garden Clubs; Montana Federation of Garden Clubs, Organized in 1937; History of the Rocky Mountain Region, 1932-1968 |

So You Want to Do Oral History

by Glenda Clay Bradshaw

Do you know an old-timer that you would like to tape record, or have a family member whose stories you would like to preserve on tape? You don't have to be an oral historian or have expensive equipment to do a valuable interview, but there are a few guidelines that can help you get the best information for an oral history. There are three main steps in the process: preparation, the interview, and processing the tape.

In selecting a person for an oral history, you should have a specific topic or theme in mind. Of course, someone should interview the eighty-year-old man who has lived in town all his life, but what exactly do you want to learn from him? Are you interested in his occupation, his family life, his memories about the growth of the town, or his relationship to a state or national issue? Will he be the only person interviewed or will you interview several people?

What will you do with the tapes once your oral history is done? Check with your local historical society or library; they may want to add your interview to their collections. Or a larger institution may be best equipped to preserve and make your work available. The Montana Historical Society and the University of Montana have oral history collections and accept donations. Many institutions also have standard release forms. In order for an oral history to be used by you or researchers in a library or archives, you must get a release form signed by your subject that gives his or her permission to use the tape. See Oral History and the Law for helpful information on creating a release form if the institution you are affiliated with does not already have one. For family interviews, release forms are usually not necessary.

Now back to the interview itself. Whatever your purpose is, you should begin by learning as much as you can about the person that you are going to tape, the times in which he has lived, and the topics that you want to pursue with him. Early in this process, make sure that your subject is willing to be interviewed. Then, after completing your research, prepare an outline and give him a copy so he will know what subjects to anticipate.

When you consider the questions you want to ask, remember that you want more than simple "yes" and "no" answers. You might want to jot down some questions to get your thoughts organized, but under no circumstances should you read the questions to the narrator.

Now you're ready for the interview. Be sure you label the tape. It's a good idea to record the narrator's name, the interviewer's name, the date, and the location at the beginning of each interview, as well as writing the same information on the outside of each tape. Throughout the interview, it is important to stay alert and listen carefully, so that you can guide its direction and note gaps that may require you to ask questions to fill in the story or clarify names or dates. Always be considerate of your narrator and be sensitive to subjects that may be painful to him. Keep your own comments brief and follow them with questions that will maintain the momentum of the interview. It is important to remember that all silences don't need to be filled; the narrator may need to pause to gather his thoughts. Try to use non-verbal responses, such as nodding or smiling, to acknowledge the narrator in order to avoid annoying distractions on the tape, such as repeatedly saying "uh-huh" or "yes." At the conclusion of the interview, ask about the spellings of names of people or places and for clarification of any dates or details which you have questions about. Also explain the release form and have it signed.

You job is not over after the interview. The recording is nearly useless without a transcript or a summary of its contents. Creating a full transcript is time-consuming and costly, but a timed summary is a practical alternative and will serve as a table of contents for future reference to the tape. A description on how to do a timed summary is available in the History News article, "Alternatives to Transcribing Oral History Interviews."

This is only a brief outline of how to do an oral history. You should also consult the resources listed here for in-depth discussions of the steps involved. On October 26, at the Montana History Conference in Helena, the Montana Oral History Association will present two workshops on oral history interviewing and on transcribing and summarizing tapes, and on October 27, there will be a session on creative uses of oral histories. For more information, write to John Terreo, Oral Historian, MHS, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620, or call (406) 444-4779. Terreo is also available to present oral history workshops on a limited basis.

Oral History Resources and Equipment

Organizations:

Montana Oral History Association
Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts
Helena, MT 59620

Oral History Association
1093 Broxton Ave. #720
Los Angeles, CA 90024

Books and Articles:

Baum, Willa. Transcribing and Editing Oral History. Nashville, TN: American Association for State and Local History, 1977.

Ives, Edward D. The Tape-Recorded Interview: A Manual for Field Workers in Folklore and Oral History. Knoxville: University of Tennessee Press, 1980.

Key, Betty. "Alternatives to Transcribing Oral History Interviews," History News, vol. 35, August 1980, pp. 40-41.

Lichtman, Allen J. Your Family History: How to Use Oral History, Family Archives, and Public Documents to Discover Your Heritage. New York: Vintage Books/Random House, 1978.

Montana Oral History Association. Oral History for Montana, A Manual. Helena, MT: Montana Oral History Association, 1982.

Neuenschwander, John N. Oral History and the Law. Los Angeles: Oral History Association, 1989.

Desirable Equipment and Supply Features:

Tape Recorder: Look for tape recorder housings fastened with screws (a sealed case may make disassembly for repair impossible). Switches, meters, and buttons should be easy to use and clearly marked. One-handed operation is most convenient when interviewing (to record, some models require pushing two buttons at opposite ends of the machine at the same time). During extremely cold temperatures let machine warm up for 35-45 minutes before recording.

Microphone: External microphones are best (those built into tape recorders usually pick up motor noises). Before buying, make sure the microphone connection is compatible with your tape recorder.

Power Source: The tape recorder should have several options, including batteries and AC and DC capabilities.

Tape: Use 60-minute professional/industrial grade tape in screw-mounted cassette housings (the tape in 90-minute and 120-minute cassettes is thinner and more prone to breakage and drag). Store interview tapes at room temperature (55-70 degrees F.), label clearly, keep out of direct sunlight. Do not store on metal shelves, and do not send through security machines at airports or put near anything that could be magnetically charged.

Saint Xavier Mission Is a Centennial Site

The Jesuit missionary Father Pierre Jean De Smet first met members of the Crow tribe on the Big Horn River in 1840, the Crows' earliest recorded contact with Christianity. Forty-seven years later, on February 21, 1887, Father Peter Paul Prando and Father Peter Bandini set up a large tent on the east side of the Big Horn River at the mouth of Rotten Grass Creek, twenty-five miles south of Hardin. A few days later, the two priests held services, and by the following October the new frame chapel and boarding school had been dedicated to St. Francis Xavier. The four Ursuline nuns who arrived to teach at the school started with twenty students; they had fifty by Christmas.

The mission flourished for the first few years. A second school building and a new chapel were constructed in 1888. The following year, the present wood frame rectory was built. By 1889, the school had 150 students, with federal government allowances for most of them. But in 1898 the government withdrew Indian educational funding from church schools, and the mission entered a period of decline. Only ten students remained by 1920, and the school closed the following year. Although Jesuit priests continued to provide religious services at the mission, the school did not reopen until 1933. Five Sisters of St. Francis of Oldenburg, Indiana, rehabilitated the school, and by 1959 it served thirty-eight resident and forty-nine day students. The original school building was torn down in the early 1930s and replaced with a brick structure.

The chapel and rectory, which were built in 1888 and 1889, still belong to the Catholic church, and the parish priest still holds regular services in the chapel. The rectory is now used for storage. Both are open to the public.

The exterior of St. Xavier chapel has changed little in the last hundred years. The photograph above pictures students posed at St. Xavier before 1890. The photograph below was taken in 1988.

Courtesy of Big Horn County Preservation Office

Helena Students Are National History Day Winners

Mike Mansfield, Susie Walking Bear Yellowtail, and James J. Hill provided winning topics for Montana students in the National History Day competition this year. The state was well-represented by students from Helena's C. R. Anderson and Helena Middle schools at the competition held June 11-15 at the University of Maryland.

The thirteen Montanans were among 1,800 finalists from forty-two states and the District of Columbia. The C. R. Anderson team of Jan Geberly, Andy Monsen, Winston Greely, and Craig Charlton received third place for their media project, "A Giant Walks Among Us—Montana's Mike Mansfield." Another media presentation, "Susie Walking Bear Yellowtail—A Bridge Between Two Worlds," written and produced by C. R. Anderson students Emily Walton, Paula Cyr, Jessie Brunner, and Maya Haefer, placed seventh. The third team, made up of Angie Lopach, Kara Olsen, Yancy Dominick, Kelley Cogley, and Brace Hayden of Helena Middle School, was top state medal winner for its original drama project, "James J. Hill—Dreams of the People."

The National History Day contest began with approximately 300,000 competitors at district and state levels. More than eighty Montana students participated in the state National History Day held in Helena in May. This is the sixth year that Montana students have entered the competition, sponsored annually by the Montana Historical Society, and the fourth year that they have won national honors.

FROM THE EDITOR'S FILE

The Western History Association will hold its twenty-ninth annual conference in Tacoma, Washington, October 11-14, 1989. The headquarters hotel is the Tacoma Sheraton and registration will be held in the adjacent Tacoma Bicentennial Pavilion. For more information, write to David Nicandri, Washington State Historical Society, 315 N. Stadium Way, Tacoma, Washington 98403, (206) 593-2830, or Art Martinson, History Department, Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Washington 98447, (206) 535-7648.

The Forty-Third Annual Pacific Northwest History Conference will be hosted by the Idaho State Historical Society on April 19-21, 1990 in Boise. This conference combines sessions, workshops, and meetings of the Pacific Northwest Historians, the Northwest Oral History Association, and the Northwest Archives. Proposals for sessions and individual papers should be sent by October 15, 1989, to Judith Austin, Idaho State Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Drive, Boise, Idaho 83702-7695 (208) 334-3428.

Society Receives Donations

San Franciscan Richard Lee Merritt recently added $1,000 to the Montana Historical Society Merritt-Wheeler Fund. Merritt, who grew up in Helena and graduated from the University of Montana, is retired from a career with the San Francisco Examiner. He established the family memorial fund six years ago to help the Montana Historical Society Library actively pursue rare and out-of-print Montana materials.

Richard Mares of Burlington, Vermont, presented a $10,000 gift to the Montana Historical Society Foundation on behalf of the Mares family and as a memorial to the late Miss Blanche Mares of Helena. The donation will endow a fund for the acquisition of books and maps for the Library's collection. The family also donated valuable turn-of-the-century clothing to the Museum.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Montana
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

The award-winning Montana Historical Society exhibit, "How the Stack Dominated Our Lives," is at the Copper Village Museum and Art Center in Anaconda in the newly renovated City Hall Center. It will be exhibited there until next summer. Call 563-2422 for more information.

MHS CALENDAR

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Northeast Gallery | "William Andrews Clark: Treasures of a Copper King," August 15-October 7 |
| | " 'Secure the Shadow Ere the Substance Fades:' A Celebration of Photography," October 19-February 24 |
| Lobby | "Butte in the Era of the Copper Kings," photography exhibit, August 15-February 24 |
| Museum | "Montana Homeland," permanent exhibition of Montana history |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 26 | "Secure the Shadow" Opening Reception |
| October 26-28 | Sixteenth Annual Montana History Conference, Colonial Inn, Helena |
| March 5-June 3, 1990 | "Women's Work: The Montana Women's Centennial Art Survey Exhibition, 1889-1990" |

Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sundays, Mondays, and holidays. Closed January through March except for tours made by appointment. |

Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

S
978.6
H6m
v. 27, no1

MONTANA POST

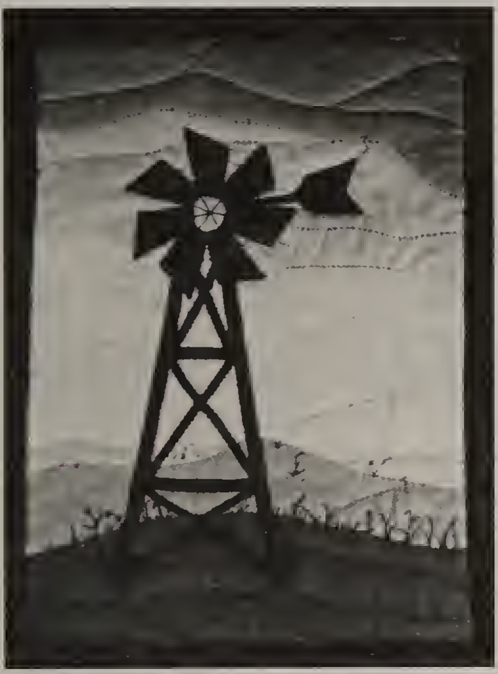
Vol. 27 No. 1 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Spring 1989

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAY 22 1989
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Quilts: New and Old Exhibited for Montana Centennial



The craft of quilting fulfills the practical need for physical warmth and the spiritual need for artistic expression and beauty in the home. Quilts and the art of their construction crossed the plains and mountains with Montana's pioneers and were adopted by the Native American inhabitants to become a Montana tradition. To honor the tradition and to celebrate Montana's first one hundred years of statehood, the Helena Quilter's Guild and the Montana Historical Society are co-sponsoring the "Montana Centennial Quilt Competition and Exhibition." "Dealing with artifacts 'made while you wait,'" said Museum Curator Steve Germann, "is an unusual experience for us, but the quality and visual appeal of the entries has kept our enthusiasm for the project running high. I am confident that Montana museum visitors are going to enjoy this show tremendously."

The competition has drawn twenty-one entries from individuals and groups of quilters from throughout the state. Montana themes, such as the state seal, flower, and bird, and themes of Montana history, such as exploration, mining, ranching, and agriculture, predominate. Most of the quilts were primarily appliqued or were created using combinations of appliqued, pieced, and embroidered techniques.

The entries will be exhibited in the Society's Northeast Gallery from April 6 through June 25. They will then be shown in Missoula, Kalispell, Bozeman, Great Falls, Billings, and Sidney.

The twenty-one quilts in the competition were judged on overall appearance, workmanship, suitability, color, and design. Cash awards were presented for Best of Show and first, second, and third places, and the Society will purchase the quilt that wins the Centennial Award for the Museum's permanent collection.

Audrey Levitan of Helena took the Centennial Award with her quilt of alternating appliqued and quilted blocks representing historical themes. First place winners in each division were Chris Elliott of Billings, Pieced Division; Grace Soderlind of Helena, Appliqued Division; Trish Gollehon of Miles City, Combination Division; and Hazel Patek of Bridger, Whole Quilt Divison. Trish Gollehon also took Best of Show.

The Helena Quilter's Guild is offering three workshops in conjunction with the exhibit. For more information and registration forms, write to Nickie Addis, 716 Power St., Helena, Montana 59601 or call (406) 442-5208. Fees will be charged for the workshops.

A selection of quilts from the Museum's permanent collection, "Warm Traditions: A Century of Quilts," will be on exhibit at the Society from June 28 through July 30, 1989. These quilts date from 1899 to the 1930s and include examples of crazy quilts and appliqued, pieced, embroidered, and puff-patched quilts. The pieced patterns include the star of Bethlehem, birds-in-the-air, sawtooth, and Greek crosses. Two quilts of special interest include a crazy quilt from the turn of the century that was rebacked in the 1960s by a descendant of the original quilter and a star quilt from Fort Peck Indian Reservation presented to the Society in 1985 by then Tribal Chairman and Mrs. Kenneth E. Ryan in memory of Gerald Red Elk, respected Sioux leader.

The photographs are of quilt blocks from two of the exhibition quilts. The windmill is a detail from the [Great] Falls Quilt Guild entry and the locomotive is from the Deer Lodge Quilter's Guild entry. (Photos by Glenda Bradshaw)

PLEASE RETURN

MHS Hosts Centennial Symposium in Billings

The Montana Historical Society is preparing for three days of celebration in honor of the one hundredth statehood anniversaries of the Northern Tier states of Montana, Wyoming, Washington, South Dakota, North Dakota, and Idaho. On June 22-24, 1989, more than eighty historians, authors, and artists from the United States and Canada will gather in Billings, Montana, to discuss, analyze, and exhibit the historical and cultural heritage of these six states. Focusing on the unique characteristics that have bound the Northern Tier states together, participants will examine and highlight the states' dependence on natural resource economies, their ethnically diverse populations and significant Native American communities, their dissenting political traditions, and their art and literature, which are inextricably identified with and inspired by the land.

A wide range of topics will be covered, including the region's territorial status, immigration, labor movements, work traditions, art and culture, Indian rights, and twentieth century government. Among the presentation titles are "Social Values and Montana's 1889 Constitutional Convention" by Montana historian Richard Roeder; "Class, Gender, and Leisure in the Mining West: The Case of Butte, Montana in the 1920s" by Butte archivist and historian Mary Murphy; and "Prince Maximilian zu Wied and Karl Bodmer: Journey through North and South Dakota and Montana" by Joseph C. Porter of the Joslyn Art Museum in Omaha.

One of the symposium's highlights will be the evening programs and entertainments. Authors Ivan Doig, Michael Dorris, and Louise Erdrich will read from their own works; Ursula Smith, Linda Peavy, and Eric Funk will present video excerpts from "Pamelia," an opera about Montana pioneers James and Pamelia Fergus; and Robert Mull will show his film, "SEPIA: The Art of the Curtis Brothers." Performing artist Raphael Cristy will present a first-person dramatization, "Charlie Russell's Yarns," and Kenn J. Pierson's "Mountain Thunder: The Ballad of C. Badger Clark," a play based on the life of the South Dakota poet, will be performed

During the fall of 1989, programs on the same themes will be presented in eleven communities in the Northern Tier. The forums will be held in Tacoma and Richland, Washington; Boise and Moscow, Idaho; Butte, Montana; Bismarck and Grand Forks, North Dakota; Aberdeen and Sturgis, South Dakota; and Laramie and Cody, Wyoming. Each forum will begin with an audiovisual presentation illustrating the landscape and history of the Northern Tier and will feature two speakers with special knowledge of the region.

Registration forms were sent out in early April. If you would like a form or need more information on the symposium or the community forums, write to Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Education Department, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620 (or call 406-444-4794). The deadline for advance registration is June 1, 1989.

Montana Historians Travel the State

Historians Richard Roeder and Harry Fritz will take Montana history on the road this year in honor of the state's centennial. Between March and November 1989, fourteen communities will host the "Traveling Historians' Centennial Forum," which is being offered at no cost to the sponsoring institutions through the generosity of Montana Power Company and Northwest Airlink.

Harry Fritz is professor of history at the University of Montana and Richard Roeder, former professor of history at Montana State University, teaches history at Carroll College. For many years both of these outstanding scholars have entertained audiences throughout the state with their thoughtful and enthusiastic interpretations of Montana history.

The forums will use a point/counterpoint format in which each speaker will present his own views and then comment on the presentation of the other speaker. The sessions will then be opened to the audience for questions, comments, and discussions. Each community will be able to choose from four topics: "The 1880s: Montana's Formative Decade," "The 1980s: Change and Continuity," "The Best Books about Montana: Literature and History," and "The People of Montana: Winners and Losers."

The forums will be held on Friday or Saturday night from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. The Society has already sponsored forums in Miles City and Sidney. If you are interested in sponsoring the forum in your community, write to Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Education Program, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (or call 444-4794).

The Last Best Place: Montana Anthology Wins Praise

When the first printing of the Montana Historical Society's Centennial book, The Last Best Place: A Montana Anthology, reached northwestern bookstores last November, it was an instant success. Within six weeks, the 1,184-page book of writings about Montana had sold out—something that no one but its editors had predicted. Editors Bill Kittredge and Annick Smith had known from the beginning that the book would appeal to more than just those who have an affinity for Montana. It also struck a chord with those who love and appreciate the literature and history of the West—and The Last Best Place convincingly demonstrates that Montana has more than its share of both.

Missoula bookseller Barbara Theroux told a Los Angeles Times reporter, "I've never seen anything like the demand for The Last Best Place in my 17 years in bookselling. I sold 500 copies in less than three weeks. Then the books were gone, but the demand was just as strong."

The anthology has attracted a remarkable number of reviews, which have been excellent, both in Montana and elsewhere. Joe Mooney of the Seattle Times observed, "You don't have to be a Montanan to love this book." Ginny Merriam of the Missoulian hailed The Last Best Place as a literary landmark, "probably the most ambitious project of its type in U.S. history." It also made the Great Falls Tribune best seller list in November, 1988, topping their list of state and regional non-fiction works and placing third in general hardbacks sold in Montana.

John McCarthy of the Lewiston Tribune commented, "Just to pick it up, scan the book jacket, skim the table of contents and leaf through the pages is to know: Here is a fine piece of work, held together by a place called Montana."

Now in its second printing, The Last Best Place, published by the Montana Historical Society and distributed by the University of Montana Press, is available again. The anthology, which sells for $39.95, can be purchased at the Society's Museum Store or ordered from Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620 (or call 406-444-2890). Please include $2.50 for postage.

Recording Montana—An Oral Historian's Introduction to Montana

by John Terreo
MHS Oral Historian

When I decided to move to Montana from Memphis, Tennessee, to accept the position of oral historian for the Montana Historical Society, a friend warned me that I would have to learn an entirely new state history and culture. This was an accurate assessment, but it was not something to deter me from accepting a wonderful opportunity.

For years, I have been interested in historical investigation, documentation, and preservation. While working for the Memphis State University library's Special Collections and Archives division, I had primary responsibility for the oral history program. I discovered the value of oral history as a means of preserving and documenting our historical heritage. Oral histories record the human components of history that are often lacking in printed records—colorful idioms, regional and ethnic speech patterns, powerful and sometimes uncontrolled emotions, and vivid descriptions. I became an ardent proponent and practitioner of oral history.

Within a few weeks of my arrival in Helena, I embarked on a number of field trips that took me to such well-known locations as Sidney, Miles City, and Great Falls and to lesser-known communities such as Kremlin, Kinsey, Ismay, and Plevna. I discovered Montana's seemingly endless and uninhabited tracts of land and frequently desolate two-lane highways. I kept a nervous eye on the fuel gauge and marveled over the distances that I covered without seeing another vehicle—distances that in the South would have taken me through at least fourscore small settlements and two or three states. But the feelings of isolation quickly disappeared as I looked out on the spectacular scenery. I saw herds of antelope complacently grazing just yards from the road, tumbleweeds darting across the pavement, and majestic hawks serenely gliding above distant snowcapped mountains.

The people of Montana are very different from those I had met in the South. They are hospitable, very curious, and generous both with their time and their memories. Nearly everyone I talked with was amazed that he or she had done anything that invited historical investigation. And each one shared their experiences of those past years.

One of the projects currently in progress at the Society is "The New Deal in Montana." Several people I interviewed brought these years vibrantly to life: Elizabeth Phelps in Sidney described her experiences as a young girl growing up on a small farm during the "dirty thirties;" Henry and Lydia Christman of Plevna remembered working on WPA projects and keeping house during the 1930s; Ethel George and Fred Campbell, Sr., vividly described their experiences at Kinsey, a farm community established by the Resettlement Administration; and Leo Remsh of Great Falls told about his days at the CCC camp in Apgar. Many others who worked on New Deal programs in Montana also shared their memories with me.

Oral Historian John Terreo is conducting interviews with Montanans across the state for "The New Deal in Montana."

I would like to express my appreciation to the people who have already participated in "The New Deal in Montana." I thank them for their involvement and for their kind offerings of hot coffee and warm sandwiches on cold November days. And I want to give special thanks to Patricia and Curtis Almy who guided me to the homes of those I interviewed in Ismay.

I look forward to building on the excellent work that Laurie Mercier began seven years ago at the Montana Historical Society. I feel fortunate to be able to preserve an invaluable part of Montana's historical heritage and to document a significant part of Montana's past.

Eric White Donates Genealogy to Library

Since Eric White came to Montana in 1915, he has accumulated a considerable amount of valuable genealogical and other research materials. White has generously donated his notebooks and journals to the Montana Historical Society Library, which will incorporate the material into its already large genealogical collection. Most of the thirty-five books, twenty-one notebooks, and issues of twenty-six journals that White donated will be shelved in the non-Montana genealogy room. Those items that deal with White's own family will be incorporated into the general library collection. White's collection constitutes one of the largest genealogy donations ever received by the Montana Historical Society Library.

White was born on May 13, 1896, in Beltzhoover, Pennsylvania. He came to Montana in 1915 to homestead north of Custer, between the Musselshell and Yellowstone rivers. He served in World War I in France and was a ranger for the U.S. Forest Service from 1921 to 1957 in the Absaroka, Gallatin, Deer Lodge, and Helena National Forests. White is now a resident of Helena.

MHS also has an oral history interview (OH 465) with White and a collection of White's papers (SC 1799) on file in the Archives. All are available to researchers.

League of Women Voters Records

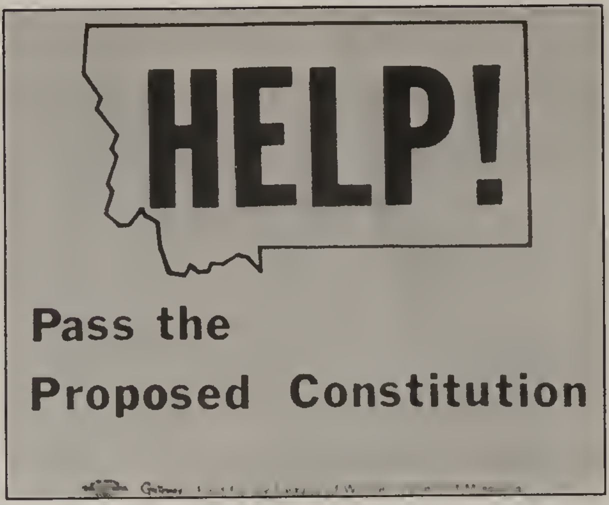
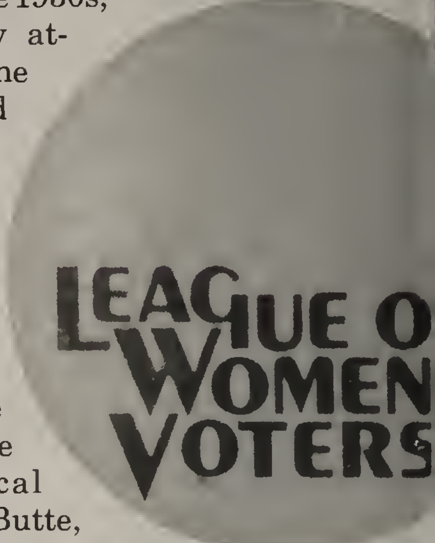
For over sixty years, the League of Women Voters has been a potent and respected influence in Montana politics. Through its voter education programs and public forums the League has brought voters face-to-face with the issues and the candidates that populate the political landscape. To help researchers gain a more thorough understanding of the documentary history of this important organization, the Montana Historical Society Archives has completed the inventory and description of the records of the League of Women Voters of Montana.

It took League members Laura Nicholson and Harriett Meloy of Helena dozens of hours to organize the collection. The two volunteers reviewed every item, sorted materials by type of record, identified and removed duplicates, and arranged selected materials chronologically and by subject. "Laura's and Harriett's familiarity with and understanding of the League's procedures and organizational nature were invaluable assets in the accurate arrangement of the records," said State Archivist Sue Jackson. Their labor consolidated the collection into eight linear feet of storage space, containing file after file of informative material on the development of the League in Montana.



The League of Women Voters of Montana and affiliates in other states are grassroots organizations that choose relevant political issues to research and discuss. Their goal is to take informed political positions on local and state levels and to act as educators in the political process. The state Leagues are part of the League of Women Voters of the United States, a national, nonpartisan political organization that promotes political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government. The national group was founded in 1920. One of the best known activities of the League is voter services, which includes sponsoring debates among candidates, circulating candidate questionnaires and publishing their results, getting people out to vote, and researching and preparing reports on political issues on national, state, and local levels.

The first Montana League organizational meeting was held in Great Falls on April 26, 1920. Like the national group, which Carrie Chapman Catt founded to educate newly enfranchised voters, the Montana League was an outgrowth of the woman's suffrage movement. From the 1920s through the 1930s, Montana had many at-large members of the national League, and during the 1930s an informal state organization existed. But it was not until 1955 that the League of Women Voters of Montana was recognized as the official state League with active local Leagues in Billings, Butte, Great Falls, Havre, Helena, and Missoula. One item in the League collection is the 1955 telegram from National League organizer Irene C. Sweeney congratulating the Montana state committee and League members on holding their first state convention.



Most of the records in the Archives collection document the period from 1953 through 1988 and include materials from eleven local Leagues as well as the state organization. The many position papers in the collection attest to the wide range of topics that League members tackled. Over the past thirty years Montana League members have studied the coal-fired elec-

Havre and Great Falls League members traveled to League Day at the Montana Legislature in Helena in 1961.

Now Easier for Researchers to Use

trical plants in southeastern Montana, water pollution, conditions at the Montana State Prison, the unicameral form of legislature, and dozens of other topics. After discussions of the issue, the members of the League reach a consensus and support that position through lobbying, letter writing, and other organized activities.

The League of Women Voters of Montana Records contain documents praising the organization for its support for various legislative causes. There are letters from governors, congressmen, lobbyists, and citizens thanking League members for testimony given and information collected. This is a fascinating collection of documents that will allow researchers to trace the development of the League's positions on issues and determine how successful League members' efforts have been.

The collection also includes presidents' correspondence, minutes of meetings, organizational records, workshop agendas, candidate questionnaires, and League-prepared booklets on state and local government and the Montana Constitutional Convention.

Those interested in using the League records can ask for the inventory at the Montana Historical Society Library.

The October 23, 1953, meeting of the Montana State Organization Committee was attended by (seated, from left) Lucille Jesse, Missoula; Irene Sweeney, Washington, D.C.; Chairman Laura Nicholson, Helena; Mrs. Ralph Purdy, Havre; Vendla Sturm, Havre; (standing, from left) Glenna Moore, Helena; Joan Galles, Billings; Mrs. Howard Jones, Missoula; Wilma Smith, Billings; Mrs. Flemming, Butte; Jeanne Mueller, Great Falls.

Montana State AFL-CIO Donates Records to Montana Historical Society Archives

On January 24, 1989, the Montana State AFL-CIO transferred records from its state federation office in Helena to the Montana Historical Society Archives. "Although the collection is small in size, the information it contains is the first documentation in the Archives for this important labor organization and its many activities in the state," said State Archivist Sue Jackson. The records, which date from 1895 to 1966, include correspondence, financial records, subject files, yearbooks, and convention proceedings.

The deposit represents the beginning of a cooperative agreement between MHS and the State AFL-CIO in which the federation will transfer records to the Archives as they are retired from active use. According to Jackson, "The history of Montana's labor movement is complex and is as important an element in the state's heritage as fur trapping, cattle ranching, railroading, mining, and lumbering. The labor movement is interconnected with many of these aspects of Montana history, and yet it has received much less attention."

Workers in Montana Territory began organizing at least a quarter century before Montana became a state in 1889. A strike by boom printers in the gold rush camp of Virginia City in 1864 marked the beginning of Montana workers coming together for their mutual benefit. Fourteen years later, in 1878, a threatened wage cut in another mining camp, Butte, launched the organization of metal mining in Montana.

In 1867, Montana's first local union was chartered as Local 95 of the International Typographical Union in Helena. Nine years later, the first union contract was signed in Butte between miners and the "copper kings" who controlled the Butte mining empire.

From these early beginnings, Montana's work force became one of the most highly unionized in the United States. After the American Federation of Labor (AFL) merged with the Congress of International Organizations (CIO) nationally, a similar Montana merger created the Montana State AFL-CIO in 1956. Although small by national standards, the Montana State AFL-CIO has developed a national reputation for progressive leadership.

The Montana State AFL-CIO has had two executive secretaries in its thirty-three year history—James Umber, who served from 1956 until 1968, and Jim Murry, who succeeded Umber and continues in the post today. "We are very pleased to have this arrangement designating the Society's Archives as the official, permanent home for the important records of our Federation," said Murry. "It is the best way to make the information in these records available to the public." It is Murry's hope that other labor organizations in Montana will follow the lead of the state AFL-CIO and make arrangements for their historically valuable records to be placed in a public repository.

John DeHaas, Jr., Honored for Preservation Work

The Office of Historic Preservation honored John and Bernice DeHaas for their lifetime of preservation work in Montana.

Every two years, the State Historic Preservation Office and its Review Board present awards recognizing the contributions that organizations and individuals have made rehabilitating properties and doing preservation work that inspires and educates the public about historic preservation. On March 4, 1989, State Historic Preservation Officer Marcella Sherfy presented Montana's "Centennial Year Preservation Award" to John DeHaas, Jr., for his lifetime of devotion to the preservation of Montana's historic buildings.

DeHaas's commitment began long before there was general public interest in preservation or a mandate for it by state and federal laws. During his tenure at Montana State University as a professor of architecture, DeHaas became active in the Historic American Building Survey and, for almost twenty years, supervised and assisted with preparation of architectural drawings for a wealth of historic structures in Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, and California. Many of Montana's practicing architects owe their understanding of historic properties to DeHaas's training and enthusiasm and his name is recognized in communities throughout the state from visits he made to photograph and research significant buildings. He also assisted the Preservation Office when it was part of the Parks Division of the Department of Fish and Game, conducted inventories of historic buildings in Billings and Butte, organized ghost town preservation efforts, and prepared countless nominations to the National Register of Historic Places.

Bernice W. DeHaas was also honored for contributing her skills as a research chemist to Montana's preservation efforts and for her encouragement and support of her husband for the past thirty years.

Also recognized at the ceremony were outgoing board members Margaret Warden, Jeanne Eder, Jack Lepley, and David Rivenes; all of those whose property was listed on the National Register of Historic Places during the past two years; and centennial sites program participants whose property was built or in use during the territorial period, from 1864 to 1889.

MHS ACCESSIONS

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Moyne SmallGreat Falls | 39 black-and-white photographs, views of Jeannette Rankin, her friends, and family |
| John WheelerHelena | 7 black-and-white photographs, views of Northern Pacific Railroad construction near Townsend and mining near Gould |
| Hilary NickelHelena | 9 black-and-white photographs, views of Butte and the powder explosions of 1895 |
| Bob EmersonDel Mar, California | 38 black and white photographs by Les Jorud, views of buildings, businesses, and groups of people in Helena during the 1920s and 1930s |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Robert KrogerRiverside, California | Kroger Brewery Records, Fred W. Kroger Papers, Thomas Williams Diary, etc. |
| Helena Typographical UnionHelena | Helena Typographical Union Local #95 Records, 1940s-1980s |
| Bob TaylorOklahoma City, Oklahoma | Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area collection, 1970-1987 |
| Robert H. WilliamsSausalito, California | James H. Bradley family papers, 1864-1879 |
| Louie MailletGreat Falls | Louis R. Maillet correspondence and notebooks, 1869-1906 |

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Robert F. MorganHelena | McClellan saddle and bridle in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sherman |
| Hal WaldrupButte | Waiters' jackets from the Mai Wah Noodle Parlor |
| Opal SmithHelena | Oriental charger (painted porcelain plate) |
| Vi ClementsHelena | 4 dolls that belonged to Ellen L. Beer of Townsend |
| Ted SchwindenHelena | Artwork and commemorative and souvenir items presented to Schwinden during his tenure as governor |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Marcel CallantHarlowton | Trails Along the Musselshell |
| St. Rose ParishDillon | St. Rose Catholic Church, 1888-1988, a Century of Commemorations |
| E. L. RobinsonPhoenix, Arizona | Log of Camp Nine Mile, 1938 and Pictorial Review of CCC in Montana, Missoula CCC District, That the Work of Young America be Recorded |
| Great Falls Public SchoolsGreat Falls | Great Falls Public Schools 100th Anniversary History Highlights, 1888-1988 |
| Mary Lou EgganHelena | Montana's Greatest Charity, Story of Shodair, Montana Children's Home and Hospital |

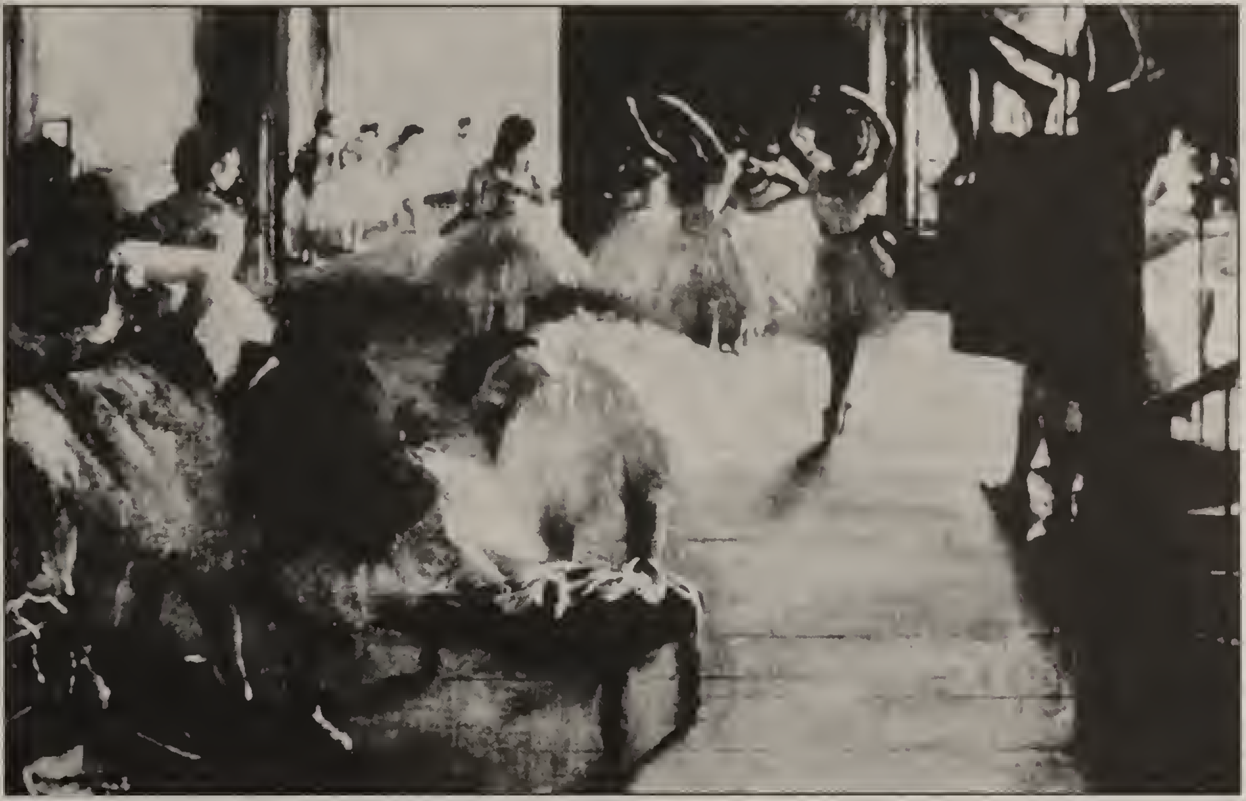
Clark's Art Collection Is Exhibited At MHS

Historians have portrayed Copper King William Andrews Clark as a rags-to-riches success , an empire builder, an opportunistic and ruthless capitalist, and a formidable political foe—but few have characterized him as a collector of valuable art. This attribute of the Butte mine owner is unfamiliar to most Montanans, but Clark invested in a large and varied collection of major works of art, ranging from fifth century ceramics to early twentieth century oils. Pieces from Clark's collection have been selected for "William Andrews Clark: Treasures of a Copper King," which will be on exhibit at the Society from August 15 to October 8, 1989. The art works will be on loan from the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., which holds the entire collection.

The William Andrews Clark Collection contains paintings, sculptures, tapestries, decorative arts, and antiquities. Among the items proposed for inclusion in the Montana exhibition are paintings by Corot, Degas, Turner, and Daumier; a painted Grecian oil jar from the late fifth century B.C.; and sixteenth and seventeenth century ceramics from Italy, the Netherlands, and France.



Corcoran Gallery of Art

Edgar Degas' "School of Ballet" will be exhibited in "William A. Clark: Treasures of a Copper King" at MHS in the fall.

With the assistance of the Montana congressional delegation and former Governor Tom Judge, Yellowstone Art Center Director Donna Forbes began working to secure the loan of the exhibit in 1978. She has arranged for these representative works from the collection to be shown in Montana over a period of five months. The exhibition will be at the Yellowstone Art Center in Billings from May 5 through July 30, 1989, prior to its appearance in Helena. The National Endowment for the Humanities, US WEST Foundation, and the Billings Gazette provided grants to fund the exhibition.

To complement the exhibition, MHS Photograph Archivist Lory Morrow has assembled a collection of historical photographs of Butte during the Copper King Era (1880-1910). The exhibition will also have a catalogue with approximately twenty color plates and several black and white photographs of the art and a biographical essay on Clark written by his great grandson, Lewis Hall.

For more information, write to Donna Forbes, Yellowstone Art Center, 401 N. 27th St., Billings, Montana 59101 (406) 256-6804 or Steve Germann, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620 (406) 444-2694.

World Museum of Mining

This 1918 view of Butte mines will be one of the historical photographs accompanying the Clark exhibition.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Montana Post, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59601.

ISSN 0047-7958

From the Editor's File

To celebrate Montana's centennial, the Native American Performing Arts Ensemble, Auh-tah-kwoi, has created a Blackfoot dance/drama, Piye: The Legend of Star Boy. Twelve performances are planned in Great Falls for the summer of 1989. Anyone interested in scheduling additional performances should write to Montana United Scholarship Service, 4106 N. Star Blvd., Great Falls, 59405 or call (406) 761-8471. The lead roles of Piye have already been cast, but several parts have been left uncast so that members of host organizations or communities can fill them.

For the Centennial, the C. M. Russell Museum is bringing home thirty-one pieces of the Mint Collection from the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth, Texas. The artworks will be exhibited from May 20 to September 5, 1989. The museum would be pleased to accept loans or donations of photos of the Mint Saloon, owner Sid Willis, or related subjects. For more information, write to Pam Yascavage or Jan Postler, C. M. Russell Museum, 400 13th St. N., Great Falls, 59401 or call (406) 727-8787.

The Montana Historical Society will host the annual meeting of the Museum Association of Montana on April 27-29, 1989, in Helena. For more information, write to Wes Hardin, Fort Missoula Historical Museum, Building 332, Fort Missoula, Missoula, Montana 59801.

Centennial Is Theme of 1989 History Conference

The sixteenth annual Montana History Conference is scheduled for October 26-28, 1989, at the Colonial Inn in Helena. This year's theme is "Centennial Montana," though the conference will not be limited to Centennial topics. Proposals for papers, panels, presentations, and workshops are being accepted by Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620, (406) 444-4794.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Montana
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

MHS Calendar

| | |
|---|---|
| | MHS Exhibits |
| Northeast Gallery | "Montana Centennial Quilt Competition and Exhibition," April 6-June 25, co-sponsored by the Helena Quilter's Guild |
| | "Warm Traditions: A Century of Quilts," June 28-July 30 |
| | "William Andrews Clark: Treasures of a Copper King" and photography exhibit "Butte in the Era of the Copper Kings," August 15-October 8 |
| Museum | "Montana Homeland," permanent exhibition of Montana history |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |
| | Special Events |
| May 13 | Montana History Day |
| June 22-24 | Centennial West Symposium, Billings |
| | Spring Hours |
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion 304 N. Ewing | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sundays, Mondays, and holidays. Open Sundays after Memorial Day. |
| | Beginning Memorial Day Weekend |
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Weekends and holidays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays |

Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Group tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Vol. 26 No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Winter 1988

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

JAN 06 1989

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana Homeland Opens to Enthusiastic Audience

Several hundred people celebrated the new Montana history exhibit on September 16 when Governor Ted Schwinden officially opened Montana Homeland. After Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees President Bruce Ennis recounted the development of the exhibit and acknowledged the many staff contributions, Buster Yellow Kidney, a Blackfeet spiritual leader, blessed the exhibit and those assembled. Historian Clay Jenkins, portraying Thomas Jefferson, gave a first-person presentation on westward expansion and the Lewis and Clark Expedition. Several other visitors also traveled through time to give their impressions of Montana's past. Among them were explorer Meriwether Lewis, settler Lizzie Fisk, miner F. L. Kirkaldie, Corporal Frank Burke, Captain Orville L. Anderson, and sheepherder Matthias Martinz.

On Saturday, hundreds of people viewed the exhibit and enjoyed music, Indian dancing, face painting, diary readings, and historical commentaries by Thomas Jefferson. Helena radio station, KBLL, did live remote broadcasting from the Society to encourage people to come to the museum and participate.

Montana Homeland has twice as much gallery space as the Society's old Formal Museum and exhibits ten times as many artifacts. In planning the exhibit, the museum staff carefully joined the best of the old with hundreds of artifacts that have never been exhibited. They then used a broad narrative of the state's history to tell the story of Montana's past and to interpret that past for visitors. Montana Homeland takes visitors through five time periods: prehistory, from the last Ice Age to about 1750; Indian Montana, from 1750 to the late 1870s; white settlement, from the first gold strikes of the 1860s to the coming of the railroad in 1883; industrial Montana, from the railroads to the beginning of World War I; and hard times and change, from World War I through the end of World War II.

Margaret Benes Miller

The story of Butte's deep rock copper mining holds young visitors' attention in the new Montana Homeland exhibit.

photos by Margaret Benes Miller

Buster Yellow Kidney (left) and Clay Jenkins (right) were honored guests at the exhibit opening ceremony.

Visitors attending the opening were impressed with the results of three years of planning and construction by the museum staff. One Helenan exclaimed, "The new exhibit is fabulous! and fascinating—well worth waiting for." A Montanan living in Washington enthused: "At long last—great job. My mother and grandfather would be pleased." Another out-of-state visitor also expressed a general appreciation for Montana Homeland: "The exhibit is very well done—my thanks to all who have had a part in bringing this together."

Montana Homeland speaks to Montanans across the years, reminding them of the heritage left by all those who earlier walked the lands, coursed the rivers, and left their imprints on the land.

PLEASE RETURN

History Conference Ushers in Centennial Year

Glenda Clay Bradshaw

Dean Solhiem of the USFS Nine Mile Ranger District demonstrates packing skills at the Montana History Conference.

The Montana Historical Society began the state's Centennial year at one of the great historical intersections in Montana—the big bend of the Yellowstone River. Near there, Crows and Blackfeet hunted, William Clark floated the Yellowstone in 1805, prospectors found gold during the 1860s, and the Northern Pacific Railroad punched through its main line in 1883. Nearly three hundred people attended the 15th Annual Montana History Conference, held November 3-5, in Livingston, the railroad town that sits near the narrow gap of what fur trappers called the "4th Canyon of the Yellowstone."

The conference focused on the history of the valley of the Upper Yellowstone and included lectures, slide shows, and panel discussions on archaeology, Crow Indian culture, Yellowstone National Park, railroad development in the Yellowstone valley, military history, and pre-railroad travel routes. Through it all, lecturers and panelists underscored the importance of understanding local history as we celebrate the centennial of statehood.

Highlighting the conference were addresses by Fr. Peter Powell, Newberry Library Fellow and award-winning author of path-breaking studies of Cheyenne Indian religious life, and Hank Fischer, Defenders of Wildlife field representative and an expert on wolves in Yellowstone.

At the annual awards banquet, Toni Hagener of Havre and artist Robert Morgan of Helena received the 1988 Board of Trustees' awards for significant contributions to the preservation of Montana history. Hagener, who has been active in local history efforts in Havre, served for many years on the Society's board, acting as key liason between the Society and its many constituents in small institutions around the state. Morgan worked on the Society staff for nearly twenty years, creating dozens of exhibits, including Territory Junction and many of the dioramas in the old formal museum. He recently came back to the Society as a consultant on Montana Homeland. Elliott West, professor of history at the University of Arkansas, won the Vivian A. Paladin Writing Award for having the best article published in Montana. West's article, "Child's Play: Tradition and Adaptation on the Frontier," was published in the 1988 winter issue. Louise Cross received the Montana Association of Museums award for her work at the Frontier Gateways Museum in Glendive.

Next year the Montana History Conference will convene in Helena and will celebrate statehood.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Glenda Bradshaw; Circulation Manager: Tammy Ryan.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

ISSN 0047-7958

IBM Supports History Day

Students at fifty Montana schools will be encouraged to participate in the annual National History Day competition as the result of a $2,500 grant from IBM to the Montana Historical Society. Two teachers will travel to the schools to tell students about the exciting opportunities they will discover if they participate in the competition.

"Education is one of IBM's top community service priorities," said Randle Romney, Helena branch manager. "Montanans love their history, and we felt we couldn't participate in a better education project in Montana's centennial year than one that reflects this love of history."

This year's National History Day theme is "The Individual in History." State winners will be chosen on History Day, May 13, 1989, in Helena. The national competition will be held at the University of Maryland in late June. To participate, students pick a topic that fits the theme and then produce a project, which may be a paper, a media production (slides, film, video, computer), a performance, or an exhibit.

Montana students have competed in National History Day for five years, taking awards in 1986, 1987, and 1988. Last year five Helena students and two Kalispell students came away with top honors. The Helena students were featured in "Historians in the Making" in Humanities, the publication of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

For more information contact Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620, 444-4794.

Archibald Leaves MHS for Position in St. Louis

Montana Historical Society Director Robert Archibald has left Montana to become the director of the Missouri Historical Society in St. Louis. Assistant Director Robert M. Clark will serve as Interim Director.

Since Archibald became director in 1979, the Society has seen many changes. The most recent change was the Society's Montana history exhibit, Montana Homeland, which opened in September. The most visible change was the addition of 16,000 square feet to the Society's building, which was completed in 1986.

One of Archibald's most important contributions to the Society was planning for its long-term financing to augment legislative support. He recognized the need to give all Montanans educational services and access to the Society's resources, as well as building and maintaining the institution's collections. At Archibald's suggestion, in 1986 the Board of Trustees created the Montana Historical Society Foundation, which has already raised over a million dollars in gifts, pledges, and grants to establish an endowment. Archibald was the Foundation's executive secretary.

Archibald said that he will miss the Society and his association here. "The Montana Historical Society is one of the best institutions of its type in the U.S.," Archibald said. "I will miss its fine staff and the many Montanans who care deeply about preserving their history."

Interim Director Bob Clark came to the Society in 1978 as Librarian and became the director of the Library and Archives Division. He was recently promoted to assistant director and remarked that it would be challenging to fill Archibald's shoes until the new director is selected in the spring or summer.

Former Director Robert Archibald (left) and Interim Director Robert Clark (right) were photographed together in the Society board room in November.

Remarks from Bob Clark, Interim Director

We all tend not to appreciate the burden the boss bears, or anyone else for that matter, until we have to bear it ourselves. I've been learning appreciation fast these past few weeks. Some people have congratulated me for becoming the interim director; it would probably be more to the point to wish me luck as the legislature comes to town.

The effort to firmly establish a separate, nonprofit foundation for fund raising continues, the hyperactive programs bustle on, and the centennial year gets underway. It is a mixed feeling I have for Bob for leaving a considerably bigger, more active, more complicated Montana Historical Society than we had when he became director nine years ago. However, it is my good fortune, and the Society's, to have proven, experienced managers heading the programs and proven, experienced staff within them. Together, aided by President Bruce Ennis and the Board of Trustees, I am confident that we can hand the Society over to Bob's permanent successor intact and maybe even a little further down the road he set it on.

Rbt M Clark

Bradley Fellowship Offered for Summer 1989

The Montana Historical Society offers the James H. Bradley Memorial Fellowship every two years to scholars and other researchers of Montana history. The fellowship was established in 1983 with funds from an anonymous benefactor and was named for Lieutenant James H. Bradley, a ninteenth century amateur historian and recorder of Montana history. Its purpose is to encourage research in the Society's Library and Archives collections.

This year, a $4,000 fellowship will be awarded to a historian who will research and produce a scholarly article on some aspect of Montana history. The recipient will spend at least four weeks at the Society in Helena between June 5 and September 15, 1989, and must report on the resources used within two weeks of departure. Applicants do not need to be professional historians, but they must demonstrate the ability to do historical research. The fellow may pursue material for a book-length study, thesis, or dissertation, but must be able to produce a separate article by March 15, 1990, to submit to Montana, the Magazine of Western History for possible publication.

A second $1,000 stipend will be given to an individual or group with a Montana history proposal, which may be part of a larger project or a specific research project just for this program. Applicants must live in Montana and be able to spend at least ten days using the Society's collections between June 1 and October 30, 1988.

The application deadline for the fellowships is March 17, 1989. For more information and application forms, write to the Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620-9990 or call (406) 444-2694. The awards will be announced by May 5, 1989.

Montana Anthology Comp

The Last Best Place: A Montana Anthology made its debut on November 3, 1989, just in time for the 15th Annual History Conference in Livingston. Those attending the conference were the first to see this 1,158-page book, published by the Montana Historical Society Press, and had the opportunity to hear some of the Montana authors represented in the book during one of the conference sessions.

The Last Best Place collects into one volume the full range of Montana's rich literary traditions. It begins with the long-ago Native American origin stories that have been passed down from one generation to the next and ends with the wealth of fiction and poetry created by today's Montana authors. Other anthology sections cover the writings of explorers, stories told by early Indians and pioneers, writings about Butte, reminiscences of Montana's agricultural frontier, and the literature written during the early decades of this century.

Co-editors William Kittredge and Annick Smith got their inspiration for The Last Best Place on their way home from a 1984 Montana Committee for the Humanities gathering of scholars, writers, and citizens interested in planning for the state's centennial. Kittredge and Smith were convinced that the best way to celebrate Montana's remarkable written heritage was to gather it into one volume. It was an enormous task.

To help cull Montana's rich literature, Kittredge and Smith assembled an editorial board composed of Bill Lang, historian and editor of Montana, the Magazine of Western History; Richard Roeder, historian and history lecturer at Carroll College; Mary Blew, fiction writer and professor of creative writing at Lewis-Clark College; James Welch, novelist and poet; and Bill Bevis, literary critic and professor of English at the University of Montana. In addition, Chere Juisto was hired to find eastern Montana writings and Glenda Bradshaw researched Native American stories.

Iron Teeth, Cheyenne woman

Mary MacLane

The Board collected and read a stack of nearly three thousand pages of "vivid and compelling" writing about Montana. The difficult job of cutting came next. After three years and hundreds of hours of reading and arguing and finally selecting the best of Montana's literature, the editorial board had whittled the anthology down to 1,158 pages. The MHS Press then took over the job of putting the manuscript together into a well-designed, easy-to-read volume.

The Last Best Place is the most comprehensive collection of Montana literature ever published. This hardbound edition includes over 230 stories, poems, reminiscences, and reports written by 150 men and women. It is arranged chronologically in eight sections, each with an introductory essay by a member of the editorial board. The book is illustrated by woodcuts of writers and Montana scenes by artists Kathy Bogan, Dirk Lee, Tom Sailor, and Jim Todd.

In order to make the book affordable for Montanans, a large portion of the publication costs were raised from both public and private sources. The planning, research, and early editing of The Last Best Place were funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities. The Montana state legislature supported additional editing through a grant from the Cultural and Aesthetics Fund administered by the Montana Arts Council. The Montana Historical Society, US WEST Foundation, D. A. Davidson, and the Montana Centennial Office also contributed funds to make the project possible.

Now in its second printing, The Last Best Place may be ordered for $39.95 plus $2.50 shipping from the MHS Museum Store, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59620.

---

The woodcuts of Iron Teeth and Mary MacLane are by Kathleen Bogan. The woodcuts of Meriwether Lewis, Richard Hugo, and Ivan Doig are by James G. Todd, Jr.

Meriwether Lewis

Richard Hugo

Ivan Doig

leted: The Last Best Place

THE LAST BEST PLACE

EDITED BY WILLIAM KITTREDGE AND ANNICK SMITH

A Montana Anthology

Authors Include

James L. Long
Robert H. Lowie
Jerome Fourstar
James Whitecalf
Darnell Davis Rides at the Door
George Comes at Night
Percy Bullchild
George Bird Grinnell
Two Crows
Jessie American Horse
Mary Little Bear Inkanish
Alice Marriott
Carol K. Rachlin
Plentyhawk
Robert H. Lowie
Pete Beaverhead
Louisa McDermott
Blind Mose Chouteh
Fred Gone,Sr.
Alfred L. Kroeber
Claude Schaeffer
Watches-All
Simon Francis
Josephine Beaverhead
Leslie B. Davis
Meriwether Lewis
William Clark
C. C. Uhlenbeck
W. A. Ferris
James Kipp
George Catlin
Osborne Russell
Arapooish
Robert Campbell
John James Audubon
Edward Harris
Nicolas Point
Captain John Mullan
Iron Teeth
Thomas B. Marquis
Henry Edgar
Mary Ronan
Thomas J. Dimsdale
Frank Bird Linderman
Elizabeth B. Custer
Two Moon
Hamlin Garland
Emma Carpenter Cowan
Chief Joseph
Andrew Garcia
James Willard Schultz
Nannie T. Alderson
E. C. "Teddy Blue" Abbott
Granville Stuart
Chief Charlot
Charles M. Russell
Andy Adams
John R. Barrows
Art H. Watson
Con Price
L. A. Huffman
Charles H. Eggleston
Berton Braley
Myron Brinig
Beatrice Murphy
Mary MacLane
Clyde Murphy
Dennis " Dinny" Murphy
Dashiell Hammett
Joseph Kinsey Howard
Pearl Price Robertson
Matthias "Mike" Martinz
Peggy Czyzeski
Orland E. Esval
Charles Vindex
Paul E. Young
Blaine Allen Goyins
Dan Cushman
Taylor Gordon
Elliot Paul
John K. Hutchens
Daniel W. Whetstone
John Stands In Timber
Margot Liberty
William McClintock
Henry Tall Bull
Tom Weist
Fred Nault
Grace Stone Coats
D'Arcy McNickle
Norman Macleod
Hughie Call
Jason Bolles
Wallace Stegner
Elliott C. Lincoln
A. B. Guthrie, Jr.
Gwendolen Haste
Naomi Lane Babson
Hobart McKean
Mildred Walker
Dorothy M. Johnson
John J. Tatsey
Leslie Fiedler
Annora Brown
Norman Maclean
James Welch
Thomas McGuane
James Crumley
Rick DeMarinis
Wayne Ude
Michael E. Moon
Richard Brautigan
Spike Van Cleve
Ivan Doig
Mary Clearman Blew
William Kittredge
David Long
David Quammen
Bill Stockton
Richard Ford
Earl Ganz
Ralph Beer
Patricia Henley
Cyra McFadden
Peter Bowen
Kurt Duecker
Debra C. Earling
Richard Hugo
Sandra Alcosser
Minerva Allen
Jon Davis
Madeline DeFrees
Roger Dunsmore
Patricia Goedicke
Andrew Grossbardt
John Haines
Matthew Hansen
Bill Hoagland
Gary Holthaus
Nancy Hunter
Greg Keeler
Ed Lahey
Don Manker
Wallace McRae
D. Lewis Moore
Rick Newby
Robert Sims Reid
Leonard Wallace Robinson
William Pitt Root
Dennice Scanlon
Ripley Schemm
Barbara Taylor Smith
William Stafford
David Thomas
Patrick Todd
Linda Weasel Head
Roberta Hill Whiteman
Robert Wrigley
Paul Zarzyski

Symposium Celebrates State Centennials

In 1989 and 1990, Montana, Washington, Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming will reach their one hundredth anniversaries. In the spirit of celebration and a common heritage, the Montana Historical Society is sponsoring a symposium that focuses on the unique characteristics that have bound these six Northern Tier states together throughout their histories. The three-day conference will be held on June 22-44, 1989, in Billings, Montana. The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded $135,964 to support the symposium, and both a book and a series of community forums will complement it.

Eighty historians, authors, and artists from the United States and Canada will participate in the symposium. Their presentations will examine and highlight the states' dependence on natural resource economies, their ethnically diverse populations and significant Native American communities, their dissenting political traditions, and their art and literature, which are inextricably identified with and inspired by the land.

A diverse group of speakers will cover a wide range of topics during the conference. Many well-known writers will participate including: Ivan Doig, the author of English Creek and Dancing at the Rascal Fair, who is working on the third book in his trilogy, which takes place in Montana during the centennial; Dartmouth College professor Michael Dorris, who wrote A Yellow Raft in Blue Water, which was influenced by life in the Northern Tier; and Native American author Louise Erdrich who wrote the award-winning novels, Love Medicine and The Beet Queen. Scholars will present a wide range of paper topics including a study of the Canadian trade of T. C. Power during the late nineteenth century by Henry C. Klassen of the Department of History at the University of Calgary; the economic disaster of the Panic of 1893 and its effects on the Northern Tier states by Paula Petrik of the Department of History at the University of Maine; and the use of illustrations, photographs, and engravings by newspapers and magazines in 1889 by William E. Huntzicker, former professor of journalism at the University of Wisconsin. Another facet of the symposium involves performances, such as video excerpts from "Pamelia," an opera written by authors Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith and musical composer Eric Funk, and "Charlie Russell Yarns" by performing artist Raphael Cristy.

For more information, write Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620 or call (406) 444-4794.

Communities Also Get Symposium Programs

To complement the centennial symposium, programs on the same themes will travel to eleven communities in the fall of 1989: Tacoma and Richland, Washington; Boise and Moscow, Idaho; Missoula, Montana; Bismarck and Grand Forks, North Dakota; Brookings and Rapid City, South Dakota; and Laramie and Cody, Wyoming. Each forum will begin with an audiovisual presentation illustrating the landscape and history of the Northern Tier, then feature two speakers who will each address one of the specific symposium topics. As part of the program, people will be selected in advance to respond to the presentations with critical comments and pointed questions.

After completion of the forums, the audiovisual presentation will be available on videotape to other communities through their State Humanities Councils.

MHS ACCESSIONS

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Fay CaseHelena | 26 archaeological artifacts from the Anzick site. |
| Jean BaucusHelena | Clothes, tools, linens, and other articles from the Sieben family; "3-7-77" poster; stencil from Bedford flour mills. |
| Leo BenolkenBozeman | Milk stool, camera, brakeman's sticks, railroad flags. |
| Robert J. DeMers, Jr.Fullerton, California | Flathead Indian artifacts, 1890-1920. |
| Karma AlfredsonHelena | 1920s house dress. |
| Robert ThorntonSister, Oregon | Coat, hat, and collar made from beavers trapped on the Yellowstone River, 1913. |
| Virgina NicholsHelena | George Sohon lithograph; 1866 survey instrument and other tools from William Strange family, Stevensville. |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Dorcas HalversonHardin | Hardin Local Government Study Commission Records, 1974-1976. |
| D'Elta GuthrieHelena | Idora Z. Smith Guthrie diaries, 1871-1937. |
| Joy BruckJoan TooleHelenaDoris BranderAvon | League of Women Voters of Montana records, 1970s and '80s. |
| Sue BartlettMary MungerLaura NicholsonHelena | Equal Rights Amendment Council records, 1970s. |
| Mary HaightSan Mateo, California | Hugh S. and Mary Jones Lewis letters, 1886-1897. |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Sons and Daughters of Montana Pioneers | Montana Pioneer Heritage, 1988. |
| H. D. Rossiter, M.D.Sheridan | Pick and Shovel Doctor, 1987. Gift of the author. |
| Gardell Dano,Christensen | Buffalo Kill, 1959. Gift of the author. |
| Gayle Corbett ShirleyConstance Rummel BergumHelena | M is for Montana, 1988. Gift of the authors. |
| J.D. ColemanAtlanta, Georgia | Pleiku, the Dawn of Helicopter Warfare in Vietnam, 1988. Gift of the author. |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Betty JonesHelena | 34 black and white photographs, views of Lewistown, Gilt Edge, and Brooks, Montana. |
| Estate of M. E. and Rilla AndersonHelena | 85 black and white photographs of earthquake damage, Helena, 1935. |

Trustee Sue Ford Bovey Remembered

by John D. Ellingsen,
Curator, Bovey Restorations

Montana history lost one of its best friends on October 7, 1988, when Sue Ford Bovey passed away. A long-time supporter of the Montana Historical Society, she served on its Board of Trustees from 1961 until her death. In 1969, she became the Board's first woman president.

Born Rachel Sue Ford on September 12, 1907, in Great Falls, Sue came from a long line of MHS supporters and Montana pioneers. Her father, Lee Ford, and her grandfather, Robert S. Ford, each served on the MHS Board of Trustees during the first two decades of the 1900s.

Sue married Charles A. Bovey in 1933. Both of them were very interested in Montana history. His attendance at a Fort Benton horse sale on September 18, 1940, changed their lives. At the sale he heard about the old Sullivan Saddlery and took such interest in it that Joseph Sullivan's daughters gave it to him. But when Charlie announced plans to restore the historic building on its original site, he was told that he would have to remove it. He did, re-erecting it in a large building at the Great Falls Fairgrounds. "Old Town," as Charlie called the display, eventually contained twelve buildings.

In 1944, the Boveys visited Virginia City for the first time, where original log buildings dating to the days of the Vigilantes still stood. Seeing their neglected state, the Boveys hated the thought of losing these landmarks forever. To attempt to preserve them and other historic buildings in the state, in 1944 Charlie and Sue founded the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. It was an idea that was ahead of its time, and the Boveys ended up funding most of the projects.

In 1945, the Boveys returned to Virginia City to try to preserve it. The venture lasted for the rest of their lives. They restored the old buildings, furnished them, and turned Virginia City into a living history exhibit.

Nevada City, Virginia City's sister town located one mile to the north, had dwindled to only a dozen buildings by the 1950s. These buildings also concerned the Boveys, so they purchased the area to protect what was left. In 1959, the Great Falls Fair Board decided that "Old Town" would have to be moved. Attempts to find a new location in Great Falls failed, so the buildings were disassembled and rebuilt on the back streets of Nevada City. Other historic structures that had to be moved to prevent their destruction were added during later years. The Boveys' restorations preserved not only Montana's architectural heritage, but also many aspects of the culture of the mining era, giving visitors a more detailed look at the past than is possible in a regular museum.

Charles Bovey was elected to the Montana legislature in 1943. Sue accompanied him to Helena for the sessions, and they became involved in the Montana Historical Society. He served on the MHS board from 1948 to 1961, when she replaced him.

Charles Bovey died in Nevada City on June 9, 1978. His death was a blow from which Sue never fully recovered, nevertheless she remained active in numerous organizations, including MHS and the Cascade County Historical Society, and she supported many more until her death.

The Boveys made a tremendous contribution to the state through their lifelong work and dedication to preserving Montana history, especially in Virginia City and Nevada City. They served Montana well, leaving a legacy for Montanans to cherish and continue.

Montana Historical Society Foundation Receives Grants

Two Montana businesses have made more things possible at the Montana Historical Society by donating money to the Montana Historical Society Foundation. The two grants will help fund activities and programs at MHS, such as educational services and the acquisition of important Montana historical artifacts and papers, which the state is often unable to fund.

To celebrate Montana's centennial, Montana Power Company has given the Society $50,000 from the MPCO/Entech Foundation, with provisions that could provide matching funds of as much as $150,000. They will match dollar for dollar, up to $50,000, contributions by active and retired employees, officers, and directors of the Montana Power Company. In addition, $140,000 of the MPCO/Entech gift could be eligible for federal matching dollars from the National Endowment for the Humanities. This could add another $46,600 to the Society's Foundation fund.

The second grant is from the First Bank System Foundation, which has approved $48,000 as part of the permanent endowment of the Foundation. The proceeds will come to the Society over the next three years, and they will also be matched by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

For more information about the Foundation, call or write Ralph Little, Montana Historical Society Foundation, 101 N. Last Chance Gulch, Helena, Montana 59601 (449-3770).

Talks Elucidate Exhibit

Visiting scholars will talk Tuesdays at 7:00 p.m. in the Haynes Auditorium on topics relating to the major themes of the Montana Homeland exhibit.

| | |
|---|---|
| January 17 | "The First People"—Les Davis, Professor of Anthropology, Montana State University, Bozeman |
| January 24 | "The Indians' World"—Joe Medicine Crow, Crow Tribal Historian, Lodge Grass |
| January 31 | "A New Country"—Bob Swartout, Professor of History, Carroll College, Helena |
| February 7 | "Boom Years"—Bill Lang, Editor and Historian, Montana Historical Society, Helena |
| February 14 | "Hard Times"—Richard Roeder, History Lecturer, Carroll College, Helena |
| February 21 | "Reflections on Montana"—Bill Bevis, Professor of English, University of Montana, Missoula |

Cost to attend the series is $20.00. College credit is available from Carroll College. To sign up or for more information get in touch with Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620 (444-4794).

FROM THE EDITOR'S FILE

Quilts for the Centennial Quilt Show competition must be received at the Montana Historical Society by February 3, 1989. If you need forms to submit with your entry, get in touch with Moneisa Magnuson, Box 308, East Helena, Montana 59635, Jane Addy, 814 Broadway, Helena, 59601, or Doris Hitt, 2111 Livingston Avenue, Helena, 59601.

Michael Korn, director of the Montana Folklife Project, has announced that the program is starting a newsletter. If you have articles to submit on folklife topics or announcements of events, send them to Korn by February 6, 1989, or drop him a postcard if you would like to receive the newsletter. The address is Montana Arts Council, 48 N. Last Chance Gulch, Helena, Montana 59620.

The Montana Oral History Association invites you to join their ranks. Membership entitles you to their biannual newsletter that will keep you informed about oral history activities in Montana and provide a place for you to share your own projects. Dues are $5.00 for individuals and $10.00 for institutions.

The Montana Historical Society will host the annual meeting of the Museum Association of Montana on April 27, 28, and 29, 1989. For more information write to Wes Hardin, Fort Missoula Historical Museum, Building 322, Fort Missoula, Missoula, Montana 59801.

The Chinook Centennial '89 Committee will sponsor a Nez Perce Trail Ride, a four and one-half day, eighty-nine mile trip by horse and wagon through the area traveled by Chief Joseph and the Nez Perce. The trip, which will last from June 30 through July 4, 1989, will begin south of Landusky on the Missouri River and end up in Chinook. A fee will be charged for meals, animal care, and other amenities provided by the Committee. For more information get in touch with LeRoy "Andy" Anderson, Box 1229, Chinook, Montana 59523 (357-3341 or 357-2072).

Are you interested in mining history from camp to mine, from miner to lawyer? Plans are afoot to organize a Mining History Association. Anyone who is interested is encouraged to get in touch with Duane A. Smith, Fort Lewis College, Durango, Colorado 81301 to place their name on the mailing list to get further information. Tap 'er light.

Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th-Documents
Helena, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Norman Bert, Eastern Montana College drama professor and playwright, has written Montana Times 1889, a play based on research in Montana's newspapers from 1889. The play is available to any interested theater group in the state and can be tailored to its home region, using items drawn from newspapers of a particular area.

The Virginia City Archives has been founded in the Thompson Hickman Library, according to Curator Timothy Gordon. Archive supporters are looking for photos and written documents on Alder Gulch and the area for inclusion or copying for the collections. If you have any materials or suggestions, write to Gordon at Box 42, Virginia City, Montana 59755.

MHS CALENDAR

| | |
|---|---|
| | MHS Exhibits |
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "The Stack Dominated Our Lives," through March 31 |
| Museum | Montana Homeland, permanent exhibition of Montana history |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |
| | Special Events |
| January 17-February 21Tuesdays, 7PM | Montana Homeland Lecture Series, Sponsored by Friends of the Society |
| March 1-29Wednesday, noon-1PM | Women's History Lecture Series, Sponsored by Friends of the Society and Montana Office of Public Instruction |
| May 13 | Montana History Day |
| | Winter Hours |
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays |

Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Group tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

S
978.6
H6m
v.26, no.3

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 31 1988
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

MONTANA POST

Volume 26 No. 3 | Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society | Autumn 1988

The Upper Yellowstone Country

15th Annual History Conference

In history and topography, the upper Yellowstone River Basin is a land of contrasts, encompassing the state's largest city as well as some of the wildest lands in the intermountain West. The rich heritage of this diverse region will be the focus of the fifteenth annual Montana History Conference at the Yellowstone Motor Inn in Livingston, November 3-5.

From prehistory to the present, the Yellowstone country has played an important role in western history. The conference will examine the natural and cultural history of the area that extends eastward from the high peaks of southcentral Montana and northwestern Wyoming through intermontane valleys, river breaks, and prairies.

Elliott W. Hunter, MHS Haynes Collection

Yellowstone National Park's history and geological features will be among the topics examined at the history conference. Above, driving along the Madison River, 1916.

Archaeologist Dave Schwab of the State Historic Preservation Office will moderate a session about recent research on the earliest inhabitants of the Yellowstone Valley. The Crow tribe's long and intimate relationship with its homelands is the subject of presentations by Janine Windy Boy and Barney Old Coyote of Little Big Horn Community College and other Native American cultural leaders.

Hot springs and geysers, hotels, resorts, and early park naturalists, interpreters, and promoters are among the topics to be examined and discussed in sessions on the colorful history of Yellowstone National Park, the birthplace of the national park idea and a natural preserve of unparalleled beauty.

Conference participants will also learn how overland trails, river thoroughfares, and the Great Northern and Milwaukee railroads brought settlers as well as tourists to the Yellowstone country. Mardell Plainfeather of the Custer Battlefield National Monument will give a Crow Indian's perspective of the famous encounter on the Little Bighorn, one of several presentations on regional military history.

Hank Fischer, Montana's representative from Defenders of Wildlife, will give the keynote address at the annual MHS awards banquet. He will discuss the controversial issue of reintroduc-

Continued on page 2

MONTANA HOMELAND

New MHS History Exhibit Opens

The Montana Historical Society's new permanent history exhibit, "Montana Homeland," will be opened to the public on September 17, 1988. Several thousand artifacts, documents, and photographs, which have been collected by the Society since its founding in 1865, have been brought together in a dynamic interpretation of Montana's past—how people lived, worked, played, raised families, and built communities.

"Montana Homeland," which takes the place of the old Formal Museum, was funded in part by major contributions from Arco, Inc., the Burlington Northern Foundation, the Ila B. Dousman Trust, the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust, the Institute of Museum Services, and the membership of the Montana Historical Society.

PLEASE RETURN

Continued from page 1

ing wolves to Yellowstone National Park.

Tom McGuane, author of Nobody's Angel, Something to Be Desired, and other bestselling fiction, will moderate a session on contemporary Montana writers and writing, deservedly the subject of recent national attention. Joining him will be William Kittredge, Mary Clearman Blew, and Bill Bevis.

Conference participants can also attend workshops on statehood centennial activities, guided tours of Livingston's commercial and residential districts, and a horsepacking demonstration at a nearby dude ranch.

Society members should receive their conference packets in mid-September. For more information, write or call the Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena MT 59620 (444-4697).

F. Jay Haynes

Livingston, Montana, 1894

Educational Resources Part of New History Museum

What would your home look like if you lived in Montana in the year 500 A.D.? If your family settled on the eastern prairies in 1930, what would you do for fun? What kind of job would you expect to have once the railroads made Montana's natural resources accessible to national markets?

Students visiting "Montana Homeland," the Montana Historical Society's new permanent history exhibit, can discover the answers to such questions by using unique educational resources developed by the Society's Education Department. The materials are based on a field trip to the Museum, in which students study themes specifically related to "Montana Homeland."

Students will work on activities selected from six study booklets. "Montana Indians," "Home and Community," and "Work and Tools" are written for grades three through six. Secondary students use "Native Montanans: A State of Nations," "Coming of Age: Montana's Hometowns," and "Making a Living: Building Montana."

Students will also have the opportunity to take part in at least one activity for each section of the gallery. Museum guides will use projected slides and audiocassettes to enhance the activities, and students will handle several replicas of artifacts, such as tools, dolls, and Native American clothing.

"Education has been an integral part of the exhibit plan from the beginning," said MHS Education Curator Jennifer Jeffries Thompson. "We wanted to ensure an interpretive rather than a static exhibit, as well as one that was physically accessible and conducive to participation."

Education Curator Jennifer Jeffries Thompson with artifact replicas to be used as hands-on resources for students visiting the new history exhibit.

An Education Advisory Committee has helped Thompson design the educational resources for the new museum. Its members are Erv Winslow, Assistant Superintendent of Helena Schools; Murton McCluskey, Native American Curriculum Coordinator for Great Falls Public Schools; Marcella Hanson, teacher at Helena's Rossiter School; Sandy Barker, teacher at C. R. Anderson Middle School, Helena; and Hal Stearns, Jr., history teacher at Missoula's Sentinel High School and Montana Teacher of the Year in 1986. The curricular materials were written by Louise Porzig, Gifted and Talented Coordinator for Montana City Schools.

The field study program will be tested during the 1988-1989 school year. A small stipend is available to help teachers cover their expenses. For information, write or call the Education Department, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4794).

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Ellen Meloy; Circulation Manager: Chris Eby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

ISSN 0047-7958

Remembering Margaret Ewers

by Vivian Paladin

A wide circle of friends, colleagues, and admirers, especially those who share an interest in the history of the American West, were saddened to hear of the recent death in Arlington, Virginia, of Margaret E. (Marge) Ewers, wife of Dr. John C. Ewers. She died of the cancer she had battled valiantly for many months, months during which she kept up the traveling and research partnership with her husband as she had for over fifty years.

Margaret Dumville Ewers was born in Colon, Panama Canal Zone. She was graduated from Packer Collegiate Institute in Brooklyn, New York, and from the School of Business at Columbia University. In 1934, she married John C. Ewers, who had recently completed his doctoral studies in anthropology at Yale.

John Ewers's first employment as a field curator for the National Park Service involved a great deal of moving about—to Mississippi, New Jersey, California, and Georgia. In 1941, John was asked to plan and establish the Museum of the Plains Indian at Browning, Montana, an assignment that resulted in a deep relationship with and knowledge about the Indian people, especially the Blackfeet. The Ewerses spent over three years in Browning, and when John was called to military service Marge stood in for him as Curator/Director of the Museum, at the same time raising their two young daughters.

Marge and John Ewers

John Ewers's distinguished career as an Indian ethnologist at the Smithsonian Institution began in 1946 and continued until his retirement in 1979. But the pull to Montana and its history was always there, and because of it this writer and many others came to know, love, and learn from this remarkable couple. This was especially true at the Montana Historical Society, where John designed the Formal Museum in the early 1950s.

There were many "homecomings" for the Ewerses in Montana. A truly meaningful one was in 1986, when John gave one of his cogent, down-to-earth lectures at the Society. Marge was at his side, as she always had been. She had been there in a very practical way in more than 150 museums and archives in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Europe, always receiving credit for her work from her husband. The harvest of this research has been a great many books and articles, published by the Smithsonian, several university presses, and many professional journals, including Montana the Magazine of Western History.

In Arlington, where the Ewerses lived for over forty years, Marge was busy as an officer in the Phi Chi Theta Professional Business Women's Society and as a member of the American Association of University Women, the Potomac Corral of Westerners, and the National Cathedral Association.

Her daughter, Jane Peterson, who lives with her family in Bozeman, recently wrote that no vita can convey her mother's sincere interest in people and her willingness to guide and counsel, especially the young in her own and other families. In truth, Marge Ewers left something to cherish for all of us whose lives she touched. For many it is an unforgettable image of a woman who shared, without reservation or pretension, the life and career of her partner.

Memorials in Marge Ewers's name can be sent to the Arlington Hospital Foundation, 1701 N. George Mason Drive, Arlington, Virginia 22205.

---

Vivian Paladin was editor of Montana the Magazine of Western History from 1966 to 1978.

MHS Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Bequest of Bernice BooneHelena | 12 pieces of pottery from the Archie Bray Foundation, sewing cabinet, picture frame |
| Francis LongSan Francisco | Silver-mounted buffalo horns, dolls, and dolls' clothing |
| Karma AlfredsonHelena | 1920s women's and children's clothing |
| Maxine LindnerAuburn, Washington | Two C. M. Russell calendars from the Mint Saloon, 1912 |
| World Museum of MiningButte | Miner's clothing basket, helmet, and other articles of clothing |
| Mark and Mary NolteBillings | Two washing machines, ephemera, ribbons |
| Vernia R. MikesellRed Lodge | Two World War I souvenir pillow cases |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. Fay Loveall | 23 photographs and postcards, views of people and places in the upper Flathead Valley, 1892-1910s |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Ethel I. BurchToledo, Ohio | That Thirsty Land, by Ethel Burch; homesteading history of the Malta area, 1916-1929 |
| David GrangerNew York, New York | Three framed maps: Asher & Adams' Idaho and Montana, Western Portion, 1873; Map of the Territory of Montana, 1878, W. W. De Lacy; Etats-Unis (Etats de Ouest) from a nineteenth century French atlas |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Lila RobinsonMalta | Cassette recordings from dedication ceremonies of Fred Robinson Bridge |
| Mary NolteBillings | John S. M. Neill Papers; Montana Rapid Transit Company Records, 1910-1925; First Presbyterian Church of Helena Ladies Aid Society Records, 1895-1928 |
| Marian Covington EstateHelena | Marian Covington Papers; Montana Missouri Valley Authority Records, 1934-1956; Clyde McLemore Papers, 1931-1951; Jerome Locke Papers |
| Eva SpauldingMargaret DavisHelenaJoan GallesBillings | League of Women Voters Montana Records, 1966-1985; LWV Billings Records, 1956-1985 |

The Rich Landscape of Yellowst

Yellowstone National Park, the world's first national park and a place of spectacular natural wonders, is a fantastic and surprising landscape of names. Since the time of the fur trappers, who called it the place "where hell bubbled up," names have been laid down on Yellowstone. These names—and the histories of their origins—are described in Lee H. Whittlesey's Yellowstone Place Names, published in September by the Montana Historical Society Press.

The park's rivers, mountains, creeks, hot springs, geysers, lakes, and valleys were named after famous and not-so-famous personalities, after wildly imaginative images suggested by thermal features, after incidents of historical and anecdotal record, and after the flora and fauna of this magnificent region. Whittlesey, a seasonal ranger at the park and a recent graduate of the University of Oklahoma law school, describes the fascinating origins of over 650 of these names. His documentation is the result of twelve years of research in government records, tourist narratives, old guidebooks, and newspaper articles.

Illustrated with historical photographs and reference maps, Yellowstone Place Names will introduce everyone—tourists and devotees of Park history alike—to a Yellowstone they have not seen before.

On these pages are a few excerpts from the many intriguing place name descriptions found in the MHS Press's Yellowstone Place Names, by Lee H. Whittlesey.

---

Devil's Kitchen

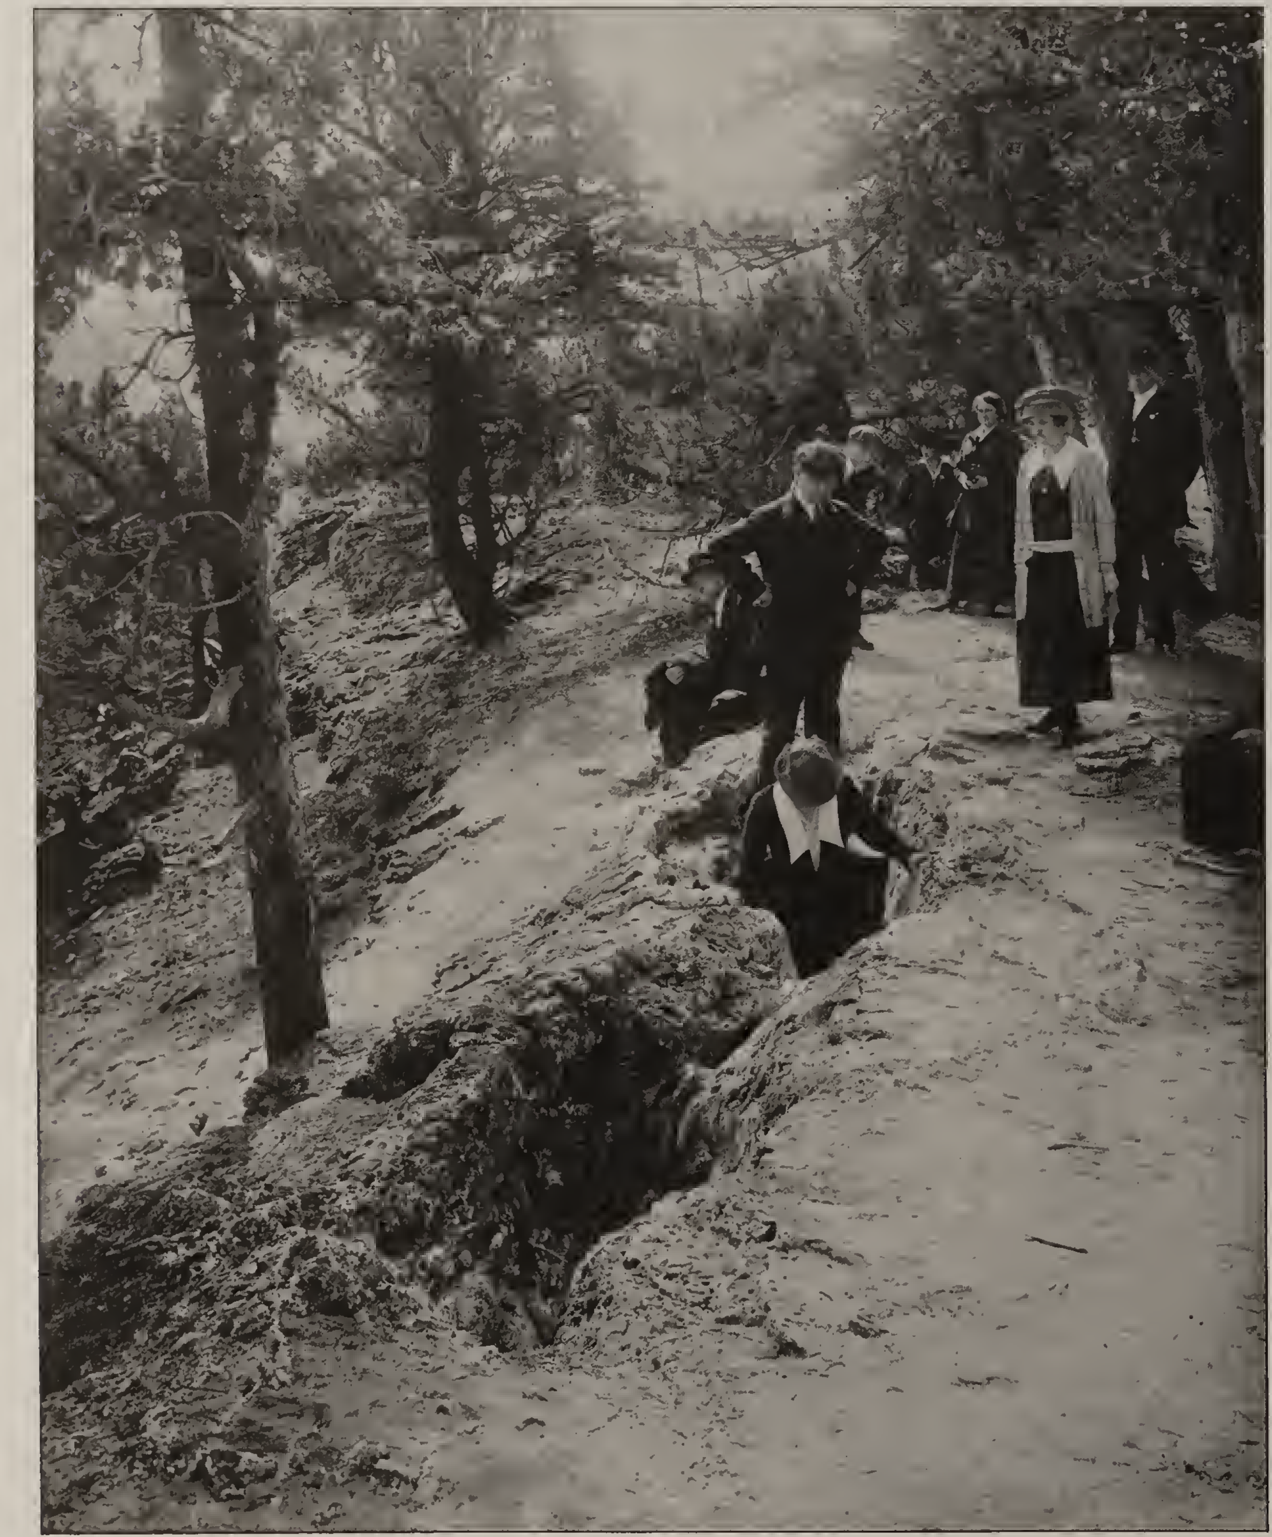
The cave known as Devil's Kitchen was formed from an extinct hot spring located east of Bath Lake in the Mammoth Hot Springs area. Now rarely visited, this cave was a popular attraction during the early days of the Park. Apparently, Charles Millard, a tourist from Fort Ellis (near present-day Bozeman, Montana) discovered and named the cave. In 1884, Park tour operator G. L. Henderson built a ladder into the Devil's Kitchen, so he could lead visitors into the cave. By 1925, two women had opened an ice cream and soft drink stand there. They built a small log shelter for their business, which was used during the 1930s as the actual entrance to Devil's Kitchen. The Park Service closed the area in 1939 when it became aware of the dangers of carbon dioxide gases in the cave.



MHS Haynes Collection

Visitors descend into the Devil's Kitchen, ca. 1915.

Gumper Spring

Located about 100 yards west of Sour Lake and Moose Pool in the Mud Volcano area, this new hot spring developed in 1974. Park naturalists named the spring because of the thumping, "gumping" action of its churning mud. Some 70 feet in diameter, the Gumper claimed a bison in 1984.

Handkerchief Pool

One of the most famous thermal features in Yellowstone, this small spring in the Black Sand Basin of Upper Geyser Basin is no longer accessible by walkway. The pool got its name from visitors or Park employees around the turn of the century. Park visitor Mrs. James Hamilton described it in 1888:

> It was a small pool that would suck the water down and in a few minutes it would come gushing out again. If you put a handkerchief in the handkerchief would be sucked down and would come up in a few minutes, nice and clean.

Over the years, hundreds of Yellowstone visitors watched their handkerchiefs go down into the pool and then come up again. The pool became so famous that scientists came to the Park to study it. By 1906, tour guides were telling visitors that this was where the devil took in washing, and by 1913 some were calling it the "Devil's Laundry."

Sometime in late 1926 or early 1927, Handkerchief Pool became dormant. Nevertheless, visitors continued to throw handkerchiefs and other objects into the pool. On June 21, 1929, Ranger Carlos Davis removed 1.5 bushels of foreign objects from Handkerchief Pool, including, "one broken

ne National Park Place Names

bottle, portion of a spark plug, over one hundred hair pins, nails, stove bolts and nuts, a small horse shoe, badges, about one dozen handkerchiefs and bits of materials not belonging to the surrounding formation" and U.S. coins totaling $1.98. This cleaning somewhat restored the circulation of the pool, but it still remained dormant even with additional work in 1933. In 1950, Park Geologist George Marler pried a log out of its vent, and water jetted once more into the bowl of Handkerchief Pool.

Mount Everts

This high plateau east of Mammoth Hot Springs was first called the "Great Plateau" by Lt. G. C. Doane in 1870. In late 1870 or early 1871, Gen. Henry D. Washburn applied the Mount Everts name to this plateau on the map he drew of the Yellowstone area. . . .

Everts, a member of the 1870 Washburn expedition, was lost in the Yellowstone wilderness for 37 days. As fellow expedition member Lt. Doane wrote:

> he [Everts] subsisted on thistle roots boiled in the springs. . . . Twice he went five days without food, and three days without water, in that country which is a network of streams and springs. . . . [When he was found] a heavy snowstorm had extinguished his fire; his supply of thistle-roots was exhausted; he was partially deranged and perishing with cold. . . . It was a miraculous escape, considering the utter helplessness of the man, lost in a forest wilderness, and with the storms of winter at hand.

Two old mountaineers, Jack Baronett and George Pritchett, found Everts on the west side of Crescent Hill just east of the canyon known as The Cut. Everts was ungrateful for his rescue and refused to pay the rewards that had been offered. He received Jack Baronett so coldly that Baronett said years later that "he wished he had let the son-of-a-gun roam" (Helena Independent, February 6, 1887). The plant that Everts ate to survive his ordeal grows abundantly in Yellowstone and is today known as the Everts Thistle.

Yellowstone National Park

Many of Yellowstone's features were named by members of early government surveys. Above, the Hayden expedition in camp, 1872.

MHS Haynes Collection

Tourists at Handkerchief Pool, 1917

Christmas Tree Rock

This large boulder sits in the center of the Firehole River about one-quarter mile above Firehole Cascades on the Grand Loop Road. The rock was probably named during the 1960s by Park tour bus drivers for the single lodgepole pine that grows out of it. When tour guides pass the rock, they often tell tourists about "Christmas in Yellowstone," which Park employees celebrate each August 25. The tradition began in about 1940, when tourists at Old Faithful were stranded in one of Yellowstone's summer snowstorms. Looking for something to do, they decided to celebrate Christmas.

---

Yellowstone Place Names may be ordered for $11.95 plus $1.00 shipping from the Museum Store, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620.

Recording Montana—Eric White

Being a forest ranger sixty-seven years ago took more than a few skills. You had to know how to mark timber, fight fires, build trails, ski, ride horses and pack mules, check cattle, and file reports. Eric White of Helena recalls that as a young man with very little training in this kind of work, he was the most unlikely candidate ever to be hired as a forest ranger. But he ended up working for the Forest Service in Montana for thirty-six years.

Because of his long career as a ranger during the first half of this century (1921-1957), White was an ideal candidate for the Montana Historical Society's Montanans at Work oral history project. Oral Historian Laurie Mercier interviewed White in 1983. The following is an excerpt from that interview, recalling White's start with the Forest Service.

Eric White (center) with rangers Leonard Erickson (left) and A. B. Gunderson (right) measuring snow at Taylor Fork, Gallatin National Forest, 1936.

White: [I saw] an ad in the paper for a civil service forest ranger examination in Billings. I decided I would take it. I had a good friend [who agreed to take the exam, too]. And we brushed up on some things, especially on surveying and acreages and all that kind of stuff. I'd been around cattle, I knew something about that. We took that examination and we both passed. Imagine that. I'd never seen a National Forest in my life. I got all kinds of requests, to go on as a ranger. I didn't know which one to take, so I picked the one closest to Yellowstone Park.

I got assigned to the Dome Mountain District [Absaroka National Forest]. It took in all the National Forest land on the east side of the Yellowstone River from Gardiner down to about Chico Hot Springs. . . . All that country was in my district. I was requested to report to the supervisor's office in Livingston, Montana, on the first of May, 1921, and that happened to be a Sunday and I wondered if that supervisor knew what he was doing, but I got on a train and came over to Livingston. I went up to the office the next morning and there he was.

There was a man and his wife staying [at my assigned station in Carbella] when I came. They weren't in the civil service. He was just a temporary man. They'd been there for a long time [and] I think they just hated to see me come, just hated to have to leave. At any rate, I stayed with them for two weeks until he could show me the district, for I didn't know anything. He took me over a timber sale area where they was selling National Forest timber. One had to mark the timber with a blaze on pole and stump with a U.S. die. And he showed me how to do it. He was showing me the different trees but he pronounced fir "fire;" "fire tree," that's how he said it. When we got back to the ranger station afterwards and he said something about fir tree, and I said, "I wish you'd show me a fir tree." I didn't know what a fir tree was. He said, "You don't know what a fir tree is?" He says, "I want to tell you something, young man, never be afraid to say you don't know something. . . . Tell people you don't know and you'll find out." So he showed me what a fir tree was.

I bought a horse [and a saddle] and they had one of those water-power washing machines. . . . And that's where I started.

Little Joins MHS as Foundation Director

On August 1, Ralph Little began his new job as the Montana Historical Society's Development Officer and Foundation Director. Little's immediate task will be to help the Society raise its share of a challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The management of the "Keep History Alive" campaign, begun in 1987, will also be a priority. To date about $1 million has been raised from private sources; the goal is to raise $5 million by 1991.

Little plans to develop long-range strategies for Society endowments, grants, annual fund drives, and other fund-raising activities. A Foundation Board of Directors will assist with the development plan.

Before coming to the Society, Little was a managing partner for a Boulder, Colorado, consulting firm that designed finance and management plans for academic and nonprofit groups and for private businesses.

"We are delighted to have Ralph Little join our staff," said Robert Archibald, MHS Director. "He will help us make the smooth transition between the special campaigns of the past few years and a broad-based, long-range development plan for the Society."

For more information about the Foundation, write or call Ralph Little, Director, Montana Historical Society Foundation, 101 North Last Chance Gulch, Helena 59601 (449-3770).

Ralph Little, MHS Foundation Director

Mark Brown's Library Is Donated to MHS

An outstanding collection of Western Americana has come to the Montana Historical Society, the gift of Mark Brown, who died in Iowa last February at the age of eighty-seven.

Although Brown was by profession a soil scientist and military officer, he spent much of his life researching and writing about the West. Among his published works are two histories of Miles City photographer L. A. Huffman, written with William R. Felton; The Plainsmen of the Yellowstone: A History of the Yellowstone Basin (1961); and The Flight of the Nez Perce (1967). During the 1950s and 1960s, Brown did a great deal of his research at the Society's Library, working with librarian Virginia Walton.

The core of Brown's library—over a thousand volumes—is a sizable representation of nineteenth and early twentieth century works, including a first edition of Wyatt Earp: Frontier Marshall, by Stuart Lake, and books by J. Frank Dobie, Stanley Vestal, George Bird Grinnell, and Frank Linderman. Some of the volumes bear inscriptions from the authors.

Because of Brown's generosity over the years, the Society is fortunate to possess a rare, unillustrated manuscript of "The Horse," a Russell piece that later appeared in Trails Plowed Under. Also in the collection is Russell's copy of the 1894 edition of How the Buffalo Lost His Crown, in which his illustrations so overshadowed the text, that the author, John H. Beacom, is not mentioned on the title page.

Brown's interest in artist Charlie Russell is apparent in the collection's greatest rarities. He kept turn-of-the-century popular magazines such as Outing, McClure's Magazine, and Scribner's, which contain first printings of Russell stories and illustrations, and purchased several books from the Cowboy Artist's personal library.

Along with the many volumes from his personal library, Brown also donated paintings, sketches, illustrated letters, photographs, and personal papers.

During his more than thirty years of association with the Society, Brown infused his work with a great love for the West and for the Northern Plains. His generosity will be appreciated in generations to come as students, researchers, and others use this important collection.

For many years Mark Brown used the MHS Library for historical research. He donated much of his own collection of Western Americana to the Society.

Montanans Win at National History Day

Gene Fischer, Helena Independent Record

National History Day winners from C. R. Anderson School, Helena. Top, left to right: Nancy Marshall, Erica Zins. Bottom, left to right: Joe Bryan, Tim Racicot, Brian McGraw.

For the second year in a row, Montana students have come home with top honors from the National History Day competition. Students at Helena's C. R. Anderson Middle School were awarded a $1,000 first prize for "Campbell Farming Corporation: Growth of a Giant," which describes an early "scientific farm" near Hardin. The winning team—Joseph Bryan, Erica Zins, Timothy Racicot, and Brian McGraw—was under the direction of teachers Sandy and Gary Barker.

Nancy Marshall, also a C. R. Anderson student, received an Outstanding Entry Award for her project about the construction of the Beartooth Highway. "REA Enlightens Montana," by Joel Carson and Lance Rieber of Cayuse Prairie School in Kalispell, received a special award for a project with an agricultural theme.

Over 250,000 students participate in National History Day, which is held each June at the University of Maryland. Students first compete in their state's contest, and winners advance to the national event. Montana History Day, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society's Education Department, is held in early spring. For information about next year's competition, please call or write Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4794).

Centennial Properties Sought

The State Historic Preservation Office is seeking information about the places "where statehood began"—the homes, farms, ranches, mines, businesses, and schools that were built during Montana's territorial period. The information will be used to compile a list of Centennial Sites honoring the statehood centennial in 1989.

Centennial property owners are invited to submit information and historic or current photographs of any structure built between 1864 and 1889 or any site developed and used during that time. Selections for the list will be made on the basis of age.

Centennial Site forms, which are available from SHPO or the State Centennial Office, must be submitted by October 1, 1988, to the State Historic Preservation Office, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-7715).

FROM THE EDITOR'S FILE

Due to staffing constraints, the Montana Historical Society Library will not be open on weekends in the winter. The Library is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and is closed weekends and holidays.

Several local histories of note have been published in recent months. Before the railroads were built, frontier entrepreneurs and settlers came to Montana by a steamboat route that ended at the commercial port of Fort Benton on the Missouri River. The early fur-trade and steamboat era are described in Fort Benton: World's Innermost Port, a 405-page history written by Joel Overholser, newspaperman and local historian. The publication is available for $25 from the author at P.O. Box 69, Fort Benton 59442.

Centennial Roundup: A Collection of Stories Celebrating the 100th Anniversary of the Incorporation of Miles City, Montana is an illustrated history of the growth of this eastern Montana town, now a major agricultural center. The 87-page hardbound book is available for $7.95 from the Miles City Star, Miles City 59301.

Valleys of the Prickly Pear, written by Vivian Paladin, Floy Synness Peterson, and Frances Isham Synness, examines the businesses, schools, and pioneering families of the Helena Valley. The valley is adjacent to one of the state's most important mining, political, and commercial centers, and the history of its people and institutions contains valuable insights into the development of western Montana. The 328-page history is illustrated with historical photographs and drawings by Bob Morgan. Valleys of the Prickly Pear is available for $35 from The Little Red Schoolhouse, Inc., 1635 Sierra Road East, Helena 59601.

The Daniels County Museum in Scobey has begun a formal process of collecting and conserving local archival information, made possible in part by a grant from the Montana Cultural Trust. The archives include family papers; organization, club, and business records; audiovisual documents; maps and architectural drawings; pamphlets; and pictorial records relating to the history of Flaxville, Four Buttes, Scobey, Whitetail, and other northeastern Montana communities. For information, write or call the Daniels County Museum Archives, P.O. Box 133, Scobey 59263 (487-5559).

1865

Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th-Documents
Helena, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

MHS CALENDAR

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Greetings from Montana: Montana Postcards," through October 31"The Stack Dominated Our Lives," November 4 through March 31 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| September 16-18 | Grand Opening of "Montana Homeland," permanent exhibition of Montana history |
| November 3-5 | Fifteenth Annual Montana History Conference, Livingston |
| December 3 | Holiday Home Tour, sponsored by Original Governor's Mansion Board and MHS |

Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society Museum and Galleries | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Montana Historical Society Library and Archives | Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed weekends and holidays |
| Original Governors Mansion N. Ewing, Helena | Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sundays, Mondays, and holidays. Closed January through March except for tours made by appointment. |

Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Group tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

S
978.6
H6m
V.26 no1

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
APR 4 1988

Vol. 26 No. 1 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Spring 1988

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Indian Heritage Enriches Exhibit

Native American culture plays a significant role in Montana's past, and the Montana Historical Society will integrate this heritage in its renovated Montana history exhibition, scheduled to open in the fall of 1988. The new exhibit will show over two thousand artifacts in a remodeled wing of the building, telling the story of Montana from prehistory to World War II.

The exhibit begins with the origins of people in prehistoric Montana twenty thousand years ago and describes how early hunter-gatherer methods changed with the introduction of guns and horses in the late 1700s. Changes in traditions during the reservation period at the turn of the century and cultural differences among the various tribes will be illustrated. The exhibit will include over three hundred Indian artifacts—tools, clothing, games, toys, horse gear, weaponry, and other objects from the museum collection.

Society staff have taken a cooperative approach to the research and design of this part of the exhibit. During the early stages of planning, they sought the advice of cultural consultants from the Montana tribes. The consultants reviewed the preliminary designs for the exhibit space, told traditional stories, described the cultural significance of the artifacts, and explained how to present objects in traditional ways.

Beaded Cree gloves made in the 1930s. The inscriptions on the cuffs say "Jimmy Denny," the owner's name.

Much of Native American tradition is in the form of stories that describe events and beliefs. Recognizing that oral tradition is an integral element of Native American culture, the Society also collected tape recordings of stories about how the world has come to be, recorded by tribal storytellers. Visitors to the museum will be able to listen to these tapes as an introduction to the new exhibit.

The tribal consultants identified individuals and places in several historic photographs in the Society's archives. They examined other artifacts in the collection, including those that have come to the museum with very little documentation. Nadine Morsette, a high school teacher from Rocky Boy, identified the original owner of an artifact as "Jimmy Denny" by interpreting the name inscribed in Cree on a pair of beaded gloves from the 1930s.

Following the advice of the tribal advisers, museum staff designed the presentation of artifacts and, in some cases, decided not to exhibit objects of religious significance. The consultants explained how to store the artifacts in appropriate ways, including wrapping them in cloth and placing them in traditional containers.

Tribal consultants and Society staff agree that the cooperative approach to the new Montana history exhibit has enriched the exhibit and has provided the foundation for other long-lasting benefits for historic preservation.

Oral Histories Document New Deal

Montana's leading industries—agriculture and mining—were hit hard by the Great Depression. The agricultural sector suffered from plummeting prices and a severe drought, and by 1931, half of the state's fifty-six counties had filed for assistance.

The election of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933 and his creation of the "alphabet agencies" for economic recovery were to forever change the relationship between Montana and the federal government. The state ranked second in the nation in per capita receipt of New Deal dollars.

Although some programs were temporary, designed to put the unemployed to work, a more permanent legacy is seen in the many bridges, fire lookouts, and other public structures built by Civilian Conservation Corps, Works Progress Administration, and Public Works Administration labor and in the restructuring of agricultural practices in the form of grazing districts, erosion control, and rural electrification.

A legacy is also found in the memory of the many Montanans who lived during the New Deal period. As part of a special two-year project, the Society's Oral History Office is seeking interviews with participants or observers of Montana's New Deal from 1932 to 1940.

Last summer, the Oral History Office conducted fifty-five interviews with former workers and residents of the Fort Peck Dam project. By June 1989, it hopes to have completed nearly a hundred New Deal interviews.

Civilian Conservation Corps camp at Many Glacier, Glacier National Park

Interviews are now sought with people involved in agriculture (farm and livestock programs, resettlement program, rural electrification, conservation projects), commerce (National Industrial Recovery Act), culture (writers, artists, musicians, and theater projects), Indian reservations (tribal reorganization and Indian New Deal projects), labor (formation or recreation of local unions after passage of the Wagner Act), work projects (CCC, WPA, and others), relief (local and federal direct relief programs, such as the Federal Emergency Relief Act), or state and county governments (all programs).

Narrators need not have positive memories of those times; many, in fact, have been critical of the New Deal's aims and legacies. The oral historian is particularly interested in locating women who worked in WPA sewing rooms, administrators of state and county relief aid and work projects, assistants to state and national politicians and officials instigating or lobbying for various projects, and agricultural field personnel.

If you know of someone in your community who should be interviewed, call or write Laurie Mercier, Oral History Office, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4779).

Who Are MHS Special Members?

Membership in the Montana Historical Society is a way to help the Society preserve our shared history. The financial contributions that come from members support special projects and maintain the high quality of the Society's collections and programs. There are two types of membership in the Society: members and special members.

Members of the Society receive Montana the Magazine of Western History, the most widely read magazine of its kind in the country, and the Montana Post, the Society's quarterly newsletter. Subscription rates are $18 a year or $30 for two years.

Special members have given the Society additional, tax-deductible contributions. There are four levels of special members: Patron ($600 a year), Sustaining ($250 a year), Contributing ($100 a year), and Supporting ($35 a year). Patron, Sustaining, and Contributing members are acknowledged in each issue of Montana, and all special members are listed in the magazine once a year.

Special members receive Montana and the Post and a 15 per cent discount on items purchased in the Museum Store, which has one of the best selections of Montana literature and books on western history in the region. The store offers a mail order service through its catalogue, which is sent annually to all members. Special members also receive invitations to exhibit openings, the annual Montana History Conference, and other special events.

If you need more information about membership and its benefits, call or write the Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4708).

Meeting Room Dedicated to MacGilvra

by Vivian A. Paladin

It was an evening for trading remembrances, telling stories, and for sharing a remarkable man with some who never knew him. On January 7, 1988, a redesigned and refurnished meeting room in the Society's building was dedicated to the memory of E. E. "Boo" MacGilvra of Butte. The dedication came as the Board of Trustees held its January meeting, exactly eight years after MacGilvra—MHS board member for over a quarter-century—attended his final meeting and for the last time lent to the Society the wisdom, humor, and selfless dedication for which he was so well known.

Joining members of the Board, Society Director Robert Archibald, and members of the Society staff were people who had not only made donations to make the renovation of the room possible, but who also knew Boo MacGilvra especially well. They included MacGilvra's nephew, Robert E. MacGilvra, and his wife, Bette, of Conrad, Montana.

The dedication began on an appropriately informal but moving note with remarks by Wilbur P. Werner of Cut Bank, who is still a member of the Board of Trustees and was MacGilvra's close friend. Instead of the formal bronze plaque so often unveiled on such occasions, Werner displayed a fine soft pencil portrait of Boo, created by Helena artist Bob Morgan, who was the Society's curator throughout MacGilvra's tenure on the Board. As editor of Montana when Boo was on the Board, I wrote the text that accompanies the portrait (see inset).

Morgan and I not only shared our memories of Boo MacGilvra and remembered his many contributions to the Society, but we also inspired others in the audience to share theirs. A number of MacGilvra's famous stories—which ranged from ranching, storekeeping, and negotiation with Indian tribes to politics and Montana history—were recounted. But it was difficult even for those who knew him well to define him, to remember the many facets of his colorful personality and still convey the effects of his devotion to Montana, its history, and its people. There was general agreement, however, that the tasteful renovation of the room in which he had spent so many hours going about the business of the Society—without a doubt his favorite cause—is and will remain a fitting memorial.

Vivian A. Paladin was editor of Montana the Magazine of Western History from 1966 to 1978.

E. E. "Boo" MacGilvra
1893-1980

For well over twenty years, this legendary man from Butte, Montana, attended meetings in this room, most of them meetings of the Board of Trustees of the Montana Historical Society, which he served as active member and President. He attended every meeting of his tenure, including one in February, 1980, only a month before his death at the age of 87.

Born in Baraboo, Wisconsin, Everett Edwards MacGilvra was known as "Boo" as far back as he could remember. He grew up as the closest friend of Dick Ringling, son of one of the founders of the Ringling Brothers Circus, which had its origins in Baraboo. The two boys traveled with the circus for eight seasons, with Boo's aunt along as a tutor, and various points in Montana were on the itinerary. In 1916, after his graduation from the University of Minnesota, the young man from Wisconsin had a chance to see Montana again, and it was home to him for the rest of his life. He first worked at a gold mine in the Little Rockies in northeastern Montana, did some ranching, and ran general stores in that region before moving to Polson in 1933. It was here that, on a virtual dare in the depths of the Depression, he ran for the Montana Senate. He won a seat and served two terms in Helena, followed by many more as a lobbyist for many causes, including, most importantly for him and for us, the Montana Historical Society.

In later years, Boo MacGilvra made his home in Butte, but he traveled widely, his legendary humor, his pungent sayings, his enthusiasms for and his contributions to his adopted state making him one of the most unforgettable Montanans ever. It is eminently appropriate that this room, where he spent so many productive hours on its behalf, is dedicated to his memory.—Vivian A. Paladin

This text accompanies the portrait of Boo MacGilvra in the third floor meeting room at the Society.

Montana Historical Society, 225 N.
Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Ellen Meloy; Circulation Manager: Chris Eby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

ISSN 0047-7958

The Real Brother: The Ja

by Bob Clark
Head, Archives and Library

Historians are trained to be skeptical. They like to be able to turn to original sources, trusting no one's secondhand word. They are now able to scrutinize the original documents of one of Montana's most fabled pioneer accounts. The diaries of James Stuart, kept during the ill-fated "Yellowstone Expedition" of 1863, have come to the Montana Historical Society Archives as a gift from Joan Holter of Helena.

The three leather-covered pocket journals apparently went to James's younger brother, Granville, after James died from liver disease in 1873, at the age of 41. Granville, the more literary if less enterprising of the brothers, had edited the diaries for Volume I of the Contributions to the Historical Society of Montana, published in 1876. The Contributions version has been the reference used ever since.

Presumably the original diaries stayed with Granville, whose own extensive papers were eventually scattered as far away as Yale and Brigham Young universities. Fortunately, James's diaries went only as far as Great Falls where, at an unknown date, Jeff Holter purchased them from a private collector.

The diaries record the "expedition" of fifteen men, led by James Stuart, who set off from Bannack on April 9, 1863, to prospect and stake out real estate claims in the Yellowstone River region. While the men were prospecting their way up the Big Horn River, their camp was attacked by a sizable party of Crow warriors on the night of May 12. Two of the men were fatally wounded. The rest escaped south to the Oregon Trail and returned to Bannack by way of Idaho on June 22. A smaller group, which had originally intended to accompany the expedition, also encountered Indians; sidetracked, they discovered gold at Alder Gulch instead.

Granville, who was not on the expedition, polished up his brother's account for the Contributions version. In 1876, only a few of even the new breed of academically-trained historians would have had the meticulous concern for fidelity to an original demanded by today's editors, and Granville was not a professional historian.

He made the diaries read more smoothly by rewriting fragments into complete sentences and by occasionally replacing slang. "Plunder" was changed to "baggage," for example. He quietly corrected his brother's most common grammatical failing: James's inveterate "I seen" became "I saw." He supplied the names of geographic features only cryptically mentioned in the original, usually without indicating that he had altered them. He noted, however, that James never got around to writing a fuller account, and thus we are assured that changes in the published text belong to the editor.

Granville also removed evidence of several group misdemeanors. He deletes James's remark that the start of the expedition was held up while some of the party waited for others "to finish their spree in B city." The published entry for April 28, in which James wrote, "About one hour before sundown, while we were enjoying our opium with dignity," has the

James Stuart, 1832-1873

Granville Stuart, 1834-1918

nes Stuart Diaries of 1863

party merely "lying around camp resting after the fatigues of the day."

For the sake of brevity, Granville deleted a nearly two-page inventory of items stolen from camp by Indians on that opium-clouded evening. He also eliminated a list of the names of campsites, an omission that makes the original diaries especially valuable for tracing the party's route. But actual excisions, or even euphemistic changes of diction, are rare. Instead, the diaries expose the substantial additions made to the published version, particularly in the recounting of the catastrophic attack on the camp.

It is not uncommon for a diary to be most laconic just where action is the hottest, and all the more so if the danger is still present when the diarist finds the time to make his entry. Undoubtedly, Granville did not want to leave the account of such a climactic moment as sparse as James had originally told it. Samuel Hauser, another member of the expedition, had already provided a long account of the fight, marked clearly as a "Note." Why did Granville embellish James's text?

The change may have been to soften, if not obscure, an unbecoming callousness suggested by James's very brief entry. One of the party, Ephraim Bostwick, was so badly wounded he could not ride. Hauser, in his extended note, and Granville, in his additions to the text of the diary, give elaborate descriptions of Bostwick fending off their entreaties and heroically insisting that they leave him behind to take a few enemies with him. When Bostwick shoots himself instead, they are properly horrified. James's original entry shows no hesitation, no such surprise:

> Bostick wanted us to leave him his pistol. we done so. and a few minutes after we started he commited suicide.

Granville did not delete any critical information from the diaries. Many of his additions are useful, and some may have come from talking with James about the events. However, the literary veneer of improved grammar, respectable diction, and added detail dilutes an impression which the original strongly conveys—a matter-of-fact toughness in brother James that made him the natural as well as the elected leader of the expedition. Together, James's original diaries and Granville's published version give historians greater insight into the characters of Montana's Stuart brothers.

James Stuart wrote his diary in pencil in three small leather-covered volumes. In the entry shown in the photo on the left, he discusses the drawbacks of trail cuisine: "Had bread & butter for dinner. . . . After dinner we traveled about 12 ms. & camped because it was so very dusty and windy that nobody liked to drive the packhorses. seen the track of an antelope. I would like to have his ribs to roast for supper."

MHS Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Leo BenolkenBozeman | Railroad artifacts |
| Betty Ann EvansNew Burn, North Carolina | Two canvases with Blackfeet pictographs |
| John and Ellen CoxHelena | Window and two doors from the St. James African Methodist Episcopal Church, Helena |
| Hal WaldropButte | Noodle-making machine and other items from from the Mai Wah Noodle Parlor, Butte |
| Bob RichardsAvon | Set of Studebaker harnesses |
| Elinor PoindexterNew York, New York | November, oil on canvas, by Joseph Stefanelli |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Dorothy R. SmithRosebud | Fort Keogh letterbook, 1883-1888; photographs of U.S. Range Livestock Experiment Station, 1924-1925 |
| Montana Cattlemen's Association | Association records, 1959-1979 |
| Harriet S. DusenberryRuth StuckyBozemanHelen MathewBillingsNorma BaumannJoliet | Daniel Webster Slayton diaries and correspondence, 1884-1927 |
| National Institutes of HealthBethesda, Maryland | Records of the Montana State Board of Entomology, 1908-1945, including the correspondence of Dr. Robert Allen Cooley |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Peter R. GeibRochester, New York | Glacier National Park, Scenic Marvel of America, 12 hand-colored views, ca. 1906 |
| Robert W. EigellVienna, Virginia | Cows, Cowboys, Canners, and Corned Beef and Cabbage: The Last Large Scale Epic About the Northern Ranges of the West, by Robert W. Eigell, 1987. |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Norene Romig BrownVancouver, Washington | 73 photographs of construction crews, Fort Peck Dam, 1933-1938 |
| Lew Callaway, Jr.Napa, California | 10 photographs of C-D Ranch, Ennis, Virginia City, and Francis Servis |
| Lyle HaightHelena | 39 negatives taken by Ernest or Maude Haight of homestead and logging activity, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad construction, Fergus County, 1910-1914 |
| Raphael CristyHelena | Album of 773 views of Taft, Montana, and railroading activities of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad in the Taft area |

The Treasure of Cased Photographs

In its earliest years, photography seemed a complicated novelty, a crude invention that excited curiosity but little popular support. Cumbersome cameras, long exposure times, unreliable chemistry, and less than satisfactory results did not meet people's expectation that photography had great potential for portraiture.

However, by the 1840s, radical improvements in cameras, lenses, and techniques for developing light-sensitive plates made photography more accessible and affordable. Portrait studios opened up throughout the United States and Europe, and everyone from the famous to the unknown sat for his or her picture.

By the 1880s, the demand for family pictures was enormous, due in part to a prominent sense of mortality in nineteenth century society. A high death rate, particularly among children, made the miniature portraits important family mementos. The photographs were not fragile. They were processed quickly, and they could be sent through the mail or carried in the pocket.

Cased daguerreotype of an unknown man, donated to the Society by Chase Patrick of Helena

Many of the photographs are preserved as cased images. They were matted with a die-cut ornamental brass mat, covered with clear glass, and placed in a small, protective wooden case covered with tooled leather or embossed paper and lined with a velvet or satin pad. "Union cases," the first items manufactured of thermal plastic, date from 1854 and were produced in large quantities.

The Society's Photograph Archives hold over a hundred cased daguerreotypes, ambrotypes, and tintypes from the period. "Daguerreotype" is sometimes used incorrectly to mean any early photograph kept in a small case. Instead, the term refers to a specific chemical process developed in 1839 by Louis Daguerre. Often called "the mirror of memory," the daguerreotype combined negative and positive in one image on a sheet of highly polished silver-plated copper. Because of its mirror-like surface, the daguerreotype is easy to identify.

The ambrotype, developed in 1854, is a wet collodion negative on glass, backed by an opaque material that prevents light from passing through the glass. The tintype is a direct positive image developed on black-enamelled iron.

The cased images remained popular through the early 1900s. They not only exemplify the straightforward, penetrating style of early photographic portraiture, they document the popular techniques used in photography's earliest years.

Community Hall Added to National Register

In August 1907, the Northern Pacific Railroad ordered the Glidden Mercantile Company in Bridger to vacate its warehouse on the railroad right-of-way. The Glidden warehouse had been used for fair association dances, and its loss left the community without a center for social activities and entertainment. Residents scrambled to raise money for a new community hall, and ground was broken on August 22, 1907. Construction of the building was a community affair; residents donated labor and materials in an expression of public spirit common in small Montana communities.

Through the years, the hall has played an important role in Bridger's social and cultural life. The Bridger Opera House is one of several historic buildings in the Bridger Multiple Resource Area now listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Bridger Opera House, built in 1907

The gambrel-roofed, wood-frame building resembles a barn, a structural type common in the Clarks Fork Valley and one familiar to local builders. Its interior has no partitioning walls, and the original 50- by 100-foot rock maple dance floor is still in place.

The hall was used for dances, roller skating, basketball, and performances of the Bitner Opera Company, the Billings Orchestra, the Bridger Male Choir, and a variety of touring music companies. In 1912, Bridger's first moving pictures were shown here, and in 1913, the Acme Amusement Company leased the building for regular showings. The Opera House was the only movie house in town until 1920. The American Legion remodelled the hall in the 1920s but retained much of its original structure.

Other listings in the Bridger Resource Area are the Bridger Coal Company House, Nutting Rental, Heatherington Boarding House, Glidden Mercantile, Raymond Hough House, Dr. Carl Marcus House, and the Methodist Episcopal Church and Parsonage.

Recording Montana—The Jarussi Sisters

by Laurie Mercier
MHS Oral Historian

Nestled between the majestic Beartooth Range and the rich agricultural region south of the Yellowstone River is Red Lodge, one of Montana's most picturesque communities. Most of the visitors who annually stream through Red Lodge on their way to Yellowstone National Park are unaware of the town's coal-mining history. The chalet-style businesses catering to tourists provide no hint of the life and livelihood of residents of the first five decades of the century.

The Northern Pacific Railroad's appetite for coal put Red Lodge on the map, and by 1910, Carbon County led Montana in coal production. By then the population of Red Lodge had swelled to 5,500, as immigrants came in search of opportunity in the mines or to serve the mining population. Finns, Yugoslavs, and Italians created tight-knit neighborhoods and brought to this community their ethnic customs, values, and languages.

Loretta and Lillian Jarussi

Lillian and Loretta Jarussi moved to Red Lodge from Italy as young girls in 1908. Their father came to the mining region expecting to use his skills as a shoemaker, but like many Italian families the Jarussis later took up farming, purchasing a relinquishment in Stillwater County. The elder Jarussis valued education and encouraged their daughters to enter the teaching profession, which they considered "a good field." As the oldest of ten siblings, Loretta had much experience caring for children, and "it just seemed as if I was suited for that." Lillian followed her example, and together the two devoted a hundred years to educating Montana youth.

After teaching in Stillwater County and in northeastern Montana, Loretta and Lillian returned home to Red Lodge in the 1920s. They were glad to have town jobs, but they found the pay low and the classrooms crowded. Even in the school, the Jarussis were conscious of the community's economic base; miners' children had special bilingual needs and their welfare was affected by strikes and depressions. The sisters recalled some of the more memorable incidents from their classroom years—Depression pay cuts, Works Progress Administration renovation of the school, scrap metal drives during World War II, and the terrible Smith Mine disaster of 1943.

Loretta and Lillian described their activities on the day of the mine explosion. While selling and distributing bonds and ration cards for the school's war effort, "We heard this awful whistle; it struck terror into everybody's heart." The teachers tried to calm their students, who cried, "Oh, Miss Jarussi, something awful's happened. That whistle is blowing and our daddy's in the mine." The sisters worked in an emergency ward putting up beds, making coffee, and giving out sandwiches. "For two weeks we never saw daylight" until disaster officials called off the search for bodies.

Red Lodge and nearby Bearcreek never recovered from their loss: seventy-four miners had perished, and many families left for California and other places to find work. "Nearly everybody was affected in some way or the other."

Loretta and Lillian live in the same house to which their family moved in 1908. They are astounded at skyrocketing property values, now that people are flocking to Red Lodge for its recreational value. Even though their town has changed over the last forty years, at the annual Festival of Nations honoring the community's ethnic heritage the Jarussi sisters still run across former students who remember their unflagging dedication and who remind them of their link to Red Lodge's bygone mining days.

1987 Fund Drive a Success

With $1 million received in gifts, pledges, and grants as of January 1988, organizers of the "Keep History Alive" endowment campaign are optimistic about reaching a fundraising goal of $5 million in private financial support for the Montana Historical Society by 1991.

At a press conference and open house reception at the Society on January 12, campaign chairman John J. Burke, Vice-chairman of the Montana Power Company, and honorary campaign chairman Governor Ted Schwinden announced the successful completion of the first year of the "Keep History Alive" drive. Momentum from this phase of the campaign is expected to generate $2 million more this year, primarily from national corporations and foundations.

The MHS Foundation plans to invest funds from the Keep History Alive Drive; the interest earned on the investment will allow the Society to expand its collections and extend its educational outreach and member services. The campaign focuses on resources for these activities rather than on capital needs and building expansion.

Gifts during the first year of the five-year campaign came from the MHS Board of Trustees, the MHS Foundation, Burlington Northern, and other donors. The Society also received a challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Twenty percent of the overall fundraising goal will come from the "First Family Endowments," a program of one hundred separate endowments of $10,000 each. The participating families will be given special recognition when Montana celebrates its statehood centennial in 1989.

For more information about the "Keep History Alive" drive, write Allen Cohen, Senior Resident Campaign Director, Montana Historical Society Foundation, 101 North Last Chance Gulch, Helena 59601, or call (406) 449-3770.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

FROM THE EDITOR'S FILE

Montana History Day adds an extra dimension to the study of Montana history by encouraging students grades six through twelve to enter projects in a statewide competition. This year's History Day will be held in Helena on May 7. Students may enter a history paper, exhibit, dramatic performance, or media presentation. All entries should focus on this year's theme, "Frontiers in History: People, Places, and Ideas." The national competition will be held in June at the University of Maryland. For information, write or all Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4794).

The Molders and Shapers Collective and the Montana Historical Society have jointly published Molders and Shapers: Montana Women as Community Builders—An Oral History Sampler and Guide. The book offers practical suggestions for local oral history projects that examine women's roles in community work. It also includes excerpts from interviews, advice on interview techniques, and a bibliography. Copies may be ordered for $6.50, plus $1.00 postage and handling, from the Oral History Office, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620.

The Oral History Office at the Montana Historical Society has produced a traveling exhibit of fifty-one photographs and seventy-nine oral history excerpts of life in the four metals industry towns of Anaconda, Black Eagle, East Helena, and Columbia Falls. "The Stack Dominated Our Lives" is available to Montana communities during April, July, and August. For scheduling information, please call or write Joan Haefer at the Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4789).

The Summer Institute in Western American Studies, in its ninth year of presenting summer study by a faculty of world scholars, will be held in Cody, Wyoming, in two sessions, June 13-23 and June 27-July 8. Among the instructors are western historians and authors Vine DeLoria, Jr., Brian Dippie, and Paul Andrew Hutton. The tuition is $150 per course and a limited number of scholarships are available. Scholarship applications must be received by May 2. For more information, write the Buffalo Bill Historical Center, P.O. Box 1000, Cody, Wyoming 82414, or call (307) 587-4771.

The Montana Historical Society's Fifteenth Annual Montana History Conference will be held in Livingston on October 27-29, 1988. For information about this popular conference, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (444-4794).

MHS CALENDAR

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Modern Expressions: Art from the Poindexter Collection," through May 23 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| March 9, 16 23, 30 | History Lecture Series, noon |
| April 19-25 | Volunteer Appreciation Week |
| April 21-23 | Northwest History Conference, Tacoma, Washington |
| April 30 | Friends of the Society meeting, "Glacier National Park," by Ellen Seeley, 9:30 a.m., Haynes Auditorium |
| May 7 | Montana History Day, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. |
| May 11 | Friends of the Society Spring Field Trip, Great Falls |
| May 18 | Friends of the Society Field Trip to St. Helena Cathedral for a program on stained glass by Father Dan Hillen, 9:30 a.m. |

The Montana Historical Society at 225 North Roberts is open Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Original Governor's Mansion at 304 North Ewing in Helena is closed January through March except for tours made by appointment.

S
978.6
H6m
V.25 no4

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Vol. 25 No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Winter 1987

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

JAN 12 1988

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

No Step Backward

A Study of Women on the Frontier

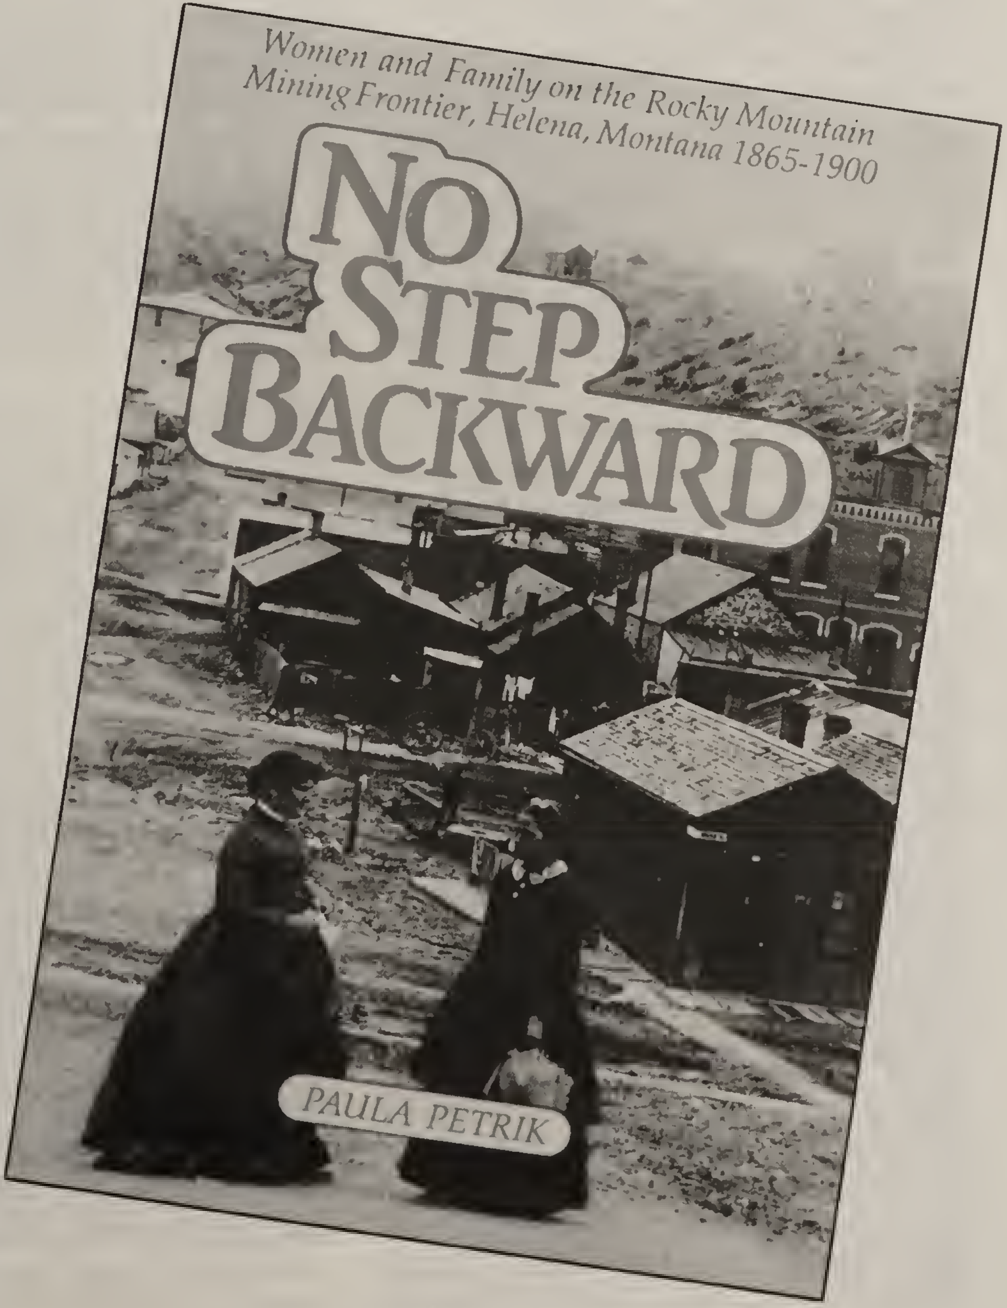
No Step Backward: Women and Family on the Rocky Mountain Mining Frontier, Helena, Montana, 1865-1900, by historian Paula Petrik, is a book unlike any other book about women in the American West. Published in October by the Montana Historical Society Press, No Step Backward is a community study, a collective biography, and a statistical portrait of women in Helena, Montana, during the last decades of the nineteenth century.

Petrik uses personal letters, newspapers, and public documents to explore the world of prostitutes, entrepreneurs, reformers, suffragists, and the middling women who lived in this dynamic Rocky Mountain mining town. She describes the lives of Josephine "Chicago Joe" Hensley, Louise Courselle, and other "capitalists with rooms" who created a female-owned red light district that grew and thrived from the 1870s to the late 1890s. On the Montana frontier, Petrik observes, prostitute proprietorship was one of the few avenues for women into the ranks of the capitalists and into the public sphere. Helena's "madams" seemed to flourish—between 1865 and 1870, over $50,000 changed hands as these businesswomen made their initial investments or exchanged holdings, mostly among themselves.

Petrik also tells of Elizabeth Fisk and her daughter Grace, who personified differences between pioneer mothers and their daughters, and of the women who used their legal rights to establish businesses, secure the vote, and demand their personal rights at the hands of abusive husbands. The author uses meticulous research to argue that the frontier environment changed western women and distinguished them from their eastern sisters. Generation upon generation, the cumulative effect of these changes helps explain why western women were the first to secure the electoral franchise. "No Step Backward," the motto of the three women who made up Helena High School's first graduating class in 1897, describes the path Helena's women took and the story told in Petrik's book.

No Step Backward is one of several books on Montana history published by the MHS Press. Its most recent publication is A Traveller's Companion to Montana History by Carroll Van West. Scheduled for publication in 1988 are The Gibraltar, by Jerry W. Calvert, a study of socialism and labor in Butte from 1895 to 1920, and Place Names of Yellowstone: The Nomenclature of Wonderland, an MHS guide by Lee H. Whittlesey. In Fall 1988, the Press will publish The Last Best Place in celebration of the 1989 Montana Statehood Centennial. The book is an anthology of the best writing about Montana—from Native American oral tradition to contemporary poetry and fiction—edited by William Kittredge and Annick Smith.

No Step Backward and other MHS Press books may be ordered from the Montana Historical Society Press, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-4708.



Women and Family on the Rocky Mountain Mining Frontier, Helena, Montana 1865-1900
NO STEP BACKWARD
PAULA PETRIK

New from the MHS Press

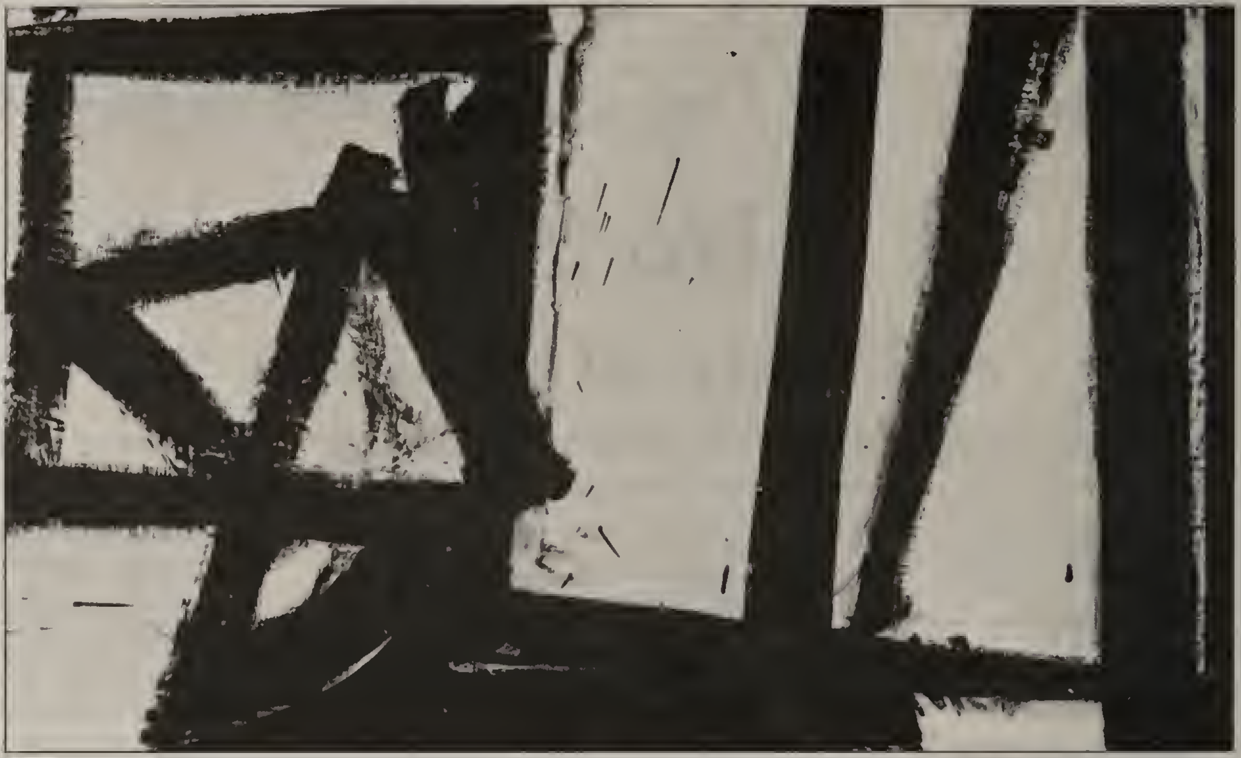
Poindexter Collection of Abstract Expressionism Opens



MHS Poindexter Collection

"Untitled," a 1951 oil on canvas by Franz Kline

An exhibit of abstract expressionist paintings and drawings from the Montana Historical Society's George and Elinor Poindexter Collection opened in the Society's temporary exhibits gallery on December 5. "Modern Expressions: Art from the Poindexter Collection" includes twenty paintings by internationally acclaimed artists such as Franz Kline, Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning, Robert DeNiro, and Adolf Gottlieb. James Poor, Director of Art for Great Falls Public Schools, opened the reception with a brief history of American painting during the 1940s and 1950s, when the act of painting itself became an exuberant fascination that broke traditional forms.

George Poindexter was born in Dillon, Montana, a member of a Big Hole Valley pioneer ranching family. While a commodities broker in New York City during the early 1950s, he became intrigued with the new painting style called abstract expressionism, met many of the artists, and began to collect their work.

During his years in New York, Poindexter never lost his love for Montana. In 1961, as an expression of his affection for the state, he donated paintings from his personal collection to the Montana Historical Society. "I am very much interested in exposing more people to 'something they know nothing about' and from which I have gained so much pleasure," he wrote in a letter to a friend.

Over the next twenty-six years, through the continued generosity of the Poindexter family, the Society's Poindexter Collection increased to ninety-eight paintings and drawings by over forty artists. Many of the pieces are in demand for exhibits in Montana and throughout the United States. A 1951 Franz Kline from the collection was included in the Cincinnati Art Museum's Kline retrospective in 1985. A 1954 Willem De Kooning oil in the collection is considered an important piece in the artist's renowned "Woman" series. Both the De Kooning and Kline pieces are included in the exhibit at the Society, which runs through May 23.

For more information about the Poindexter exhibit, write or call Susan Near, Curator of Collections, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406)444-4713.

Museum Receives C.M. Russell's Cowboy

Charles M. Russell called himself an "illustrator," and in fact he did turn his considerable skills to illustrating books and articles about the West. Sometimes he was blessed with collaborators as talented as himself, and the results have become classics of western culture. The special 1911 edition of Owen Wister's The Virginian, with illustrations by both Russell and Frederic Remington, is a perfect example.

Several months ago the Society acquired Cowboy Mounted #2, one of Russell's original pen-and-ink drawings for Wister's The Virginian. Donated by Barbara Schmidt of Klamath Falls, Oregon, the drawing portrays one of Wister's fictional ranchhands on horseback. Cowboy Mounted #2 has been in Mrs. Schmidt's family for more than sixty years. Shortly after it had appeared in Wister's book, Russell gave the drawing to his old friend, George Emerson of Baltimore, Maryland, Mrs. Schmidt's great-uncle.

"Because we can trace its history so completely," Society Director Robert Archibald said, "Russell's Cowboy Mounted #2 is an especially welcome addition to the Society's permanent collection. It's wonderful to have such a fine example of the artist's work back in Montana."

The Society also owns another Russell illustration from the 1911 edition. Cowboy Seated, Horse Nuzzling his Left Hand has been in the collection since 1952. Both illustrations now hang in the Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art.

C. M. Russell's Cowboy Mounted #2

Smithsonian Series Draws a Crowd

In October, the largest museum complex in the world shared some of its most fascinating activities with over two hundred people in Helena. A special Smithsonian Institution program at the Montana Historical Society highlighted Smithsonian research and collections in a three-day series of public workshops, seminars, and films. The event was cosponsored by the Society and the Smithsonian National Associates Lecture and Seminar Program.

Indians in American art, women in aviation, abstract expressionism, fossil lifeforms, and nature photography were themes presented in the series.

In a slide-illustrated lecture, Claudia Oakes, Curator at the National Air and Space Museum's Department of Aeronautics, surveyed the remarkable accomplishments of American women in aviation, from early balloonists of the nineteenth century to today's airline pilots and astronauts. Smithsonian Research Associate Don Fowler examined Indian tribal life as a pervasive theme in American art and the generations of artists and photographers who provided insights into Indian customs and culture.

In "Expressionism in Modern Art" Valerie Fletcher, Assistant Curator at the Hirshorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, surveyed the "action painting" and gestural styles in America's abstract expressionist art movement in the 1940s and 1950s. The slide-lecture was an appropriate introduction to the Society's special exhibit of abstract expressionist art, which opened in early December.

Michael Hager of the Museum of the Rockies shows a saber-toothed tiger skull at the fossil workshop.

Kjell Sandved, Special Photographer at the National Museum of Natural History, presented a film that took viewers from the Amazon to the Antarctic and gave a workshop on techniques for photographing plants and animals in their natural habitats. In a fossil identification workshop, Michael Hager, director of Bozeman's Museum of the Rockies, showed over forty young people how to handle and study sample fossils, ranging from delicate trilobite imprints to massive dinosaur bones and mammal jaws. Several children brought in fossils for Hager to identify, and discussions were lively.

The Smithsonian takes its lecture series to cities all over the country on a rotating basis. The Society looks forward to another series in Helena in the future.

Symposium Looks at Centennial

Between November 2, 1889, and July 10, 1890, six territories along the country's northern boundary were admitted to the federal Union, the largest block since the transformation of the British colonies more than a hundred years earlier. In 1989 and 1990, the northern tier states—Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Washington—will celebrate their statehood centennials. In the spirit of a shared history, the Montana Historical Society and National Endowment of the Humanities are sponsoring the "Centennial Symposium of the Northern Tier States," on June 22-24, 1989, in Billings. Organizers are now calling for proposals for papers and programs.

The symposium will feature panels, lectures, plenary sessions, performances, and multimedia presentations exploring the states' histories. Programs may examine politics, economics, arts, culture, humanities, geography, religion, Native American studies, and history of the territorial and early statehood years. Stipends will be awarded to those whose proposals are included in the symposium. In October 1989, the Montana Historical Society Press will publish scholarly papers and essays selected from those presented at the symposium.

The Society has received a planning grant from the National Endowment of the Humanities to bring together fourteen humanists from the six states to plan the conference program and to discuss the publication of historical essays. The deadline for proposals and papers is February 1, 1988. For information please write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Curator of Education, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4794.

Thirteen years after Montana became a state, its capitol building was dedicated in 1902.

Conference Looks at Images of the West

It has become something of a fall ritual, sandwiched between the World Series and the opening of hunting season. Each October the true believers and the newly converted gather at the Montana History Conference to talk over, argue about, and learn more about Montana and western history. This year's edition—the fourteenth, on October 22-25—attracted over three hundred people to Helena from across the state and region for three days of lectures, tours, and presentations. The conference focused on images of the American West, from nineteenth century romantic art to television's "Gunsmoke" and Louis L'Amour's version of western history.

The conference began on Thursday evening with a provocative slide lecture on the image of men and women in western art by Corky Bush. As she compared western paintings that depicted men and women on the western frontier, Bush explained that the images we have of gender roles in the westward movement are in large part responsible for how we understand western history—men as heroic leaders, women as non-heroic helpmates.

The conference's featured speakers echoed Bush's emphasis on how images have shaped our understanding of the past. The effect of television's "horse opera" era (1956-1964), when we could watch sixty or more hours of westerns each week, was the topic of Elliott West's entertaining banquet address on Friday evening. As West explained, violence dominated those shows, and family life seemed nonexistent. The TV West was not the real West, but it is how the populace imagines its history. Author William Kittredge pointed to the other side of our western images in his Saturday luncheon speech. The "sacred" things and places in our lives, from pictographs to buildings and natural places, Kittredge maintained, create the most important images of our connections with the past.

How these images were created was the focus of several conference sessions. Panelists and speakers contrasted the realities and images of underground mining, the role of wolves in the ecosystem and in Indian culture, and the use of Indian culture and images in western films and tourist promotions. Other sessions dealt with Montana coal-mining communities, statehood politics, and frontier entrepreneurs. The images we have of these developments and the historical personalities most identified with them, the speakers explained, influence how we reconstruct the past and explain why many of us are so attracted to Montana and western history.

One of the highlights of the conference was a plenary session on Saturday afternoon that featured Richard Etulain on western fiction, Michael Marsden on western films, and Ron Tyler on western painting. As these experts explained, the western storytellers we have read—from Owen Wister to Louis L'Amour—the film heroes we have known—from Tom Mix to John Wayne—and the western artists we enjoy the most—from Karl Bodmer to Charlie Russell—have defined in important ways how we see our own histories. By looking carefully at these images, they said, we can understand more about the values we call "western" and why we hold them so dear. Discussions in the meeting rooms characterized one of the most successful Montana history conferences and set a high mark for next year, when our fall rite will again attract aficionados of Montana history for talk and learning.

John C. Ewers (left), Emeritus Ethnologist at the Smithsonian Institution, and Inez Herrig, librarian at Lincoln County, received Board of Trustees awards at the MHS history conference. Clyde Milner II (second from left), Associate Editor of Western Historical Quarterly, received the Vivian A. Paladin Award for the best article to appear in Montana the Magazine of Western History in 1987. The Burlingame-Toole Award for the best manuscript submitted to Montana by a college student went to John A. Kutzman (right) of the University of Montana.

Montana Historical Society, 225 N.
Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Ellen Meloy; Circulation Manager: Chris Eby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

ISSN 0047-7958

Photos Document Early Hydropower

The harnessing of hydropower on Montana's major rivers during the early 1900s brought flood control and electricity to many communities and marked the landscape with the impressive feats of modern industry. A record of this remarkable era of energy development was recently donated to the Montana Historical Society by the Montana Power Company.

In July, MPC donated 4,242 glass and plate negatives documenting hydropower development in Montana from 1908 to 1917. The collection includes photographs of local facilities built by MPC's predecessors as well as major dams at Great Falls, Hauser Lake, Holter, Hebgen, Big Hole, Madison, and Thompson Falls. Many of the photographs show camps and activities related to the lives of the dam workers during the massive construction projects.

Together with the business records of MPC's predecessor firms and subsidiaries, which the company donated to the Society in 1986, the photographs form an invaluable record of a power industry active in the state since the turn of the century.

"Businesses in Montana are an important repository of our socioeconomic history," said Society Directory Robert Archibald, "and Montana Power Company deserves credit as a leader in the preservation of business and corporate records."

Because of the state-wide significance of the collection, the plates were transferred to Helena from the World Museum of Mining in Butte, where they had been housed for several years. John Carl of MPC and Allan Hooper, volunteer at the World Museum, were instrumental in the transfer of the collection.

If you would like more information about the Montana Power collection, write or call Lory Morrow, Photograph Curator, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4714.

Dam construction at Great Falls, 1908

MHS Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Mr. & Mrs. George RobinsonRimini | Colt pistol that belonged to Isaac Gravelle |
| Alice A. Giddings King & Robert F. GiddingsBillings | Kitchen items, household accessories, clothing, pipe die, vice |
| Leo BenolkenBozeman | Railroad items, household items, coins, receipt booklet, milk bottles, stillyard |
| Mr. & Mrs. Tony TussLewistown | Stonemason's tools |
| Arthur W. SchmidtButte | Leather jacket, patchwork coat, quilt, gloves |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Merrill G. BurlingameBozeman | 1939-1959 papers of H. Lowdnes Maury, Butte attorney |
| Iona StoverCircle | D. J. O'Malley and Teddy "Blue" Abbott letters and photographs, 1934-1943 |
| Vic ReinemerFalls Church, Virginia | "Control of corporations, 1978-1979," written by Reinemer while staff director for Senator Lee Metcalf |
| Elinor ClackHavre | Havre Chamber of Commerce records, 1956-1984 |
| Montana Cattlewomen | Scrapbooks of state and local Cattlewomen's organizations, 1981-1984 |
| Cascade County Historical SocietyGreat Falls | Brady Mercantile Company records, 1915-1950; Pondera County Emergency Relief Committee Records; T.N. Quamme legislative files |
| Virginia TintPortland, Oregon | Florence Magill Armitage diary, 1909, written at Cameron, Montana |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Charles A. HorskyWashington, D.C. | Nathaniel Pitt Langford, Vigilante Days and Ways, Vols. 1 & 2 (1890), inscribed on flyleaf by Anton Horsky |
| Howard L. WilsonBillings | Howard L. Wilson, War Chiefs of the Northwest |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Judge John C. HarrisonHelena | 508 photographs documenting activities of Virginia Flanagan as first Red Cross nurse taken from Montana for World War I; Nina and Frank Flanagan family photographs, ca. 1908-1918, including views of Fort Benton |
| Donald W. BecklinMedford, Oregon | Videotape commentary on the history of the Anaconda Mining Company stack in Great Falls and views of the stack's destruction, 1982 |
| Mary Lou Skinner RossIssaquah, Washington | 45 negatives and 53 photographs of portraits, scenery, and views of homesteading in southeastern Montana, 1910-1984. |

Toole, Yellowtail Honored in Capitol Niches

K. Ross Toole and Susan Walking Bear Yellowtail have joined other Montanans commemorated in the wall niches along the hallway of the West Wing Gallery of the Capitol. The eight-inch-deep niches pay tribute to the political and business leaders, teachers, pioneers, humanitarians, artists, and others who have made Montana unique.

Montana history was a passion for K. Ross Toole (1920-1981). For many years, through his teachings, books, and public service, he helped others understand the relationships between the state's history and its future. As director of the Montana Historical Society from 1951 to 1958, Toole oversaw the creation of its museum, established its art galleries, expanded its collections, secured the Mackay Collection of Charles M. Russell art, and developed its quarterly, Montana the Magazine of Western History, into the most popular historical journal in the West.

Toole wrote several books, including a revisionist history of his state, Montana: An Uncommon Land. In 1965, he was appointed Hammond Professor of Western History at the University of Montana. His undergraduate class, "Montana and the West," became one of the most popular in the university's history, drawing 1,700 students in its final year. Toole is recognized as a persuasive and often controversial historian whose love for Montana history was infectious.

Susan and Tom Yellowtail

Howard Skaggs, University of Montana

K. Ross Toole

The life of Susan Walking Bear Yellowtail (1903-1981) was dominated by untiring service to her tribe, the Crow of eastern Montana. She served on several state and national boards and used her nursing career in practical ways to help her people, yet she still found time to lavish love, hospitality, and advice on friends and family.

As a nurse and a national spokeswoman for Indian health, social, and educational services, Yellowtail was an ambassador of good will and a bearer of hope for her people. She served by example—with deep religious convictions and an irreverent wit—and ministered to her people's needs on their own terms, recognizing their unique traditions and culture.

Nine Montanans are honored in commemorative niches in the Capitol's West Wing. Every two years, two are replaced with new choices. Replacements have been selected through 1993.

Lodge Grass Properties on Register

During the early twentieth century, Crow Indians near Lodge Grass began a slow relocation from their traditional encampments along Lodge Grass Creek to housing closer to commercial establishments, schools, and churches. Several historic resources in Lodge Grass are associated with both white and Crow settlement and illustrate the acculturation that occurred in this racially mixed community over a span of thirty years. Twelve of the properties were recently added to the National Register of Historic Places as part of the Lodge Grass Multiple Resource Area.

One of the properties, George Pease's Second Store, was built by the son of a Crow woman and Fellows D. Pease, the tribe's first civilian agent, appointed in 1871. George Pease came to Lodge Grass from Crow Agency in 1908 and built his store across from the railroad depot. Pease was the town's first postmaster and merchant, and his store was the center of commercial activity.

Pease's Second Store, ca. 1908

George Pease's Second Store

Although the single-story rectangular structure of milled lumber is in poor condition, it has great integrity of location because of its associations with the early history of Lodge Grass and the lives of people who founded the community.

Other recent additions to the National Register are five properties in Bridger; multiple resources in Pony; the Martin Cramer House, Stevensville; Riverside, the Marcus Daly ranch near Hamilton; the Harry C. Keith House, Kalispell; and the Mountain View Cemetery west of Columbus. A number of National Park Service properties in Yellowstone and Glacier national parks were also listed.

Recording Montana—Charlie Kennedy

by Laurie Mercier
MHS Oral Historian

Charlie Kennedy of Dixon, a small community northwest of Missoula, exemplifies the "jack-of-all-trades" Montanan. Since the age of fifteen in Mineral, Missoula, and Sanders counties, Charlie drove team and hauled rocks, ice, and groceries; worked in logging camps and sawmills; served as sheepherder, camp tender, and plumber; and spent the last twelve years of his career as janitor of the Dixon school.

Like many of his generation, Charlie had a variety of work experiences and acquired many skills in order to survive in Montana during the first half of this century. Most of the four hundred people interviewed for the Montanans at Work oral history project called themselves farmer, miner, teacher, cook, housewife, or logger. But on reflection they could remember a half-dozen or so jobs or enterprises undertaken because of economic change, depression, or opportunity.

I met Charlie Kennedy at his older, shaded home in Dixon on a warm April day in 1982. We talked—or I listened—for a solid four hours, only occasionally interrupted by his wife Sue, who would leave her work in the yard to offer iced tea and cookies and to ask me, "Are you still awake?"

Charlie Kennedy of Dixon

Charlie described the life of a typical rural worker in western Montana: locating jobs, conditions at sheep and logging camps, the hardships of working and sleeping outdoors in harsh winters, the lack of protection from getting "bought out" (or fired) by bosses, and the periodic recreational trips to the Palace Hotel in Missoula or to Superior.

Logging camp conditions were hardly tolerable in Charlie's day—sixty to eighty men crowded into cold, poorly ventilated bunkhouses furnished with straw beds and lice. In 1917, Kennedy and other woods workers joined the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW) to strike for better conditions. He joined the union because "it was the custom of the country," he said. Like most retired woods workers of that era, he credited the union for obtaining the eight-hour day and for the workers' beds, blankets, and bathhouses.

Charlie left the woods in 1924 to try his hand with sheep. He had earned forty-five dollars a month skidding team in logging camps; as a sheepherder, he pulled a dollar a day. But "it was a job, and during the '30s and '20s there wasn't much a'doin'." He found it difficult to adjust from the lively logging camps "to be by yourself and nobody there" except for the camp tender's monthly visit.

Kennedy had to quit school in the fifth grade to haul ice for his father, but his experiences and his sharp mind have earned him a reputation as an elder, local historian. At ninety-three, he is in good health and receives visitors who want to know about the 1908 flood in Bonner, running sheep in the mountains south of Superior, and the old W. B. Russell sawmill in Plains. And Charlie will always take the time to tell his story.

Greenfield Family Papers Processed

The Greenfields of Helena were journalists, politicians, businesspeople, and amateur historians who helped to develop Montana and its capital city. The Montana Historical Society Archives holds the papers of three Greenfield family members—Charles Diggs Greenfield, Jr., his older sister Marguerite, and their father, Charles, Sr.—donated by Charles, Jr., and his daughter, Ann Jancic. The documents, letters, and other papers have been processed and are now known as Manuscript Collection 166.

Charles Greenfield, Sr., came to Helena from Denver in 1883, working first as a printer and then as a reporter and editor with the Helena Independent and the Montana Record. In 1885, he helped Michael Leeson write his classic History of Montana. Active in Democratic politics, Greenfield served as a state legislator, as secretary to the Montana Council of Defense during World War I, and as Montana Commissioner of Agriculture. His papers in MC 166 also document his years as a development agent for the Great Northern Railway and his work building the Chinook Sugar Factory.

Marguerite Greenfield, born the year her parents arrived in Helena, was an aggressive businesswoman who started a wholesale and retail ice business, the Independent Ice Company, in Helena in 1911. In 1922, she expanded her operation and moved it to Elk Park, east of Butte. Her letters and "ice journal" in MC 166 document the many obstacles Marguerite encountered as a single businesswoman in the early twentieth century.

From left to right: Marguerite, Marietta, Charles, and Thomas Greenfield, ca. 1893

Like his father, Charles, Jr., began his professional life as a journalist, but he spent most of his career (1923-1950) as an executive for Montana Life (later, Western Life), a Helena-based insurance firm. The younger Greenfield's papers, which make up the bulk of MC 166, also document his years as Montana Director of Publicity, as a farmer in the Helena Valley, and as the author of articles in True West and Frontier Times.

Those interested in studying the Greenfield family papers can ask to see Manuscript Collection 166 at the reference desk in the Society's Library.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

FROM THE EDITOR'S FILE

The Hemingway Western Studies Program at Boise State University in Idaho is seeking manuscripts for publication in its special series of western literature and scholarship. The program promotes the culture and environment of the American West, especially that of Idaho and the Intermountain region, by publishing books of general appeal in the arts, humanities, and sciences. For information, write to the Hemingway Western Studies Series, Boise State University, 1910 University Drive, Boise, Idaho 83725.

The National Advisory Council on Historic Preservation is calling for nominations for the President's Historic Preservation Awards, a program honoring privately funded and federally assisted historic preservation projects. A range of historic preservation disciplines are eligible. Entries must have resulted in the preservation of specific properties listed in or eligible for the National Register of Historic Places. Forms and information are available from the Office of the Executive Director, Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue N.W., #809, Washington, D.C. 20004. The deadline for nominations is February 19, 1988.

As Montana approaches its centennial year, several communities reaching their own century mark are publishing local histories. Manhattan, Montana, from its Beginnings in the 1860s Through the Present, 1986 and Belgrade, Montana: The First One Hundred Years, 1886-1986 are brief histories of local businesses and organizations and histories of local families. Both may be ordered from the Gallatin County Historical Society in Bozeman. Plentywood Portrait, Toil, Soil, Oil uses newspaper excerpts to cover the town's seventy-five-year history, with coverage of businesses, town services, sports, and schools. The book is available from Diamond Jubilee Book, Box 144, Plentywood, 59254.

The American Association of State and Local History has given awards to two Montana history organizations. The awards were among forty given in the Northwest region for outstanding contributions to state and local history.

The Big Horn Oral History Project received an award for "Memories," a slide-tape overview of public education in Big Horn County from 1918 to 1955. The Montana Historical Society was honored for Care of Collections in Historic Buildings, a compilation of low-cost techniques for conservators, architects, engineers, and curators, which was distributed free to Montana museums.

The Autumn issue of Montana the Magazine of Western History is the first in a special series devoted to the Centennial West. In 1989 and 1990, Montana, Idaho, Washington, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming will celebrate their statehood centennials. To examine this shared history each Autumn issue of Montana over the next four years will be devoted to the Politics (1987), Economics (1988), Society and Culture (1989) and Arts and Architecture of these six states. For subscription information, write or call Chris Eby, Production/Circulation Manager, Montana Historical Society, Helena 59620 (406-444-4708).

MHS CALENDAR

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Modern Expressions: Art from the Poindexter Collection," through May 23, 1988 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| December 5 | Exhibit opening, "Modern Expressions: Art from the Poindexter Collection." Program and reception, 7 to 9 p.m. |
| January 20 | Friends of the Society meeting, "The Poindexter Collection," 9:30 a.m., Haynes Auditorium |
| February 17 | Friends of the Society meeting, "Missionaries in Montana," 10 a.m., Haynes Auditorium |
| March 9, 16, 23, 30 | Women's History Series, Lunches and Lectures, 12 noon |

The Montana Historical Society at 225 North Roberts in Helena is open Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tours of the state capitol are given on the hour, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m, Monday through Saturday, and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sundays. Tours of the Original Governor's Mansion at 304 North Ewing in Helena are given on the hour from noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

S
978.6
H6m
V.25 no 3

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
NOV 5 1987
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Vol. 25 No. 3 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Autumn 1987

History Exhibit Takes Shape

Carpenters have been working all summer at the Society, building the rough framework for the new History of Montana exhibit that is scheduled to open in the fall of 1988. The framework is only the most visible part of the complex project. Behind the scenes, the Society's historians, designers, curators, and conservators are completing their research, drawing detailed floor plans, writing labels and educational brochures, and selecting and conserving the 2,000-odd artifacts that will tell the story of Montana from prehistory to World War II.

Artifacts will play a vital role in the new exhibit—ranging from the steering wheel of a Missouri River steamboat to Jim Bridger's rifle, from a Gros Ventre tipi liner to a sheepwagon from the Charlie Bair ranch. "Artifacts make history tangible," said MHS Curator of Collections Susan Near. "By seeing the things that our ancestors used and made, we gain a real appreciation for their lives."

"Indian Montana," for example, the portion of the exhibit covering the years from 1750 to 1860, will contain over three hundred Native American artifacts, including clothes, games, spiritual objects, tools, and weapons. The artifacts will show how the lives of Montana's Indians radically altered with the arrival of guns and horses, and they will concretely illustrate the cultural differences among the various tribes.

Continued on page 2

Doug O'Looney, photographer, MHS Museum

The new Montana History Exhibit will include this 1900 canvas Gros Ventre tipi liner and nearly two thousand other artifacts.

Continued from page 1

In selecting artifacts for "Indian Montana," the Museum staff turned to the state's Indian tribes for information about the objects created and used by their members. The tribal advisers told traditional stories, explained the cultural significance of the artifacts, and blessed ceremonial objects. Archaeologists, local historians, ranchers, lumbermen, miners, and others contributed artifacts and their knowledge and expertise to help make the exhibit as accurate and complete as possible.

"Artifacts can't tell the whole story by themselves," said Exhibit Designer Geoff Wyatt, "so we'll also use interpretive labels, photographs, drawings, murals, and dioramas." Three murals by western artist Bob Morgan, for example, will portray the Lewis and Clark expedition's encounters with Montana's Indians, and two dioramas will illustrate the role of the bison in Indian culture.

Carpenter Todd Saarinen, Preparator Jim Warner, and Exhibit Designer Geoff Wyatt at work on the new Montana History Exhibit

Visual Arts Exhibited at the Society

The visual arts have always been important at the Montana Historical Society. The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art is home to one of the finest Russell collections anywhere, and exhibits of painting, drawing, sculpture, and fine photography appear regularly in the Society's Northeast Gallery.

The current exhibit in the Northeast Gallery, "Documenting the West: The Art of Edgar S. Paxson," consists of nearly forty oils, watercolors, and drawings from the Society's large Paxson collection. Paxson, a contemporary of Charlie Russell, knew the Montana frontier firsthand, having worked as a hunter and stagecoach driver before he turned to painting. The exhibit includes several of Paxson's Indian portraits, drawings of his fellow pioneers Granville Stuart and Alexander Culbertson, and many frontier scenes, including the classic oil, Scouting for Custer. "Documenting the West" will close November 30.

Immediately following the Paxson show, the Northeast Gallery will feature abstract expressionist paintings from the Society's George and Elinor Poindexter Collection. Opening Saturday, December 5, at 7:30 p.m., the exhibit of more than twenty works by such renowned American modernists as Franz Kline, Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning, and Adolf Gottlieb will run through the spring of 1988.

Care of the Society's art collection is as important as showing it to the public, and that includes proper storage and a continuing conservation program. Both of the Museum's climate-controlled storage areas have state-of-the-art rolling racks for paintings, and the newly renovated art vault has new shelving for sculptures and five new mapcases for drawings and other works on paper.

Conservation is a priority at the Society. Since 1981, many of the Museum's C. M. Russell watercolors, bronzes, pen-and-ink drawings, and illustrated letters have been treated by conservators. In 1984, the Institute of Museum Services funded a survey of the Poindexter Collection to determine which paintings need conservation, and the Museum plans to conserve its extensive western art collection in the near future.

For more information about the Society's art collection, write or call Susan Near, Curator of Collections, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4713.

E. S. Paxson's The Latest Arrivals currently hangs in the Society's temporary exhibit gallery.

Montanans Win at National History Day

Montana's National History Day winners Jennifer Barker, Mick DaSilva, Kristi Erickson, and Chris Engstedt

The Montana delegation to National History Day has a right to feel proud. Four Helena eighth-graders sponsored by the Montana Historical Society won a national title at the University of Maryland, and several other young Montanans brought home "superior" ratings.

Jennifer Barker, Chris Engstedt, Kristi Erickson, and Mick DaSilva, students at Helena's C. R. Anderson Middle School, won first place in the junior division of the media category with their slide presentation, "Flathead Indians: A Quest for Sovereignty." The four Helenans scored 299 points out of a possible 300 in the first round and bested entries from Michigan and Utah in the finals to capture the national prize. They received $1,000 and National History Day medallions.

The media project of Helenans Travis Thorson, Mark Scarff, and Matt Skjelset, "The Fight for Fair Representation: The New Crow Indian Battle," was judged Best State Entry and won a superior rating. The other Montanans who received either superior or excellent ratings were Gail Pyke, Teri Clark, Aimee Duvernay, and Julie Clay of C. R. Anderson; Tami Lofthouse, Tori Johnson, Tami Fisher, and Becky Rabey of Helena Middle School; Jason Swanz, Scott Lammers, and Jamie Russman of Judith Gap; and Joe Gage of Helena's Capital High School.

For information about the 1988 competition, write Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Curator of Education, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620.

Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Mary Ellen Turnell & Martha Cawley Doughtie, Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts | Doll house, ca. 1905, with 300 pieces of furniture |
| Malcolm MacCalman, Deer Lodge | Watch that belonged to Thomas Stuart |
| Jane Benson, Helena | Bottles, kitchen utensils, clothes, books, etc. from Miles City |
| Harold Kelsh, Helena | Homemade picture frame by Joe Kelsh, 1916; painting by Verna Kelsh, ca. 1935 |
| Peyton Moncure, Missoula | Cheyenne wooden pipe, before 1929 |
| Margaret Lembke Poil, Great Falls | Lard press, kraut board, turnip-kraut board, set of 6 crocks |
| Doris & Gary Hall, Sun River | 2 folding "camp" chairs |
| Einar T. Pettersen, Des Moines, Washington | Drum, powder pouch, shot pouch, bull whip, utility knife, spurs, headdress, loincloth |
| Arlene Berens, Anza, California | Buffalo horn chair |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Claudet Ross, Helena | Belle Winestine plays, including The Gravy Boat (produced by the Pasadena Playhouse in 1934) and Chinook |
| Loble, Pauly, & Hopgood, Helena | Constitutional Convention records, miscellaneous, 1972 |
| Alma Taylor, Helena | Financial records of Sanden & Ferguson Co., Helena, 1911-1981 |
| Spencer Wilson, Socorro, New Mexico | James Hovey Spencer scrapbook, 1894-1907. Hovey was the first Baptist minister to be ordained in Montana. |
| Melinda Hurst, Los Angeles, California | Melinda Alexander papers, including "The Voyage of Hotel De Bum: A true story of a four months camping trip on western trails," ca. 1914-1918 |
| McKee Anderson, Dillon | Charles A. Whitman papers, concerning Whitman's career as a soda fountain "mixologist" and confectioner in Helena, 1902-1934 |
| Mr. & Mrs. Bill Flick, Sheridan | Records of Hamilton & Sweets, early Sheridan mercantile operation, 1872-1880 |
| Dale P. Herbort, GCM Services, East Helena | Montana City archaeological study by Mauck Brammer and Peter Meloy, 1972 |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Claude Hookham, Livingston | Claude Hookham, Rambling Thoughts in Homespun Verse (1960), Poetry (1981) |
| Sally Garrett Dingley, Dillon | Sally Garrett, Until Forever (1983), Mountain Skies (1984), Northern Fires (1985), Twin Bridges (1986), Until Now (1986), Weaver of Dreams (1987) |
| Carol Stern, Missoula | Carol Stern, Reading and Writing With a Cat Named Sidney (1986) |
| Joe R. Bush, Bishop Agency, Missoula | Sanborn maps of Missoula (1921) |

Ennis New Board of Trustees President

Bruce L. Ennis of Billings, a member of the Society's Board of Trustees since 1982, has been named the board's new president for 1987-1989. A graduate of the University of Montana's law school, Ennis has worked as an attorney and served as President of Montco and Chief Executive of Meridian Minerals. He is currently a principal of ECM, Inc. of Billings.

"Because the Montana Historical Society Foundation has recently launched a nationwide fund drive to 'Keep History Alive,' " said Ennis, "the year ahead will be an exciting challenge for me and for all of the members of the board. We are also looking forward to the opening of the Montana History Exhibit at the Society in the fall of 1988. That will be a major accomplishment that all of us can take pride in and enjoy."

Other newly elected officers of the MHS Board of Trustees are Vice-president Helen Hornby of Livingston and Secretary Robert Sletten of Great Falls.

Bruce Ennis, new President of the MHS Board of Trustees

Stone House Listed in National Register

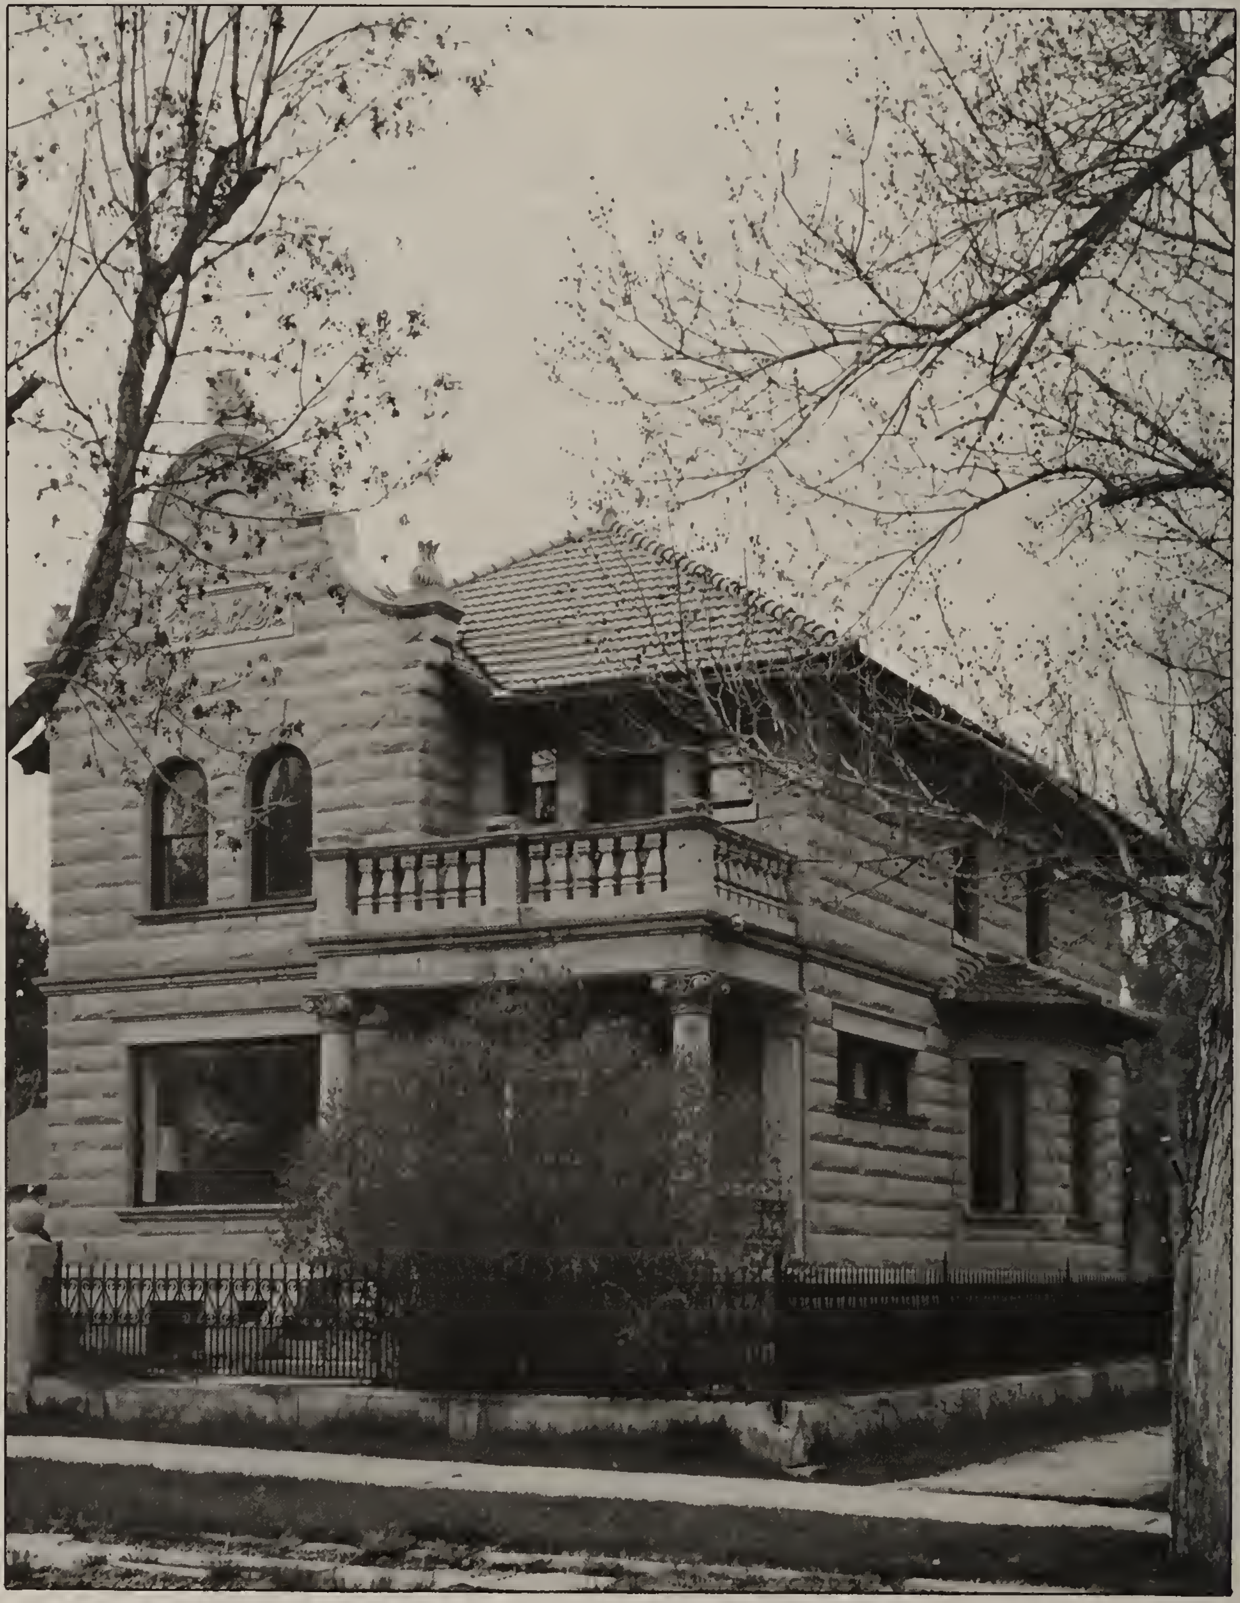
One of south-central Montana's most impressive private residences is the Michael Jacobs House of Columbus, a sandstone mansion built in the Renaissance Revival style between 1900 and 1907. Because the massive Jacobs House, with its Corinthian columns, finely cut stonework, and carved decorations, holds significant architectural and historical value, it has been listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

In 1901, with three other expert stone cutters, Michael Jacobs arrived in Columbus to manage the Montana Sandstone Company. Jacobs's quarry, located along the bluffs immediately north of town, provided stone for many of Montana's most impressive buildings. Jacobs also had a successful political career in Columbus, which included terms as alderman and as mayor in 1913-1914.

An outstanding craftsman, Jacobs drew upon his considerable skill to design and build his own home. The mansion's ornate columns, carved decorations, and Renaissance hip roof reflect the influence of Jacobs's native Italy, while the massive, rusticated stone blocks are more typical of other sandstone buildings in Montana. Although a few of its original windows have been replaced, the house still retains a high degree of architectural integrity, looking very much as it did when Jacobs built it.

Other properties recently listed in the National Register include the Sandstone and Cobblestone schools, Absarokee; the Lincoln Community Hall; Christ Episcopal Church and Rectory, Sheridan; the Cornelius Ringleberg House, Kalispell; and the Martin Barrett House, Dillon.



John N. DeHaas, Jr., photographer

The Michael Jacobs house in Columbus

Recording Montana—Charlie Evanson

by Laurie Mercier
MHS Oral Historian

Charlie Evanson, Richland County historian, died this past May at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minnesota, following an extended illness. People who knew him were shocked to hear of his death, for even though he had undergone one operation after another, we refused to believe the prognosis. We were certain Charlie's unfailing energy would pull him back to Sidney and the numerous projects he had initiated as Executive Director of the MonDak Historical and Arts Society.

I got to know Charlie back in May of 1984 when I planted myself in Sidney for two weeks to interview folks for the Small Town Montana oral history project. I naturally went to Charlie for his help in locating people to interview—he introduced me to people like Santos Carranza and Curtis Ball, who were critical to this project documenting life in Sidney during the 20th century. Right away, Charlie wanted to know why Sidney was included in a "small town" project. He, like other residents, clearly viewed this northeastern Montana hub as a small city, and the small town classification was an insult!

I had heard Charlie brag about the MonDak Heritage Center, but I was not prepared for its striking presence. One of his projects, the new regional art/history/cultural center is an impressive facility any larger city would be proud to have. It was designed to do more than collect every washboard and butter churner in the country—there is changing exhibit space, a library and archives.

This Sidney Herald photo shows Charlie Evanson at the MonDak Heritage Center's dedication ceremony on September 30, 1984.

Charlie could not hide his pride in Sidney and Richland County. He was born in North Dakota in 1928 but spent much of his youth in Fairview. After service in the Korean War, he returned to Fairview, married Frankie Smelser, and in 1953 moved to Sidney to work at the Sidney National Bank. While in Sidney, I had wanted to interview Charlie about his insights of the business community, his work documenting and preserving Richland County history, and his participation in groups as varied as the Lutheran Church and the Kiwanis Club. As a reflective observer of his community, he would have been the perfect contributor to the oral history project. We never found the time for an interview— that May, Charlie was busy preparing the MonDak Heritage Center for its grand opening. Frankie Evanson recently wrote that she "could kick myself for not pushing" Charlie to record his reminiscences. But then, that's one of the drawbacks of the oral history business—constant regrets of not recording significant memories before their departure.

We will all miss Charlie's presence at statewide museum and history conferences—the small man with the goatee who eagerly picked up new ideas and applied them in his work back in Sidney. I heard his funeral procession was routed past the Heritage Center with its flag at half mast—a symbolic gesture by family and friends who understood the value of his contributions to the community and Charlie's affection for a place that represented important work.

New Sessions at MHS Conference

The fourteenth annual Montana History Conference, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and funded in part by the Montana Committee for the Humanities, will be held on October 22-24 at Helena's Colonial Inn. Using "Images of the West" as the conference theme, historians, writers, and students of western culture will talk about how novels, paintings, television, and film have affected our perceptions of the American West.

Recent additions to the conference schedule include a panel on images of Indians in white culture and a tour of one of Helena's historic districts. The panel, to be held on Saturday, October 24, will discuss the ways that white filmmakers, painters, and businesses have portrayed Native Americans. Chere Jiusto, MHS Research Historian and author of a survey of Helena's south-central historic district, will lead the tour through the oldest neighborhood in Montana's capital city on Friday afternoon, October 23.

For those planning local celebrations of Montana's statehood centennial, a series of workshops will be held on Thursday, October 22. The workshops will focus on the uses of oral history, publications, community architectural surveys, and historic postcards in centennial celebrations and projects.

Society members should receive their conference registration packets by mid-September. If you have not received your packet or would like more information, write Bev Harriott, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620.

Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby; Circulation Manager: Chris Eby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.
ISSN 0047-7958

MHS Foundation Fund Drive Moves Ahead

The Montana Historical Society Foundation's $5 million "Keep History Alive" fund drive is gaining momentum. Foundation staff have nearly completed their research for the campaign, and several generous donors have already pledged a total of $500,000.

Most of the funds raised during the campaign will be placed in an endowment, the interest from which will permit the Society to expand its collections and its services to members. The campaign is also seeking donations that will help the Society meet a few selected capital needs, including the acquisition of a decentralized computer system.

A unique part of the campaign will be the "First Century Family Endowments," one hundred separate endowments of $10,000 each. Those families who create a "First Century" endowment will be honored in a ceremony at the Society during Montana's centennial year and may permanently file their family genealogies in the MHS Archives.

John J. Burke of Butte, Vice-chairman of the Montana Power Company, will serve as general chairman of the campaign. Helenan John N. Etchart, Vice-president of Burlington Northern, Inc., is chairman of the drive's executive committee, and film star Jeff Bridges, who maintains a home near Livingston, will head up the drive's national division. Miles City attorney James Lucas, Society Trustee J. Robert Sletten of Great Falls, Two Dot rancher Warren B. "Buck" Jones, Thomas W. Scott, a Billings banker, and Big Sky dude rancher Howard T. Kelsey, will chair five of the campaign's ten divisions within Montana. By summer's end, the foundation will have named the other five division chairpeople. The drive has attracted a lot of grass-roots support across the state, with over two hundred Montanans volunteering to work with the campaign.

For more information about the "Keep History Alive" drive, write to Al Cohen, Senior Resident Campaign Director, Montana Historical Society Foundation, 101 North Last Chance Gulch, Helena 59601, or call (406) 449-3770.

Fort Peck Reunion Is Setting for Oral History

When it was constructed during the 1930s, the Fort Peck Dam was the largest earth-filled dam in the world. Over fifty thousand men and women helped build the giant New Deal project, and on August 1 hundreds of them gathered at Fort Peck to celebrate the project's fiftieth anniversary. MHS Oral Historian Laurie Mercier and three contract interviewers were there, recording the memories of more than fifty of the project's veterans.

"There are several histories of the dam," Mercier said, "but most of them focus on statistics and engineering. What is missing is the human component—the experiences of the people who came to live and work in northeastern Montana during the Depression."

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers photo, MHS Photograph Archives

Workers and engineers who helped build Fort Peck Dam during the 1930s

In their conversations with the Fort Peck veterans, the MHS interviewers sought the human story behind the building of the dam. The veterans told about using picks and shovels and horse-drawn scrapers to construct the enormous structure. They described their lives in Wheeler, New Deal, Square Deal, Delano Heights, Park Grove, and McCone City, the brawling boom towns around the dam. They talked about how the project rejuvenated the drought-stricken economy of northeastern Montana, and they remembered the "Big Slide" that, on September 21, 1938, killed eight men and wounded twenty others when 5.2 million cubic yards of earth slipped from the dam's face 1,200 feet into the reservoir.

The Omaha District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, sponsor of the Fort Peck Fiftieth Anniversary celebration, donated $3,800 to the Society to help fund the oral history project. The typed summaries and tapes of the interviews will be on file in the Society's library.

In 1988-1989, the Society's Oral History Office will interview Montanans who were involved in the other New Deal projects in the state, from Civilian Conservation Corps camps to various Works Progress Administration projects. For more information about the Fort Peck project and the Society's New Deal oral history project, write or call Laurie Mercier, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620; (406) 444-4779.

Home Movies Document Ranch Life

Home movies are personal documents; their flickering images remind us of past birthdays, farewells and homecomings, and family vacations. But those same images, says MHS Photograph Curator Lory Morrow, also contain details of historical interest. They document how people dressed, what their work was like, and the communities and natural landscapes in which they spent their lives.

Thirty-nine films recently donated to the Society prove Morrow's point. Donated by the Frank A. Hazelbaker family of Dillon and Bill Mackay of Roscoe, the movies record activities on the Hazelbakers' C-D Ranch in the Big Hole Basin and Mackay's Lazy EL Ranch on Rosebud Creek. "These home movies tell us a great deal about ranching in Montana," says Morrow. "They show us how people really lived on two working ranches during the first half of this century." Along with scenes of plowing, haying, branding, dipping cattle and sheep, and rounding up horses, the films also document how the two families spent their leisure time, attending rodeos, dancing, boating, watching a parade, and staging a holdup.

"These excellent films show the value of home movies," Morrow says. "I hope more Montanans will donate their personal movies so that the historical information they contain can be preserved."

Researchers can study the Mackay and Hazelbaker movies in the MHS Photograph Archives. If you would like to donate your home movies or find out more about the films in the Society's collection, write or call Lory Morrow, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4714.

MHS Calendar

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Documenting the West: The Art of E. S. Paxson," through November 30 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 1-30 | "The Stack Dominated Our Lives," Main Street School, East Helena (Oct. 1-15), and East Helena Volunteer Fire Hall (Oct. 16-30) |
| October 8-10 | Smithsonian lectures, Montana Historical Society |
| October 22-24 | Fourteenth annual Montana History Conference, "Images of the West: Fact, Fantasy, and Memory," Colonial Inn and Montana Historical Society, Helena |
| December 5 | Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board's Holiday Home Tour, 12 noon to 4 p.m. |
| December 5 | Opening and reception, "The George and Elinor Poindexter Collection," 7 p.m., MHS temporary exhibits gallery |

The Montana Historical Society at 225 North Roberts is open Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tours of the Original Governor's Mansion at 304 North Ewing in Helena are given on the hour from noon to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

Special Events

- Smithsonian programs, October 8-10. Smithsonian staff members will present lectures, seminars, and films, offering fascinating insights into artists' portrayals of Indian life, nature photography, fossils, expressionist art, and women aviators. The programs will take place in the Society's Haynes Auditorium. For more information, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4794.

Women's History Focus of Conference

Why were women so important in the founding of Montana's libraries, hospitals, and schools? What strategies helped Montana's women win their fight for suffrage? How did black, Indian, and immigrant women adjust to life in Montana communities? These and other questions will be discussed at "Molders and Shapers: Montana Women as Community Builders," the first conference ever devoted exclusively to the history of Montana's women. The conference, sponsored by the Montana Division of the American Association of University Women, the Montana Committee for the Humanities, and the Montana Historical Society, will be held on November 13-15 at Helena's Colonial Inn.

The conference's challenging program will include historian Nancy Hewitt's keynote address, "Shaping the Material and Moral Landscape: Women Constructing Communities," and panels on Montana clubwomen, women and the founding of western institutions, ethnic women, and women as agents of change. MHS staff members will offer workshops on oral history, recordkeeping, photographic archives, research, and building and site preservation.

For more information about "Molders and Shapers," write or call Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, Conference Directors, 1104 South Fifth, Bozeman, Montana 59715; (406) 586-2196 or 586-5528.

MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY
1865

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

from the Editor's File

The James Jerome Hill Reference Library in St. Paul, Minnesota, has opened the papers of Louis Warren Hill (1872-1948), son of the Great Northern Railway's founder, James J. Hill. The papers—which include over 600 linear feet of correspondence, financial records, pamphlets, maps, and photographs—fully document the significant role Hill played in the development of Glacier National Park and his dealings with the Blackfeet Indians. They also detail his extensive interests in real estate, copper and iron mining, agriculture, and oil exploration throughout the West. For more information, write or call W. Thomas White, Hill Papers Curator, James Jerome Hill Reference Library, Fourth & Market Streets, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102; (612) 227-9531.

---

Post Scripts

by Bob Clark
Head, Division of Archives and Library

"The Best Books About Montana: A Reader's Guide to the Treasure State," a list of 100 books compiled by University of Montana professor Harry W. Fritz, appeared in the Winter 1982 issue of Montana the Magazine of Western History. The list tabulated the responses to a questionnaire sent to Montana subscribers, asking each to name the five "best" books on Montana. The titles were then arranged in the order of the number of votes received, with Joseph Kinsey Howard's Montana, High, Wide and Handsome coming out number one.

Fritz's list has partially filled a vacuum for those lovers, collectors, and dealers of old Montana books who are not well-supplied with the checklists and bibliographies that help guide collecting and selling in Western Americana. The checklists range from such comprehensive compendiums as Charles W. Smith's Pacific Northwest Americana (1950), which includes 11,000 regionally related titles, to tightly restricted efforts such as Renner and Dykes's 25 Charlie Russell-related titles. These lists become authorities when they are cited in dealers' catalogs to suggest the books they offer have pedigrees and are usually cited by compiler (Smith, #476) or shortened title (Russell Rarities #6). Just knowing what these refer to makes one something of an insider.

Although "Best Books About Montana" has not yet become established on the national antiquarian book scene, some Montana book people are citing it, usually as "Best Books." At the Society, we usually refer to it as the "Fritz 100."

Every list has its limitations, of course, and one of the pleasures of book collecting is being able to correct, supplement, or even supercede other lists. The compiler of the Fritz 100, for instance, left it to respondents to determine what was meant by "best." The results might be more accurately called the best-loved, or the best-known, or even the "most read." But one class of books was likely to be short-changed in such a poll—the good and faithful workhorse that supplies a lot of information but not much enjoyable narrative.

To test this suspicion, the MHS reference staff identified the books they resort to most frequently when responding to inquiries from the public. Sure enough, only four of the titles were on the Fritz 100, and only one of these was among the top thirty-three. While one doesn't dare claim that these are "the most useful books about Montana," they have certainly proven their usefulness and deserve at least the honor of a list. Here it is, arranged alphabetically by author.

---

Cheney, Roberta Carkeek. Names on the Face of Montana. 2d ed. Missoula: Mountain Press, 1983. (1st ed., Best Books #48)

Leeson, Michael A., ed. History of Montana, 1739-1885. Chicago: Warner, Beers & Co., 1885. (Best Books #51)

Lopach, James J., ed. We the People of Montana . . . The Workings of a Popular Government. Missoula: Mountain Press, 1983.

Lutz, Dennis J. Montana Post Offices and Postmasters. Rochester, Minn.: Johnson Printing, 1986.

Malone, Michael P. and Richard B. Roeder. Montana: A History of Two Centuries. Seattle: University of Washington Press, 1976. (Best Books #9)

Miller, Don and Stan Cohen. Military and Trading Posts of Montana. Missoula: Pictorial Histories, 1978.

Montana Bureau of Mines and Geology. Bibliography of the Geology and Mineral Resources of Montana. Butte: Montana School of Mines, 1942.

Montana Department of Fish and Game. Montana Historic Preservation Plan, with Historic Sites Compendium. Helena, 1975.

Montana Department of Highways. Sectional County Maps of Montana. Helena, 1976.

Montana State University, Bureau of Business and Economic Research. Montana Almanac, 1959-1960. Missoula, 1958. (Supplemented by a statistical update, 1962/1963.)

Owings, Ralph E. Montana Directory of Public Affairs, 1864-1960. Ann Arbor: Edwards Bros., 1960.

Richards, Dennis L. Montana Genealogical and Local History Records. Detroit: Gale Research, 1981.

Spence, Clark C. Territorial Politics and Government in Montana, 1864-89. Urbana: University of Illinois, 1975.

Waldron, Ellis L. Montana Politics Since 1864: An Atlas of Elections. Missoula: Montana State University, 1958.

Waldron, Ellis L., and Paul B. Wilson. Atlas of Montana Elections, 1889-1976. Missoula: University of Montana, 1978.

Wolle, Muriel Vincent Sibell. Montana Pay Dirt: A Guide to the Mining Camps of the Treasure State. Denver: Sage, 1963. (Best Books #34)

S
978.6
H6m

MONTANA POST

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

Vol. 25 No. 2 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Summer 1987

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS
AUG 6 1987
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

New Museum Store Opens at Society

MONTANA
Historical Society
Museum Store

For years our visitors have told us that the MHS Museum Store has one of the best selections of books on western history in the region. And with its move this April into a new space just off the Society's lobby, the Museum Store is serving its patrons better than ever before.

The 70,000 people who visit the Museum Store each year can find a range of books on the West—from the new University of Nebraska Press edition of the Lewis and Clark journals, to James Welch's latest novel, to guides to Montana's geology, wildlife, and geographical regions. This summer, Manager Rosalie Wynkoop will further expand the Store's inventory, adding more contemporary western fiction and a greater selection of children's books with western themes. Books will remain the Store's stock in trade, but visitors can also purchase prints of classic western paintings, commemorative belt buckles, postcards, calendars, C. M. Russell and Big Medicine t-shirts, and historical journals, including Montana the Magazine of Western History.

The Museum Store offers mailorder service throughout the year. To receive the catalog or to place an order, write to Museum Store, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620, or call (406) 444-2890; only credit card or C.O.D. orders are accepted by phone.

"The Stack Dominated Our Lives" MHS Oral History Exhibit on Tour

"Everybody would get up in the morning," Bob Vine of Anaconda told MHS Oral Historian Laurie Mercier, "and then look and see if there was smoke coming out of that stack and if there was, God was in his heaven and all was right with the world, and we knew we were going to have a paycheck." Vine's memories and scores of others by residents of Anaconda, Black Eagle, Columbia Falls, and East Helena help document "The Stack Dominated Our Lives," an MHS-sponsored exhibit on the influence of the metals industry on Montana communities. Now touring the state, the exhibit contains fifty historical photographs of life in the four metals industry towns. In words and pictures, the exhibit tells of Italian and Serbian neighborhoods, smeltermen's parades, strikes, and the effects of the shutdown of the smelters at Black Eagle and Anaconda.

Funded by a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the exhibit will be at the Black Eagle Community Center from May 20 to June 15; at the Columbia Falls Public Library from June 20 to July 31; at the Copper Village Art Center in Anaconda from September 1 to September 30; at the Main Street School in East Helena from October 1 to October 15; and at the East Helena Volunteer Fire Hall from October 16 to October 31.

Men going off shift in Anaconda in about 1943

In some communities, Bozeman's Vigilante Players will perform Voices, a play that uses excerpts from Mercier's interviews to tell the story of a fictional one-company metals industry town.

After its appearance in East Helena, "The Stack Dominated Our Lives" will be available for exhibit in other Montana communities. For more information, write to Laurie Mercier, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620, or call (406) 444-4779.

The Smithsonian Comes to Helena

Why has Indian tribal life been a pervasive theme in American art? Who are the women who played a significant part in writing the history of American aviation? How can we identify the fossils of life-forms that existed millions of years ago?

These questions and others will be answered on October 8-11 when the Smithsonian Institution, the world's largest museum complex, brings an exciting series of programs to the Montana Historical Society. Co-sponsored by the Society and the Smithsonian, the series includes four days of lectures, seminars, and films presented by Smithsonian staff members.

In his slide-illustrated lecture, "Indians, Artists and Photographers," Smithsonian Research Associate Don Fowler will discuss the artistic portrayals that American artists have made of Indian customs and culture. The accomplishments of American women aviators will be the subject of a talk by Curator Claudia Oakes of the National Air and Space Museum. In "Expressionism in Modern Art," Valerie Fletcher, Assistant Curator at the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, will discuss how European expressionists, such as Vincent Van Gogh, influenced the development of the Abstract Expressionist painting style in the United States.

Kjell Sandved, Special Photographer at the National Museum of Natural History, will present Beyond the Ocean, Beneath a Leaf, a film that takes viewers from Amazonian rain forests to the Antarctic ice shelf. Sandved will also teach a three-hour workshop on techniques for photographing plants and animals in their natural habitats. Paleontologist Mick Hager of Bozeman's Museum of the Rockies will talk about "Fossils: Archives of the Earth," and he will lead a three-hour workshop for families on the identification of fossils.

Tickets for the lectures and film are $2.50; the fee for each three-hour workshop is $20. For more information, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620; (406) 444-4794.

Conference Examines Images of the West

For two centuries, the American West has assumed and evoked numerous, often conflicting images. The fourteenth annual Montana History Conference will explore how these images—portrayed in novels, paintings, films, and television shows—shape our perceptions of the West. The three-day conference, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society, will begin at 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, October 22, with registration at Helena's Colonial Inn.

Conference participants will begin this exploration of the West with a slide show and talk on the images of women in western art by Montana State University professor Corlann Bush. Award-winning author William Kittredge will continue the theme with a discussion of stereotypical images of the West and how they affect the ways westerners think and act, and historian Elliott West will talk about how television westerns portray the West. Kittredge and West will then join a discussion of the "West of the Imagination" and the imaginative (and sometimes imaginary) West of pulp Westerns, popular films, and the art of Russell and Remington.

Conference sessions will also consider Montana's historic roads, the dangers of hard-rock mining, politics in 1889, life in Montana's coal-mining towns, Montana's early capitalists, and images of the state's Indians. Wildlife experts, students of animal folklore, and Blackfeet tribal members will discuss the history of predator control in Montana and the controversial presence of wolves in Glacier National Park.

There will also be tours of Helena's historic districts and Frontier Town, the log-and-stone tourist attraction John Quigley built near Helena during the 1950s. John Vance, a long-time friend of Quigley's, will describe the image of the West that Quigley sought to preserve with his frontier village.

A Collectors' Corner will give conference participants an opportunity to exhibit the ranching gear, vintage clothing, firearms, postcards, and other historical artifacts they have collected. If you would like to be an exhibiter or need more information, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4794.

Members of the Society will receive registration information for the history conference in mid-September. Participants are encouraged to return their registration fee and meal reservations by October 9.

---

Conference Schedule

Thursday, October 22

| | |
|---|---|
| 9:00-4:00 | Centennial Workshops |
| 11:30-1:00 | Montana Oral History Association Annual Meeting |
| 5:00-9:00 | Conference registration, Colonial Inn |
| 6:00 | Third Annual '89ers Banquet |
| 7:30-8:30 | IMAGES OF WOMEN IN WESTERN ART, Corlann Bush, Montana State University |
| 8:30-9:30 | Reception, MHS |

Friday, October 23

| | |
|---|---|
| 8:30-10:00 | Roads Less Traveled |
| | THE MULLAN ROAD—Bill Furdell, College of Great Falls |
| | THE SKALKAHO ROAD—Rick Simpson, Montana Standard |
| | GOING TO THE SUN—Dennis Holden, Glacier National Park |
| | Danger Underground |
| | REMARKS ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF UNDERGROUND MINES—Fred Quivik, Renewable Technologies, Butte |
| | THE SOCIAL CONSEQUENCES OF LARGE-SCALE CORPORATE COPPER MINING—Brian Shovers, Butte Historical Society |
| | THE SMITH MINE DISASTER—Paul Anderson, GCM Services, Butte |
| 10:30-12:00 | Politicking in '89 |
| | WILL KENNEDY: ADVOCATE OF DEMOCRACY—Bill Lang, MHS |
| | DAVE BROWNE: FRONTIER ENTREPRENEUR—Dave Walter, MHS |
| | JOSEPH K. TOOLE—Richard Roeder, Lieutenant Governor's Office |
| | Montana Coal Towns |
| | MONTANA COAL COMMUNITIES IN THE PROGRESSIVE ERA—Virginia Heidenreich, Western Heritage Center, Billings |
| | MINING COAL IN RED LODGE—Erica Kuhlman, University of Montana |
| 12:30-2:00 | IMAGES OF THE WEST—William Kittredge, University of Montana |
| 4:00-6:30 | Tour of Frontier Town and talk, JOHN QUIGLEY: A WESTERN MYTH—John Vance, Senior Counselor, U.S. Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs |
| 7:00-9:00 | Banquet and Awards Ceremony |

Saturday, October 24

| | |
|---|---|
| 8:30-10:00 | Images of the Wolf |
| | THE WOLF IN SOCIAL LITERATURE—Lisa Mighetto, University of Washington |
| | THE REPOPULATION OF WOLVES IN MONTANA—Bob Ream, University of Montana |
| | THE WOLF IN BLACKFEET CULTURE—George Kipp, Blackfeet Tribe |
| | Capitalists and Entrepreneurs |
| | JOHN D. RYAN AND THE FORMATION OF MONTANA POWER—Carrie Johnson, Historian |
| | ANDREW B. HAMMOND OF MISSOULA—Dale Johnson, University of Montana |
| 10:30-12:00 | Images of Montana's Indians |
| | THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY'S DEPICTION OF THE BLACKFEET INDIANS—Ann Regan, Minnesota Historical Society |
| | THE WESTERN INDIAN IN FILM—Richard Holman, Hays-Lodge Pole School |
| | CONTEMPORARY ART AND THE USE OF INDIAN CULTURAL IMAGES—Dana Boussard, Arlee |
| 12:30-2:00 | TV AND THE IMAGE OF THE WEST—Elliott West, University of Arkansas |
| 2:30-5:00 | The West of the Imagination—Bill Kittredge, moderator |
| | PAINTING THE WEST—Ron Tyler, Texas State Historical Association |
| | PULP WESTERNS—Richard Etulain, New Mexico Historical Society |
| | THE IMAGE OF THE WEST IN POPULAR FILM—Michael Marsden, Bowling Green State University |
| | Elliott West, commentator |
| 5:30 | Montana Committee for the Humanities reception |
| 7:00 | Humanities Banquet and Awards Ceremony |

Oral History Project Studies Women's Groups

Since territorial days, Montana's women have gathered together to teach each other homemaking skills, to fight to reform frontier morals, and to establish libraries, museums, and parks. A new oral history project sponsored by the MHS Oral History Office—"Women as Community Builders: Montana Women's Organizations"—will document these activities and record other ways in which women's groups helped to build Montana's communities. The project will examine why lodges, church circles, professional associations, civic organizations, and ethnic clubs were important to women. It will also identify the organizations' goals, issues, and projects and discover what the differences were among autonomous, auxiliary, and co-ed groups.

In the next several months, chief interviewer Diane Sands, MHS Oral Historian Laurie Mercier, and several contract interviewers will record forty to fifty interviews with women representing different organizations, class backgrounds, and regions of the state. "The history of women's groups in Montana is a long and complex one," noted Mercier, "and in the next few months, we will only be able to scratch the surface. I hope local oral historians will continue the project after we have finished, recording the stories of women in their own organizations and communities."

Mel Ruder, photographer, courtesy of Mel Ruder

Members of the Columbia Falls Business and Professional Women's organization at the town's library in 1956: (from the left) Mrs. Ben Hyndman, Mrs. Herb Anderson, Mrs. Charles Hetzer, Mrs. Ray Bell, Mrs. Ralph McClintock, and Mrs. Duane Lind

Sands and Mercier will present the project's findings at "Molders and Shapers: Women as Community Builders," a conference sponsored by the American Association of University Women and the Montana Committee for the Humanities, to be held in Helena on November 13-15, 1987. The project will produce a booklet based on the interviews, which will include an overview of the study's findings, excerpts of interviews, and advice on how to conduct a similar project on the local level.

For more information about "Women as Community Builders," write to Laurie Mercier, Montana Historical Society Oral Historian, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620, or call (406) 444-4779.

Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Archie Bray Foundation, Helena | Vase, "Untitled #12," by Kurt Weiser |
| Jane Power Tobin, Helena | 30 pieces of clothing belonging to Mrs. C. B. (Mabel) Power |
| Roy D. Miller, Helena | Artifacts from the Miller Ranch near Ringling & the Mint Bar & Cafe, Belgrade |
| The Family of Norman & Belle Winestine | Clothing, household items, etc. from the estate of Norman & Belle Fligelman Winestine |
| Helene Edkins, East Glacier | Portrait of Thomas Dawson by Winold Reiss |
| W. Earl Moore, Pamona, California | Pair of skates, 2 planes, 1 puzzle |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| American Association of University Women, Helena | AAUW records, Helena branch, 1948-1986 |
| Stanley E. Collum, Three Forks | Philip Henry Sheridan letter to Northern Pacific Railway president G. W. Cass, 1863 |
| Melinda Hurst, Los Angeles, California | Melinda Alexander papers, including "The Voyage of Hotel De Bum: A true story of a four months camping trip on western trails," ca. 1914-1918 |
| McKee Anderson, Dillon | Charles A. Whitman papers, concerning Whitman's career as a soda fountain "mixologist" and confectioner in Helena, 1902-1934 |
| Mr. & Mrs. Bill Flick, Sheridan | Records of Hamilton & Sweets, early Sheridan mercantile operation, 1872-1880 |
| Dale P. Herbort, GCM Services, East Helena | Montana City archaeological study by Mauck Brammer and Peter Meloy, 1972 |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Jesse Malone, Choteau | Bynum Centennial Committee, Bynum: Roundup of Memories (1986) |
| Vi Lemieux, Culbertson | Culbertson Centennial Committee, One Hundred Years in Culbertson, 1887-1987 (1986) |
| Kathrun Kelly, Parma, Ohio | Members of the Potomac Corral of The Westerners, 14-volume Great Western Series (1967-1975), Great Western Indian Fights (1960) |

Recording Montana—Hi-line Memories

by Laurie Mercier

On one of my first trips out of the office, in late summer 1981, I traveled north to Hill County to talk with ranchers who had lived and worked in the southern part of the county during the first half of the century. Just where Highway 87 meets Highway 2—the hi-line thoroughfare that parallels the Milk River and the Great Northern Railroad line across much of northern Montana—lies Havre, the seat of local government and commerce for Hill County. Havre is a bustling service center for northcentral Montana and, like most railroad towns, its main business district fronts the rail line. The town, river, highway, and railroad serve as a division point between the dry-land wheat country to the north and the cattle ranches to the hilly south.

Vina Stirling and Steve Boyce had both lived out much of their lives ranching in the southern part of the county. I found Vina in her small, tidy Havre home where she had lived since selling her ranch in 1953. We spent a day together, retracing her years spent in the area.

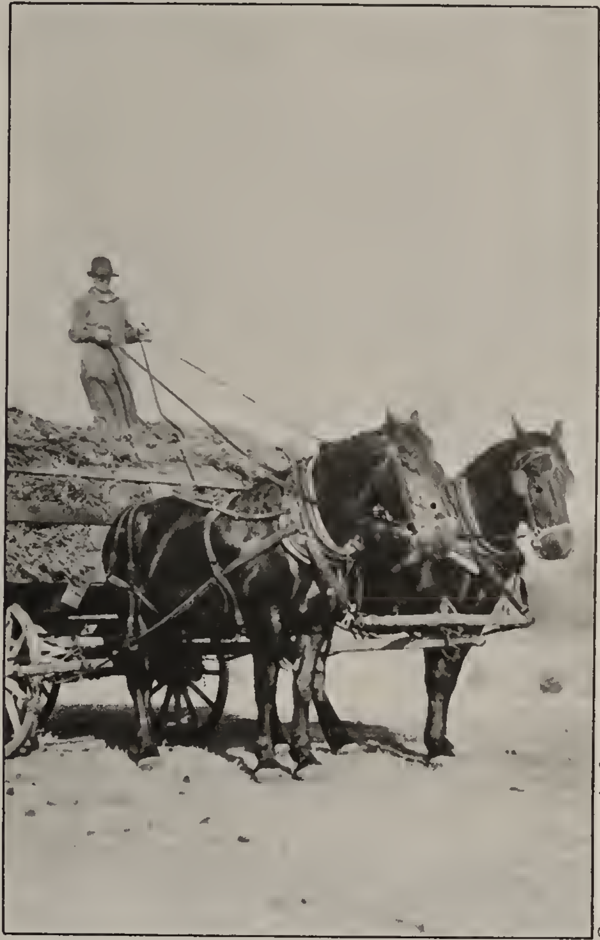
Vina attended school at Fort Shaw and began working as a domestic servant at the age of fourteen. Tired of housekeeping and poor wages, she took a job in a Chinook laundry in 1912. She developed arthritis from working in the steam laundry and from living in a cold, rented room, so she found employment at Havre's Park Hotel. Vina married in 1914, homesteaded with her husband on Fort Assinniboine land, and gave birth to three children. After her husband died from the flu in 1919, she moved to Havre, returning to the ranch in 1922 with her second husband. She spent the next several decades contributing to the survival of the operation: milking cows, cooking for hired hands, raising gardens and children. We looked at a few mementos from her thirty-one years on the ranch—furniture, dishes, photographs. Like other family photograph collections, these were snapshots of the good moments: a bumper hay crop, a new car, a portrait of smiling family and hired help around the kitchen table.

Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby; Circulation Manager: Chris Eby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

ISSN 0047-7958



Courtesy of Vina Stirling

Vina Stirling hauling hay in 1919

Courtesy of Mavis Boyce

Steve Boyce with coyote pelts in the late 1920s

Rancher Steve Boyce was born in the early 1890s in what is now Hill County. Like Vina, he had roamed the hi-line during his early years, working as cowboy and trapper before acquiring his first piece of land and first head of cattle. I interviewed Steve on his ranch nestled in the foothills of the Bear Paw Mountains. Steve was eager to share some of his favorite anecdotes. Before I could get the tape recorder going, he was describing last roundups and wild bar fights between bullwhackers and cowboys. In addition to spinning colorful tales about trapping wolves and the antics of hired men like Argie the Frenchman, Steve discussed the intricacies of ranching, from building up herds to shipping calves to market. He described his role in establishing a local Production Credit Association to help ranchers survive the hardships of the 1930s. Steve was honored by the 1973 "Stockman of the Century" award, but the highlight of his life was his purchase of the Henderson Ranch, his birthplace.

I always hoped I could interview Steve Boyce again, but he passed away a few months after my visit. In later years, as I got to know more people across the hi-line, his name would come up in conversation as someone who was a fine storyteller. I spoke with Vina Stirling recently and, at age ninety-five, she still lives alone in her Havre home. She chuckled over the telephone that she has been retired and living in town for as many years as she had worked on the ranch.

Vina Stirling and Steve Boyce are representative of a generation of men and women who struggled with economic and other hardships, worked long hours in an isolated environment, and patiently put together productive ranches that enabled them and their families to earn rewarding, if simple, livelihoods. Their survival was marked as much by determination, circumspection, and inventiveness as it was by luck. Like so many other Montanans, after retirement Vina and Steve remained near family, friends, and familiar landscapes. That close connection to a locality and the keen observations of personalities, events, and feelings that accompany the telling and retelling of their pasts imbue their reminiscences and make them particularly valuable in helping us understand Montana places.

Twentieth Century Photographs Depict Past and Present

Neon signs in central Montana, Butte's architecture, and the rites of Montana's Shriners are the subjects of three collections of photographs recently donated to the Society. "These collections contribute to our knowledge of Montana's advertising industry, its architectural heritage, and its fraternal organizations," said MHS Photograph Curator Lory Morrow, "and all three of them enrich our holdings of images dating from this century."

For many years, Electrical Products Consolidated (EPCON) was the largest firm in Montana that specialized in neon. Donated to MHS by Eastern Washington State Historical Society, the over 300 black-and-white photographs document many of the signs created by the firm. The brilliantly colored signs, which still draw customers to the state's car dealerships, cafes, bars, pool halls, motels, and movie houses, were photographed during the early 1950s within a four-hundred mile radius of Billings.

A twentieth century eye has also been turned on Butte's mansions, miners' houses, business blocks, and storefronts. Members of the Butte Camera Club have donated 361 slides to the Society, ensuring researchers access to these 1980s images of the Mining City's architectural heritage. Copies of the slides are also available at the Butte-Silver Bow Public Library.

This photograph of a neon sign in Laurel, Montana, is part of the Oliver Forester Collection in the MHS Photograph Archives.

The Society's collection of twentieth century images has also been expanded by nearly two hundred photographs of Montana Shriners' activities dating primarily between 1940 and 1960. Donated to the Society by the Consistory-Shrine Temple Association of Helena, the collection includes views of banquets, parades, costume balls, and bugle corps performances sponsored by Montana's Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

If you have photographs you would like to donate, write or call Lory Morrow, Photograph Curator, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4714.

AASLH Workshop at Society

The American Association for State and Local History (AASLH) has chosen the Montana Historical Society to host "Care and Conservation of Two-Dimensional Collections." The four-day workshop, funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities, will provide intensive, practical training in the care and conservation of drawings, letters, diaries, photographs, manuscripts, books, films, and tapes. To be held at the Society August 23 through 27, the program is open to the staffs and volunteers of all historical societies and museums in Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, and Montana.

AASLH Workshop Coordinator Sheila Riley feels that the workshop will meet a very real need. "Often, those who work in smaller historical agencies," she said, "haven't had the opportunity, or the time, to learn how to care for the two-dimensional materials in their collections. This workshop will help fill that gap."

During the program's nine sessions, professional archivists, conservators, and curators will teach management and administration of two-dimensional collections, conservation techniques, standards for microfilm and photographs, and disaster preparedness. Participants will also learn how to handle, store, and use their collections and how to prevent them from deteriorating.

AASLH is currently accepting applications for the workshop. Enrollment is limited to twenty-five participants, who will be chosen according to need and merit by a special selection committee. Travel stipends of up to $150 are available to participants demonstrating financial need. For more information, write to Sheila Riley, NEH Regional Workshops, AASLH, 172 Second Avenue North, Suite 102, Nashville, TN 37201.

Two Receive Bradley Fellowships to Work in MHS Library and Archives

Historian Mary Murphy of Butte, who is studying working-class culture in Butte and Anaconda, and Helena attorney James Zion, who has a strong interest in Montana's early court system, are the 1987-1988 recipients of the James H. Bradley Summer Fellowships. Named after Lieutenant James H. Bradley, a nineteenth century amateur historian and early supporter of the Society, the Bradley Fellowship is funded by an endowment from an anonymous donor and is designed to encourage research in the MHS Archives and Library collections.

Mary Murphy is the director of the Butte-Silver Bow Public Archives and is an active member of the Montana Oral History Association. Her publications include Butte, A Select Bibliography and "The Private Lives of Public Women: Prostitution in Butte, Montana, 1878-1917," forthcoming in The Women's West (University of Oklahoma Press, 1987). A Ph.D. candidate from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Murphy will use her $3,000 award to study the culture that working-class people created in Butte and Anaconda between 1917 and 1940. She has a special interest in oral history as a research technique, and she plans to make extensive use of the Society's oral history collection.

James Zion, a hearing examiner for the Montana Human Rights Division, received $1,000 to research Montana's early legal system. His particular interest is in the "people's courts," which were created by early-day Montanans to combat the lawlessness of the territory's first placer mining camps. While at the Society, Zion will analyze the day-to-day workings of these "voluntary tribunals of the people," using early court records in the MHS Archives.

Calendar

MHS Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Western Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection," through July 1987 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| June 17-August 1 | "Summer at the Society," Wednesdays, 12 noon at the Montana Historical Society, and Fridays, 12 noon on the Mall in downtown Helena. |
| July | Ice cream socials at Capital City Band concerts, Thursday evenings at Memorial Park. Sponsored by the Original Governor's Mansion Board. |
| August 21 | Russell lecture by Brian Dippie, 2:00 p.m., Haynes Auditorium, MHS. |
| August 23-27 | "Care and Conservation of Two-Dimensional Collections," AASLH-sponsored workshop, MHS. |
| October 8-11 | Smithsonian lectures and workshops, MHS |
| October 22-24 | Fourteenth Annual Montana History Conference, Colonial Inn, Helena |
| November 13-15 | "Molders and Shapers: Women as Community Builders," Colonial Inn, Helena |

The Montana Historical Society at 225 North Roberts in Helena is open Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tours of the state capitol are given on the hour, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m, Monday through Saturday, and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sundays. Tours of the Original Governor's Mansion at 304 North Ewing in Helena are given on the hour from noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

Brian Dippie to Lecture on Russell Art

Brian W. Dippie, noted authority on the art of Charles M. Russell, believes that "beneath [Russell's] unchanging cowboy exterior . . . was a serious artist" who, though not formally trained, studied and was influenced by the works of other painters who shared his passion for the American West. On August 21, Dippie will talk about the Cowboy Artist as part of the annual MHS Russell Lecture Series.

Professor of history at the University of Victoria, British Columbia, Dippie is the editor of "Paper Talk": Charlie Russell's American West and author of Remington and Russell. In his latest book, Looking at Russell (Amon Carter Museum, 1987), Dippie takes a penetrating look at Russell's art to assess how the Cowboy Artist was influenced by other western artists. At the Society, Dippie will talk about the connections between Russell's art and the photographs of eastern Montana frontier photographer L. A. Huffman.

Dippie's talk, held concurrently with the Western Rendezvous of Art, is scheduled for 3:00 p.m., August 21, in the Society's Haynes Auditorium. The lecture is open to the public and is free of charge.

☐ from the # ☐ Editor's # ☐ File

☐ The Western History Association has issued a call for session proposals for its 1988 conference in Wichita, Kansas, October 12-15. Proposals dealing with new trends and resources and innovative research in western history are particularly welcome, as are submissions by non-teaching historians. A brief summary of prospective papers, with names and a short biography of each presenter, chair, and commentator should be sent by September 1, 1987, to Judith Austin, WHA Program Committee Chair, Idaho State Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Drive, Boise, ID 83702-7695.

☐ Men and women who write or recite range rhymes are needed for the 1987 Montana Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Big Timber, August 21 and 22. The Gathering, held in conjunction with the Big Timber Rifle & Pistol Club Western Days Match, is an annual event that includes performances by cowboy poets, singers, storytellers, and yodellers; exhibits of western art; and packhorse and roping demonstrations. There will also be a sales table for books, tapes, and records produced by Montana's cowboy poets and singers. To sign up for the Gathering or to reserve space at the sales table, write to Cowboy Poetry, Box 1255, Big Timber, MT 59011, or call (406) 932-4227.

☐ Montana the Magazine of Western History is accepting manuscripts for the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award, which is given to the best article-length manuscript written by an undergraduate or graduate student on a Montana or western history topic. The award includes a $150 cash prize and publication in Montana. The award is based on the following criteria: (1) readability and style of presentation; (2) use of research materials; and (3) overall conception. Deadline for submission is July 1, 1987. Send manuscripts with a cover letter and a letter of faculty sponsorship to William L. Lang, Editor, Montana the Magazine of Western History, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, MT 59620.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

---

Post Scripts

by Bob Clark
Head, Division of Archives and Library

The Society Library contains a good many obscure publications. Not content with this, it has now produced one itself; or, rather, it has produced one in partnership with the Online Computer Library Center (OCLC) of Dublin, Ohio, and the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) of Washington, D.C.

Together we have put out a "book" about as distinguished-looking as a bus schedule—and just about as readable. It consists of a pile of 120 unbound, computer-generated, photoduplicated, 8½" by 11" pages. Even the title is ugly. Nonetheless, "A Union List of Montana Newspapers in Montana Repositories" has to be considered for its immediate potential usefulness to researchers of Montana history.

A Union List of Montana Newspapers lists every Montana newspaper in the Society's collection, plus all those found in some two hundred other Montana libraries, historical societies, museums, newspapers, and city halls during a three and a half year project funded by the NEH U.S. Newspaper Program. Everything was cataloged into OCLC's giant computerized system; and here they are back, arrayed in double columns—1,121 "titles" looking like the sample above.

If you're thinking that 1,121 is a surprisingly large number of newspapers, considering that Montana didn't get into the business until 1864, you're right. These "titles" represent what to common sense would be about half that number of newspapers. The difference results from the Library's catalogers' efforts to be consistent, despite newspaper publishers' apparent efforts to be inconsistent. Under the rules of cataloging, even such a remarkably stable paper as the Great Falls Tribune, published steadily as a daily since 1887, falls into several separate "titles" because of such minor tinkerings as changing the masthead from Great Falls Tribune to Tribune to Daily Tribune.

Strange abbreviations, odd symbols, bracketed clusters of numbers, and "see also" references also abound as the result of the attempt to bring precision, concision, and automation to bear on a disorderly world in which newspapers "absorb" one another and early issues get lost. An "Introduction" helps decipher the library and computer jargon. Once the code is cracked, all is revealed—when a newspaper existed, in what town and where, and whether copies can be found today, in the originals, and on microfilm.

```
 Great Falls tribune (Great Falls, Mont. : 1887 :
Daily)  Great Falls tribune.  Great Falls, Mont. :
    Tribune Pub. Co., 1887-1890.
   Vol. 1, no. 1 (May 16, 1887)-v. 6, no. 49 (Jan.
    13, 1890).
   OCLC  13801540.
   Frequency: Daily (except. Sun.)
      v. ;    cm.
   Notes: Other editions available: Great Falls
   tribune (1885).
   Other editions available: Great Falls tribune
   (Great Falls, Mont. : 1885)
   Continued by: Tribune (Great Falls, Mont. : Daily)
   LCCN sn  86-075238.
  MTL 1887-1890
   MTLA FM Montana Historical Society (Helena, MT)
    s=<1887:5:16-1890:1:13> (Scattered issues wanting)
   MTLB FM University of Montana Library
    (Missoula, MT) s=<1887:5:16-1890:1:13> .
```

Admittedly this is not fun bedtime reading, as is Sam Gilluly's anecdotal history of Montana journalism, The Press Gang. Moreover, copies of the Union List have been distributed to Montana public and academic libraries, so the need for a personal copy may not be urgent. One can be ordered, however, for $10, postage-paid, from the Society Library.

S
978.6
H6m
Spr. 87
SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS
PLEASE RETURN
STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

MONTANA POST

Vol. 25 No. 1 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Spring 1987

APR 1 1987
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Society Exhibits Constitutions

"We the people of Montana . . . do ordain and establish this constitution." With those words, Montanans in 1889 notified the U.S. Congress that they were ready to see their territory become a state. As Montana's statehood centennial approaches, all of the state's constitutions—the 1889 document and those adopted in 1884 and 1972—take on a special significance.

An exhibit of the original constitutions in the Society's lobby reminds us that these documents are the foundation of Montana's government and way of life. The constitutions are the focus of the exhibit, but also included are autograph books signed by the delegates to the 1884 and 1889 conventions, portraits of the convention delegates, and the walnut gavel used by 1889 constitutional convention president William Andrews Clark. The Society opened the exhibit on January 14 to coincide with the Society's legislative open house.

Montana first applied for statehood in 1884, but the Republican-controlled U.S. Senate summarily rejected the Montana constitution because the Republicans knew that the new state would vote Democratic. In 1889, the territorial government convened a new constitutional convention and drafted an entirely new document. The Democrats were in control of Congress that year, and on November 8, 1889, Montana became a state. Montana's most recent constitution was drafted after several years of intense study and debate. Approved by the state's voters in June 1972, it stands today as the basic law of Montana.

All three constitutions are part of the MHS Archives' permanent collection. The Archives also holds the minutes, proceedings, committee reports, and other records produced by the three constitutional conventions. Particularly extensive are the records of the 1972 convention, which include the papers of individual delegates, the 9,000-page transcript of proceedings, and minutes of all substantive committees.

Montana's constitutions will be on exhibit at the Society through mid-April. Anyone interested in using the constitutional records housed at the Society may do so in the reading room of the MHS Library.

W. A. Clark (foreground, with beard) presided over the Montana Constitutional Convention that convened in Helena in January 1884. The forty-one delegates to the convention produced the first constitution submitted by the territory of Montana; it was rejected by the U.S. Congress later that year.

Society Reference Librarian Dave Walter Helps Researchers Discover Montana's Past

"Which team won the first Montana State Catholic High School Basketball Tournament, and when?" "How tall was Cromwell Dixon, the nineteen-year-old who, in 1911, was the first aviator to fly across the Continental Divide?" "How much was a railroad ticket from Butte to Seattle in 1934?"

Through the mail, over the phone, and in person, researchers bombard Montana Historical Society Reference Librarian Dave Walter with questions like these. On an average day, he responds to eight letters, takes fifteen phone calls, and helps fifteen researchers in the Library's reading room. No matter how vague or arcane the questions, Walter tries to find the answers. The least that researchers can expect is a list of sources in the Library's collection or in the Archives' holdings of manuscripts, business records, and government documents. If necessary, Walter refers researchers to other repositories, including local historical societies, genealogical libraries, and the National Archives.

After eight years at the Society, Walter can quickly answer most questions on such popular western history topics as the Battle of the Little Bighorn, the Lewis and Clark expedition, and the art of Charlie Russell. But sometimes researchers' questions put Walter's recall and research skills to the test. One researcher, for example, wanted to know the most accurate record of temperatures in the Miles City area during the devastating winter of 1886-1887. Lists of that type aren't readily available, but Walter remembered that the U.S. Army Signal Corps station at Fort Keogh kept daily weather statistics during the 1880s. A little digging and thought led him to Miles City's Yellowstone Journal—available on microfilm in the Society's Library—which received its weather information from the Signal Corps. Walter enjoys the challenge. "My job is always enjoyable," Walter says. "Every day I'm learning something new about Montana history."

When he is not answering researchers' questions, Walter assists other departments in the Society, checking facts, chasing down obscure footnotes, and recommending new books. He keeps in touch with Montana's historical community and is familiar with the latest publications in Montana history. And editors at the National Geographic, the New York Times, and the Washington Post call on Walter to check their articles on Montana history for accuracy and interpretation.

Reference Librarian Dave Walter (left) with Library Program Manager David Girshick

The reference desk at the MHS Library, located on the Society's second floor, is open from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Mondays through Fridays; the phone number is (406) 444-2681.

For those who are curious, Butte Central won the first Montana State Catholic High School Basketball Tournament on February 28, 1937; judging by contemporary photographs, Cromwell Dixon was about six feet tall; and a railroad ticket from Butte to Seattle cost $18 in 1934.

Girshick Is New Library Head

David Girshick, the new head of the MHS Library, has been the Society's Catalog Librarian since 1978. Girshick received masters degrees in library science and history from the University of Washington and is an active member of the Montana Library Association. In his new position, he will supervise the Library staff, prepare budgets and long-range plans, and oversee the acquisition, cataloging, processing, and binding of the Library's collections.

Since 1984, Girshick has administered the Library's microcomputer system, and many of his plans involve using the computer to provide better service to the Society, researchers, and the general public.

Among the projects Girshick hopes to initiate are closer computer ties with the Western Library Network, an association of western libraries with holdings of over two million volumes; a long-term newspaper indexing project, beginning with the earliest papers published in Montana Territory; a specialized data base of the biographies of historically significant Montanans; and greater computerization of the Library's finding aids.

"Most of these projects are still very much in the planning stages," Girshick emphasized, "but when we find the funds and the staff time to carry them forward, all of them will allow us to better serve the researchers who use our collections, and that's always our primary goal."

MHS Foundation Will Raise Funds

The Montana Historical Society now has more to do than ever before—building and maintaining its collections, providing educational services to all Montanans, and aiding the state's local historical societies—but its financial resources have not grown to meet the need. Montanans now have an opportunity to help make up the difference. The Montana Historical Society Foundation, incorporated in 1986, is planning a major fundraising campaign to aid the Society's programs and activities.

The Foundation has hired Charles H. Bentz Associates, Inc., a national fundraising management firm, to coordinate its campaign. The Foundation's goal is to raise $5 million over a five-year period, with hopes for commitments of $2.5 million in the first year. The $5 million will be placed in an endowment, the interest from which will help the Society expand its collections and its services to Montanans.

With the income from the endowment, the Society will be able to better care for the hundreds of books, artifacts and artworks, public records and private papers, oral histories, and photographs it acquires each year. Through the Foundation, the Society will also hire field representatives to travel throughout Montana to find and acquire important historical collections. The Society also plans to establish an acquisitions fund for the purchase of rare and important Montana materials.

More than 90 per cent of the Society's ten thousand members live outside of Helena, but often the Society's programs only reach those who live in or can visit the capital city. "Building, maintaining, and improving our collections is vital," said MHS Director Robert Archibald, "but making sure that all Montanans can use our holdings is just as important." With funding from the endowment, the Society will be able to expand its outreach program to include lectures, symposia, traveling exhibitions, educational publications, and media programs that can reach people in many parts of the state.

If you are interested in participating in the MHS Foundation's fundraising drive or would like to know more about the campaign, write to Al Cohen, Senior Resident Campaign Director, Montana Historical Society Foundation, 101 North Last Chance Gulch, Helena, Montana 59601, or call (406) 449-3770.

Thompson Falls Site Listed in Register

A complex of dams, powerhouses, and other structures on the Clark Fork River at Thompson Falls was the first major hydroelectric project built by the Montana Power Company after the utility's founding in 1912. In recognition of its significance to Montana's power industry and its vital role in the development of Thompson Falls, the Thompson Falls Hydroelectric Dam Historic District has been listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

As early as 1905, the Thompson Falls Ledger reported local interest in using the Clark Fork River to generate electrical power. By 1912, the town's leading businessmen had formed the Thompson Falls Light and Power Company and construction of a small dam and power plant had begun. In that same year, the Montana Power Company began building its hydroelectric plant on the Clark Fork. By 1916, two dams, a powerhouse and a transformer house, two bridges, four homes, a hospital, and the Montana Power Company office were completed. The MPC plant, which is still operating, was soon generating 30,000 kilowatts of electricity for northwestern Montana and the Idaho panhandle.

Also listed in the National Register this fall were thirteen other buildings in Thompson Falls that, together with the Hydroelectric Dam Historic District, make up the Thompson Falls Multiple Resource Area; the Philipsburg Multiple Resource Area; the Hi Bug Historic District of Red Lodge; several additions to the Red Lodge Commercial Historic District; the Eagle Store of West Yellowstone; the William O'Brien House of Sheridan; and the Edgar S. Paxson House in Missoula.

The Thompson Falls Hydroelectric Dam Historic District includes this MPC powerhouse, shown above in 1916, and the bridge pictured below.

Society Hosts Legislative Open House

Every legislative session, the Montana Historical Society holds an open house for Montana's legislators, to let them see firsthand how the tax dollars they appropriate to the Society are used. This year's open house, held on January 14, drew one of the largest crowds in the event's history, over three hundred legislators and their families, preservationists, and members of the Society.

The visitors spent time in the Society's galleries, enjoying the superb collection of Charles M. Russell art and F. Jay Haynes's documentary photographs of the early West. They visited the offices where MHS staff work at interpreting Montana's heritage through publications, educational programs, and exhibits. And they viewed the storage areas where the Society preserves the priceless artifacts, photographs, manuscripts, and books that document Montana's past. Governor Ted Schwinden honored Montana's preservationists in an awards ceremony in the Haynes Auditorium, and the legislators and other guests had the opportunity to see the originals of Montana's three constitutions in a special exhibit in the Society's lobby.

Historic Preservation Office Presents Awards

Architect James R. McDonald receives his preservation award from Governor Ted Schwinden (left).

Those who identify, research, and care for Montana's historic properties often find their greatest satisfaction in the preservation of a historic site or structure and in their contributions to understanding Montana's past. On January 14, the State Historic Preservation Office gave the state's preservationists some extra recognition at an awards ceremony held at the Montana Historical Society.

Calling the preservationists the "stewards of Montana's heritage," Montana Governor Ted Schwinden presented Certificates of Registration to those Montanans whose buildings or sites were listed in the National Register of Historic Places during the last two years. With the assistance of David Rivenes, chairman of the Montana Historic Preservation Review Board, Schwinden then presented Montana Historic Preservation Review Board Awards to the Gateway Inn Corporation and Livingston architect Jonathan L. Foote (for the Gallatin Gateway Inn); Realty Cotenant Partners 821 and architect James R. McDonald (for Missoula's Higgins Block); the city of Red Lodge and Carbon County, the Red Lodge business community, the Carbon County Historic Preservation Office, and Michels Raffety Architects of Livingston (for their revitalization efforts in downtown Red Lodge); and the City of Hardin and Big Horn County, the Big Horn County Historical Society, the Hardin Area Chamber of Commerce, and Agriculture, Inc. (for incorporating preservation goals in community planning).

The Review Board Commendation was presented to the Jefferson County Commissioners and the Jefferson County Planning Board. The commendation is given to those who have made exceptional contributions to the preservation of Montana's historic and prehistoric heritage.

"Certificates and awards don't begin to compensate people," noted State Preservation Officer Marcella Sherfy, "for their wonderful contributions to the preservation of Montana's heritage. I only wish we could do more to show our appreciation."

Recording Montana—An Oral Historian's View

by Laurie Mercier

I came to Montana in June 1981 to conduct interviews for the two-year, Montana Historical Society-sponsored oral history project, "Montanans at Work: 1910-1945." Fresh from the South, a region of raconteurs, I wondered how and if I'd be able to locate enough narrators from all parts of Montana to discuss the themes of the project. But I landed in an oral historian's paradise—a place where people trust a stranger to enter their homes to record their personal histories, where those willing to share their stories are innumerable, and where the miles traveled to meet people are as interesting as the destination.

Close to six years and six hundred interviews later, I recall quite vividly my first road trips, off alone to get to know Montana and Montanans. What struck me most about the state, traveling in any direction, was the magnificent scenery, outstanding not because of particularly spectacular features, such as high peaks or deep canyons, but because of uncluttered vistas and solitude, empty of the distracting signs of development found in more populous states. My favorite journeys were along desolate stretches of highways like 12, 200, and 212 in the eastern two-thirds of the state. Western mountains, lakes, and forests were predictably picturesque, but it was the landscapes along these routes in the east—with such dramatic views of the sky; subtle hues of rock, sagebrush, and butte; and frequent encounters with the antelope, pheasants, and hawks who still seem to feel at home on that land—that endeared Montana to me.

It was along those routes that I first encountered Montana hospitality and first heard the stories of struggle and survival that so deeply impressed me. I was always warmly welcomed as if a neighbor—often greeted in work clothes and socks in true, informal Montana style—even if I arrived in the middle of calving or Christmas baking. It was invariably assumed I would stay for a meal and was dished out many helpings of meatloaf, spuds, and jello salad and steaming cups of always-brewing black coffee.

A small community like Hobson or Circle produced more people who had something to say than I had time to interview—people who had come (or whose parents had come) to Montana from other states and other countries to homestead, ranch, work in mines, teach school, and start businesses. For various reasons and through various methods, the Montanans I interviewed for that first project had remained where they had settled for fifty years or more. They didn't feel that their lives warranted special attention, but because I wanted to hear about it, they'd tell me about the development of their community, the impact of changing technology on the size of agricultural units and women's housework, or depression and hard times. For Native Americans it was a different story of struggle and survival, as they recalled how white settlement and pressures on reservation lands affected their lives.

Clifford Walker Collection

I often wished I had been able to carry around a constantly recording videocamera that could pick up on the shared sights, scenes, and expressions that a tape recorder missed: cafe life, tours of old mine sites and family homesteads, home interiors replete with faded Charlie Russell prints, family photographs, and decorative objects lovingly crafted from wood, egg cartons, and dried prairie flowers.

In future issues of the Post, I will share with you some of my experiences getting to know Montanans in the diverse regions of the state. One of my deepest regrets has been my inability to find time to maintain contact with the many people who shared a few hours of a few days with me and whose friendships I still value. Many of them have since died. But I hope this column will allow me to renew acquaintances across the state as I recall some of the people, places, and stories that have meant so much to me.

---

Ed note: "Recording Montana," written by MHS Oral Historian Laurie Mercier, will be a regular feature of the Post.

Montana History Day Held at Society

The fourth annual Montana History Day will be held on April 25 at the Montana Historical Society. Sponsored by the Society and endorsed by the Office of Public Instruction, students from over thirty Montana schools will participate in the competition. Using this year's national theme, "Liberty: Rights and Responsibilities in History," students will present historical papers, exhibits, dramatic performances, and media projects.

Those students who win the state contest are eligible to compete in National History Day at the University of Maryland in June. For more information, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620; (406) 444-4794.

Bitterroot Valley Landmark Preserved

A lot of stories have been told about "Riverside," the mansion built by Marcus Daly's widow in the Bitterroot Valley, but few people have ever seen this elegant historic home. The Society's recent acquisition of the mansion along with the efforts of a dedicated local preservation group will soon make it possible for visitors to tour the mansion and some of its grounds.

The Daly family transferred ownership of the mansion to the Society on December 31, 1986, ensuring the preservation of this important Montana landmark. The Daly Mansion Preservation Trust, a Hamilton-area organization instrumental in saving the mansion, has been charged with administering the mansion and directing its restoration.

Margaret Daly built "Riverside" on the Bitter Root Stock Farm in 1910, ten years after the Montana copper king had died. Missoula architect A. J. Gibson designed the mansion in the Georgian Revival style, laying out forty rooms, sixteen bathrooms, and five thousand square feet of porches and verandas, making it the largest private residence in Montana. The house has been boarded up since Mrs. Daly died in 1941.

The Daly Mansion Preservation Trust is developing the mansion as a historic site that will eventually be restored to its former grandeur. The mansion will be open for tours this summer. For more information, write to the Daly Mansion Preservation Trust, P.O. Box 744, Hamilton, Montana 59840.

Friends of the Society Commemorates Women's History Month

March is Women's History Month, and the Friends of the Society will participate with a Montana Women's History Lecture Series. The lectures will be held at noon each Wednesday during March in the Society's third-floor conference room. Lectures will include "Sister Providencia's Work for Hill 57 Indians in the 1950s," by Joan Bishop (March 4); "The Madwomen in the Basement: Telling Each Others' Lives," by Linda Peavey and Ursula Smith (March 11); "Life in a Radical Community: Women in the Industrial Workers of the World," by Mary Murphy (March 18); and "Thoughts on Mary MacLane," by Richard Roeder (March 25). Tickets are $10 for the series, or $3 for each lecture, and may be purchased at the door.

A biography and slide program about Montana Congresswoman Jeannette Rankin are also available free of charge from the Friends during Women's History Month. The Rankin program is intended for use in junior high history and social studies classrooms. During the next year, the Friends will prepare a series of one-page biographies of prominent Montana women—among them attorney Ella Knowles Haskell, cartoonist Fanny Cory Cooney, rancher Susan Haughian, and photographer Evelyn Cameron—for use by junior high students. If you would like to schedule the Rankin slide program or arrange to receive the biographies, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4794.

Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photograph Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. The Post contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby; Circulation Manager: Chris Eby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864. ISSN 0047-7958

Post Scripts—A Review of Montana Authors

by Bob Clark, Librarian

A while back, it struck the editor that the complexion of the Post was perhaps a bit too smooth. It needed a more personal touch, a kind of wart amidst the reporting of one monotonous Society success after another. But the wart should be useful as well as decorative. What it might usefully do was to discuss books, especially fugitive publications about Montana that might be of interest to MHS members. The column might also provide odds and ends of booklore, shine an occasional light on obscure corners of the Society's collections, and, as she put it, "stuff like that."

Thus, "Post Scripts" was hatched and dropped in the library's lap. The catchy title is meant to suggest, not that it will deal with afterthoughts, but with things too important to go unmentioned.

One such thing is Montana Authors: A Bio-Bibliography (University of Montana Printing Services, 1985). Katherine Schaefer and Karen Hatcher, colleagues in the Mansfield Library, spent years of off-hours ferreting Montana authors out from the tangled volumes of Contemporary Authors and a score of other sources and sifting yellowed clippings accumulated through the years at the University of Montana, Montana State University, and the Historical Society. In 79 double-columned pages, they list 314 authors, with staccato biographical entries and the title, publisher, and year of first printing of their books.

The final, paper-covered neatness of the product conceals not only all the labor, but the strength of character it took to decide just who is a "Montana" author, and to stick to the decision.

They accepted only authors born in the state, or who lived here at least five years, and who produced a book. It could be a children's book, a western, or a textbook on the linking verbs in New Testament Greek, but it could not be just an article, and no articles are listed in the bibliographies. They skirted local histories produced by committee and eliminated themselves by excluding compilers and editors. They also excluded most nineteenth century authors. There is no entry for either Granville Stuart, whose Montana As It Is (published in New York in 1865) is often cited as the first book by a Montanan, nor Thomas Dimsdale, whose Vigilantes of Montana (Virginia City, 1866) was the first book published in Montana. Nor is there an entry for L. Ron Hubbard. His youthful years in Helena were perhaps not considered the inspiration for either his pulp westerns or his more profitable scientology. Yet, Massachusetts native Ernest S. Osgood gains entry with his ten years of teaching history at Helena High School, although his first, now-classic work, The Day of the Cattleman (1929), was not published until five years after he had moved on to the University of Minnesota.

Finding omissions and complaining about unworthies is half the fun, of course, although the authors diminish it somewhat by requesting that people send in additions and corrections. Even without our help, they have put together the handiest and most comprehensive listing of twentieth century Montana authors available. Copies are dwindling and cost only $5, prepaid, with checks payable to Montana Authors, Mansfield Library, University of Montana, Missoula, 59812. The authors don't even get the $5. All proceeds go to the Montana Library Association.

Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Rose Anderson, Lewistown | Stoneware bowl |
| Charles A. Westin, Denver | Archaeological items |
| Kirby Lambert, Helena | Flour sack, calendar |
| Jess Poor, Helena | Band jacket from Boston & Montana band |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Joan T. Holter, Helena | James S. Stuart diaries, 1863, of the 1863 Yellowstone Expedition |
| Virginia A. Bailey, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan | Edward S. Larned letters from Butte, 1894-1896, to his wife in New York |
| Joan T. Holter, Helena | James S. Stuart diaries, 1863, of the 1863 Yellowstone Expedition |
| Wilfred G. Hill, Omaha, Nebraska | Wilfred G. Hill letters, 1986, describing his administration of the CCC during construction of Lewis and Clark Caverns State Park |
| Donald E. Fallang, Helena | Melville Mercantile Company records, 1882 |
| Anderson L. Clark, Butte | Research collection on theater on the American frontier |
| Leland P. Cade, Billings | Joseph Cade family papers, 1913-1986, on ranching in Musselshell County, Montana |
| Engineer's Office, City of Helena, Helena | Benton Avenue Cemetery register, 1870-1886 |
| Judge Nat Allen, Roundup | National Translator Association records, 1966-1982 |
| Dr. Mary Kay Crumbaker, Eugene, Oregon | Treasure State Mercantile Company of Carter, Montana, records, 1917-1923 |
| Richard F. Newby, Helena | Records of Dog Creek Press, Helena, 1978-1980 |
| Helen Guthrie Miller, Butte | Thomas O. Larson papers, Choteau-area sheep rancher and state senator, 1912-1948 |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Mrs. Elva Miller, Helena | 10 photographs and 600 color slides of historical sites and buildings in Helena, late 1960s and 1970s, Robert Miller, photographer |
| Bill Sharp, Bozeman | 651 photos, 409 negatives, and 3 albums of activities at Civilian Conservation Corps camps in Montana, ca. 1933-1939 |
| Independent Record, Helena | 69 glass negatives of people dressed in formal dress and costumes, ca. 1918 |
| Peter Lener, Havre | 15,500 film negatives of activities at Havre Central High School, 1955-1960, Fred Miller, photographer |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Ray Routhier, Great Falls | Ray Routhier, The Black Devils (1982) |
| Alice C. Schumacher, Great Falls | Al Schumacher, Horsing Around with History (1968) |
| Bill Sharp, Bozeman | Bill Sharp, comp., Civilian Conservation Corps, Great Falls |
| University Congregational Church, Missoula | E. Earl Bennett, The Congregational Church in Missoula (1966) |
| Virginia Walton, Helena | Harrison Lane, Long Flight (1982) |

from the Editor's File

Northern Montana College in Havre will host a conference on "Triumph After Defeat: Custer, Riel, and Chief Joseph/From Reality to Myth" on April 9-11. Funded in part by the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the conference will focus on the ways myth has turned the defeated George Armstrong Custer, Louis Riel, and Chief Joseph into important western heroes. Speakers will include Joseph Epes Brown, Paul Hutton, Robert Utley, Hugh Dempsey, Richard Roeder, William L. Lang, and Blair Stone Child. Academic credit is available. For more information, write to Dorothy Westenskow, Department of Arts and Languages, Northern Montana College, Havre 59501.

Montana museums will soon have access to a library of educational videotapes produced by the American Association for State and Local History. The library, available from the Montana Association of Museums, includes "Interpreting History Through Three-dimensional Objects," "Labels: Verbal Communications of the Interpretive Message," and "Museum Education: A Tool of Interpretation." Available on April 1, the tapes will be distributed free of charge to any member of MAM. Write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4794.

The Pacific Northwest's archivists, historians, and oral historians will hold their annual conferences together at Spokane's Ridpath Hotel on April 23-25. Those registering for one meeting can attend the others without additional charge. For registration information, write John F. Guido (Northwest Archivists), Manuscript-Archives Division, Washington State University Library, Pullman, WA 99163; Madeline Buckendorf (Northwest Oral History Association), Idaho State Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Drive, Boise, ID 83702; and Robert Carriker (Pacific Northwest History Conference), Department of History, Gonzaga University, Spokane, WA 99258.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

The Friends of the Society is sponsoring a field trip on Wednesday, May 6, to Anaconda, Butte, and the Grant-Kohrs Ranch National Historic Site near Deer Lodge. The field trip, which is open to the public, will cost $20, which includes transportation, lunch, and gratuities. For more information, call (406) 444-4794. To make a reservation, mail your $20 check, payable to the Friends of the Society, to "Field Trip," Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620.

MHS Calendar

| | MHS Exhibits |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Western Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection," through July 1987 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell art |
| | Special Events |
| March 18 | Women's History Lecture Series, "Life in a Radical Community: Women in the Industrial Workers of the World," by Mary Murphy |
| March 25 | Women's History Lecture Series, "Thoughts on Mary MacLane," by Richard Roeder |
| April 15 | Friends of the Society meeting, program at 10 a.m., "The Archie Bray Foundation," by Kurt Weiser |
| April 24-25 | Montana Association of Museums, annual meeting, Glasgow |
| April 25 | Montana History Day, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Montana Historical Society and Capitol Building |
| May 6 | Friends of the Society field trip to Grant-Kohrs Ranch, Anaconda, and Butte. The public is invited. |
| May 20 | Friends of the Society meeting, program at 10:00 a.m., "Hats," by Betty Littell |
| June 7-11 | National History Day competition, University of Maryland, College Park |

The Montana Historical Society at 225 North Roberts in Helena is open Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Society is closed on holidays.

Tours of the state capitol are given on the hour, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Original Governor's Mansion at 304 North Ewing in Helena opens on April 1; tours will be given on the hour from noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

S
978.6
H6m
v.24 #4
Winter
1986

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST

Vol. 24 No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Winter 1986

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MPC Donates Records to Archives

DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JAN 23
STATE LIBRARY
6th AVE.
MONTANA 59620

At the turn of the century, nearly every Montana town had its own electric utility company, and many of the state's wealthiest capitalists—including William Andrews Clark, John D. Ryan, Nelson Story, and Samuel Hauser—invested in the growing industry. The Montana Power Company has donated a large group of corporate records to the MHS Archives, contributing greatly to our knowledge of these small electric companies, the men who backed them, and Montana's business climate during the early twentieth century. The MPC records also document the history of the giant utility from its founding in 1912 through 1947.

On December 12, 1912, four of Montana's largest electric companies—the Missouri River Electric Power Company, the Billings and Eastern Montana Power Company, the Butte Electric and Power Company, and the Madison River Power Company—merged to form the Montana Power Company, bringing with them nearly forty predecessor firms and subsidiaries. Over the next twenty-eight years, the MPC acquired another fifty-seven smaller electric companies, including those in Helena, Butte, Billings, Great Falls, Bozeman, Livingston, Big Timber, Columbus, Townsend, and Belgrade. Each time the MPC acquired one of these companies, it also acquired the firm's corporate records. The records of all eighty-three of the companies acquired by the utility are preserved in the Archives' new collection.

The MPC records include some fifteen hundred volumes and take up over two hundred feet of shelf space in the Archives. Company minutes, correspondence, and some legal documents supplement the financial ledgers that constitute the bulk of the collection.

"Our archivists have had a chance to examine all of the documents," said Society Director Robert Archibald. "The records touch not only on the early electrification of Montana, but also water rights, dams, real estate, mining, and community life. This is a remarkable collection, and we're delighted that the Montana Power Company has chosen to donate it to the Society."

Because of requirements in the Federal Power Act, the MPC will continue to maintain an ownership interest in the records, technically co-owning the collection with the Society. Despite this unusual arrangement, the records will be open to researchers on the same basis as are other Archives holdings. A computerized inventory to the collection, furnished by the MPC, is available to researchers in the MHS Library reading room.

Don Leuschen, president of Montana Power Company's utility division, transfers the company's historical records to Society Director Robert Archibald.

Montana History Conference Looks at Post-WWII Montana

Historians are expected to talk about "yesterdays," and the chronology usually stops a safe distance from the present—back at least fifty years or so. But when talk came around to history in the meeting rooms and social gatherings in the Missoula Sheraton, where the Thirteenth Annual Montana History Conference met on September 11-13, there was little said about Custer, mining frontiers, or other traditional Montana history topics. The theme of this year's conference was "Our Times," and that meant Montana history since 1945.

Under that rubric, aficionados of Montana history heard discussions of what happened and why by scholars, commentators, and those who have had a hand in shaping the state's history over the last four decades. The information purveyed in the two and a half days of lectures, presentations, and panel discussions pointed up the importance of learning more about Montana during the twentieth century and discovering how much Montana has changed since the end of World War II.

Participants take a break between sessions of the Montana History Conference.

In a keynote address, Gerald Nash, Professor of History at the University of New Mexico and author of The American West Transformed: The Impact of World War II (1985), challenged the audience to appreciate and understand the enormous changes that have overtaken the West during the last forty years. From the dramatic improvement in communications to the steep decline of resource industries, the West's political, economic, and social structures have undergone fundamental alteration. Our state is anomalous in many respects, Nash admitted, but he insisted that post-war developments had changed Montana more than anything in its history.

A session that captured much of the mood of the conference underscored Nash's point about systemic changes in the West. Leading off a discussion of the character of small towns in Montana, Society Oral Historian Laurie Mercier discussed what she discovered in a recently completed oral history of Montana towns. Mercier quoted her narrators on the effects of changing business cycles, the introduction of railroad and electrical service, the consolidation of high schools, and more.

The picture Mercier's sources drew of small-town Montana corresponded remarkably to the findings of the 1940s Montana Study. As noted Montana historian Richard Roeder explained to the audience, the Montana Study was as much a definition of community in Montana during the 1940s as it was a survey of the condition of Montana's small towns. Alec Hansen of the Montana League of Cities and Towns concluded the session by reminding everyone that Montana is still a state of small communities and that relative isolation and strained local government budgets still define many of them.

Poking fun at Montana's current budget crisis and the prospects for the state escaping the foibles of its history, University of Montana historian Harry W. Fritz provided one of the high points of the conference in a witty luncheon address. The audience nodded in amused agreement at anomalies Fritz raised, but there was much to contemplate about the connections between the state's recent history and its projected future.

Historians, of course, have little expertise in discoursing on the future, but attendees of this year's Montana History Conference paid attention to the call for more study and appreciation of recent history. Everyone also came away from Missoula with an expanded understanding of the complexity of "Our Times" in Montana.

Call for History Conference Papers, 1987

The Montana Historical Society has issued a call for proposals for papers for the Fourteenth Annual Montana History Conference to be held October 22 through 24, 1987, in Helena. Proposals should include a clear description of the paper's content, a list of the primary sources used, and an estimate of the paper's length. Send your proposal by February 1, 1987, to William L. Lang, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620.

Three Receive Awards at History Conference

At the 1986 Montana History Conference, the Society honored three individuals for their contributions to the study of Montana and western history. Claire Rhein of Stevensville, one of the state's most active local historians, received the Society's 1986 Board of Trustees Award. MHS Director Robert Archibald cited Rhein for her "unequaled commitment to state and local history" and the remarkable variety of projects she has undertaken and completed. Rhein was one of the founders of the Montana Oral History Association in 1981 and has been an "indispensable" volunteer at the University of Montana's K. Ross Toole Archives since 1974. As a member of the Stevensville Historical Society, she was instrumental in the restoration of Fort Owen and helped compile a local history of the Stevensville area, Montana Genesis.

John S. Gray, author of the award-winning Centennial Campaign: The Sioux War of 1876 (1976), received the 1986 Vivian A. Paladin Award, which is presented for the best article published in Montana the Magazine of Western History during the year. Gray's two-part article, "The Story of Mrs. Picotte-Galpin, A Sioux Heroine," appeared in the Spring and Summer 1986 issues of Montana.

Receiving the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award was Stacy A. Flaherty, who recently earned her M.A. in history from George Washington University in Washington, D.C. The Burlingame-Toole Award is presented each year to the undergraduate or graduate student who has submitted the best manuscript on the history of Montana and the region. Flaherty won the award for "Boycott in Butte: Organized Labor and the Chinese Community, 1896-1897," which will appear in the Winter 1987 issue of Montana.

"These three people have contributed significantly to the study of our region's history," said Archibald, "and we at the Society take great pleasure in recognizing their accomplishments."

Claire Rhein received the 1986 MHS Trustees Award from Society Director Robert Archibald (left) and Board of Trustees' President Michael P. Malone.

Montana Historical Society 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620 (406) 444-2694

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

ISSN 0047-7958

Garcia Stock Saddle Donated to Museum

A Garcia stock saddle, in remarkably fine condition for its more than eighty years, has been donated to the Society's Museum by Alice Giddings King of Billings. The saddle was made by Guadalupe S. Garcia of Elko, Nevada, perhaps the most famous of the western saddlemakers. Like most saddles made in California and Nevada, Garcia's saddles had small, round skirts and long, one-piece tapaderas (pointed pieces of leather that cover the stirrups and protect the rider's feet from brush, storms, and cold), but his saddles were especially prized for their comfort and sturdy construction.

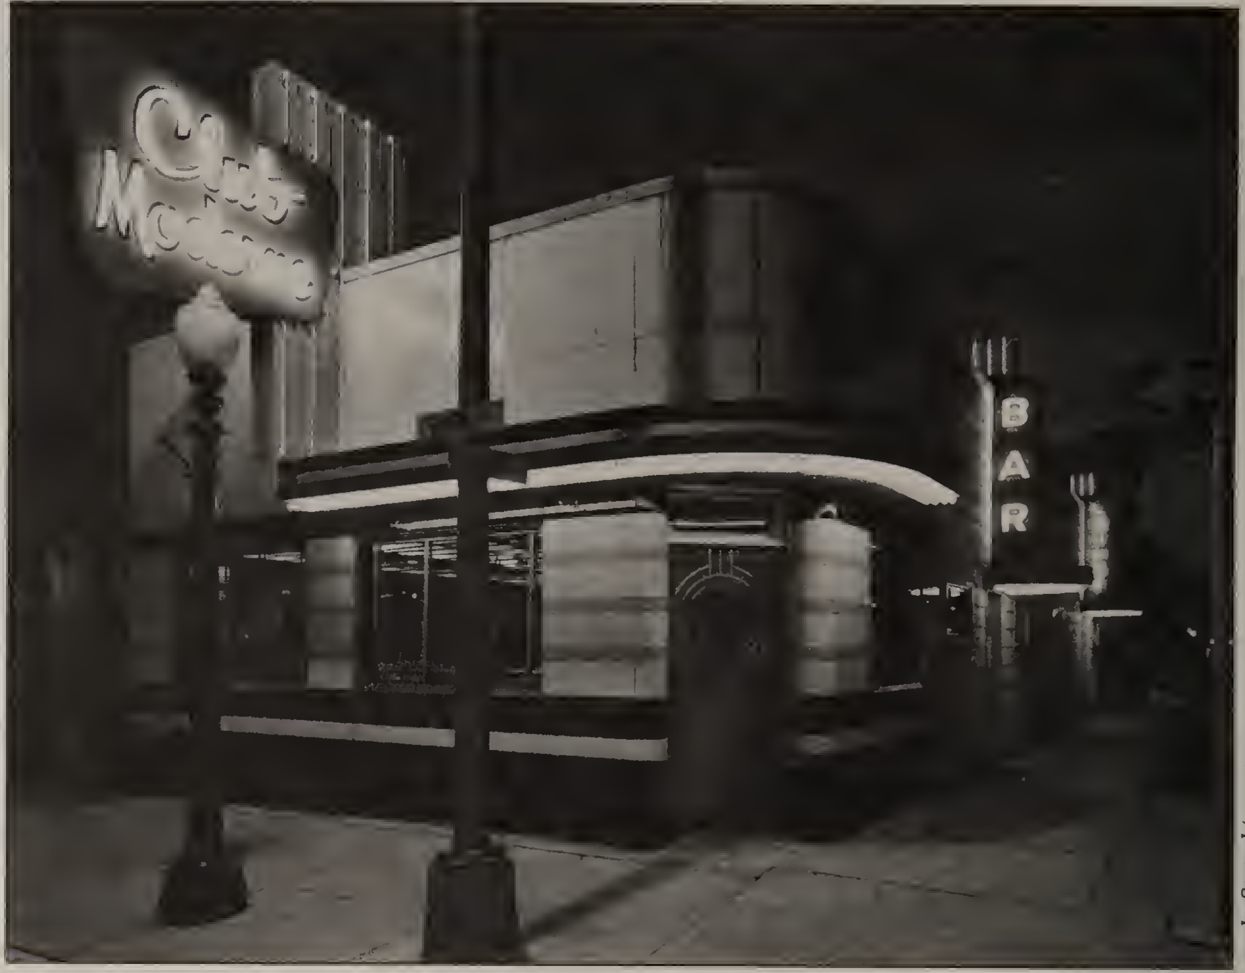
"The Garcia saddle was very popular with Montana's cowboys," said MHS Curator of Collections Susan Near, "but until Mrs. King's donation, we did not have one in our collection. I hope her generosity will inspire others to donate artifacts associated with the cattle industry, such as saddles, spurs, bits, saddlebags, lariats, chaps, bedrolls, and tents."

Mrs. King received the saddle on her sixteenth birthday in 1921 when she was living on a farm near Shepherd, Montana. Veteran cowboy Jim Buckey presented her with the Garcia saddle and an aging cow pony named Old Happy. "Never again," she later wrote, "was I to be so happy on a birthday."

During the sixty-five years that she owned the saddle, Mrs. King used it often—"anytime I could find a horse," she noted in a reminiscence she wrote about the saddle. On her eightieth birthday, she decided that her "wonderful hand crafted piece of leather" should be preserved in a museum, and she donated the saddle to the Montana Historical Society, where it is part of the Museum's collection of cattle industry artifacts.

If you would like to donate cattle industry clothing, tools, or equipment to the Museum, write or call Susan Near, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4713.

Club Moderne Listed in National Register



© John Smart, photographer

The Club Moderne in Anaconda is considered by many to be Montana's most intact and striking example of the Art Moderne architectural style, and this summer the bar at 811 East Park was listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

In 1937, John "Skinny" Francisco, the club's owner, hired architect Fred Willson of Bozeman to design what Francisco advertised as "The Northwest's Most Modern and Beautifully Appointed Bar and Cocktail Lounge." The one-story building was constructed of such machine-age building materials as asbestos, aluminum, chromium, acoustic tile, Nu-Wood, and Formica. Its neon signs, round corners, flat roof, circular windows, curving canopy of black and tan carrara glass, and elaborate wooden Art Deco bar give it the fresh, streamlined look that was so popular during the 1930s.

The Club Moderne's original interior decorative furnishings are almost intact. The rear cocktail lounge, which the October 9, 1937, Anaconda Standard called the "crowning achievement of the new building," still has the original back bar with its diamond-patterned henna and tan leather panels and back-lit glass shelving. Mirrored panels flank a chromium cash register, and customers still sit on the original chromium and leather bar stools. Each of the lounge's nine leather-covered booths has an individual jukebox, and six circular chromium tables rest on the original Art Deco rug. The lounge's lighting system—fluorescent bulbs covered by an overhang on the perimeter of the ceiling—casts a muted, multi-colored light over the room.

Other Montana properties listed in the National Register this summer are Havre's Carnegie Public Library, built in 1914, and the Helena South-Central Historic District, which includes over two hundred buildings.

Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| William & Rosemary Gallagher, Missoula | 2 rag rugs |
| Robert & Betsy Clark, Helena | 4 license plates |
| Belle Richards, M.D., Helena | Ear, nose, & throat chair |
| Betty Jean Wood, Helena | The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book |
| Georgia Barker, Helena | Crazy quilt, 2 pillow cases |
| Chuck and Donna Henry, Great Falls | Pool table from the Broadwater Hotel |
| Montana Lung Association, Helena | Portrait of Henrietta Crockett |
| Dorothy Grubb, Helena | Pump organ, folding rocking chair |
| Kenneth E. & Sylvia Ryan, Fort Peck Tribal Council, Poplar | Star quilt, given in memory of Gerald Red Elk |

Photo Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Miles City Public, Library, Miles City | 89 stereograph cards of Indians and Yellowstone National Park, N. A. Forsyth, photographer; stereo viewer |
| Virgil S. Proctor, Great Falls | 48 photographs of the Anaconda Minerals Co. ranch holdings in Deer Lodge, Silver Bow, and Powell counties, 1963 |
| Keith Clevenger, Helena | 41 black and white, and 3 color postcards of Helena-area buildings and geological sites, ca. 1930-1950 |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Minna Hewes, Boulder, Colorado | Norman and Belle Winestine papers, including records for the Jewish Cemetery Association, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Congregation E-Manu-El, and the New York Dry Goods Store, Helena, 1900-1950 |
| Walter A. Grecula, Seattle, Washington | Records from the construction of the ventilation system for the Great Northern Railroad's Flathead Tunnel (near Libby), 1966-1973 |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Don Mendenhall, Helena | Don Mendenhall, The Truth About Cowboys and Indians (1980) |
| Ronald K. Olson, Billings | Ron Olson, Three for the Bobcat (1984), Half Life (1984) |
| P.S.A. Partnership, Bozeman | Linda Peavy, Allison's Grandfather (1981); Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, Dreams Into Deeds (1985) and Women Who Changed Things (1983) |

Conservator to Work on History Exhibit

The new History of Montana exhibit at the Montana Historical Society will contain nearly twenty-five hundred artifacts. Before the Society acquired many of these Indian handicrafts, furniture, clothes, mining and ranching tools, and decorative objects, they were damaged by exposure to pollution, variations in temperature, dust, moisture, and direct sunlight. Helen Alten, the new conservator for the Society's Museum department, will conserve those damaged artifacts in preparation for the exhibit's opening in 1988.

Alten, whose position is funded for one year through a grant from the Institute of Museum Services, will examine all twenty-five hundred artifacts for signs of wear or damage and then clean and repair—that is, conserve—those that need it. She will also recommend the best lighting and humidity levels for the exhibit and the safest way to mount each artifact. "My job," said Alten, "is to make certain that all of these artifacts stay in good condition so that our grandchildren and great-grandchildren can enjoy them, too."

Consider, for example, a Blackfeet moccasin from the Society's collection of Indian artifacts. The moccasin is dirty and torn and has lost its shape after years of exposure to the dry Montana air. Before she begins to conserve the moccasin, Alten photographs it, recording its condition. She then gently cleans it with a solvent solution and repairs its tears with a specially formulated polymer adhesive. She places it in a humidity chamber to soften the leather and then reshapes it, returning it to its original contours. When Alten is finished, the moccasin looks almost new, and she photographs it again to document how it has changed during the conservation process. The moccasin is then stored or exhibited at the proper humidity and protected from excessive light and dust.

Alten is well prepared for her job at the Society. A native of Illinois and a graduate of Bryn Mawr College, she received her training in conservation at the University of London's renowned Institute of Archaeology. She has recently completed a stint with a British team of archaeologists that assisted in the excavation of a Roman site in Bulgaria.

"Helen is a real find," said Chief Museum Curator Steve Germann. "Only someone with her skill and experience could handle a conservation project of this magnitude. Not only are we asking her to conserve thousands of artifacts in one year, but we're expecting her to work on a wide variety of objects, constructed of many different materials. That requires great versatility, but Helen has already shown that she is up to the task, whether she is working on a Crow headdress, a fancy silk dress from 1900, the Lewis and Clark diorama from our old museum, or a miner's pocket gold scale."

While Alten is working on the artifacts for the new History of Montana exhibit, other members of the exhibit team will be constructing the exhibit itself, installing exhibit panels, track lights, and carpeting. The exhibit will open to the public on August 1, 1988.

MHS Conservator Helen Alten cleans a ca. 1860 Blackfeet headdress that will appear in the new History of Montana exhibit. Her work will include the conservation of such artifacts as the shield, moccasins, and skins pictured below.

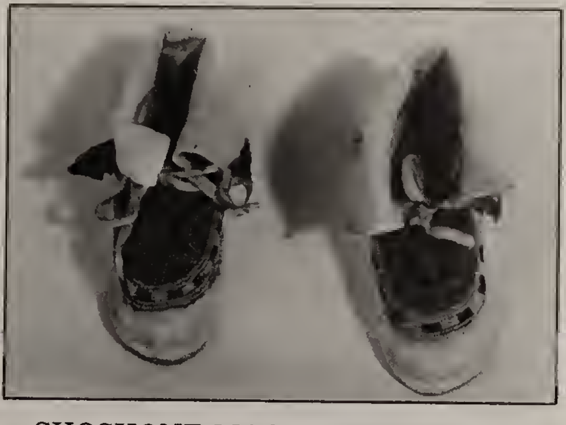
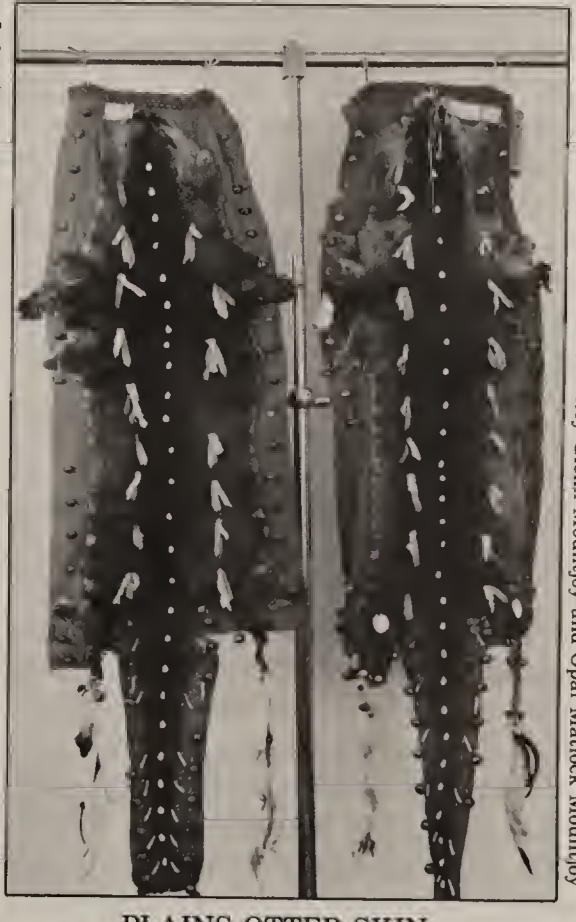
Lohmiller Collection, gift of Lee Enterprises

DANCE SHIELD, ca. 1900



Museum collection

SHOSHONE MOCCASINS, ca. 1900



Gift of Wiley Glenn Mountjoy and Opal Matlock Mountjoy

PLAINS OTTER SKIN SADDLE DECORATION, ca. 1890

Helena Businesses Subject of Oral History

What kinds of products and services did Helena businesses provide between 1917 and 1969? How did the 1935 earthquake affect Helena's business climate? Why did some businesses leave Helena's downtown during urban renewal, and why did others stay?

These and many other questions about Helena's commercial life will be examined in "Helena's Business History, 1917-1969," a new study sponsored by the MHS Oral History Office. The project will focus on the development of specific businesses and the ways historical events—the coming of the automobile, two world wars, and the Depression, for examples—affected them. Interviewers will question current and retired Helena businessmen about what they sold, how many people they employed, who their customers were, and what a typical workday was like. They will also ask the businesses' employees about their experiences in the workplace.

MHS Oral History Coordinator Laurie Mercier has trained volunteers Norma Jean Kelly, Loretta Lindell, Harriett Meloy, and Jan Cladouhos in how to record oral history; the volunteers have also been involved in planning the project from the start. "We've wanted to undertake an oral history project in Helena since our office was created in 1981," said Mercier. "With our limited resources, we have had to concentrate on projects of state-wide interest. Now, with the help of these talented and competent interviewers, we can begin what we hope will be the first of several oral history projects focusing on the Helena area." Mercier and Administrative Assistant Patricia Borneman will also conduct interviews for the project.

During the next year, the interviewers will complete fifty or more interviews with people who established or worked in Helena's manufacturing, communications, entertainment, service, grocery, and retail businesses. If you know of someone who should be interviewed for the project or if you would like to participate, write or call Laurie Mercier, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; (406) 444-4779.

L. H. Jorud, photographer

The Union Market is one of the firms being studied in the "Helena Business History" project. In this 1947 photograph, owner Frederick DeWolf (left) and son Bill inspect sides of beef.

Mansion's Third Floor Is Restored

The third floor of the Original Governor's Mansion has undergone some dramatic changes over the last year. The rooms on that floor now look as they did from 1913 to 1917, when Governor Samuel V. Stewart and his family lived in the official residence at 304 North Ewing in Helena. Governor Stewart's three daughters used the third-floor ballroom as a playroom, and two of the Stewart daughters, Emily Stewart Stevens and Leah Stewart Brickett, have written vivid descriptions of the room. The new furnishings, which include a period dollhouse, doll furniture, dolls, mechanical toys, and a children's table and chairs, were selected on the basis of the sisters' recollections. The playroom was also sometimes used for sewing, and a corner of the room contains a dressmaker's model, a Singer sewing machine, and a sewing cabinet.

When the playroom's walls were stripped as part of the restoration, former OGM Curator Mary Ellen Rowe discovered paint and wallpaper fragments from the 1913-1917 period; the room is now decorated in those same colors and patterns. A new oak floor, which matches the original, has been laid in the playroom and into the third-floor hallway, and a room that was furnished as a nursery several years ago has been made into a bedroom.

The Original Governor's Mansion is closed from January 1 until April 1, but tours can be arranged by appointment. Please make an appointment at least two weeks in advance by calling Joan Haefer, (406) 444-4789.

Archives Completes Live Stock Board Records

Early in this century, an epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease struck thousands of Montana horses and cattle, endangering the state's entire livestock industry. The Montana Live Stock Sanitary Board records, now available to researchers in the Society's Archives, document the efforts of one state agency to fight that epidemic and the outbreak of other livestock diseases in the state. In 1914, the records tell us, the Montana Live Stock Sanitary Board quickly organized a state-wide campaign to combat the foot-and-mouth epidemic; within months, the Board's veterinarians had halted the disease and averted a major agricultural disaster.

The Montana Live Stock Sanitary Board was created in 1907 to oversee the health of the state's sheep and cattle and to ensure that the public received dairy and meat products that were free from disease. When the Board was abolished and its functions transferred to the Board of Livestock, its records were placed in the Montana Historical Society Archives.

Archivist Bill Summers has organized the Sanitary Board's records into two collections: Record Series 61 and Record Series 73, covering the Board's activities from 1907 to 1967. "Both of these collections underline the important role the Sanitary Board played in keeping Montana's livestock in good health for nearly sixty years," Summers said.

Record Series 61 documents especially well the period from 1910 to 1923, when the Sanitary Board was establishing one of the finest livestock disease control programs in the country. Under the leadership of Dr. William J. Butler, the Board set up one of the nation's first livestock disease laboratories, where its scientists developed an oil emulsion dip that led to the eradication of cattle scab in Montana. The records from the Board's first twenty-five years also document the successful effort to combat the 1914 foot-and-mouth disease epidemic and include letters from ranchers and farmers who sought advice on how to treat their diseased livestock.

Butler was State Veterinarian from 1913 to 1948, and Record Series 61 preserves his daily correspondence with his deputy state veterinarians. These letters reflect the Board's efforts to eradicate such diseases as dourine, Bang's disease, brucellosis, tuberculosis, and hog cholera and are an invaluable source of information about the range of Sanitary Board activities.

Record Series 73 contains documents from 1951 to 1961, years when eradication of livestock disease was becoming more sophisticated, widespread, and controversial. During the 1950s, the U.S. Department of Agriculture mandated that all cattle in the country be inoculated against brucellosis, a highly contagious disease that causes spontaneous abortions. Many Montana ranchers were angry with the demand, believing that it was too expensive and of questionable effectiveness. Record Series 73 documents the Sanitary Board's efforts to carry on the campaign in the face of strong opposition.

If you are interested in studying the Sanitary Board's records, ask at the reference desk in the Society's Library.

MHS Calendar

Montana Historical Society Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Western Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection," through July 1987 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" portrays the life of Haynes who, as the official photographer for the Northern Pacific Railroad and Yellowstone National Park, documented the growth of the Northwest. |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell paintings, drawings, artifacts, and sculptures |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| January 21 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Writing History for Publication," by Joan Bishop |
| February 18 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Nez Perce War and the Big Hole Battle," by National Park Service staff |
| March | Tuesdays, 12 noon to 1 p.m., Women's History Lecture Series |
| March 18 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "The Life of a Governor's Daughter: An Example of an Oral History Interview," Laurie Mercier interviewing Leah Stewart Brickett |

1987 Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. |
| Montana State CapitolSixth & Montana, Helena | January: tours by reservation. February, March, April: tours on the hour, Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, Helena | Closed January through March, except for tours made by appointment. |

Admission is free for all tours. Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, (406) 444-4794, or Joan Haefer, (406) 444-4789. Group tours should be scheduled at least two weeks in advance.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

from the Editor's File

The nineteenth annual C. M. Russell Auction of Original Western Art will be held on March 19-21, 1987, in Great Falls, Montana. More than two hundred and fifty works of art will be sold during the auction, and drawings produced during "quick draw" competitions will be available for purchase. Proceeds go toward the support of the C. M. Russell Museum at 2824 Fourth Avenue South, Great Falls. For more information, write to the Great Falls Advertising Federation, P.O. Box 619, Great Falls, Montana 59403, or call (406) 761-6453.

The Montana Oral History Association is planning to update its Directory to Montana's Oral History Resources and needs the help of those who are knowledgeable about Montana's oral history resources. The MOHA is looking for detailed information about Montana oral history projects begun since the first edition of the directory was published in 1984. If you would like to help, write to MOHA, c/o Montana Historical Society Oral History Office, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620.

During the upcoming legislative session, from January through mid March, the Friends of the Society is offering two new guided tours—of the Justice Building and the lobby of the Fish, Wildlife and Parks building—in addition to its regular tours of the Society and the Original Governor's Mansion. The tour of the Justice Building will focus on the State Library, the Supreme Court chambers, and many paintings and sculptures by Montana artists. The Fish, Wildlife and Parks lobby contains a display of Montana mammals—deer, elk, a grizzly bear, mountain goats and sheep, and a wolf—and exhibits of wildlife art. The tours are available on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; they must be scheduled at least two weeks in advance. To make an appointment, call Joan Haefer at (406) 444-4789.

Society Has New Hours

Beginning December 27, 1986, the Montana Historical Society Museum, Library, and Archives will be closed on Saturdays. All offices will continue to be open Monday through Friday, from 8:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Society will reopen on Saturdays this summer, beginning with Memorial Day weekend.

The Society's Museum is seeking mail-order catalogs produced between 1900 and 1970. The catalogs are excellent sources of information about artifacts, and the Museum's staff often relies on them for details that are unavailable elsewhere. Both specialty catalogs and those issued by giant mail-order houses like Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck are welcome. If you can help, please get in touch with Susan Near, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620.

The Montana Historical Society Museum has published Care of Collections in Historic Buildings, a guide to the care of furniture, art, glassware, and other artifacts housed in historic buildings. The booklet was produced under a Conservation Project grant from the Institute of Museum Services and is available free to those who manage historic buildings. To order a copy, write to Susan Near, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620.

If You Can't Dance To It, It's Not Old-Time Fiddle! is the second phonograph record of traditional Montana music and folklore produced by the Montana Folklife Project. The album, which features Montana fiddlers playing hoedowns, waltzes, and polkas, costs $7.50 postpaid and can be purchased from the Montana Folklife Project, Montana Arts Council, 35 South Last Chance Gulch, Helena 59620.

Society Offers Two Bradley Fellowships in 1987

The James H. Bradley Memorial Fellowship, which the Montana Historical Society offers every two years to scholars and other researchers, is designed to encourage research in the Society's Library and Archives collections. This year, for the first time, there will be two recipients of the fellowship: a historical scholar will receive a $3,000 stipend, and a qualified Montana citizen or group with a local history project will receive a $1,000 award.

The recipient of the $3,000 award will be expected to devote four or more weeks to intensive research at the Society from June 1 through September 14, 1987, and to write an article for possible publication in Montana the Magazine of Western History. Those who apply for the $3,000 fellowship need not be professional historians, but they must be experienced researchers of proven ability. Applicants for the $1,000 award must live in Montana and be able to spend at least ten days using the Society's collections between June 1 and October 30, 1987.

The deadline for applications is March 16, 1987. The awards will be announced no later than May 4, 1987. For more information, write to Bradley Selection Committee, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620, or call (406) 444-2681.

5
978.6
H6m
v.24 #3
autumn.
1986

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST

Vol. 24 No. 3 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Autumn 1986

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 28 1986
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Society Opens New Addition

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

The Montana Historical Society officially opened its new building addition on July 18 and 19. The 16,000-square-foot addition, which took nearly a year to build, has new offices, work rooms, and storage areas. It is also the home of the new Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art and the temporary exhibits gallery, which features exhibits of art and historical materials from other museums and the Society's collections.

The opening of the addition, attended by over two hundred people, began with an art exhibit and reception. The art exhibit, which included one work by each of the forty artists participating in the Ninth Annual Western Rendezvous of Art, drew a large and enthusiastic crowd to the temporary exhibits gallery (left and above). The new addition was officially opened at the ribbon-cutting ceremony, where MHS Board of Trustees President Michael P. Malone spoke about the Society's contributions to Montana's culture and the architects and contractors expressed their pride at being part of the efforts to aid the preservation of Montana history.

Exhibit on Montana's Metals Industry Funded

This 1926 portrait of stenographers at the Black Eagle smelter's general office will appear in " 'The Stack Dominated Our Lives.' "

" 'The Stack Dominated Our Lives,' " an MHS-sponsored traveling exhibit depicting smelting and refining communities in Montana, has been funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities. The Society's staff, under the direction of Oral History Coordinator Laurie Mercier, will produce the exhibit, which will use photographs and oral history to tell about life in East Helena, Columbia Falls, Black Eagle, and Anaconda during this century. In early winter of 1987, the exhibit will travel to the four metals industry towns and then be available to other Montana communities.

Under a grant from Montana's coal severance tax fund, Mercier is currently interviewing residents of the four towns. Their descriptions of the role of the metals industry in their communities and their reminiscences about their work, unions, neighborhoods, and social lives will be the source for the exhibit's text. The fifty modern and historical photographs in the exhibit will come from private collections, local historical groups, and the Society's extensive holdings of Anaconda Company photographs.

Mercier sees the exhibit as an opportunity. "The grant from the Committee for the Humanities allows us to make public the rich recollections we have gathered in these four communities," said Mercier. "After viewing ' "The Stack Dominated Our Lives," ' Montanans will be able to better understand a very important, but little known, part of their heritage."

If you would like to have " 'The Stack Dominated Our Lives' " come to your town or if you know of photographs that could be used in the exhibit, write or call Laurie Mercier, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; 444-4720.

Joliet, MacHaffie Site in National Register

Several structures in Joliet, Montana, a small farming community in Carbon County's Rock Creek Valley, have been listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The Joliet Residential Historic District reflects the town's solid, but modest beginnings during the first two decades of this century. Most of its unpretentious, one- and two-story wood-frame homes were built from the popular "pattern book" designs of the period.

Other Joliet properties listed in the National Register include the Baker and Lovering Store, the Rock Creek State Bank, and the Southern Hotel; the Joliet Fire Hall/City Hall; two residences built outside the platted townsite by prominent citizens; the Joliet High School; and the pin-connected Pratt through truss bridge across Rock Creek.

Also added to the National Register was the MacHaffie Archaeological Site (24JF4) in Jefferson County. The MacHaffie Site contains stratified Folsom, Scottsbluff, and Middle Archaic cultural materials. In 1947, when it was brought to the attention of the scientific community, the MacHaffie Site was the first discovery of Folsom remains outside the Southwest.

Edrie Vinson, Photographer

This English-cottage-style house, one of only two brick residences in Joliet's historic district, was built in 1908 using a pattern book design.

"Western Art" Exhibit Opens in New Gallery

"Western Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection" opened in the Society's temporary exhibits gallery on August 22 in conjunction with the dedication of the new Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art. The exhibit, which will run for the next several months, includes over twenty works by Russell's contemporaries and by modern western artists.

"Western Art" features landscapes and studies of ranch life, Indians, and wildlife by Maynard Dixon, Winold Reiss, Elizabeth Lochrie, Joe De Yong, N. C. Wyeth, Edgar S. Paxson, Nick Eggenhofer, Ralph DeCamp, Edward Borein, Carl Rungius, Robert Lindneux, O. C. Seltzer, Philip Goodwin, Richard Lorenz, E. W. Deming, William Gollings, Peter Tofft, J. L. Clarke, and Jack Beauchamp.

Many of the oils, watercolors, pastels, charcoal drawings, and etchings in the exhibit have been shown in Billings, Bozeman, Great Falls, San Francisco, Minneapolis, and Kansas. Others have been featured in artists' retrospectives held at the Society, including Edward Borein's masterful etchings and Jack Beauchamp's Twister, a lithograph of a bronc and rider. Still others—such as the untitled J. K. Ralston ink wash and watercolor of a cowboy trying to saddle a reluctant horse—have never been in a public exhibit.

Edward Borein's etching, Wild Horse Hunters, is one of the works included in "Western Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection."

"The Society began collecting western art in earnest in the 1960s," said Curator of Collections Susan Near, "and over the last twenty-five years, we have acquired many excellent works by important artists. We're best known for our Russells, but I think our visitors will enjoy seeing our collection's full range of western art."

The temporary exhibits gallery is open Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Winter, Spring, Summer, and Autumn and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

Montanans Score High at National History Day

When the competition was over at this year's National History Day held at the University of Maryland in College Park, the Montana delegation had much to celebrate. Most of the state's twenty-one competitors had received "superior" ratings, and one Montana student took second place in her division. Miles City seventh-grader Kari Vadheim placed second out of seventy competitors in the junior media category with her videotape on "The Yellowstone Conflict: The Army Years." Documenting her study with modern and historical photographs, Vadheim depicted the important role of the U.S. Army in Yellowstone National Park. The Washington Middle School student was awarded $500 and a National History Day medallion.

Helena seventh-graders Jennifer Barker, Dave Herrins, and Katie Clark received the high score of ninety-six during the competition for their presentation about a group of American and Canadian commandos who trained at Helena's Fort Harrison during World War II. "The First Special Service Force: Those Devils in Baggy Pants" earned the C. R. Anderson Middle School students an "Outstanding State Entry" award, given to excellent entries not placing nationally.

"National History Day is a great training ground," said MHS Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson. "In preparing their projects, the students learned about research and writing, skills that will serve them well when they attend college. Whether they won awards or not, all of them gained self-confidence by challenging themselves against national competition."

Records of a Senator's Career: Lee M

Senator Lee Metcalf of Montana understood the value of historical records, and he knew that his own congressional papers represented an important source of information about recent U.S. and Montana political history. In the early 1970s, Metcalf became the first member of Congress, while still in office, to hire an archivist to prepare his papers for deposit in an archives. Metcalf donated his papers to the Montana Historical Society Archives in six installments from 1972 to 1978, and the Lee Metcalf Papers are now ready for use by researchers as Manuscript Collection 172.

Metcalf's papers span the years from 1953, when he first took office as a U.S. Representative from Montana's First (western) Congressional District, to 1978, when he died at the age of sixty-six while serving his third term in the Senate. MHS Archivist Christian Frazza has spent the last two years processing the collection's 829 boxes and preparing a 350-page inventory to the 404 linear feet of Metcalf's correspondence, campaign files, legislative bills, speeches, writings, and staff records. Metcalf's other donations include artifacts, photographs, maps, phonograph records, films, and audio and video tapes, which are preserved in the Society's Museum, Library, and Photograph Archives.

Born in 1911 in Montana's Bitterroot Valley, Lee Metcalf began his political career in 1936 as a Democratic state representative from Ravalli County. He worked as a Montana assistant attorney general until enlisting in the army during World War II; following the war, he set up a civilian court system in Germany and supervised local elections. Metcalf was associate justice of the Montana Supreme Court until 1952, when he was elected to Mike Mansfield's seat in the House of Representatives; he joined Mansfield in the U.S. Senate in 1960, filling the seat vacated by retiring James E. Murray.

Metcalf was known for his catholic legislative interests, his enormous energy, and his passionate partisanship. Never one to turn down a good fight, Metcalf was engaged in controversy throughout his career. The Lee Metcalf Papers document many of his battles, including his struggles to protect the environment, to mobilize federal resources to aid the poor, to achieve fair prices for the nation's farmers, and to regulate investor-owned utilities.

Metcalf was an early proponent of water pollution control, regulation of grazing land and timber harvests, and development of alternative energy sources; he also supported research on the harmful effects of pesticides and strip mining. A long-time member of the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission, Metcalf helped establish a number of waterfowl refuges. In his pursuit of responsible resource development, he supported rural cooperative efforts and assistance to small businessmen, farmers, and miners.

Metcalf had a deep love for Montana's wilderness and wild rivers, and in 1956, he co-sponsored the bill that would become the Wilderness Act of 1964. The collection documents his successful fight for the Lincoln-Scapegoat Wilderness Area, the Missouri Breaks and the Flathead Wild and Scenic rivers, and the Montana Wilderness Study Act, which mandated the study of 973,000 acres of Montana wilderness. At the time of his death, Metcalf was battling for the Great Bear Wilderness Area in northwestern Montana and the Absaroka-Beartooth Wilderness Area on the Wyoming state line. Both areas are now Wilderness Areas, largely because of Metcalf's efforts. In 1985, in recognition of his commitment to wilderness, Congress designated part of the Madison Range as the Lee Metcalf Wilderness Area.

Senator Metcalf (center) and his executive secretary, Vic Reinemer (with pipe), participate in hearings held in 1969 on the Utility Consumer's Counsel Act.

Metcalf was a western liberal, supporting Medicare, unemployment, and veterans' benefits; aid to libraries and schools; minimum wage and work safety laws; consumer protection; and improvement of Indians' living conditions. He also worked to reorganize the federal government to improve its efficiency and accountability.

Of all Metcalf's battles, perhaps the one he fought most vigorously was his struggle to ensure that the power industry be subject to public regulation. His long, adversarial relationship with the Montana Power Company and other investor-owned utilities is docu-

etcalf's Papers Open to Researchers

mented in speeches, articles, and interviews in Manuscript Collection 172.

Metcalf's constituents heard from him regularly, through newsletters, radio and television reports, and an extensive correspondence. And they sent him their thoughts about a wide range of issues, writing to him about farm prices, the Vietnam war, Forest Service policies, unemployment benefits, nuclear disarmament, and Model City funds. Constituents' letters and Metcalf's replies make up a significant portion of Manuscript Collection 172, documenting a dynamic period in Montana's recent political history.

Journalist Vic Reinemer, originally from Circle, Montana, was Metcalf's right-hand man for years, and Manuscript Collection 172 contains seventy-two linear feet of the papers Reinemer accumulated from 1950 to 1977. As Metcalf's executive secretary, Reinemer studied the political and economic influence of the electric utility and nuclear power industries. As staff director for the Senate Government Operations Committee's Subcommittee on Banking, Management, and Expenditures, of which Metcalf was the chairman, Reinemer investigated corporate power, government accounting and contracting procedures, the influence of lobbyists, and utility regulation. Reinemer's papers document his work with Metcalf and the subcommittee and include many of the materials he and Metcalf used in writing Overcharge, a critique of the utility industry published in 1967.

"This collection gives us a very clear picture of Lee Metcalf's political life from 1953 to 1978," said Archivist Frazza. "It documents his deep feeling for Montana, the issues with which he concerned himself, the arguments he used in making his points, both to Congress and to the folks back home, his relationships with the Democratic and Republican parties, even the structure of his office. Lee Metcalf's foresight in preserving his papers has left us with an invaluable record of his career."

Anyone interested in the Lee Metcalf Papers may study them in the reading room of the Montana Historical Society Library.

Congressman Lee Metcalf (left) talks with Montana's two U.S. senators, James E. Murray (center) and Mike Mansfield in 1956.

Holter Foundation Records Processed

The Holter Research Foundation of Helena, Montana, ended nearly forty years of scientific research and education when it closed its doors in 1983. The foundation's records were donated to the MHS Archives and now constitute the Society's most significant collection of scientific materials. The processing of Holter Research Foundation, Inc. Records was funded by a $50,000 grant from the foundation's board of directors.

The late Norman J. "Jeff" Holter, the grandson of Montana pioneer entrepreneur A. M. Holter, was a chemist and physicist trained at UCLA, USC, and the University of Chicago. He established the foundation in 1947 in Holter Hardware in downtown Helena, later moving it to the old Great Northern Railroad depot. Holter and an assistant, usually Wilford "Bill" Glasscock, studied earthquakes, the uses of radiation in medicine, and the phenomenon of square water drops, and their instruments were among the first to detect fallout from Soviet atom bomb tests during the early 1950s. The collection documents both the development and uses of these discoveries. It also shows how the foundation contributed to the efforts of other researchers and practitioners. Holter and Glasscock taught courses to Montana doctors on the use of radioisotopes in medicine, designed and built equipment for hospital research programs, and talked to community groups on scientific topics.

Bill Glasscock (left) and Jeff Holter working in the Holter Research Foundation laboratory in 1963.

The foundation's research reached its highest point with the development of the Holter Monitor, a portable device that allowed doctors to analyze the rhythms of a patient's heart during normal activity. The monitor represented a major breakthrough in the early detection of cardiac disease and is recognized throughout the world as an important diagnostic tool. The most significant portion of the collection consists of the laboratory books Holter and Glasscock used to record their refinements of this medical innovation.

The records of the Holter Research Foundation, Inc. include ninety-eight boxes of correspondence files, organizational and financial records, photographs of foundation projects, printed materials relating to the commercial production of the Holter Monitor, Holter's college notebooks, and tape recordings. Some of the foundation's laboratory equipment and several versions of the Holter Monitor are preserved in the Society's Museum.

Researchers can study this important collection in the reading room of the Society's Library.

MHS Foundation Formed

A new foundation has been formed to raise private funds for the Montana Historical Society. The Montana Historical Society Foundation, incorporated in December 1985, will begin its fund-raising efforts in earnest this fall after receiving recommendations from consultants Charles Bentz Associates of New Jersey. The consulting firm will examine the Foundation's prospects, recommend fund-raising techniques and identify funding sources, and assist the Foundation in selecting board members.

All contributions to the Montana Historical Society Foundation are tax deductible and will be used for the sole support of the Montana Historical Society. If you would like to know more about the Foundation or want to make a donation, write to Montana Historical Society Foundation, P.O. Box 4592, Helena 59604.

History Conference Adds to Program

Centennial workshops, a panel on journalism, and a tour have been added to the program of the Thirteenth Annual History Conference, to be held on September 11-13 at the Missoula Sheraton. Society staff members will present a series of workshops designed to help local groups plan for Montana's statehood centennial in 1989. The workshops, to be held on September 11, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., will focus on the uses of oral history, community architectural surveys, publications, and historical photographs in centennial celebrations and projects.

On Saturday, September 13, at 8:30 a.m., three Montana journalism professionals and former Time editor William Forbis will discuss "Montana Journalism in the Postwar Era." The panel will consider how Montana newspapers have changed since World War II and since the Anaconda Company sold its chain of papers to the Lee Newspaper Group in 1959.

Ravalli County Museum Director Erma Owings will lead a tour of historic sites in the Bitterroot Valley. The tour, which costs $17 (including dinner), will visit Fort Owen, St. Mary's Mission, and the Ravalli County Museum on Saturday, September 13, from 2:30 to 8:30 p.m.

MHS Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Grand Street Theater, Helena | 9 items of clothing belonging to Belle Winestine |
| Arta May Bratlien, Helena | Needlepoint wall hanging; George Washington at Christ's Church, print, 1908; print of outdoor dinner party, ca. 1925 |
| Mrs. William Skelton, White Sulphur Springs | 1863 phaeton carriage |
| Isabel Haynes, Bozeman | 4 cameras & assorted photographic equipment |
| John Treacy Beyer, Atlanta, Georgia | Bodice with crocheted lace |
| Opal Flightner, Hamilton | Quilt made by Laura McLaughlin Storer, 1862-1873 |
| Opal Smith, Helena | Decorative art pieces and household accessories |
| Holter Research Foundation, Helena | Equipment developed & used at foundation |
| Todd Saarinen, Helena | Kessler beer can |
| Janet McLaughlin, Helena | Wooden mallet found in Spring Meadow Lake |
| Charles E. Chappel, Bozeman | Electric magic lantern slide projector and wooden slide box |
| Joan Holter, Helena | Russell bronze, photographic enlarger, typewriter, radio, projector, adding machine case with film, items from Holter Hardware |
| Helen Hammond, Missoula | Linen damask runner |
| Helen Butka Sickman, Orangeville, California | Butter bowl, butter paddle, napkin, 2 towels |
| Jeanette B. Golden, Helena | Curtain stretchers |
| Mae Olson, Helena | Kitchen utensils, clothing items |
| Alfred W. Humphreys, Galt, Missouri | Coffee urn, sketch of R. E. DeCamp |
| June Johanna Stephenson, Libby | Oil painting of Curley by donor |

Photo Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Helena Ranger District, Helena | 2,653 aerial photos, 25 oblique photos, & 30 maps of Helena National Forest |
| Charles Chappell, Fort Benton | 205 lantern slides and 2 glass negatives including views of Yellowstone National Park & the Missouri River |
| Mountain Bell, Helena | 407 photos, 169 negatives, 153 color slides, & a film of Mountain Bell's equipment, services, and exchanges |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Nurses Association, Helena | MNA minute books, 1912-1976 |
| Utah Historical Society, Salt Lake City | Theodore A. Bailey diary, 1866-1867 |
| Lucy C. Young, Spokane | Thomas Francis Meagher papers, 1866-1951 |
| Joe Maynard, financial secretary, Butte Miners Union, Butte | Butte Miners Union #1 records; Women's Protective Association records; American Federation of Teachers' records |
| Anaconda Minerals Company, Butte | Company records, 996 volumes, 1881-1976 |
| Leif Erickson, Bigfork | Material relating to Democratic Senatorial primary campaign, ca. 1945 |
| John Fred, Helena | Ranney Yale Lyman papers, 1913-1950 |
| Homestake Mining Company/American Copper & Nickel Company, Wheatridge, Colorado | Jardine Mining Company records, 1900-1960 |
| Gordon Bennett, Helena | 23 journals of James V. Bennett, Scobey, Montana, farmer, 1929-1951 |
| Lance Olsen, Missoula | Wilderness Psychology Group records, 1976-1981 |
| Dorothy S. Curtis, Maine | George Snell diary kept during survey of NP Railroad, 1880 |
| Idaho Historical Society, Boise | Montana Lumber Company records, ca. 1930-1960 |
| Jerry Metcalf, Helena | Young Democrats in Montana records, ca. 1930s |
| Jerree Scheitlin, Phoenix, Arizona | American Red Cross, Dawson County Chapter records 1917-1970 |
| Gladys Haynes, Helena | Wilbur Fisk Sanders family papers, ca. 1892-1905 |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| First Lutheran Church, Helena | Jess Starnes, First Lutheran Church-1885-1985 (1984) |
| Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, Helena | Last Chance Audubon Society, Birds of the Helena Valley (1979) |
| Denes G. Istvanffy, Billings | Denes G. Istvanffy, Frustrations of an Immigrant (1982) |
| Montana Arts Council, Helena | D. J. O'Malley, D. J. O'Malley, Cowboy Poet (1986) |
| Charlotte Lane, Helena | Demetria Taylor, Roundup of Beef Cookery (1960) |
| McCone County Museum, Circle | Brand Book, Phillips County, 1957; McCone County Brand Book, 1958 |

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

from the Editor's File

Brigham Young University has announced the 1986 David Wooley Evans and Beatrice Cannon Evans Biography Award. The $10,000 prize will be awarded in April 1987 to a distinguished biography of a person significant in the culture or history of "Mormon Country" (the U.S. Intermountain West, southern Canada, and northern Mexico). Either manuscripts or published books may be submitted. Manuscripts should be book-length and ready for publication; books must have been published in 1986. Entries need not be limited to Mormon subjects, and all authors, regardless of religious affiliation, are encouraged to submit their work. The deadline for submissions is December 31, 1986. Entries should be submitted to Ted J. Warner, Department of History, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah 84602.

The headquarters of the National Society of Ghost Town Enthusiasts is now in the Montana Territorial Prison in Deer Lodge. With plans to establish a museum and library in the prison and publish a monthly newsletter, the Society is raising funds to provide educational services and materials about America's ghost town heritage. If you would like to join the Society or donate photographs, books, artifacts, or newspapers to its museum and library, write to the National Society of Ghost Town Enthusiasts, P.O. Box 263, Deer Lodge 59722.

The Northern Lights Research and Education Institute in Missoula, taking their title from Wallace Stegner, has published The Native Home of Hope, a collection of extensive interviews with people who have contributed to the culture of the Northern Rockies. Included in the volume are Montanans Rudy Autio, Belle Winestine, Jim Murry, Gretchen and Harry Billings, and Arnold Silverman, who reflect on what makes the region unique and how the land has shaped their lives. With an insightful introduction by Bill Kittredge from the University of Montana, this book is a thought-provoking look at the Northern Rockies as a distinctive region. Copies sell for $12.50 and can be purchased in bookstores or from Howe Brothers Publishers, P.O. Box 6394, Salt Lake City, Utah 84106.

A third floor room at the Society, used for over thirty years as a conference room and a meeting place for the Board of Trustees and many other groups, will be refurbished and refurnished in memory of E. E. "Boo" MacGilvra of Butte. MacGilvra was a Board member for a quarter of a century and is responsible for much of the Society's growth in terms of building expansion and acquisitions. A colorful man who personified Montana in the minds of hundreds of people throughout the country, Boo MacGilvra will now be memorialized at the Society, whose work was his major interest. Those wishing to remember him in this way may send their checks made out to the Montana Historical Society Foundation, P.O. Box 4592, Helena, MT 59604.

MHS Calendar

Montana Historical Society Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Temporary Exhibits Gallery | "Western Art: Selections from the Permanent Collection," August 1986—July 1987 |
| Haynes Gallery | "F.J. Haynes: Photographer" portrays the life of Haynes who, as the official photographer for the Northern Pacific Railroad and Yellowstone National Park, documented the growth of the Northwest. |
| Mackay Gallery | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell paintings, drawings, artifacts, and sculptures |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| September 11, 12, 13 | Thirteenth Annual Montana History Conference, Missoula |
| October 15-18 | Western History Association meeting, Billings |

1986 Autumn Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion | Tuesday-Saturday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Last tour at 4 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. |

S
978.6
H6m
v.24 #2
Summer
1986

PLEASE RETURN

[illegible] PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Vol. 24 No. 2 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Summer 1986

New Mackay Gallery of Russell Art Opens

The Montana Historical Society has been collecting the art of Charles M. Russell for nearly eighty years, ever since the Cowboy Artist himself donated the classic watercolor, York, to the Society in 1909. But it was not until December 1952 that the Society acquired a large and significant group of Russell works. Received from the family of Malcolm S. Mackay, New York stockbroker, Montana rancher, and friend of Russell, the collection of twelve oils, five watercolors, fourteen pen and inks, and seven bronzes was soon in the Society's new building across from the capitol in Helena. The Russell collection, which has nearly doubled in size since 1952, now has a new home at the Society with the completion of the new Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art.

On August 22, Society Director Robert Archibald will officially open the new gallery at a formal dedication. To celebrate the opening, John C. Ewers, former Senior Ethnologist at the Smithsonian Institution and an authority on Montana's Blackfeet Tribe, will talk about Russell's relationship with Native Americans, both as a friend and as a recorder of their customs and folkways.

"The new Mackay Gallery is a fitting showcase for the work of Montana's Cowboy Artist," said Chief Museum Curator Steve Germann. "With its oak floor, neutral wallcoverings, lofty ceiling, and superb lighting system, it provides visitors with a warm and welcoming environment within which to view Charlie Russell's depictions of life on the Montana frontier."

The new gallery contains not only the works purchased from the Mackay family, but also twenty-five pieces of Russell art acquired during

Continued on page 2

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
NOV 7 - 1986
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

His Wealth (oil, 24 by 36 inches) by C. M. Russell, 1915

Rarely Seen Russell Works on Exhibit in Mackay Gallery

Charlie Russell's His Wealth (oil, 1915, 24 x 36 inches) has rarely been seen by the public. Never before exhibited in Montana, it now hangs in the Society's new Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art. On loan from a private collector, His Wealth has only been exhibited twice: the first time in 1916 at Thurber's Gallery in Chicago and the second at New York's Wildenstein Gallery in 1963. Called "an exceptionally fine and interesting Russell painting" by noted Russell authority Frederic G. Renner, His Wealth depicts an Indian man riding a white horse, carrying a rifle, and wearing a wolf-skin cap. The man is surrounded by "his wealth": three wives and two children, also on horseback, and the family's belongings on two travois.

A pen-and-ink drawing of two longhorned steers standing over the skeleton of a buffalo can also be viewed in the new Mackay Gallery. The Long Horns Came to Morn Their Humpbacked Cousin (1918) was donated to the Society by the late William M. Allen. Allen was a Seattle collector of western art who donated two other Russell works to the Society, the 1924 bronze, Climbing Bighorn, and the 1897 oil painting, Moving Out.

"We are pleased to be able to exhibit these two fine works," said Curator of Collections Susan Near, "and we are especially pleased that their owners made them available to us in time for the opening of our new Mackay Gallery in August." The Mackay Gallery is open weekdays, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and weekends and holidays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Continued from page 1

the last thirty years, including the masterwork When the Land Belonged to God (oil, 1914, 42 ½ x 72 inches), which depicts a herd of buffalo crossing to the north bank of the Missouri River with the Highwood Mountains in the background. The painting was purchased in 1977 from Helena's Montana Club with funds from the Forty-fifth Montana Legislative Assembly. The gallery also features several Russell works never before exhibited at the Society, including a pen-and-ink drawing, The Long Horns Came to Morn Their Humpbacked Cousin, and the magnificent oil, His Wealth. Much of the Society's most recent Russell acquisition—the Great Falls Elks Lodge collection of illustrated letters, watercolors, and the oil, Deer at Lake McDonald—can be seen in the new Mackay's inner gallery.

The exhibit in the new Mackay Gallery of C. M. Russell Art features some of Russell's most famous works, including When the Land Belonged to God (1914), seen here at far right.

The works in the new Mackay Gallery have been arranged chronologically to allow visitors to trace Russell's artistic development. "As Charlie Russell gained skills and confidence over the years, his art changed dramatically," noted Curator of Collections Susan Near. "When you walk past the oil paintings, you will see a marked contrast between the stiffly drawn figures and dark colors of the early No Ketchum and the masterly drawing and complex handling of color in later paintings like Men of the Open Range."

The exhibits in the inner gallery will change from time to time, giving visitors fresh perspectives and information about Russell's life and art. Designed for maximum flexibility by Geoff Wyatt, MHS Exhibits Designer, the inner gallery has movable walls that can accommodate each new exhibit.

Since Charlie Russell made his donation in 1909, the Montana Historical Society has sustained a commitment to collect and preserve the work of Montana's most famous artist. It continues that commitment with the exhibit of several recently acquired Russell works and the opening of its new Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art.

Schedule of Mackay Opening
Friday, August 22

| | |
|---|---|
| 2:00 p.m. | Formal dedication, Robert Archibald, Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art |
| 3:00 p.m. | "C. M. Russell and the Indians," John C. Ewers, temporary exhibits gallery |

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Winter, Spring, Summer, and Autumn and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

Building Addition Opens

A special exhibit, speeches, a ribbon-cutting ceremony, and guided tours will mark the opening of the Society's recently completed building addition on July 18 and 19. As a preview of the Ninth Annual Western Rendezvous of Art, to be held in August, the Helena Arts Council is sponsoring an exhibit of one painting or sculpture by each of the forty participating artists. The exhibit will open on Friday, July 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Society's new temporary exhibits gallery, with speeches by Society Director Robert Archibald and Bob Morgan and Dick Duffy of the Helena Arts Council. The public is invited, and wine and cheese will be served.

A public ribbon-cutting ceremony will officially open the building addition at 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, July 19. Michael P. Malone, President of the Society's Board of Trustees, Montana historian, and Dean of the College of Graduate Studies, Montana State University, will describe "The Historical Society of Montana and Its Contributions to the Culture of the State." Then representatives of the architectural firm of Dana, Larson, and Roubal (Billings) and of Governor Ted Schwinden's office will join members of the Society's Board of Trustees and the three contractors responsible for the addition—Sletten Construction, Great Falls; Central Plumbing and Heating, Great Falls; and Sterling Electric, Billings—to cut the ribbon for the 16,000-square-foot addition. Beginning at 10:30 a.m., the Friends of the Society will lead tours through the addition, with the last tour at 1:00 p.m.

The special exhibit of western art will remain at the Society until August 18, when it will be transferred to the Helena Cultural Civic Center as part of the Western Rendezvous of Art. Those interested in attending the Rendezvous should write to the Helena Arts Council, P.O. Box 1231, Helena 59624.

Federal Properties Listed in National Register

Thirty-four federal properties in Montana have been listed in the National Register of Historic Places, including twenty-five buildings or sites in Glacier National Park. The Glacier properties, which include ten patrol or snowshoe cabins, six ranger stations or ranger station districts, a number of fire lookouts, the Ptarmigan Tunnel, and the Two Medicine General Store, tell a great deal about the National Park Service's management of the park. The ten cabins listed in the Register, for example, were built during the 1920s and 1930s to shelter the rangers who supervised the backcountry.

Telling a much different story are the nine Montana post offices listed in the Register. Often the most imposing buildings in town, the post offices—in Dillon, Great Falls, Miles City, Anaconda, Lewistown, Havre, Livingston, Glasgow, and Billings—are important symbols of the federal government and its place in the community. They also demonstrate the changes in federal design philosophy and public building programs. The Great Falls post office, for example, was constructed of brick and stone in the Second Renaissance Revival style in 1911-1912; the Glasgow post office, built twenty years later during the Depression, was designed to portray a modern interpretation of the Classical style.

Five other Montana properties have also been listed in the National Register: the Harry E. Randall house, 1003 Fourth Avenue North, Great Falls; the Camp Paxson Boy Scout Camp at Seeley Lake; St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, Mullan Road, Frenchtown; the Cooke City Store, Main Street, Cooke City; and the W. L. Adair General Mercantile Historic District at Polebridge.

Historical Research Associates

Pass Creek Snowshoe Cabin, Glacier National Park

Friends of the Society Honored

Friends of the Society — the Society's group of volunteers—were honored on April 16 at a luncheon at the Green Meadow Country Club in Helena. MHS Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson welcomed the more than thirty Friends and saluted the eight members who had been with the organization since its beginning fifteen years ago. Following a program in which the volunteers displayed their favorite family heirlooms, Society Director Robert Archibald thanked the group for its steadfast help over the years and presented awards to fourteen outstanding members of the organization.

Friends who received awards were Departmental Assistant Volunteers Phyllis Kleiv, Audrey Levitan, and Doris Hitt, who together in 1985 spent more than 1,200 hours helping the Society's programs; Docents Darien Scott, Betty LaSalle, and Rita Sheehy, who gave tours of the Society's galleries to literally thousands of students during the 1985 legislative session; Original Governor's Mansion Volunteers Marjorie Sharp, Margo Brooke, and Betty Jones, who guided many tour groups through the mansion; Muses Jane Addy, Elaine Comp, and Doris Hitt, who efficiently managed receptions, open houses, and other social events at the Society; and Interns Suzanne Thweatt and Marge Cooper, who provided invaluable services to the Museum and Oral History programs.

Denise Pennington, in recognition of her varied services to the Society since 1982 and her generous donation of Christmas trees and greens for the decoration of the Society's lobby during holidays, received the Director's Award.

If you would like to know more about the Friends of the Society or are interested in volunteering at the Society, call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794.

Denise Pennington (right) was among the fourteen volunteers honored.

Norman Winestine (1895-1986), A "Philosopher

Norman Winestine called himself a "philosopher in the body of a rather ordinary businessman," but during his ninety years, he was also a scholar, a crusader, the dean of Helena's Jewish community, and a long-time friend of the Montana Historical Society. A wise, gentle, and generous man, Winestine gave freely of his time and energy to help people and causes. His death on April 4, 1986, brought to a close a long and distinguished life of public service.

Raised in Connecticut and educated at Yale University, Winestine came west to Helena in 1921. For the next sixty-five years, he made his home in Montana's capital city, actively participating in civic and fraternal organizations and a wide range of cultural, educational, and religious activities. Never one to limit himself to local concerns, Winestine also campaigned for women's rights, world peace, and Jewish and Zionist causes.

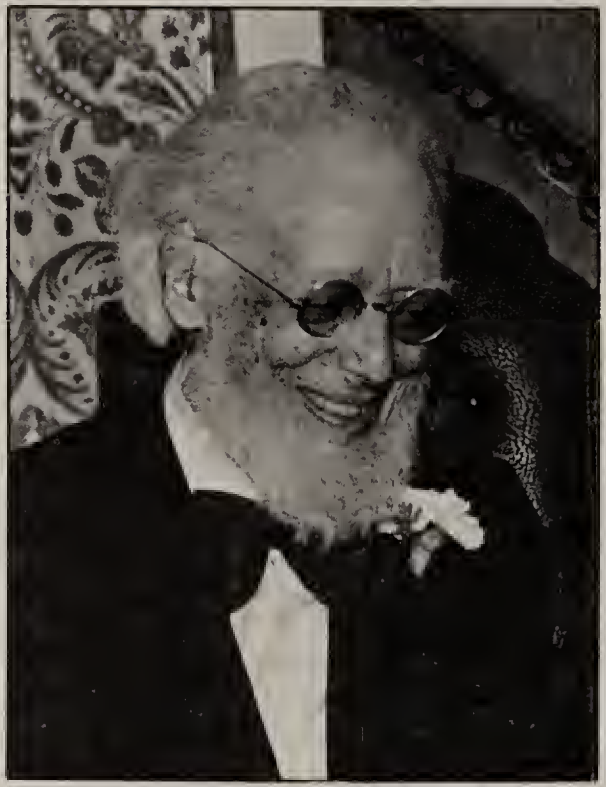
Winestine joined the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustees in 1949, at a time of vital growth. He served as board president from 1951 to 1953 and on the editorial board of the Society's new journal, Montana the Magazine of Western History, from 1951 to 1955. After he left the board in 1960, he continued to take an active interest in the Society's activities, and in 1981, in recognition of his years of service, he was honored with the MHS Trustees Award.

Norman Winestine will be best remembered for his tireless efforts to make this a better world, whether he was working to find new homes for those displaced by the Nazi Holocaust or to help revitalize the Montana Historical Society at a critical juncture in its history. His many friends remember him for his kind heart, his unquenchable thirst for knowledge, and his almost Biblical wisdom. In the following remembrances, three of Winestine's friends share their memories of this extraordinary man.

---

Norman Winestine may well be considered the generator of the reorganized Montana Historical Society. This began when, in the summer of 1948, Norman invited Ernest Osgood to speak to the Helena Kiwanis Club. Dr. Osgood, former long-time Helena history teacher, then nationally known professor of western history at the University of Minnesota, used the occasion to blast all of Montana for allowing the oldest historical society in the American West to become almost completely ineffective.

Norman carefully directed the enthusiasm which the speech aroused. Very soon the cooperation of the Society of Montana Pioneers was obtained and the use of their strategically located future building site, adjacent to the capitol grounds, was secured. Lester Loble led in the passage in the legislature of a statute reorganizing the Society, and in securing an appropriation for a building which would serve both the historical society and the Pioneers.



Gene Fischer

Norman Winestine in 1983

Mr. Winestine became the first president of the new Board of Trustees and in his quiet way gave strong direction to productive decisions. He was peculiarly well suited to promote the Society: urbane, judiciously persistent in his enthusiasm for things cultural: education, religion, literature, music, travel, and his Hasty Pudding Club at Yale University. He had the rare quality of delegating responsibility, yet securing prompt action. Plans for an unbelievably beautiful and functional building were developed. He supported the magazine committee in its incredibly bold venture of printing as many as 600 copies of its first issue. He resolved a frustrating search for a new director by discovering that Ross Toole might be available.

Through his wide acquaintance over the state and close connections in Helena, Norman continued to be a source of strength to the Society and its young directors. A quiet visit with the governor, usually a good friend, often tipped the political scales in favor of capable board members representative of the entire state. He and Mrs. Winestine, a state treasure in her own right, were faithful attenders of the annual conferences, but so quiet was their steady interest and pride in the progress of the Society that not until 1981 were they presented with the Trustees Award. Without thought of special recognition, Norman was deeply pleased with this acknowledgment of his work, which had been innovative, wise, and successful in shepherding the Society in its crucial years.

Merrill Burlingame
Montana State University
Bozeman

Norman was born into an age of national innocence when hopes were high that humanity was reaching a new enlightenment; when one could look with confidence toward the perfection of man and the triumph of light over darkness everywhere. He lived to see man commit genocide with unprecedented fury on an undreamed of scale and feverishly prepare to end his very existence on earth. He acutely observed and actively participated in two world wars, innumerable cultural and scientific revolutions, and witnessed development of mutual and casual terror as a way of life. Through it all, he was as optimistic as a fully informed person could be. He never abandoned the cause and the hope of human improvement, and he never stopped seeking ways and means of human salvation.

In a life filled with the distracting minutiae and diversions that any active and productive person must bear, Norman forever reserved a quiet place in which to cultivate and vindicate his need to learn and impart knowledge. This was not a casual need to be served as occasion and opportunity would permit. To a very great extent it was the ruling passion of his life. He was, in the literal sense of the word, a philosopher. He loved knowledge. He lived the idea, and the hope, that ennoblement and survival were obtainable through knowledge and that, in fact, the truth can set us free. He sought the best sources of information and exhausted them. He forgot little, if anything. He was a living, walking, talking encyclopedia of exact knowledge on a multitude of arcane as well as common subjects. And this world of knowledge was accessible to any and all who had sense enough to tap it.

in the Body of a Rather Ordinary Businessman"

There is no way to enumerate or summarize the variety and number of occasions when Norman enlightened individuals and groups who approached this font of information. And they received more than information. They received that rarest of all intellectual commodities: wisdom—working, practical, usable wisdom. Norman was, I am sure, as close to an Old Testament wise man as we are likely to see. While Norman made very substantial contributions as a citizen, parent, businessman, advocate of worthwhile causes, and community leader, it may well be that his greatest contribution was the imparting of knowledge and wisdom to his family, friends and associates, young and old, naive and sophisticated.

Judge Gordon Bennett
First Judicial District of Montana

Anyone who knew Norman Winestine would be amazed at the reluctance with which I first introduced myself to him almost ten years ago. At that time, I was beginning my research for my Master's thesis on Helena's pioneer Jewish community, and Norman and his wife Belle were suggested to me as people whom I should interview. I learned that Norman was very knowledgeable about Jewish history and it was my own lack of background in this area that made me apprehensive. It took me months to find the courage to telephone Norman and make an appointment. Then, I looked forward to our meeting with about as much enthusiasm as a student facing oral exams.

I never knew if Norman sensed my anxiety at our first meeting, but he and Belle welcomed me into their home as if I were a well-known Jewish scholar. They fed me cookies and hot chocolate, asked me questions about my work, and listened to my every word. Norman, in particular, was delighted that I had chosen Helena's Jewish history as my topic and was eager to assist me.

After this awkward beginning, Norman gradually assumed the position of my ex officio advisor. During the years that I researched and wrote my thesis, he directed me to numerous books and articles about Jewish history, explained Jewish religious traditions, and bolstered my waning enthusiasm for my topic when final deadlines were approaching. Finally, he rejoiced in my completion of the thesis and then suggested that I expand it into a book.

Norman was in a true sense both my friend and my mentor. He improved my knowledge of history, literature, and world affairs. He was a citizen of the world, a gentleman, and a sage. I respected him for his wisdom and trusted him as a counselor. He renewed my enthusiasm for learning and my faith in my own abilities to learn. He shared with me his vision of the world and gave me hope for its future. I will treasure his friendship forever.

Lory Morrow
Montana Historical Society

Accessions

| | |
|---|---|
| Museum | |
| Virginia Thompson, Helena | Linens, quilt, kitchen accessories |
| Margaret S. Davis, Helena | Framed print, Our Guest, ca. 1918 |
| Elmer Anderson, Port Townsend Washington, & Agnes Waisanen, Red Lodge | Board with chalk message from Smith Mine disaster; chalk; mineworker's I.D. tag; book: Manual of First-Aid Instruction for Miners, 1922 |
| Mrs. Monie Brownson, Havre | Suite of 6 chairs, lamp, mirror |
| Mary Hoffschwelle, Murfreesborough, Tennessee | Pie pan, cake pan, tart pan, mixing bowl |
| Richard & Helen Richter, Helena | Mortise & tenon joint machine with 4 bits |
| Library | |
| Anderson School Community Council, Helena | Little Red Schoolhouse Country Cookbook (1986) |
| Roger A. Barber, Havre | The Montana Baldwins (1985), by Donald H. Baldwin; Equal Rights Amendment Speaker's Handbook (1980), by Roger A. Barber |
| Sally G. Dingley, Dillon | Twin Bridges (1986), by Sally Garrett; Until Forever (1983), by Sally Garrett |
| Donald E. Fallang, Helena | Map of Camp Baker U.S. Military Reservation (1871), by T. C. Bailey, surveyor |
| Archives | |
| Gertrude Lindgren, Great Falls | Records of the Cascade County Community Council, 1947-1968 |
| Kurt Weiser, Helena | Financial records, Archie Bray Foundation, 1959-1975 |
| Dr. & Mrs. E.L. Burnham, West Linn, Oregon | Correspondence, scrapbook, ephemera, & photos of the Big Flat Pioneers Association, 1924-1964 |
| Patty Nelson, Rural Employment Opportunities, Inc. Helena | 20 60-minute cassette tapes of 27 interviews, Migrant Farmworkers Oral History Project |
| Homer Club, Butte | Homer Club of Butte records, 1895-1984 |
| Photo Archives | |
| Theodore Underseth, Helena | 110 glass & film negatives and 3 photos of the Birdseye & Canyon Creek areas |
| Norman Winestine, Helena | 444 photos & 11 negatives, 1919-1982 |
| Margaret & Alicia O'Malley, Altoona, Wisconsin | 209 photos, negatives, postcards, & 1 album; views of D. J. O'Malley & ranching activities |
| Velva Tuohy, Helena | 15 photos of Marysville |
| Isabel Haynes, Bozeman | 4,045 boudoir & cabinet photos taken by F. Jay Haynes, including views taken in Yellowstone National Park, St. Paul, Alaska, & other places along the N.P. route. |

Stanley R. Davison, 1911—1986

Stanley R. Davison, one of a handful of historians who have made a difference in the way we view our state's past, died on May 14 at the age of seventy-five. Known for his terse defense of his interpretation of western history and for his crackling sense of humor, Stan Davison did what few historians do: he looked in attics, old trunks, and less likely places for documents and artifacts from Montana's past. Once in possession of those treasures, he enthusiastically shared what he learned with colleagues and students and wrote up his findings in books and articles that have informed all of us.

Western Montana College

Born and raised in East Helena, Davison studied at the University of Montana and received a doctorate in history from the University of California at Berkeley. For over three decades, he taught history at Western Montana College in Dillon, where he was Professor Emeritus. Davison also contributed significantly to the Montana Historical Society as a member of the editorial board of Montana the Magazine of Western History for fifteen years and as a frequent contributor to its pages. In 1982, he received the MHS Board of Trustees Award for Contributions to Montana History.

For several years, Davison served on the Montana Historical Records Advisory Committee. Former State Archivist Brian Cockhill recalls how diligent Davison was in collecting and preserving historical records: "Of all the members of that committee, Stan was the one we could count on for thoughtful and consistent work. And as a researcher," Cockhill added, "he was as thorough in his method as he was energetic in investigating traditional historical topics such as early transportation and the history of reclamation."

At Montana, we will always remember and chuckle at Stan Davison's sense of humor, one that always had a clever twist to it. "I can still see Stan standing in our office several years ago," editor Bill Lang recalls, "telling Viv Paladin and myself his story of acquiring an important group of letters. The story was straightforward (we published it in autumn 1977), but Stan's asides had both of us nearly on the floor."

Stan Davison was a Montana historian with special qualities that others will find difficult to match. We will miss his skill as a historian and the way he pursued his craft.

Twenty-five Qualify for National History Day

The third annual Montana History Day was held in Helena on May 3, with the theme "Conflicts and/or Compromises in History." Winning topics ranged from Indian wars in the Yellowstone Valley to life on a Hutterite Colony near Lewistown, from women's roles in twentieth century Montana to the history of the Maya in pre-Columbian Central America. Volunteers from the Society staff and the Helena community judged the papers, projects, performances, and media presentations, and the winners received their awards from Supreme Court Justice John Harrison in a ceremony in the old Supreme Court Chambers in the Capitol.

Justice John Harrison presenting awards at History Day

After all the scores had been tallied, twenty-five of the eighty-five students participating in the Montana contest had qualified to travel to National History Day, to be held at the University of Maryland on June 17-21. In order to qualify for National History Day, students had to receive cumulative scores of at least eighty-four and place either first or second in their chosen category; in past years, only seventy points were needed. "I am very pleased to see such a high percentage of our participants qualifying for the national competition," said Society Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, "especially since it was much more difficult to qualify this year."

First-place winners in the Senior Division (grades 9-12) were: Historical Paper—Michelle Harney, Hobson Public School; Individual Project—Abram Barge, Bozeman Junior High; Individual Performance—Debbie Lucas, Choteau High School, and Don Larson, Choteau High School.

First-place winners in the Junior Division (grades 6-8) were: Historical Paper—Annie Racicot, C. R. Anderson Middle School, Helena; Media Presentation—Kari Vadheim, Washington Middle School, Miles City; Individual Project—Lisa Duffey, Choteau Junior High; Group Project—John Harding and Tim Hodge, C. R. Anderson Middle School, Helena; Individual Peformance—Scott Anseth, Choteau Junior High; Group Performance — Greg Bolin, Amy Chenovick, October Seastone, Erica Henry, and Tamara Driscoll, Helena Middle School.

Montana History Day is made possible by donations from individuals, volunteer and fraternal organizations, and corporations and with the cooperation of dedicated teachers throughout the state. If you would like more information or if you are interested in making a donation to support next year's History Day, write or call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena 59620; 444-4794.

Postwar Montana Focus of History Conference

"Modern Montana: The Transition of the State in the Postwar Era" is the theme of the Thirteenth Annual Montana History Conference, which will be held at the Missoula Sheraton on September 11-13. The three-day conference, sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and funded in part by a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, will begin at 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, September 11, with registration at the Sheraton.

The conference sessions will focus on how and why Montana changed after World War II. Gerald Nash, author of The American West Transformed: The Impact of the Second World War and Presidential Professor of History at the University of New Mexico, will place developments in Montana in perspective by presenting an overview of the changes World War II brought to the West generally. Harry Fritz, Professor of History at the University of Montana, will look at the state's recent history in "Montana 1965-2005: Past, Present, and Future"; and Alvin M. Josephy, Jr., author of Now That the Buffalo's Gone: A Study of Today's American Indians, will discuss "The Future of the West."

Agricultural, economic, and cultural changes in Montana following World War II provide the focus for one of the conference's five panels. Other panels will address the effects of postwar change on Montana's small towns and on two Native American groups, the Salish-Kootenai and the Crow; Montana's developing trade relationships with other countries in the postwar world; and the changes in forest management and use since 1945. The conference will also include tours of five historically significant sites or areas in the Missoula vicinity: the Nez Perce Trail across Lolo Pass, the Forest Service Smoke Jumper Center, historic downtown Missoula, postwar industrial sites like the Bonner Plywood Mill and the Milltown dam, and the Rocky Mountain Laboratory in Hamilton, a branch of the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases.

Members of the Society will receive registration information for the history conference in mid August. Participants are encouraged to return their registration fee and meal reservations by August 29.

Tentative Conference Schedule

Thursday, September 11

| | |
|---|---|
| 9:00-11:00 | Oral History Workshops |
| 11:30-12:30 | Montana Oral History Association Annual Meeting |
| 1:00-4:00 | Conservation Workshops |
| 6:00-8:00 | Second Annual '89ers Banquet |
| 5:00-9:00 | Conference registration, Missoula Sheraton |
| 7:00-9:00 | Reception, Missoula Museum of the Arts, Missoula County Courthouse, and Kappa Kappa Gamma House |

Friday, September 12

| | |
|---|---|
| 9:00-9:45 | "The West Since World War II"—Gerald Nash |
| 10:00-11:00 | Montana in the Postwar Era—Frank Grant, moderator |
| | "Montana Agriculture in the Postwar Era"—Tom Wessel |
| | "Montana's Economy in the Postwar Era"—Paul Polzin |
| | "Montana's Art and Culture in the Postwar Era"—Margaret Kingsland |
| 11:30-1:00 | "Montana, 1965-2005: Past, Present and Future"—Harry Fritz |
| 1:30-3:00 | The Salish-Kootenai in the Postwar Era—Betty White, moderator |
| | "Salish-Kootenai: Impact of Change on Tribal Life"—Tribal Elders |
| | "Kerr Dam: Symbol of Change"—Ron Therriault |
| | Small Towns in the Postwar Era—Art Dolman, moderator |
| | "The Montana Study: A Look at Small Towns Shortly After the War"—Richard Roeder |
| | "How Towns Work Today"—Alec Hanson |
| | "Changing Life Styles in Montana's Towns"—Laurie Mercier |
| 3:30 | "The Montana Crow in the Postwar Era"—movie (Contrary Warrior) and discussion |
| 4:15-5:00 | "Crow Nation: Impact of Change on Tribal Life"—Janine Pease Windy Boy, Connie Poten, Alvin M. Josephy, Jr. |
| 6:30-9:00 | Banquet and Awards Ceremony, Fort Missoula |

Saturday, September 13

| | |
|---|---|
| 9:00-11:30 | Montana and the World: Trading Beyond the Borders in the Postwar Era—Harry Fritz, moderator |
| | "The Developing American Relationship with the Pacific Rim Countries"—Ray Wylie |
| | "The Effect of the Carter Grain Embargo on Montana Wheat Farmers"—Michelle Larson |
| | "Montana's Changing Assets in the Postwar Era" |
| | Perceptions, Use, and Management of the Forests in the Postwar Era—Howard McDowell, moderator |
| | "State Forest Management Since 1945"—Gareth Moon |
| | "Development of Wilderness Programs Since 1945"—Bud Moore |
| | "Development of the Wood Products Industry Since 1945"—Ernie Corrick |
| | Field trip to the Rocky Mountain Laboratory, Hamilton—Robert Phillips |
| 12:00-1:30 | "The Future of the West"—Alvin M. Josephy, Jr. |
| 2:00-5:00 | Tours with slide shows: |
| | "Historic Downtown Missoula"—Jim McDonald |
| | "Industrial Sites and Processes from the Postwar Era"—Klepetko Chapter, Society of Industrial Archeology |
| 3:00-5:00 | Tours: |
| | "Nez Perce Trail, Lolo Pass"—Milo McLeod |
| | "Smoke Jumper Center"—Larry Eisenman |

from the Editor's File

The James Jerome Hill Reference Library in St. Paul will award a number of research grants of up to $2,000 each to support scholarly research in the James J. Hill Papers in 1987. The deadline for applications is December 1, 1986. For more information, write W. Thomas White, Curator, James Jerome Hill Reference Library, Fourth and Market Streets, St. Paul, Minnesota 55102.

The Program Committee of the Western History Association has issued a call for paper and session proposals for the WHA's Twenty-seventh Annual Meeting, October 7-10, in Los Angeles. Proposals for individual papers should not exceed one typewritten page and should be accompanied by a brief vita. Session proposals should not exceed two typewritten pages and should be accompanied by a brief vita for each participant. Mail ten copies of your proposal by August 15 to Paul Andrew Hutton, Department of History, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87131; (505) 277-5839.

The Oral History Association will hold its twentieth anniversary conference, "The Transformation of the West," on the Queen Mary in Long Beach, California, October 23-26. Speakers, panels, and media presentations during the four-day conference will focus on the role of oral history in documenting the history of the American West. For more information, write to the Oral History Association, c/o OHA Newsletter, Baylor University CSB Box 401, Waco, Texas 76798.

The Western Heritage Center in Billings is documenting Montana's underground coal-mining industry from 1889 through World War II in preparation for a major exhibition at the Center in February 1987. Project staff members are interviewing miners and their families about life and work in the coal towns and are collecting photographs and coal-mining artifacts. A traveling photograph exhibit will be available to all Montana communities when the project is completed. If you are interested in helping with the project or want more information, write or call Virginia Heidenreich, Western Heritage Center, 2822 Montana Avenue, Billings 59101; 256-6809.

The 1986 annual meeting of the American Association for State and Local History will be held at Oakland, California, on September 30-October 3. The meeting will feature workshops on professional development, public history, and fundraising. If you would like more information, write AASLH, 172 Second Avenue North, Nashville, Tennessee 37201.

MHS Calendar

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| June 17-21 | National History Day competition, College Park, Maryland |
| June 25-August 30 | "Summer at the Society"—Family programs each Wednesday at noon, Montana Historical Society |
| July 18 | Exhibit—preview of works from the Ninth Annual Western Rendezvous of Art, temporary exhibits gallery, 7:30 p.m. |
| July 19 | Grand opening of Montana Historical Society building addition, 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. |
| August 22 | Grand opening of Mackay Gallery of C.M. Russell Art, 2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. Lecture, "C. M. Russell and the Indians," by John C. Ewers, Senior Ethnologist, Smithsonian Institution, retired. |
| August 22-24 | Ninth Annual Western Rendezvous of Art, Helena |
| September 11, 12, 13 | Thirteenth Annual Montana History Conference, Missoula |

1986 Summer Hours/Memorial Day through Labor Day

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sunday, and holidays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, Helena | Tuesday-Sunday, Noon to 5 p.m. Last tour at 4 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. |
| Montana State CapitolJune 9-Labor Day, guided tours begin on the hour | Monday-Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Last tour begins at 4 p.m. Sunday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Last tour at 3 p.m. |
| Library and Archives225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Saturday, Sunday, and holidays |

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

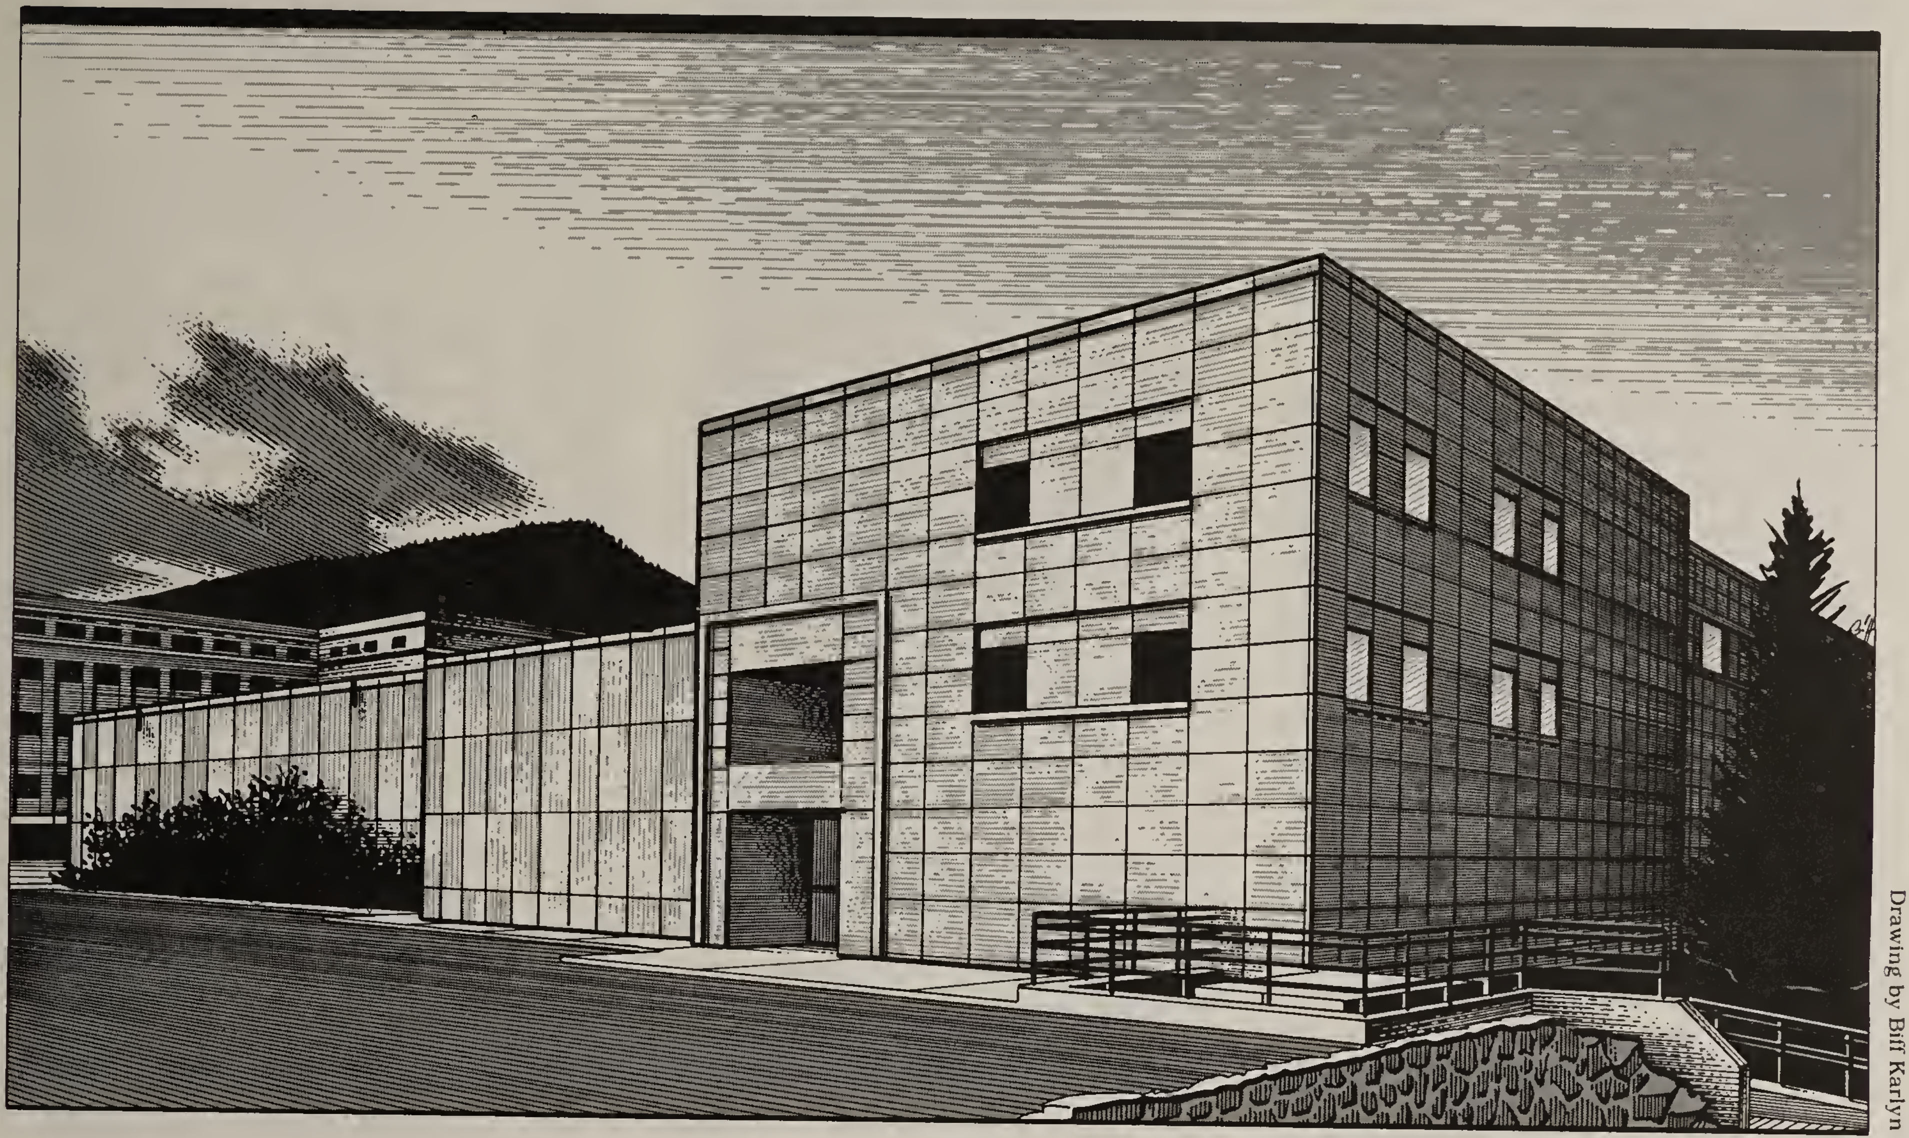
S
978.6
H6m
v.24 #1
Spring 1986

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Vol. 24 No. 1 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Spring 1986



Drawing by Biff Karlyn

MHS Addition Completed

The Montana Historical Society has a new, three-story building addition. After nearly a year of construction, the Society has acquired new public galleries, offices, and work and storage areas—16,000 square feet in all. The Montana history museum will double in size, and almost every program at the Society—from the Library to the Photograph Archives—has considerably more room.

You can see some of the changes when you first enter the Society's lobby. The Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art and the temporary exhibits gallery have been moved to new quarters on the main floor, and the nearly 4,000 square feet that the galleries formerly occupied are being remodeled as part of the new Montana history exhibit.

The Museum's new Mackay Gallery features state-of-the-art lighting, beautiful hardwood floors, and the Society's large collection of Russell paintings, drawings, bronzes, and illustrated letters. "A World to Remember: Bronzes of the American West," an exhibit of forty-seven bronzes from the Society's collections, is currently showing in the temporary exhibits gallery. This handsome gallery, also located on the addition's main floor, will exhibit art and historical materials from the Society's collections and will host traveling exhibitions from other museums.

The Library, located on the second floor, has an enlarged and remodeled reading room, additional stack space, and a staff workroom. The reading room now houses the Library's extensive vertical files and more microfilm readers, and the new stack area allows for quicker retrieval of frequently requested state documents.

Continued on page 2

Continued from page 1

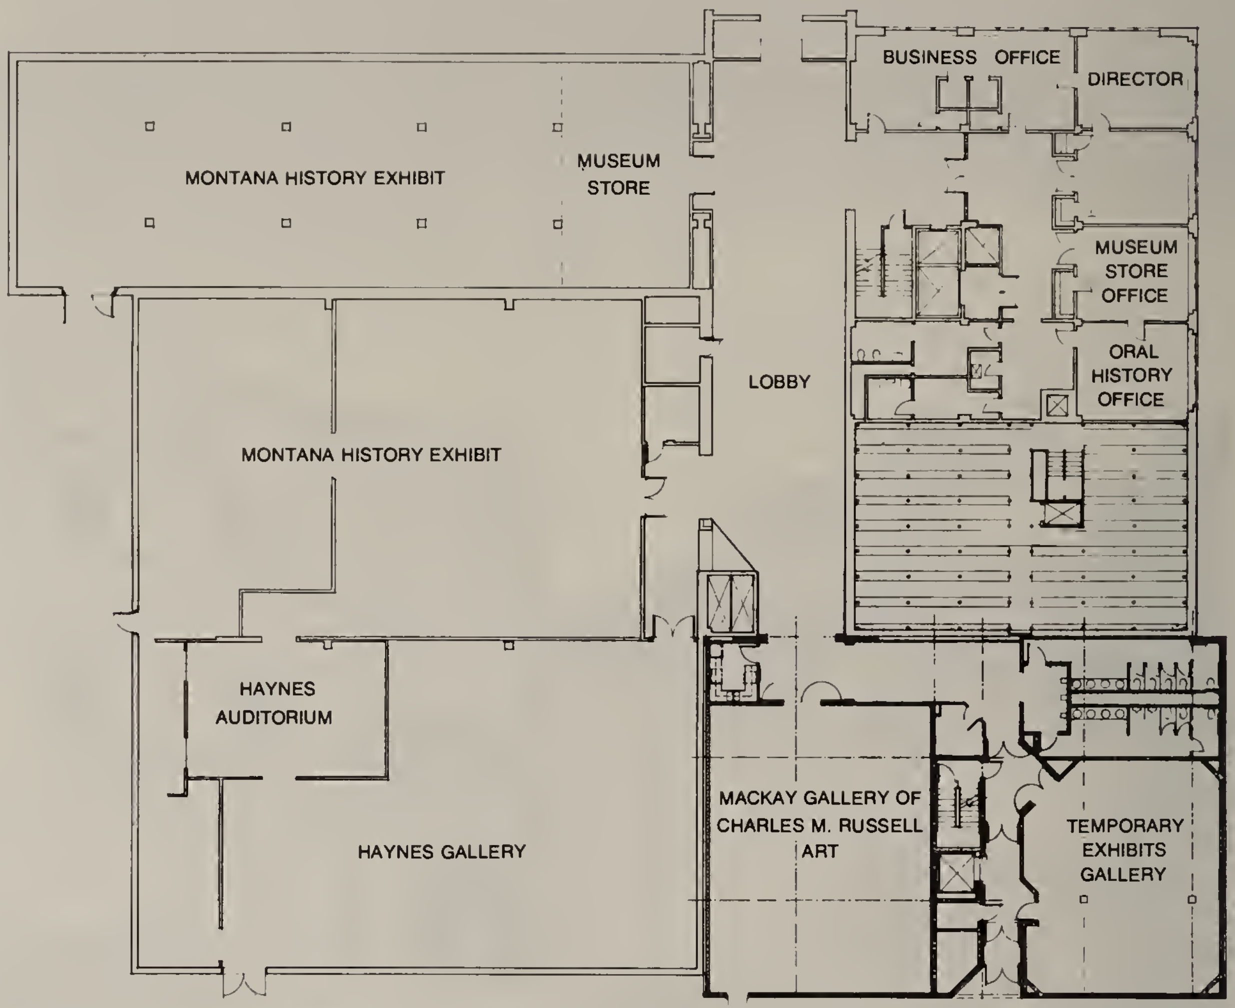
Of all the Society's programs, the Photograph Archives has undergone the most dramatic transformation. In its new offices on the addition's third floor, the program has a public reference area where researchers can work with the Photograph Archives' large collection. The photograph reference room will be open Monday through Friday, from 1:00 p.m to 5:00 p.m. The Photograph Archives also has new offices, a storage area, a workroom, a special vault for the storage of volatile nitrate film, and a state-of-the-art darkroom.

The Oral History Program has moved from the basement to the first floor of the original building, where it has more than twice the space that it had before. Although the Archives Program has not moved, it now has 4,000 square feet of new work, office, and stack areas. Both oral history and archival materials are still available to researchers in the Library's reading room.

The Publications Program has a new office on the east end of the addition's second floor, next to the Library's new workroom. The Merchandising office is located next to the Director's office on the main floor, and a new museum shop will soon be built next to the Montana history exhibit.

In addition to new galleries, offices, and reference areas, the Montana history exhibit is under construction. With twice the space of the Formal Museum and ten times the artifacts, the new exhibit will be completed in 1988. The Society is also planning more public programs, with more traveling exhibits and publications.

The Montana Historical Society continues as a dynamic institution, growing and changing to meet new needs and interests. The Society's hours are from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. The next time you are in Helena, please visit our new addition and see all of the exciting changes.



Dana, Larson, and Roubal, Architects

This plan of the Society's first floor shows where the new exhibit galleries are located.

The Society's new building addition is seen here in the final stages of completion.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

Elks' Russell Collection at Society

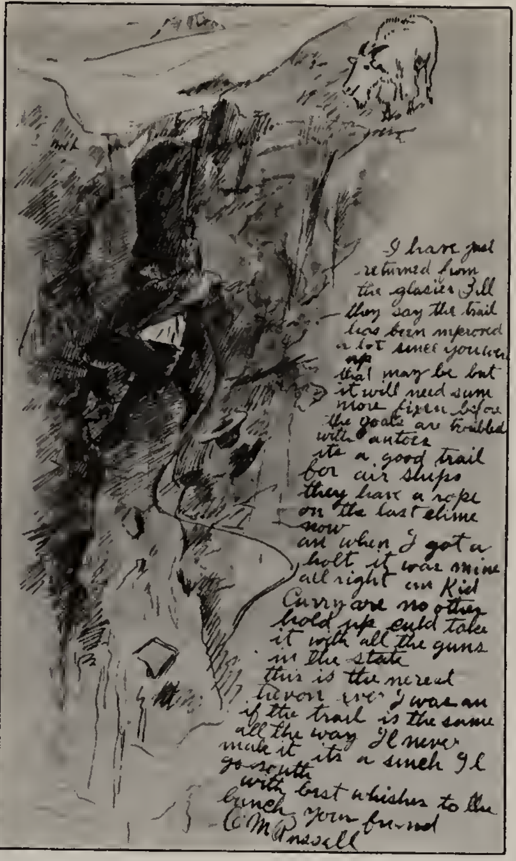
A new collection of Charles M. Russell art is now a part of the Society's Museum. The collection includes a number of Russell's celebrated illustrated letters; an oil, Deer at Lake McDonald; six illustrations in pen and ink or watercolor; and a copy of the 1899 Pen Sketches/ Charles M. Russell The Cowboy Artist. The collection, purchased with funds from the 1985 Montana Legislative Assembly and individual donors, comes from the Great Falls Elks Lodge.

According to Curator of Collections Sue Near, the acquisition has more than doubled the size of the Society's collection of Russell's illustrated letters, making it a significant addition to the Museum's important holdings of the Cowboy Artist's oils and watercolors. All fourteen of the letters in the new collection were written to Bill Rance, proprietor of the Silver Dollar Saloon in Great Falls, Russell's adopted hometown.



Russell wrote to Rance when he was away from Great Falls, describing his adventures for his friend and the "bunch" at the Silver Dollar. In one undated letter from Glacier National Park, Russell wrote:

"I have just returned from the glasier Bill they say the trail has been improved a lot since you were up that may be but it will need sum more fixen before the goats are troubled with autoes its a good trail for air ships they have a rope on the last clime now an when I got a holt it was mine all right an Kid Curry are no other hold up culd take it with all the guns in the state this is the nerest hevon ever I was an if the trail is the same all the way Il never make it its a sinch Il go south with best whishes to the bunch your friend C M Russell."

Rance carefully preserved his letters from Russell, and before his death in 1932, he donated them to the Great Falls Elks Lodge.

When the Great Falls Elks Lodge put the Rance letters—and several other Russell items—up for sale, the 1985 Montana legislature determined to keep this fine collection in the state and appropriated $300,000 of the $482,650 purchase price. Individuals, foundations, and corporations have donated almost half of the remaining $182,650, but the Society still needs to raise $90,000. To make a donation, write or call Bev Harriott, Public Relations Officer, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620; 444-4697.

MHS News and Notes

Montana History Day. The Third Annual Montana History Day, whose theme is "Conflicts and/or Compromises in History," will be held at the Montana Historical Society and the State Capitol building on Saturday, May 3. Entry forms for the contest must be received by the Society's Education Program by April 11.

Western Rendezvous Exhibit. On July 18, the Society will open a month-long exhibit of paintings and sculptures by artists featured in the ninth annual Western Rendezvous of Art. The exhibit in the Society's new temporary exhibits gallery will allow visitors to preview one work by each of the forty artists invited to participate in the Rendezvous. The Rendezvous, which is sponsored by the Helena Arts Council, begins on August 21 in the Helena Civic Center. A full-color catalog, including the pieces in the preview show, will be available.

Museum Guide Updated. The Education Program has updated its Guide to Montana Museums, Art Centers and Historical Organizations. If you already own the 1982 guide, you can purchase the revised listings for $3.50. The complete updated guide is available for $6.50. To order, write or call Joan Haefer, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, 59620; 444-4789.

MHS Education Program. This summer, the MHS Education Program will distribute "Liberties with Liberty," a traveling exhibit that traces the changes in the representation of Liberty over the last two hundred years. Produced by the Museum of American Folk Art, the exhibit features twenty framed color posters by American artists.

The Education Program and the OGM Restoration Board have produced a fifteen-minute slide presentation on the Original Governor's Mansion in Helena. Intended for a seventh-grade through adult audience, the slide show documents the history of the elegant Victorian-era mansion.

To reserve the "Liberties" exhibit or the slide program, write or call Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 444-4794.

National Archives Grants. The National Archives offers grants to nonprofit organizations for the development of their archives or records management programs. The Montana Historical Records Advisory Council periodically reviews the grant proposals originating in Montana. If you would like to know more about the Council or the National Archives' grant program, write or call Larry Hibpshman, MHS Archives, 444-4775.

The Montana Small-Town Experien

by Laurie Mercier

When I began interviewing people for the "Small Town Montana" oral history project, I expected to become quickly satiated with familiar stories describing small-town life. After all, America's small towns evoke images of stability, limited opportunity, friendliness, intolerance, peacefulness, and boredom. And much of the popular literature about small-town life—even classic works like Thornton Wilder's Our Town, Sinclair Lewis's Main Street, and Edgar Lee Masters's Spoon River Anthology—reinforces those images. When I looked at the local histories written about Montana's small towns, each town's history seemed indistinguishable from the next; these publications invariably focus on town pioneers, extraordinary residents and events, and specific families. But while working on the "Small Town" project, I discovered that life in Montana's small towns can be fascinating and diverse.

Montana is a small-town state. Only 9 of its cities have over 10,000 people; 129 towns record less than 10,000; and 68 have fewer than 1,000 people. Montana is large and sparsely populated, and for many of its residents, small towns have been the centers of economic, educational, political, cultural, and social life. When I began driving the state's lonely stretches of highway, I realized that small towns are the source of human contact between centers of population and that they provide a sense of community for a significant number of Montanans.

The towns profiled in the "Small Town Montana" project were selected to reflect diverse regions, sizes, and economies. We interviewed fifteen to twenty people in each town and sought narrators who represented various age groups (sixteen to ninety-six years), occupations, socioeconomic backgrounds, local institutions, and organizations. The recorded interviews tell us something about these communities and, taken together, reveal much about the patterns of small-town life in Montana during the twentieth century.

Small towns are vital, changing organisms. Towns and town life have continually been shaped by external forces and the community's response to those forces, whether to the closure of the single manufacturing plant in town, the improvement of highways, changing markets, or the discovery of oil in the county.

Chinook, ca. 1941

MHS Photo Archives

One force that inevitably shaped a town's character was its location. Like many towns on Montana's northern border, for example, Plentywood has traditionally depended on trade with Canada and is deeply affected by fluctuations in the exchange rate. The town has also been influenced by developments across a state line: Since the 1920s, North Dakota's strong farmer organizations have defined the political sentiments of this agricultural community. Location affected Montana communities in other ways. That Roundup lay on the Milwaukee Railroad axis and was the center of roads serving a large agricultural hinterland certainly aided the town's mining industry and its local business district. And Columbia Falls' development was so clearly affected by the Hungry Horse Dam project on the South Fork of the Flathead River, begun in 1947, that the town's history can be categorized into two eras: before and after dam construction. Most importantly, this inexpensive source of power attracted a major new industry, the Anaconda Aluminum Company plant.

Locals did not always perceive public works projects as economic blessings. Eureka residents resented the Libby Dam for bringing in transients who later competed with them for employment, for re-routing the Great Northern Railway, for inundating several established communities, and for ruining fishing grounds. Clarence "Sonny" Hoyt claimed in an August 27, 1983, interview:

> "That was the worst thing that ever happened to this country. . . . For one thing, they don't need the power. And it destroyed the last real good fishing stream in Montana, something that was really good. And it caused an awful influx here. . . . A lot of people who stayed are real good people, an asset to the community, but for every one that is, there are ten that aren't. . . .You couldn't take a prettier drive anywhere, I don't care where you go, than down along that river. And they destroyed it, it's gone."

County seats have enjoyed a degree of economic security not experienced by other towns. County courthouses, high schools, and hospitals employ local residents, and these centers for county government and services attract shoppers, distributors, federal and state government offices, and amenities such as county museums and libraries.

Small towns in Montana are most influenced by their dominant industries. Because of distances to markets, transportation costs, and a harsh climate, the type of industries that have developed are resource-based. But all coal-mining or farming towns are not alike, even though they share common characteristics. Varying responses to the emerging industry and different rates of economic development have created individual, unique communities.

Sugar-beet factories, for example, were established in both Chinook and Sidney in 1925 and had a profound effect on local economies. The Chinook plant closed in the 1950s; nothing has

e, 1900-1980: An Oral History Project

ever replaced the loss of the plant and its large payroll and value to irrigation farmers. The Sidney plant, on the other hand, continues to operate, and Sidney has become less dependent on sugar beets, as the oil and gas booms of the 1950s and 1970s ushered in new growth and gave new dimensions to the town's character.

In an October 24, 1984, interview, Annie Larsen of Roundup recalled how shocked her community was when the last major coal mine in the area ceased operations. She describes how merchants responded to a changing economic climate:

> "Then [local businessmen] began to realize what agriculture means to this community and they began then to, well, rather to court the ranchers and the farmers and that sort of thing. Before, the mines had such a hold, I mean, the income was so great from the mines that you didn't think too much about—at least that's the way I feel about it—and then they realized that there were other sources where they could get their [business]."

MHS Photo Archives

Anaconda Aluminum Plant, Columbia Falls

Following World War II, there were pronounced changes in small-town life. Not only did basic industries change, but also patterns of residence, relations with the surrounding rural area and towns, local businesses, and civic and social life. When asked to identify a time when town life became different, narrators in the "Small Town Montana" project consistently replied: "After the war." Class differences, once so pronounced, began to diminish; the "Elite Street" or "Nob Hill" where the upper crust once lived became overshadowed by newer housing developments and changing residential patterns. When workers' and farmers' standards of living improved, disparities in wealth were minimized, and formerly excluded groups began participating in town affairs. Women and workers could be found on the school board or town council. The poor and minorities, however, were still ignored.

Other divisions also diminished. Ethnic differences dissolved as children of immigrants intermarried and became "Americanized"; Catholic-Protestant antagonism softened, and a new ecumenical spirit emerged among mainstream churches. Rural residents, once conspicuous in their worn clothes on their Saturday visits to town, became more accepted by townspeople, as automobiles, electricity, and affluence narrowed the gap between rural and town lifestyles.

What people did in their leisure time began to change in the 1940s. Traditional community-wide celebrations for such holidays as the Fourth of July and Labor Day began to wane in importance. The automobile had given people a new freedom of movement, and townspeople were more likely to take off for the woods or a lake or a bigger city on a weekend or holiday. As Elizabeth Greene of Columbia Falls noted, clubs, particularly lodges, declined in popularity:

> "In those days if we didn't have lodges, we wouldn't have had anything else. We used to meet twice a month and that was our outlet, but they've outmoded themselves a long time ago. I kept trying to tell the lodge that, well, young people don't want to go, they've got other, other things. There [was] an Eastern Star and the Masons and the Oddfellows and the Rebekas, the Woodmen and the Royal Neighbors and. . . . We did it because we had socials. We'd meet and we'd have lunches in the afternoon and we'd oh, we'd have parties in the evening. . . . And we were very, very active. . . . We had over a hundred active members in Columbia Falls at one time."

After the war, television, bowling, high school basketball, and outdoor recreation became the predominant forms of entertainment. Residents could no longer expect to run into acquaintances at the theater, the grocery store, or other accepted gathering places; by the 1950s, contact became less frequent as residents drove to larger cities for shopping and as television replaced the local cinema.

Small towns in Montana are now undergoing another transitional period. For the first time, stable communities with diversified economies are experiencing a simultaneous decline in several supporting industries. Traditionally, when agriculture has suffered, for example, oil and gas revenues have stabilized the area economy; but even the residents of thriving towns like Sidney (which has grown by 500-1,000 people every decade since 1910) are worried. Many towns have lost hope for reviving a traditional industry and have settled into being a service center and home for retirees; others look to tourism as a way to keep the community viable.

As the "Small Town Montana" project shows, the histories of Montana's small towns are interesting and complex, and recent developments provide numerous possibilities for more oral history interviews about contemporary small-town life. Community historians might seize the opportunity to document the recent past, while memories are still clear, to aid us in our understanding of how small towns in Montana change and adapt.

---

Note: LAURIE MERCIER is MHS Oral History Coordinator. The "Small Town Montana" project was sponsored by the Montana Historical Society with support provided by a coal severance tax grant for cultural and aesthetic programs awarded by the 48th Montana State Legislature. The towns included in the study were: Broadus, Chinook, Choteau, Columbia Falls, Cut Bank, Eureka, Forsyth, Philipsburg, Plains, Plentywood, Roundup, and Sidney. The project was completed in June 1985, and the 200 interviews created are on deposit with the Montana Historical Society Archives and town repositories. Jackie Day served as interviewer in four of the towns.

Preservation No Longer in Post

For the last five years, the State Historic Preservation Office staff has generated text and gathered pictures for Preservation, a separate newsletter contained within the Post. With this issue, those four extra pages will no longer appear in the Post, and in the spring, the Preservation Office will begin printing a bimonthly preservation news sheet. In it, we will concentrate on providing current preservation grant and tax news, grant application directions, preservation meeting dates and agendas, and descriptions of new preservation publications and technical assistance sources. Information and mailings will be directed to Montanans with an active interest in or official responsibility for preservation and management of Montana's rich collection of historic and prehistoric sites.

Our column on properties recently listed in the National Register of Historic Places will continue to appear in the Post along with features and news items from the Preservation Office of interest to the Montana Historical Society's full membership. We have appreciated the opportunity to provide preservation information and news through the Post and now look forward to communicating with many of you through both the Post and our own news sheet. We will use file information to create our news sheet mailing list and would welcome a card or call from you if you would like to be included.

Marcella Sherfy
State Historic Preservation Officer

Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Joseph Poindexter, Brooklyn | Painting by Albert Stadler: Fan M, 1966 |
| Eula May Hall, Helena | 2 crib spreads, 5 bedspreads, 2 sheets, baby pillow, & pillow case |
| Mary Lou Tobin, Helena | 10 crystal goblets |
| Helen Poindexter Morgan, Monroe, Connecticut | Painting by Emerson Woelffer: The Thermal, 1959 |
| Tom K. Morrow, Kalispell | 6 bronzes by A. Phimister Proctor |
| Mrs. Arthur Hahn, Washington, D.C. | Ermine baby carriage robe and muff, 3 clothing bags |
| Joan Holter, Helena | Charles M. Russell bronze, 2 pastels, & 1 oil painting by Harley Brown, baby clothes worn by Florence J. Holter |
| Treasure State Council of Telephone Pioneers, Helena | Candlestick telephone, ca. 1890. |
| Harvey & Esther Moen, Helena | 3 pieces of linoleum |
| John & Carla Cronholm, Helena | Brass chandelier, dress form |
| Irene Miller, Helena | Gearhart knitting machine, ca. 1914 |
| Jerry Metcalf, Helena | Feather duster |
| Norman Winestine, Helena | Silk top hat worn by Dr. Louis Fligman, ca. 1905 |
| Betty Ford Jackson, Moscow, Idaho | Pink chiffon formal worn by Mrs. Sam Ford, ca. 1941 |
| PEO Chapter AA, Helena | Tablecloth made by Dixie Lindberg |
| Lon Johnson, Helena | Gas stove, ca. 1906 |
| William Summers, Helena | Bedsprings for double bed |
| Jack & Ella Gaffaney, Helena | 2 doorknobs, 1 pushplate with handle |
| Chubb & Mary Munger, Helena | GE refrigerator, electric popcorn popper |
| Janet Sperry, Helena | Gas stove, bedsprings |
| Montana Dept. of Commerce, Helena | Original artwork by Shorty Shope for 1941 Montana highway map |
| Mrs. Peggy Darey, Boulder, Colorado | 2 glass shades for electric chandelier |
| Myrtle Campbell, Anaconda | 2 pairs of child's drawers, 1 slip |
| Lucille Balfour, Florence, Oregon | Quilt, ca. 1900; kitchen scales, ca. 1920; movie projector, ca. 1935 |
| Jean Barrett, Helena | 26 doilies, bedspread, pillow sham, 2 pillowcases, 2 table covers, 2-piece bag, 1906 calendar |
| Avalon Hill Game Co., Baltimore | Yellowstone "Book Case" game |
| Susan Near, Helena | "Morning Glory" disposable panties |
| Terry & Linda Wilson, Helena | "Hotpoint" electric stove, ca. 1940 |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Austin Stratton, Lothair | 14 financial volumes, Hagerty Livestock Company, Browning, Montana, 1907-1925 |
| Ann Jancic, Helena | Photographs, diaries, agricultural bulletins, clippings, correspondence, etc. belonging to Charles & Marguerite Greenfield, Helena |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Lewistown City Library, Lewistown | 5 reels of 16 mm film (b/w/no sound): 2 reels titled "Ceremonial Dances of the Pueblo Indians," photography by Glenn C. Morton, Lewistown; 3 reels titled "Growing Baby Beef in Montana," photography by Glenn C. Morton, 1933-1934 |
| Cye & Florence Wagner, Reno, Nevada | One album: Views of the construction of Fort Peck Dam, Wheeler, Montana, Cye & Florence Wagner |

"Metals in Montana" Oral History Project

The blast furnace at the East Helena smelter, ca. 1920.

The Society's Oral History Office has begun work on "Metals in Montana: Industry and Community in the Twentieth Century." The year-long project will focus on the metals industry in Montana and its relationship to four communities in which manufacturing plants—smelters and refineries—were located: Anaconda, Black Eagle, Columbia Falls, and East Helena. The project is funded by the Forty-ninth Montana Legislative Assembly through a grant from the coal severance tax fund.

The metals industry has played a major role in Montana's development; but according to project director and oral historian Laurie Mercier, historians have paid little attention to the reduction of ores to metals in the state. Metals production has given Montana an infusion of capital and technology, large corporations, strong unions, and the looming presence of enormous physical plants. In East Helena, Anaconda, and Black Eagle, the industry even caused the creation of entire towns.

Mercier will interview people who have lived in Anaconda, Black Eagle, Columbia Falls, and East Helena for ten years or more or who have worked in the Great Falls Reduction Works, the Anaconda Reduction Works, the ASARCO smelter, or the Columbia Falls aluminum plant. She will be seeking information about work, family, ethnicity, unions, neighborhoods, companies, and local institutions.

The research for "Metals in Montana" will culminate in a book and a traveling photograph exhibit. This important undertaking and its products will provide a foundation for understanding Montana's industrial communities and for making comparative studies of those towns and industry in the Rocky Mountain West.

If you know someone who should be interviewed for the project or if you want additional information, write or call Laurie Mercier, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, 59620; 444-4779.

National Register Update

The following buildings were added to the Lewistown Multiple Resource Area in Fergus County on January 10, 1986:

Ayers House,
316 Eighth Avenue South

House at 301 Eighth Avenue South

First Presbyterian Church,
215 Fifth Avenue South

Lewistown Mercantile Company,
220 East Main

House at 618 West Janeaux

Clark-Cardwell House,
523 West Watson

This house at 618 West Janeaux in Lewistown was built in 1900.

Traveler's Companion Available

A Traveler's Companion to Montana History by Carroll Van West is available for immediate delivery. West's highly readable text takes travelers on thought-provoking tours of the state's famous historic sites as well as places with surprising histories.

Generously illustrated with maps and historical and contemporary photographs, this is a book no Montana enthusiast will want to miss.

The 240-page book sells for $9.95. To order A Traveler's Companion to Montana History, send $10.95 (includes $1.00 shipping) to Montana Historical Society Press, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620. Copies can also be purchased in the Society's Museum Store.

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

MAY 1 9 1986

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

from the Editor's File

There is now a Montana chapter of the Society for Industrial Archeology (SIA), a national organization devoted to the study, preservation, and appreciation of the nation's industrial heritage. For $5.00 in annual dues, members of the Klepetko Chapter—named after a well-known Montana metallurgical engineer—receive a quarterly newsletter containing announcements of chapter activities, research notes, and short articles. The new chapter has as one of its first activities a tour of industrial sites in the Billings area in May. For more information, write to Fred Quivik, P.O. Box 4113, Butte 59702.

D. J. O'Malley was one of Montana's best known cowboy poets. Author of such classics as "When the Work is Done Next Fall" and "A Cowboy's Death," O'Malley captured the rhythms of western life in verse. Now his poems are available again. The Montana Folklife Project has reissued the 1934 pamphlet, "D. J. O'Malley, 'Cowboy Poet'," with ten poems and a new foreword by John I. White, O'Malley's friend and a scholar of cowboy poetry and songs. To order copies, send $3.00 to Michael Korn, Montana Folklife Project, 35 South Last Chance Gulch, Helena 59620; 444-6430.

The newly created Montana Historic Preservation Alliance is planning its first annual Montana preservation conference. Scheduled for May 8 through May 10, the conference will hold interest for archaeologists, planners, curators, historians, architects, and local historical society supporters. For more information about the conference, call the State Historic Preservation Office at 444-7715.

The Coalition for Western Women's History (CWWH) recently published Women's West Teaching Guide: The Multicultural History of Women in the Nineteenth Century American West, a teaching tool designed for use with standard U.S. history textbooks in secondary school social studies classes. In addition to a bibliography and lists of readings, films, videotapes, and sources of information, the guide contains lessons, essays about various aspects of western women's history, and activities designed for the classroom. To order the guide, send $8.00 per copy to CWWH, c/o Women Studies, Washington State University, Pullman 99164-4032.

With the publication of a new technical leaflet series by the Idaho State Historical Society, local historians now have at their fingertips a great deal of information about researching, collecting, and preserving local history. The five leaflets contain concise and practical advice, annotated bibliographies, and lists of organizations that can provide help. For more information write or call Idaho State Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Drive, Boise, Idaho 83702-7695; (208) 334-3863.

MHS Calendar

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| March 26 | Brown Bag Lecture Series, 12 noon to 1 p.m.: "Lizzie Fisk: A Woman's Perspective on Helena, 1867-1896," by Rex Myers, Western Montana College. |
| April 16 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Folklife in Montana," by Michael Korn, Montana Folklife Project. |
| May 3 | Montana History Day, Montana Historical Society and State Capitol building. |
| May 21 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Blind Corral," by Ralph Beer, author and rancher. |
| July 18-August 18 | Preview of Western Rendezvous of Art, temporary exhibit gallery, Montana Historical Society. |
| August 21-24 | Western Rendezvous of Art, Helena Civic Center. |

1986 Spring Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, Helena | Closed March, except for tours made by appointment. Open April-May, Tuesday-Saturday, Noon to 5 p.m. Last tour at 4 p.m. Tours begin on the hour. |

S
978.6
H6m
v.23#4
Nov.-Dec.
1985

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST

Vol. 23 No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society November-December 1985

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

Interpreting Our Heritage

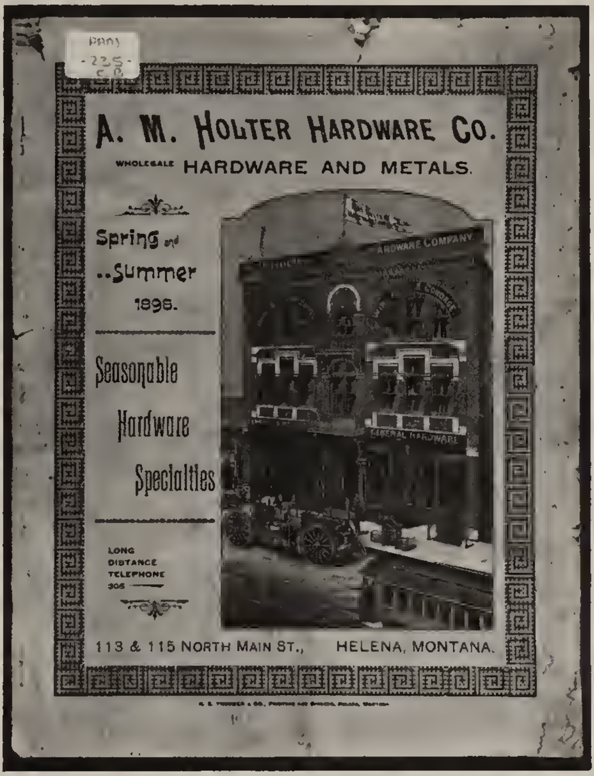
Twelfth Annual Montana History Conference



PR01
-235-
C.B.

A. M. HOLTER HARDWARE CO.

WHOLESALE HARDWARE AND METALS.

Spring and ..Summer 1896.

Seasonable Hardware Specialties

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE 306

113 & 115 NORTH MAIN ST., HELENA, MONTANA.

A mouse carved into the stone wall of a medieval German church; a midwestern barn built as solidly as a ship; a headdress of eagle feathers worn at a powwow on Montana's Flathead Indian Reservation: what do these objects have in common? As folklorist Barre Toelken told a large audience at the Twelfth Annual Montana History Conference, each of these objects tells us about the traditions, values, and folkways of the people who created it. Each object was created by folk artisans who enriched the lives of their communities.

Toelken's remarks set the tone for the three-day conference whose theme was "Interpreting Our Heritage: Artifacts, Sites, Literature, and Ceremonies." Folklorists, historians, oral historians, anthropologists, archaeologists, preservationists, and writers came to Helena on November 7 to explore the meaning of heritage and how it is manifest in the things we create, such as quilts, Christmas traditions, cartoons, dwellings, poems, and pictographs.

One panel examined the ways that Montanans celebrate special events: how the Montana booth at the 1904 World's Fair in St. Louis expressed the state's aspirations, pretensions, and realities; how ethnic groups enjoyed celebrations in the culturally rich Anaconda neighborhood of Goosetown; and how the give-away ceremony is practiced on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation.

The give-away ceremony and the star quilt play important roles in the cultural life of the reservation in Montana's northeastern corner. With a dramatic presentation, Fort Peck Tribal Chairman Kenneth Ryan made the two traditions come alive for those attending the session. Ryan explained that plains Indians usually hold give-away ceremonies at summer powwows, when they acknowledge personal or family honors by presenting friends and relatives with star quilts, Pendleton and Hudson's Bay blankets, brilliantly colored shawls, throw pillows, dish towels, wooden baubles, and other items.

In keeping with that tradition, Ryan thanked the Montana Historical Society for the opportunity to speak at the conference and presented the Society's Museum with a beautiful star quilt. Chief Curator Steve Germann accepted the quilt for the Museum, saying that it will "become an honored part of our permanent collection."

Another part of Montana's heritage was brought alive when four of Montana's writers of poetry and fiction discussed their own writing and the richness of the state's literature. William Kittredge, the award-winning author of We Are Not in This Together, defined "regional" writing and delivered a brief history of writers and writing in Montana. Rancher Ralph Beer, a contributing editor of Harper's Magazine and author of The Blind Corral, talked about how his work on the family ranch influences his fiction. David Long, the author of Home Fires, talked about how he uses historical materials, such as diaries and letters, in his stories set in the small towns of a fictional northwestern Montana county. And Missoula poet and rodeo cowboy Paul Zarzyski read several of his poems that make expressive use of ranch and rodeo "lingo." Moderator Richard Etulain, editor of the New Mexico Historical Review, concluded the session by saying: "These fine writers deserve to be read by all of us. Montana has always had a vigorous literary tradition, and as this session clearly proves, that tradition is far from dead today."

Continued on page 2

Continued from page 1

Other conference sessions focused on Montana's historic and prehistoric sites and the kinds of information revealed by the structures we live in and on the ways our culture expresses itself through graphic images, including cartoons, photographs, catalogs, and advertising brochures. In a session entitled "Inventing Montana," Clyde A. Milner II, Associate Professor of History at Utah State University, considered the provocative question: "How did Montana's pioneers perceive themselves and their world, and what do those perceptions, as expressed in memoirs, reminiscences, diaries, and letters, tell us about the realities of their experience?"

T. Allan Comp, Chief of the Division of Cultural Resources of the Pacific Northwest Region of the National Park Service, also examined the ways we interpret our heritage when he discussed museums and their dynamic relationships with the communities in which they exist. Peter Nabokov, author of Two Leggings and Indian Running, spoke about "The Blood of Things," explaining how artifacts can have a life of their own and can embody the history of a culture. Byron Price, the director of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon, Texas, commented on the distorted views that national advertisers often have about the West. The conference concluded with artisans, musicians, and craftspeople demonstrating some of the skills that have contributed to Montana's special heritage.

From Barre Toelken's inspiring opening remarks on Thursday night to the demonstrations of the vitality of Montana's folk culture on Saturday afternoon, the Twelfth Annual Montana History Conference was a great success. We look forward to seeing you all again next year, when the Society will host the conference in Missoula.

William Kittredge (left, above) and Paul Zarsyski during the session on Montana writers. Below with the star quilt presented to the MHS Museum are, from left, Curator of Collections Sue Near, Fort Peck Tribal Chairman Kenneth Ryan, Chief Curator Steve Germann, and Garrett Big Leggin.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

Society Library No Longer a Depository for Federal Documents

After nearly a century of serving as a United States Government Depository, the Society's Library is no longer receiving selected publications of federal agencies. "We chose to drop our depository status because it made good sense to do so," said Librarian Bob Clark, "but nonetheless, we ought to observe a moment of silence. The Society was the oldest depository in the state, so this is the passing of a pioneer."

The current depository system began in 1895, and within a few years Montana Tech, Montana State University, and the University of Montana were all designated federal depositories. Well before 1895, however, the Montana Historical Society had been receiving federal publications, and the 1892 Catalogue of the Society's holdings reveals that a sizable part of the collection was already federal documents.

Until 1966, the Society's Library was the capital city's only federal depository. By the 1970s, one whole level of the library stacks was bulging with government publications, many with particular usefulness in the study of Montana history. Such titles as the Annual Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the massive volumes of reports from the many expeditions seeking a route for a transcontinental railroad have had constant use. But volumes dealing with Alaskan fisheries or Oregon orchards gathered dust, and most of the collection remained uncataloged.

In 1966, the State Library became the second selective federal depository in Helena; and since then, space-consuming runs of older, non-Montana federal publications were transferred there from the Society. Eventually, the Society was receiving less than 5 per cent of the federal items distributed. When Carroll College and the State Law Library also became selective depositories in the mid 1970s, the Society became even more superfluous as a provider of general federal materials. And finally, this year, with increased activity at the Society and a consequent increase of pressure on library staff time, Clark decided to remove the Society Library from the list of federal depositories.

The Library has received permission from the U.S. Superintendent of Documents to retain those items it considers valuable for the regular collection. These items include the "serial set," a series of thousands of congressional documents from the mid nineteenth century to the 1920s that contain reports invaluable to the study of western exploration and settlement. All other federal publications at the Society will be transferred to other libraries in the capitol complex, including the State Library, the Law Library, and the Census and Economic Information Center in the Department of Commerce.

New Staff Members in Society Library

Library Clerk Mary Ann Bannon and Newspaper Project Librarian David Spencer are the newest members of the Society's Library staff. Bannon, a native of Billings, worked for ten years as a library aide in the Clancy school before coming to the Society. She is currently involved in reviewing microfilm, shelving books, collating newspapers, recording all new acquisitions on the Library's computer, typing cards and correspondence, making out purchase orders and invoices, and performing all the clerical duties necessary to keep the Library operating smoothly.

David Spencer, who received his education at the University of Oregon and the Institute of European Studies in Vienna, Austria, was a regional librarian and "reader's advisor" at the Twin Falls, Idaho, Public Library from 1980 to 1985. He is currently assisting with the Society's newspaper project, which is funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The project is designed to locate, catalogue, and list on a computer all of the state's newspapers. Spencer is also responsible for ensuring that all newspapers microfilmed during the project are in good condition and that the microfilm generated is of high quality.

"Both Mary Ann and David have brought considerable experience to the Library," said Bob Clark, administrator of the Society's Library and Archives Division, "and I'm certain that they will make significant contributions to our program."

Life at the Second Crow Agency, Monta

The Montana Post has occasionally published excerpts from letters, reminiscences, or diaries written by individuals who experienced firsthand some aspect of our state's history. Most of these documents were discovered in the Society's Archives and were edited by staff members. This contribution, however, came to us from Emily Coates of Seattle, Washington, who has edited a diary that her grandfather, Herman Moser, kept during his stay in Montana Territory during the mid 1870s.

by Emily Coates

Herman Moser came to the United States from Argentina, where his German family had lived since he was a young child. When Herman was thirteen, his mother and sister died during a yellow fever epidemic. His father, a doctor who was treating fever victims, also fell ill and died. As their father had instructed them, the two surviving children sought help at the U.S. Consulate, and the Consul, General Dexter E. Clapp, took them in. Within a few months, twelve-year-old Carlotta was adopted and taken to England, and Herman was adopted by General and Mrs. Clapp.

Herman and his new parents began their life together in Geneva, New York. After a year in Geneva, the Clapp family moved to Kansas where they established a farm. After a few months, General Clapp was made the new Indian Agent for Montana Territory.

In 1874, the U.S. Indian Agency at Fort Parker near present-day Livingston, Montana, was in a state of transition. The agency had been established in 1869 to serve as the distribution point for treaty annuity goods to the Crow Indian tribe and as the focus of efforts to induce the Crow to become sedentary farmers rather than the nomadic hunters and gatherers they had traditionally been.

When General Clapp arrived in December 1874, he quickly determined that the agency's location was not satisfactory because of high winds; lack of timber, good farmland, and shelter; vulnerability to attack by tribes hostile to the Crow, especially the Sioux and Piegan; and, perhaps most significantly, the agency's proximity to the reservation boundary and the whiskey shops at Benson's Landing.

A man of "considerable ability and a vigorous administrator," Clapp decided to move the agency to a site in the Stillwater Valley near the mouth of Rosebud Creek. This site was farther from the reservation's borders, had better farmland, and was free of the "terrible Canon winds." On April 1875, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs approved Clapp's recommendation.

Six weeks after Clapp had left Kansas to assume his new position at Crow Agency, fifteen-year-old Herman Moser arrived in Montana Territory, having traveled west with Charles Clapp (perhaps the general's brother) and two other men. Moser kept a diary of his experiences, and the following excerpts describe his arrival in the territory, his experiences when the Crow Agency moved to its new site, and the struggles with Sioux war parties.

---

Dec. 28, 1874. Charles Clapp, Mr. Philo, and Mr. Baker and myself started for Crow Agency, M.T. 210 miles from Bozeman, by way of Omaha. The scenery on the road of the Union Pacific was very beautifull, especially Echo Canon and the devils gate. We stayed at Corrine one day, and then we took the stage and came to Virginia City. We stayed there three days. It was then 43 degrees below zero. Then we took a sleigh and went to Bozeman. We stayed in Bozeman two days. Then we started in a sleigh with a black horse team from the Agency. Arrived there the 18th day of January, 1875 at night. (since Dec. 28/74)

General Clapp was and is Agent of Crow Indians. As soon as I came here I began to work for $50.00 per month. When spring came General had to move the Agency. We all started the last of May, 1875. We had six wagons belonging to White Calfee with mule teams. Each two wagons had four teams and about ten Agency wagons with eight or ten yoke of cattle to every two wagons. They were all freight wagons and we also had a spring wagon with a bay team and a herd of cattle driven by four men on horse back. We had in all about sixty men all well armed, on account of Sioux's.

Herman Moser and

Two days after this party started, General sent a boat down the Yellowstone to the mouth of Still Water with six men and myself. The boat was loaded with flour, sugar, and potatoes, etc. When we first started we enjoyed it very much. We travelled four miles and our boat got agroung[.] We had to get out and push her off. After half an hour's work, we got her off again. (She was loaded a little to heavy) and the Yellowstone is very swift. Four miles further down by the Hot Spring we intended to camp. We let two of the boys jump on shore, to catch the rope, as we through the rope. They tied it on a stump, the place where we tried to stop. The water or river, being to swift, sunk the boat and the stump broke loose. We had a little boat with us. Those that could swim had to swim and those that could not took the boat. We all arrived on shore, safe on the other side of the river. Next day in the afternoon two of us crossed the river in the small boat and joined the train. The rest fixed the boat and went down to the mouth of Still Water. That night we

PRESERVATION

Montana Historical Society Preservation Office November-December 1985

A Harvest of Survey Findings

The historical buildings and archaeological sites that surround us offer a rich, ever-present illustration of our past—if we know how to look at them. Since 1970, with the help of monies from the federal Historic Preservation Fund (awarded by the Department of the Interior and dispersed by the State Historic Preservation Office), more than twenty Montana communities and counties have "taken inventory" of the buildings and sites within their borders.

The surveys or inventories involve systematic research in local primary sources and careful analysis of each structure. Most communities or organizations that sponsor an architectural, historical, or archaeological inventory hope to nominate the significant properties they find to the National Register of Historic Places. Such inventories, however, provide Montana property owners with more than a chance for national recognition.

Inventories give us a reason to look carefully and thoughtfully at each potentially significant building or site. They require us to figure out why and how the structures were built or the sites used and why they look as they do today. In the course of an inventory, we discover fresh, often long-forgotten tidbits of information. And in a larger sense, we are given new tools, words, and background that enable us to understand the appearance and arrangements of the places in which we live.

In this issue of Preservation Post, we want to share with you some of the information gathered during community and county survey efforts completed in the last two years. You will find in these segments information that was not known until the survey effort was done: the names and styles of important local builders; how long buildings were or were not used for their original function; whether ethnicity influenced design; and the relative rarity of a particular design or style. We hope you enjoy this sampling of architectural, historical, and archaeological inventory results. We also hope that reading this article will encourage you to find out whether your community has taken stock of its own buildings and sites. If it has, you will want to review the results of the inventory. If it has not, we urge you to become involved in making certain your community does conduct such an inventory.

The Bank of Joliet building, constructed in 1906, was used for years by the Joliet Lodge No. 77, I.O.O.F. It is owned today by the La Cuesta Rebekah Lodge No. 56.

Butte

Sponsor: Butte Historical Society
Researcher/writer: Brian Shovers

"Centerville [part of the Butte National Historic Landmark] is distinguished by a functional architecture designed to serve the very basic needs of a predominantly immigrant working class population. While the Cornish and Irish residents of Centerville were linked to the homeland through religion and fraternal organizations, their ethnicity is not reflected in the houses they lived in. Approximately 38 per cent of the existing structures in the neighborhood can be described as workers' cottages, an inexpensive hipped-roofed, wood-frame building that made its debut in Southern mill towns, while over 45 per cent might be classified as Victorian and post-Victorian vernacular houses, one- and two-story rectangular frame buildings with gable roofs. Both of these single-family building types could be erected quickly and relatively inexpensively (a worker's cottage typically cost $750 in 1900) and could be added on to as needed, an important consideration for a miner with a growing family. These modest dwellings were sited to allow for a small front yard, providing a miner's family an environmental buffer from the harsh and scarred mining landscape surrounding the neighborhood."

Lewistown

Sponsor: State Historic Preservation Office
Researcher/writer: Ellen Cornwall and Ken Seivert

"The distinguishing architectural associations that set Lewistown apart are in the widespread early use of stone as a building material, the prolific and exuberant application of terra cotta on Beaux-Art and period revival buildings, and the rich blend of all masonry technologies from the sedate gray stones to the colorful polychromatic and highly figured brick materials.

"Unlike more heavily industrialized communities, Lewistown does not exhibit distinct housing groups reflective of shelters for workers or tightly knit ethnic social infra-structures. Many European backgrounds are evident in the technologies that accompanied the immigrants, but lack of evidence of distinct cultural sub-structures suggests that melding of culture was more typical than polarization. . . ."

Thompson Falls

Sponsor: Thompson Falls Community Development Office and State Historic Preservation Office
Researcher/writer: John Lazuk

"The architectural design of the Puphal house appears in several homes on the west side of town. The building may be the work of Charles Doenges who built houses identical to them. What makes this house truly unique, however, is that it was constructed flush with the cardinal points of the compass. This may have been a happy geographical fluke due to the lay of the land. But the architectural design gives the house many distinct environmental advantages (cool in summer, hot in winter, light in kitchen, etc.) that are missing in most if not all the substantial houses in Thompson Falls."

Philipsburg

Sponsor: Granite County Planning Office
Researcher/writer: James R. McDonald Architects P.C. and Bill Babcock

"The Taylor Knapp building is significant because it is associated with William Weinstein, the first general merchant in the Philipsburg area. Weinstein was born in Poland, arriving in Philipsburg in 1867, when he opened his general merchandise store in a wood-frame building which he owned and operated for a number of years. Weinstein had constructed the eastern half of this structure sometime in the 1870s or early 1880s. The west half was constructed in 1887 and served as Ike Sparey's restaurant and hotel. Weinstein was Philipsburg's leading merchant until 1893, the year of the silver crash. Over the years, the building had housed a number of businesses, including Weinstein's Grocery-General Merchandise Store, the Dawson Bank, and Tiezer Dry Goods in the late 1800s."

The Cassie house in Great Falls was probably built from a plan found in one of the many pattern books common at the turn of the century.

Great Falls
Sponsor: Cascade County Historical Society
Researcher/writer: Historical Research Associates

"The Cassie house, 616 4th Avenue North, is a very nice example of a 1½ story, intersecting gable residence of a plan that may have been found in many pattern books available at the turn of the century."

Joliet
Sponsor: Carbon County Historic Preservation Office
Researcher/writer: Joan Brownell

"Claude E. Hudson, the cashier for the Bank of Joliet, was instructed by his superiors as early as October 1905, to make the necessary contract, just as soon as possible, for erection of a new bank building as reported in the Joliet Journal. The building construction began in December 1906 on the foundation, though the process was slow 'due to the recent cold snap.' The contractor was Patsy Loftus from Billings and the structure was given 'finishing touches' in April 1907 by Mahler and Montgomery, local contractors. The building was built at a cost of $8,078.65. The structure was purchased by the Joliet Lodge No. 77 I.O.O.F. in April 1926 and held by this organization until 1979. The building is presently owned by the La Cuesta Rebekah Lodge No. 56."

Carbon County Rock Art
Sponsor: Carbon County Historic Preservation Office
Researcher/writer: Dr. Lawrence Loendorf and Audrey Porsche

Audrey Porsche, photographer

"Medicine Man," a petroglyph at the Crooked Creek site in Carbon County.

"The Crooked Creek petroglyphs are pecked ['to peck' is an archaeological term meaning to make marks with a pointed tool] through a dark layer of desert varnish into a red-colored sandstone or shale. This makes the drawings stand out and gives them an aesthetic appeal. The artwork at the site is entirely pecked. It includes full view of humans complete with hands and fingers. One of these that has a horned head and upraised arms has been named 'Medicine Man.' Other figures include two profile views of quadrupeds that may be deer, a snake that appears to have swallowed something, and several other less easily recognized figures. A series of dots outline the nose of one of the deer and elsewhere the panel may be an important comparative attribute. At least two figures that appear to be shields made in outline form by pecking are important because they may offer some clue as to the beginning of shield figures (on the northern plains)."

Roundup
Sponsor: Roundup Community Development Office
Researcher/writer: Bill Babcock

"House moving in Roundup started early.... One of the earliest documented instances of moving a structure from a mining camp into town occurred in 1916, when Matt Polich moved one of his store buildings from Camp No. 3 'to a lot on the west side of Main Street in the block south of the courthouse,' where it was remodeled as a residence....

"However, it was in the 1930s and 1940s that most of the house moving occurred. Miners' houses were not the only ones moved. Several residences were moved in from Melstone in the late 1930s. These structures often were sold for from $100 to $240. The cost of moving houses from as far away as Melstone (about 35 miles) was $100.... This historical survey project located about 60 'moved' structures, 59 of which are residences...."

Nick Baber, photographer

The Taylor Knapp building in Philipsburg.

National Register Update

Carbon County

Warila Boarding House and Sauna, 20 North Haggin, Red Lodge, October 24, 1985.

Cascade County

Roberts Building, 520-526 Central Avenue, Great Falls, September 12, 1985.

Flathead County

Izaak Walton Inn, off U.S. Highway 2 adjacent to railroad in Essex, October 18, 1985.

Hill County

H. Earl Clack House, 532 Second Avenue, Havre, October 24, 1985.

Lincoln County

Eureka Community Hall, Cliff Street, Eureka, October 18, 1985.

Madison County

St. Mary of the Assumption Church, off Montana 287, Laurin, October 24, 1985.

Missoula County

Herzog House, 1210 Toole Avenue, Missoula, September 12, 1985.

Prescott House, University of Montana campus, Missoula, September 26, 1985.

Sweetgrass County

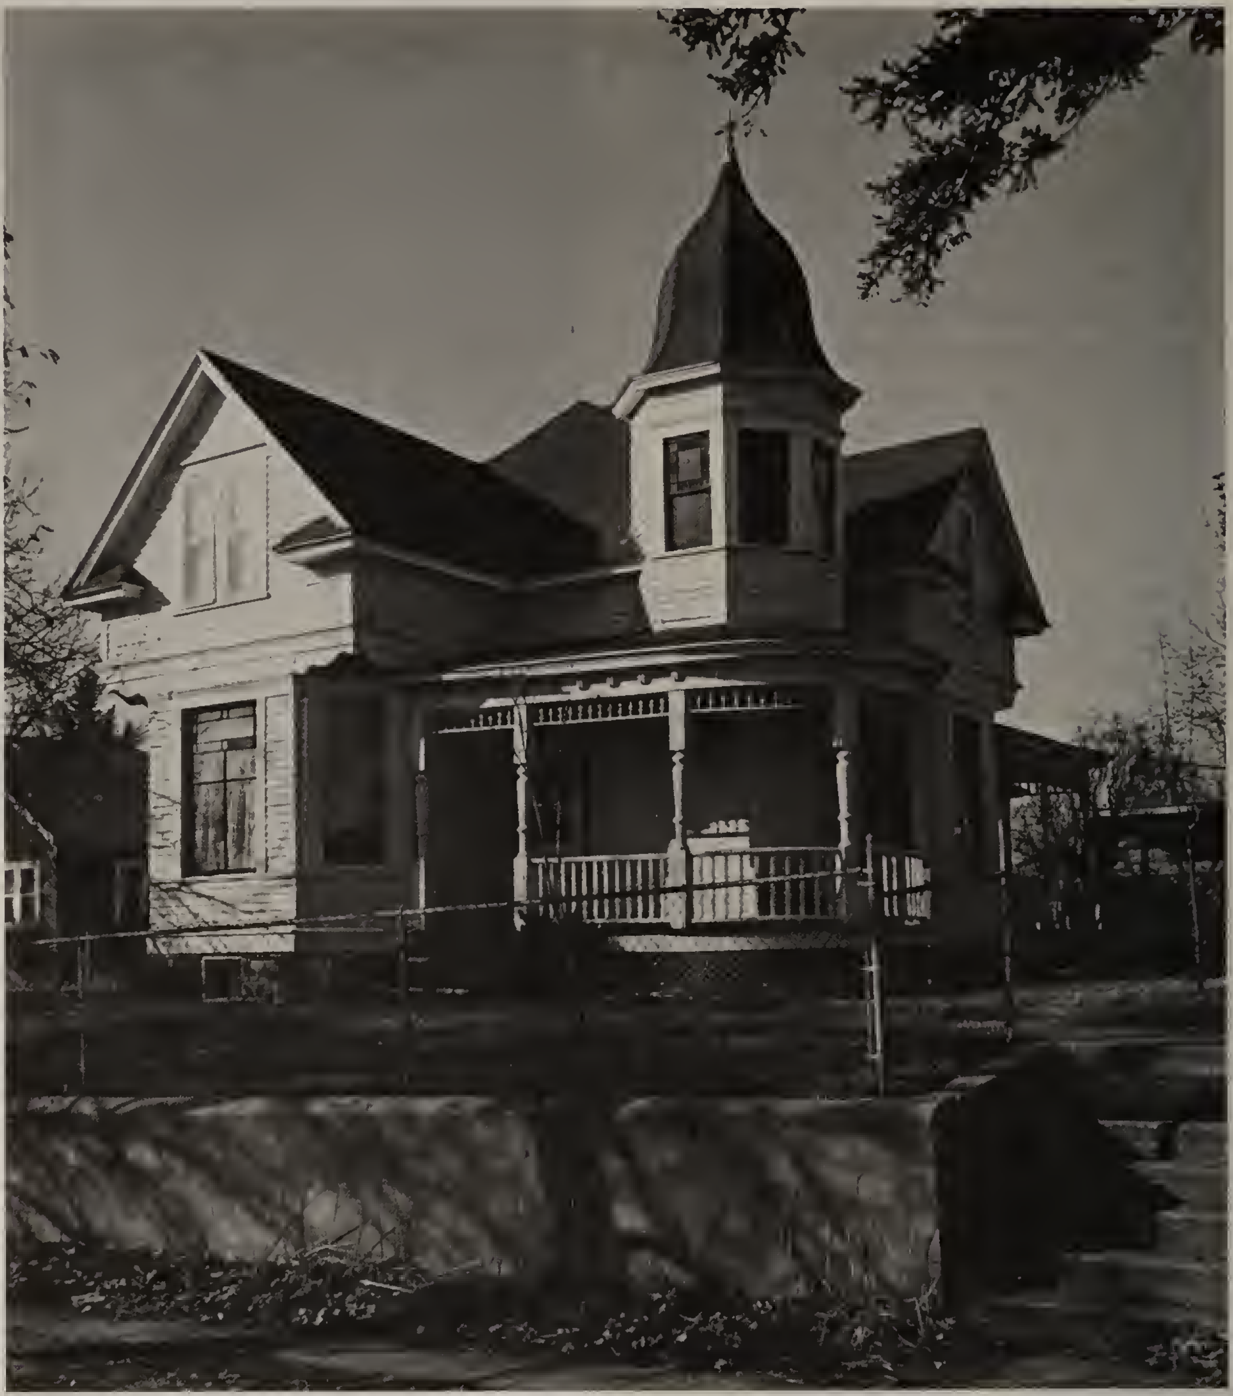
Grand Hotel, 139 McLeod Street, Big Timber, September 19, 1985.



James R. McDonald, photographer

Built in 1892 as a relatively modest dwelling, the Herzog House in Missoula is a very good example of a residence that was remodeled during the early 1900s in the Queen Anne cottage style.

Preservation News and Reminders

On October 24, 1985, a group of Montana preservationists met in Helena with Clark Strickland, Regional Director of the Mountain/Plains Office of the National Trust for Historic Preservation. The group discussed with Strickland the possibility of creating a private, nonprofit statewide preservation organization in Montana. Watch upcoming issues of Preservation Post and the mail for notice of a meeting this coming spring of a "Montana Preservation Coalition."

On October 25, Mr. Strickland met with a second group of Montanans from Anaconda, Helena, Great Falls, Hardin, Kalispell, Butte, and Bozeman and provided them with information about the National Trust's Main Street program.

---

At its November 7, 1985, meeting, the Montana State Historic Preservation Review Board set dates and locations for its 1986 meetings. The Board will meet on February 6, in Helena; on May 15, in Miles City; on September 18, in Missoula; and on December 4, back in Helena. Unless notice is provided to the contrary, all Board meetings will begin at 1:30 p.m. Readers are reminded that the Preservation Office needs to receive draft nominations to the National Register of Historic Places at least sixty days prior to the Board meeting at which the nomination's sponsors would like it to be considered.

Montana Post Preservation is published quarterly as a supplement to Montana Post by the State Historic Preservation Office, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620. Funds for this publication are provided by the State of Montana and the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

The Montana State Preservation Office receives financial assistance for identification and preservation of historic properties. The U.S. Department of the Interior prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, age, national origin, or handicap. If you believe you have been discriminated against in any program, activity, or facility in this program or if you desire further information, please write to: Office of Equal Opportunity, U.S. Department of Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240.

a Territory, December 1874 to May 1876

son Dexter, ca. 1895

camped at (Bolder) about four days afterwards we arrived at the East Three forks of the Rose Bud Valley, a hundred and five miles from Bozeman. As soon as we arrived here we all went to work, some puting up the saw mill and others halling and cuting saw logs and others digging ditches, etc. Near the last of June, we had a log house 20x60 and two adobe mills, making about 1600 adobes a day.

The second of July, 1875. Our timber party was attacked by about 30 Sioux Indians, twelve of them in all. One of our party was killed and scalped, (the herder, a Mexican) and one mule stolen. The 24th at two o'clock in the morning, 32 head of mules, and horses were driven off from the corrall, and about day light, they fired at us from the hills. About a week more or less, they attackted our herder about half a mile from here. We, or 30 of us ran up to him and rescued him, but they took his horse, and drove off about 42 head of working cattle. The next day a party of twenty started on horse back to see if they could find the cattle. They found 8 head, wounded, and about 10 or 9 killed on Rock Creek, about 10 miles from here. The rest they could not find. We had no more trouble for quite a while, though we were always ready. The building of the Agency went up very rapidly, about three weeks more or less. We had to have more time, so we sent a party of thirty to the mountains, sixteen miles from here, to burn lime. One morning, or the next morning after they got there, they were attacked by a small party of Sioux. For the first time since the third night, they came home, at twelve (12 midnight). [They] brought with them a corps [corpse] in their fight. One of the herders, James Helderbrand, was killed. That was the last trouble this summer. The work on the new Agency buildings went on nicely. In October, Genl. and I went up to the Old Agency, 75 miles, stayed there two weeks. Then they moved down the families (Mrs. Baker, the matron, and Mr. Philo, the carpenter, Mr. Finch, the blacksmith, and Mr. Myers, the laborer, etc.). We had a small escort of soldiers (Cavelry). I road on horseback. We had to cross three streams. We all carried a gun and pistol with a belt full of cartridges. We arrived here at this place the 3rd day after we left until today, May 14, 1876.

The work is still going on. Only we have very few men to do anything. The Agency is not yet completed. Genl. went to Washington about three weeks ago. It is quite lonesome here now. Most everybody has goon [gone] to the Black Hills. The Siouxs' are all on the war path. Genl. Gibbon, Comd. Officer of this district past here with 600 soldiers to fight the Sioux, Genl. Crook's from another direction, and Custer from another. We had a very nice winter. Now it is spring.

May 20, 1876. The Dr. of this Agency and School teacher and I took a long walk on a large flat on the bluffs, N.E. towards the point of Rocks where the agency road came from Bozeman, to see if the mail was coming, but we saw no signes of it so we started to come back. Coming back we saw eight or nine objects. We looked and stopped untill we were sure they were Indians, hostile, on horse back. Coming towards us, we could see there guns shine. We ran down the hill and came home and reported. In the afternoon six [five?] of us, (Mr. McWillson, Smith, Dr., Bridger, and I) took a horse a piece and started over the bluffs to Beaver Creek, two miles, and around by the mouth of the Rose Bud, to see if we could see any signes of Indians, or tracks. But we saw non, only a few bands of antelope. We have a night guard to watch the stables, and the men take turns every night in watching the Stockade.

Toward the end of his stay at Crow Agency, Herman went on a pleasure excursion into Yellowstone Park, only four years after the area had been established as the nation's first national park. Traveling with General Clapp and a party of ten on horseback, Herman described the scenery he encountered as "so gorgeously colored and tinted . . . that no oil painting or chromo however fine, will ever do justice to the natural picture."

In 1877, Herman left Crow Agency. Unable to decide on a satisfactory occupation and place to live, he wrote in his diary, "I am dissatisfied with myself, not doing as well as I should have." He worked in several dry goods establishments in Kansas and Montana Territory, including the Rich G. Willson Dry Goods Store in Bozeman, but economic conditions were poor and he lost several jobs. After trying the jewelry business in St. Louis, he returned to Kansas and again pursued the dry goods business, eventually owning his own store. When he was unemployed, he would herd sheep on General Clapp's farm.

In 1883, Herman married Edith Bever of Humbolt, Kansas, and they soon moved back to Bozeman. Edith suffered from tuberculosis, and the high mountain air was considered beneficial for her condition. After seven years of marriage, Herman's young wife died, leaving him with a son, Dexter.

Herman married twice more, his second and third wives also preceding him in death. He lived his later years in Long Beach, California, where he died on October 7, 1941, at the age of eighty-one.

Crow Agency remained at the site that General Clapp had selected for it on the Stillwater until 1883, when it was moved to its present site on the Bighorn River.

Researcher and Curator Join Museum Staff

OGM Curator Mary Ellen Rowe (left) with Researcher Chere Jiusto

Researcher Chere Jiusto and OGM Curator Mary Ellen Rowe have joined the staff of the Society's Museum. Jiusto, a Fine Arts graduate of the University of Montana, is doing research in preparation for the new "History of Montana" exhibition. She is combing the collections of the Society's Archives and Photograph Archives, looking for information and images that will illustrate many of the exhibit's concepts and themes, from frontier justice to Indian-white relations. Jiusto will also assign research tasks to seven volunteers who are helping with the project.

Jiusto has worked previously for the Museum inventorying a major portion of its permanent collection and cataloging the ethnographic and textile portions of the collection. She also worked for the State Historic Preservation Office, surveying Helena's south-central historic district in preparation for nominating it to the National Register of Historic Places.

Mary Ellen Rowe brings to her job as Curator of the Original Governor's Mansion considerable experience in working with historic homes. A native of Washington state, she was the acting director of Spokane's Fort Wright Museum, the restored home of the Post Executive Officer at Fort George Wright. She also worked as Curator of Exhibits for the Southern Oregon Historical Society at Jacksonville, where she prepared exhibits at two historic buildings.

Rowe received her B.A. in museum science from Fort Wright College in Spokane and her M.A. in history from the University of Washington in Seattle, and she is currently completing her doctoral dissertation on the militia tradition in pre-Civil War America. As OGM Curator, Rowe is interested in restoring the ballroom on the OGM's third floor and the Mansion's magnificent carriage house and in landscaping the grounds as they were in 1913, when the Mansion first became the official residence of Montana's governors.

"Chere and Mary Ellen are highly skilled professionals," said Chief Curator Steve Germann, "and I am looking forward to a long and fruitful working relationship with both of them."

Accessions

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Margaret S. WardenGreat Falls, Montana | 2 limited edition prints by Branson Stevenson: "Axolotl" and "Snail Shell" |
| Victor MillerHarlem Montana | Drum set, 1940s |
| Mary Arnold-BraunHelena, Montana | 3 gas heaters, ca. 1890-1920; YMCA button, 1958 |
| Dennis HomerHelena, Montana | American Legion Auxiliary cardtable |
| John Tigchon HoagGrosse Pointe, Michigan | Helena Motor Railway Company ticket book |
| Col. & Mrs. Joe GoldenHelena, Montana | 4 glass vases, 3 towels, towel rack, 2 grain sacks, and 26 assorted kitchen utensils |
| Abbie MittonKalispell, Montana | Collection of 39 items, including wedding dress worn by Elmira Mitton, kitchen utensils, and housekeeping equipment |
| Carol ShackelfordHelena, Montana | Sheet and matching pillowcases |
| Gary LambHelena, Montana | 4 lace curtain panels, 2 lace valances, linen towel |

Photograph Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Stephen W. PogsonPhoenix, Arizona | One album: Views of people, towns, landscapes, and buildings in Butte, Montana, Utah, and California, ca. 1905, Percy W. Pogson, photographer; includes many cyanotypes |
| Elizabeth Oakes ClarkeScandia, Minnesota | 27 stereographs by Haynes, L.A. Huffman, etc.; 46 photographs and 2 albums: Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad construction in Montana and Idaho; Taft, Montana, 1906-1909; 18 postcards of Helena, Montana, and surrounding area |

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Jack Gilluly,Anaconda, Montana | Papers of Sam Gilluly, Montana newspaperman and director of the Montana Historical Society, 1967-1974 |
| Bill Cunningham,Helena, Montana | Records of the Northern Rockies regional office of The Wilderness Society, Helena, 1977-1982 |
| Hall F. Clement, Jr.,Seattle, Washington | Diary kept by Hallowell Fernando Clement, Sr., Montana attorney and sheep rancher, 1878-1885 |

Magazine and Trustees Awards Presented at MHS History Conference

Montana the Magazine of Western History presented two writing awards at this year's history conference. Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith, freelance writers and editors from Bozeman, received the 1985 Vivian A. Paladin Writing Award, which is presented for the best article published in the magazine during the year. Their article, "Women in Waiting in the Westward Movement: Pamelia Dillin Fergus and Emma Stratton Christie," appeared in the Spring 1985 issue of Montana.

Stephenie Ambrose Tubbs, who received her M.A. in history from the University of Montana, won the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award for "Turn-of-the-Century Women's Clubs in Montana," which will appear in the Winter 1986 issue of Montana. The Burlingame-Toole Award is presented each year to the undergraduate or graduate student who has submitted the best manuscript on the history of Montana and the region.

The Society presented the MHS Board of Trustees Award for Contributions to Montana History to Stuart Conner, a Billings attorney and amateur archaeologist, and to William Sherman, a retired Portland, Oregon, businessman. These awards are presented annually to individuals whose work has significantly contributed to the study and promotion of Montana history. Conner was recognized for his contributions to the preservation and interpretation of Native American rock art in the northern plains, and Sherman was honored for his participation in the Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation.

At the awards banquet (clockwise, from above left): Stephenie Ambrose Tubbs (center), Associate Editor Marianne Keddington, and Barre Toelken; Linda Peavy (left) and Ursula Smith; Stuart Conner (center), Kathy Malone, and MHS Director Robert Archibald; and Bill Sherman (center), Kathy Malone, and MHS Trustee Wilbur Werner.

MHS Museum Receives Second IMS Grant

For the second year in a row, the Society's Museum has received a grant from the Institute of Museum Services' Conservation Project program. The $25,000 grant will be used to hire a professional objects conservator, who will spend a year preparing artifacts for the Society's new "History of Montana" exhibition, which will be completed in 1989.

This spring, the new conservator will spend three months reviewing the objects that the exhibit team has tentatively selected for the exhibit. He or she will then make recommendations about whether an artifact should be included or not, based on its condition and the cost, in money or time, of treating it.

The conservator will then spend nine months "treating" the artifacts for the exhibit. This will include cleaning and repairing artifacts and sometimes stabilizing exceptionally fragile objects.

"We feel very lucky to have received a second Conservation Project grant, and we're grateful to the Institute of Museum Services," said Chief Curator Germann. "This grant will allow us to be certain that the artifacts we use in the Society's new Museum are of the best quality and in the best possible shape and that they are installed and maintained properly."

1865

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

MAY 19 1986

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

from the Editor's File

Plainswoman, a magazine of historical and contemporary writings devoted to subjects of interest to women in the Plains region, has published a special issue on the women of Montana. Edited by Linda Peavy and Ursula Smith of Bozeman, the September 1985 issue "celebrates the women of Montana—their history, their politics, their art, their literature, their work, and their lives." You can purchase this special issue through your local bookstore or by writing to Plainswoman, Box 8027, Grand Forks, ND 58202.

Plainswoman is also sponsoring its fourth annual fiction contest. The editors of Plainswoman are looking for stories about women: realistic stories, fantasies, humorous stories, and stories of conflict and suspense. Writers may submit only one story of 4,000 words or less. Winning entries will appear in the June-July issue of the magazine, and more than $200 in prizes will be awarded. All entries will be considered for publication in future issues of Plainswoman. Deadline for submissions is March 15, 1986. Mail typed, double-spaced entries and SASE to Plainswoman Contest, Box 8027N, Grand Forks, ND 58202.

The C. M. Russell Museum, located at 2824 4th Avenue South in Great Falls, Montana, has recently completed a $3 million expansion project. The new addition features two exhibit galleries, a multi-use gallery and meeting room, a larger sales shop, and an archival library. Russell's log cabin studio and family home have also been integrated into the museum complex. On March 20, the museum will host a "Gala Opening" in conjunction with its 18th annual C. M. Russell Auction of Original Western Art.

Kevin P. Heaney of Elko, Nevada, will soon begin publishing Dusty Memories, a monthly newsletter that focuses on the ghost towns of the American West. Dusty Memories will feature articles, book reviews, illustrations, and maps and will emphasize the preservation of the West's ghost town heritage. For more information, write to Heaney Publications, 1661 5th Street #1, Elko, Nevada 89801.

The Northern Great Plains History Conference is seeking papers and session proposals for its 1986 meetings to be held on September 25-27. The deadline for proposals is April 1, 1986, and topics in all areas of history are welcome. To submit proposals and for more information, write to Professor Jack M. Lauber, Department of History, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, Eau Claire, WI 54701.

History Day Scheduled

Montana students will soon have an opportunity to participate in the third annual Montana History Day competition. To be held in Helena on May 3, 1986, the contest is sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and endorsed by the Office of Public Instruction. All Montana students in grades six through twelve are eligible to compete, and winners will have an opportunity to travel to National History Day held at the University of Maryland.

Students' entries can take the form of historical papers, exhibits, dramatic performances, or media presentations and must focus on this year's national theme, "Conflicts and/or Compromises in History."

If you are interested in receiving more information about Montana History Day, call or write Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620; 444-4794.

MHS Calendar

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| February 19 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Spanning the Wide Open Spaces: Historic Bridges in Montana," Fred Quivik |
| March | Wednesdays, 12 noon to 1 p.m. History Series |
| March 19 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Lewis and Clark," Harry Fritz |
| April 16 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Folklife in Montana," by Michael Korn |
| May 3 | Montana History Day, Montana Historical Society |
| May 21 | Friends of the Society meeting. Program at 10 a.m. "Blind Corral," Ralph Beer |

1985 Winter Hours

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, Helena | Closed January-March, except for tours made by appointment. |

S
978.6
H6m
v.23#3
Aug-Sept.
1985

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST

Vol. 23 No. 3 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society August-September 1985

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAY 19 1986
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MHS Press To Publish

A Traveler's Companion to Montana History

by Carroll Van West

A TRAVELER'S COMPANION TO MONTANA HISTORY
by Carroll Van West
A MONTANA HISTORICAL SOCIETY GUIDE

If you know where to look as you drive on Montana's roads and highways, you can see how humans have traveled or used the land's resources, creating what Dr. Carroll Van West calls "historical landscapes." These landscapes include the locations of Native American campsites, buildings with classic railroad architecture, the remains of gold-mining stamp mills, and much more. In A Traveler's Companion to Montana History, which will be published this fall by the Montana Historical Society Press, West takes readers on a tour of Montana's historical landscapes.

A Traveler's Companion to Montana History will introduce readers to a new way of looking at Montana's familiar landscapes. West's narrative lets us see how people have used Montana's resources and explains how the activities of populations as remote in time from each other as prehistoric Indians and 20th century coal miners have changed the landscape and how their actions continue to influence our lives. There are patterns on the land, West writes, patterns that can be seen in the location of towns, in the arrangement of farm and ranch buildings, in long-abandoned Indian campsites and trails, and in the corridors formed by major railroads.

There has been a need for a book like A Traveler's Companion to Montana History for many years. The state's highway historical markers, books on ghost towns, and guides to historic districts in larger cities have given travelers good information, but there is no complete tourist guide to Montana history. The WPA's guidebook to Montana, which was published in 1939, has long been out of print, as has the Montana volume in the American Guide Series. West's book will fill the need.

A Traveler's Companion to Montana History is a cooperative effort. The State Historic Preservation Office funded the research and writing of the text by West, John Smart of the Society's Photograph Archives has produced the photographic prints, Geoff Wyatt of the Society's Museum Department designed the cover, and the MHS Press will edit and produce the book.

The press originally planned to publish the book in mid summer, but necessary delays have postponed publication until January. "The project has been a challenge," MHS Press Editor Bill Lang commented. "Van West has written a detailed text for a book that must be as practical as it is informative. We want this book to be used at home as well as in the car."

Continued on page 2

Continued from page 1

The book is designed for use. A Traveler's Companion is organized into seven historical/geographical regions, each with subsections that feature a particular historical theme. Each chapter also includes specific travel routes with discussions of historical landscapes and information about historic sites. Historical and contemporary photographs of historic sites and landscapes will illustrate the book. The book's size—5½ x 8½ inches—will make it easy for the traveler to use, and the maps reproduced in the book will be keyed to the Official Montana Highway Map.

With A Traveler's Companion in hand, Montanans and tourists will get a new viewpoint on the state's history. They will find that knowing how to look at Montana's landscape is an excellent way to see that the state's history is still alive and visible. This will be an exciting book that every Montana history enthusiast will want to buy and use.

To order copies of A Traveler's Companion, send $10.95 ($9.95 plus $1.00 shipping) to the Museum Store, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620. For credit card orders, you can call (406) 444-2890 Monday through Saturday. There is also an order form for the book in the back of your last issue of Montana the Magazine of Western History.

Grants Available from Records Commission

The Montana Historical Records Advisory Council is "the central advisory body in the State of Montana for the care, storage, and disposition of historical records. . . ." The major responsibility of the historians, archivists, records managers, and librarians who make up the council is to evaluate grant proposals made to the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC), a branch of the National Archives.

NHPRC grants are available to all nonprofit organizations and state, local, and tribal government agencies in Montana. The grants are designed to help recipients "preserve and make available for use those records that further an understanding and appreciation of American history." Among the Montana projects that have received NHPRC grants are the Montana Historical Society's current Montana Local Government Records Project and Montana State University's project to duplicate, store, and describe the glass and nitrate negatives in its M. L. Wilson photograph collection.

State Archivist Larry Hibpshman, the coordinator of the Montana Historical Records Advisory Council, hopes that organizations in the state will apply for these grants. "We want to encourage all those eligible to apply for the grant funds offered through NHPRC," said Hibpshman. "This is a marvelous opportunity for Montana's nonprofit organizations and government agencies to develop and enhance their historical records programs."

Organizations that want advice on the application procedure should consult with Hibpshman before applying. Proposals must be approved by the Montana Council before they can be considered by the NHPRC, but Hibpshman can ensure that the proposals are presented in the proper form with the required information.

Once the Montana Council passes on a proposal, it is forwarded to the NHPRC for final evaluation. The deadlines for submitting proposals to the Council are October 1, February 1, and June 1. Submit proposals to Larry Hibpshman, State Archivist, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620; 444-4774.

Fall Festival at the OGM

The Society's annual Fall Festival, which was held at the Original Governor's Mansion on September 21, celebrated the formal opening of the mansion's kitchen, which has been restored to look as it did at the turn of the century. Those who attended the festival had an opportunity to take a tour of the mansion, watch demonstrations by local craftspeople, browse through a farmers' market, and listen to live music.

The restoration of the kitchen required considerable time and effort from several individuals. Former Mansion Curator Mary Hoffschwelle and historical architect Jim McDonald of Missoula did exhaustive research to ensure that the historical interpretation was accurate. Museum Preparator Jim Warner and local craftsman Fred Eggli—with help and support from mansion board members and volunteers—put in thousands of hours of labor, reconstructing walls, refinishing the kitchen's original oak floor, and painstakingly reproducing the mansion's original woodwork and wainscoting. The kitchen was furnished with an early gas stove, a Hoosier cabinet, and an icebox, and the windows and walls were decorated with period curtains and pictures.

The Festival was sponsored by the Mansion's Restoration Board. Proceeds from the event will be used for continuing restoration work at the Mansion.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

PRESERVATION

Montana Historical Society Preservation Office August-September 1985

The Lowly Bungalow No Longer So Lowly

In May 1985, the Old House Journal ran a special issue on bungalows. The Journal, which is published monthly and contains many "how-to" articles for owners of historic homes, focused on the origin of the bungalow style, where it first appeared in the United States, the kind of furnishings usually found in bungalows, and sources of additional information. The following press release from the Journal contains a much condensed version of their special issue. We think it is well worth reprinting in our newsletter, along with the accompanying photos of Montana bungalows. Although Victorian house styles have captured our fancy for a long time, we believe that the bungalow, the first quintessential twentieth century house style, deserves our scrutiny and understanding.

To most people today, the term "bungalow" means a small, cheaply built house. But it was not always so. At one time the bungalow was the most fashionable and popular house style in America. There are signs that this charming house style, so long out of favor, has begun to attract attention from architecture buffs, historians, and even home buyers.

Because millions of them were built between 1900 and 1930, the bungalow is the most common old-house style in America. The word "bungalow" comes from India, where it described a low building with wide verandahs and deeply overhanging eaves. But it was in California—and eventually across the U.S.—that the bungalow flowered and became a showcase for radical new ideas of what American homes should look like.

The ideal bungalow was an example of simplicity, functionalism, and harmony with nature. Harmony with nature was symbolized on the outside by natural materials: unpainted stucco, stained wooden shingles, and uncut fieldstone. A pergola porch with twining vines often completed the rustic picture.

On the inside, the typical bungalow had the latest modern conve-

Continued on page 2

Kommers, McLaughlin & Leavengood, Architects

Bert Orr Residence, Dillon, Montana

Continued from page 1

niences, such as built-in furniture and white-tiled bathrooms. Oak was the favorite wood, both for woodwork and furniture. Walls were sometimes covered with burlap, or a stenciled area was painted at the top.

Some of the most beautiful houses in America were built in the bungalow style during the early twentieth century. The style became such a rage that there were even poems and songs written about bungalows. Like the Nehru jacket, however, the bungalow fashion eventually faded. Its demise was hastened by copycat builders who created cheap imitations, eventually giving the whole style a bad name. But many thousands of cozy and well-built bungalows have survived intact, waiting for a new generation to appreciate their romantic charm.

If you have a bungalow house and would like to learn more about its history and how to restore it, you can get a free copy of The Old-House Journal's special issue on bungalows. Send $1 to cover postage and handling to: "Bungalows," c/o The Old-House Journal, 69A Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, New York 11217.

Frederic L. Quivik

McDonald House, Hardin, Montana

Preservation Observations

The fact that Livingston is "little" and the fact it's "old," are two of the town's greatest assets, according to a feature article in last Sunday's New York Times [September 1, 1985]. Focusing on our progress in preserving our historic structures, the story earned our community a lot of good national attention.

The reason for the story was to outline what folks in small towns think about the Reagan administration's plans to cut back on tax incentives for historic preservation. "Some proposals for change are so sweeping that there are reverberations not only in centers of economic and political power, but in far and small corners of the country," the Times writer says.

The article goes on to use Livingston as its prime example of historic preservation efforts at the grass-roots level. It notes the downtown re-do of historic storefronts, and details the community's current hopes to restore the Livingston depot to house an exhibition from the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyo. . . .

The story earns us national attention, and highlights one of our greatest assets—our historic structures and our progress in preserving them as a way of "rounding out" our once one-sided economy. The depot project would provide a major addition to that effort, and we're all happy to have it recognized.

Reprinted from the Livingston Enterprise, September 5, 1985.

Jefferson County
Montana Deaf and Dumb Asylum
Boulder River School and Hospital, Bo
Lewis and Clark County
Western Clay Manufacturing C
Brickworks and the Archie Bray Fou
Helena, May 9, 1985.
Fergus County
Lewistown Multiple Resource Area, ple Resource Area is composed of th
dividual properties:
Lewistown Central Business Hist
Washington Street, First Avenue, Jane
Lewistown Courthouse Historic
Washington Street, Sixth Avenue, Mai
Lewistown Silk Stocking Historic D
Avenue, Boulevard, Washington Street
Fergus County High School, 412 Si
Huntoon residence, 722 West Wate
Big Horn County
Hardin Multiple Resource Area, Au
Resource Area is composed of the follo
Hardin Commercial Historic Distric
Crook Street, the Burlington Northern
Hardin Residential Historic Distric
Fourth Street, Crow Street, and Cody S

Built in 1907, the three-story Fergus
symbolic and functional sea[illegible] gov
centerpiece of the Lewistow[illegible]ourt

History Conference Examines Local Heritage

"Interpreting Our Heritage" is the theme of the Twelfth Annual Montana History Conference, which will be held at Helena's Colonial Inn on November 7-9. The three-day conference, which is sponsored by the Montana Historical Society and funded in part by a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, will begin at 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, November 7, with registration at the Society.

"Material culture"—that is, the physical evidence that a society leaves behind—will receive special attention at the conference's sessions. Barre Toelken, the author of The Dynamics of Folklore and the Director of the Folklore Program at Utah State University, will open the conference by defining material culture and the role it plays in cultural development. Toelken will also present the principal address at the Friday evening banquet, where he will present a program entitled "Folklore, History, and Reality in the American West."

Barre Toelken

The definition and importance of material culture in local history will be emphasized in various sessions of the conference. Peter Nabokov, author of Two Leggings: The Making of a Crow Warrior, will describe the architecture of Montana Indian dwellings. T. Allan Comp, Chief of the Division of Natural Resources, Pacific Northwest Region of the National Park Service, will discuss "The Museum in the Community." Byron Price, Director of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon, Texas, will talk about how Madison Avenue has promoted inaccurate images of the West. And Clyde A. Milner II, Associate Professor of History at Utah State University, will discuss "Inventing Montana: Pioneer Memoirs as Cultural History."

One session of the conference will examine literature written about Montana—specifically, how four of the state's best-known writers use Montana's history in their stories and poems. Panelists for the session will be William Kittredge (We Are Not in This Together), Paul Zarzyski (Call Me Lucky), Ralph Beer (Blind Corral), and David Long (Home Fires). Richard Etulain, editor of the New Mexico Historical Review and a specialist in literature of the West, will comment.

This year's history conference will present a new format for learning about Montana's history. From 10:00 a.m. until 2:00 p.m. on Friday, the state's cultural and educational institutions will hold a "Marketplace of Ideas," where they will present exhibits, slides, films, and publications for conference participants. Those interested in displaying materials should write or call Joan Haefer at the Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620; 444-4789.

Members of the Society will receive registration information for the history conference during the first part of October. All participants are encouraged to return their $15.00 registration fee and meal reservations by October 31.

---

Tentative Conference Schedule

Thursday, November 7
9:00-12:00 "Care of Collections in Historic Structures"
12:00-1:30 Annual Meeting, Montana Oral History Association
1:30-4:00 Oral History Workshops
5:00-7:00 Montana '89ers no-host reception and dinner
5:00-9:00 Conference registration, Montana Historical Society
7:30-8:30 "What Is Material Culture?"—Barre Toelken
8:30-9:30 Reception, Montana Historical Society

Friday, November 8
8:00-5:00 Conference registration, Colonial Inn
9:00-11:00 Interpreting Our Heritage Through Ceremony and Tradition
  "Transition of Give-Away Ceremonies"—Bob Dumont, Gerald Red Elk
  "Montana and the World's Fairs" —Richard Roeder
  "Celebrations in Goosetown" —Alice Finnegan
 Interpreting Our Heritage Through Graphics
  "Cartoon Illustrations: The Life of Fanny Cory Cooney"—Bob Cooney
  "Photo Images of the Blackfeet" —Bill Farr
  "Use of Catalogs and Advertizing Brochures in Interpreting the Past" —Byron Price
10:00-2:00 Marketplace of Ideas, exhibits in lobby
12:00-1:30 "The Museum in the Community"—T. Allan Comp
2:00-4:00 Interpreting Our Heritage Through Sites
  "Montana Indian Dwellings"—Peter Nabokov
  "Room Restorations"—Jim McDonald
  "Archaeology of the Pictograph Cave Complex" —David Schwab
 "Inventing Montana: Pioneer Memoirs as Cultural History"—Clyde Milner II
  Comments by Richard Brown and Michael Malone
4:00-6:00 Videotapes and Films: "Traditional Crafts of the Salish Kootenai"—Betty White
7:00-9:00 Banquet and Awards Ceremony "Folklore, History, and Reality in the American West"—Barre Toelken

Saturday, November 9
7:30-8:30 Breakfast "The Blood of Things"—Peter Nabokov
9:00-11:00 "Literature of Heritage"—Bill Kittredge, Ralph Beer, David Long, and Paul Zarzyski
  Comment by Richard Etulain
 Interpreting Our Heritage Through Artifacts
  "Place As Artifact"—T. Allan Comp
  "Contemporary Clothing of Crow Indian Women"—Mardell Plainfeather
  "Historic House Interiors"—Cheryl Clemmensen
12:00-1:30 "Marlboro Man Meets Scarlet O'Hara"—Byron Price
2:00-4:00 "Interpreting Our Heritage: Artifacts, Sites, Literature, and Ceremonies" —Barre Toelken, T. Allan Comp, Michael Korn

Society's Anaconda Collection Is t

In 1880, Marcus Daly bought the Anaconda Mine in Butte, Montana, for $30,000. From that small beginning, the Irish-born miner and entrepreneur went on to build a giant corporation, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company (ACM), which would play perhaps the central role in Montana's economic and political life for the next hundred years. The records of the ACM are now available to researchers in the Archives of the Montana Historical Society.

For the past four years, Archivist Ellie Arguimbau has worked steadily to organize the ACM records and to put together an inventory and an index to the collection. The result of her effort is Manuscript Collection 169: The Anaconda Copper Mining Company Records. Originally received in several donations from both the Anaconda Minerals Company and the Atlantic Richfield Corporation (ARCO), the collection contains more than 700 bound volumes and 350 file boxes and takes up more than 400 feet of shelf space.

Although the Archives did not receive all of the ACM records (both the Anaconda Minerals Company and ARCO retained some for their own archives, and the MHS Archives has a list of the records ARCO retained), Manuscript Collection 169 contains groups of records from three important sources: the Anaconda Reduction Department in Anaconda; the Great Falls Reduction Department in Great Falls; and the ACM General Office in Butte.

According to Arguimbau, the records of the Anaconda and Great Falls reduction departments represent the real wealth of the ACM collection. "The records of these two departments," Arguimbau said, "constitute the most extensive documentation of the smelting industry in a public repository in the United States."

The reduction department records consist primarily of the large subject files maintained by each operation. Because the company organized much of its correspondence by subject, these files contain the bulk of the reduction departments' correspondence from the 1890s to the 1960s.

"The reduction departments' subject files document the activities at the two smelters in amazing detail," said Arguimbau. The subjects covered range from the day-to-day technical operations of the smelters to health and safety issues, labor relations, construction of each smelter's facilities, wages and benefits, social programs, technological breakthroughs made by the ACM research staff, and the shipment and processing of crude ore from Montana producers.

A sampling of subject file titles from the Great Falls Reduction Department gives some indication of the breadth of this part of the collection: "Assays and samples of B&M pig copper shipments"; "Political: working hours for employees voting at elections"; "Chimneys, flues and dust chambers: cave-ins . . . and cost of repairs"; "Concentrator overflow slime treatment"; "Damages due to dumping slag and tailings in river: Ft. Benton water supply"; "Handling of accidents to employees"; "Methods of firing McDougall furnaces"; "Special tests on cathode copper"; "Patents & trademarks: apparatus for handling heavy slabs . . ."; "Shutdowns and curtailments"; "Defective wirebar"; and "Zinc plant shipments of lead residue. . . ."

Dating mainly from the 1890s to the 1910s, the legal documents, organizational records, and extensive correspondence of the General Office document the relationship between the General Office and the various company departments and subsidiaries. These papers also contain the company's core business records, including general ledgers, journals, auditors' reports, and cost sheets from the ACM's mines.

The cost sheets in particular contain much valuable information. "They provide us with remarkable documentation of each mine's activities and their costs," said Arguimbau. The sheets have separate categories for development, draining, timbering, mining, hoisting, and repairs; give the costs of labor and supplies; and contain detailed statistics on production.

In addition to the records of the General Office and the two smelters, the ACM collection contains considerable correspondence and financial and organizational records from many of the ACM's subsidiaries in the lumber, hardware, transportation, and coal, silver, and gold-mining industries in Montana and elsewhere. The collection also includes smaller quantities of records from many of the company's townsite, mercantile, electric power, and water operations. There are even several files on ACM subsidiaries in Chile and Poland during the 1920s.

When the Archives received the ACM records, the Society's Photograph Archives received two sizable donations of ACM materials. The two

Photographs from the Ana

Work gangs and a wrecker clean up following a June flood. 1908.

NO 1619 NOV 2 1913

A view of the Great Falls smelter

he Largest of Its Kind in the U.S.

photograph collections, which came from the Great Falls and Anaconda reduction works, comprise over 11,000 images. These photographs document all aspects of work at the smelters, the machinery and equipment used in the smelting and refining processes, construction of the two smelters, the effects of smelter smoke on agriculture in the Deerlodge Valley, ACM operations in Chile and Arizona, and several other subjects.

The photographic materials from the Great Falls smelter include 4,500 glass negatives and 3,200 film negatives dated from 1901 to 1964. Three hundred reference prints have been generated from those negatives. The materials from the Anaconda smelter include 3,500 images in various formats from the years 1900 to 1970. Neither photograph collection has been processed or cataloged, although there is a preliminary card index, generated by the ACM, for the Great Falls negatives.

"These collections, both of paper records and of photographs, are so enormous and in certain areas so complete that they represent a nearly inexhaustible resource," said Arguimbau. "Now that Manuscript Collection 169 is processed and an inventory is available, we welcome anyone interested in the Anaconda Company to visit us and discover the remarkable depth and diversity of these records."

Anyone wishing to work in the Anaconda Copper Mining Company collections may do so in the reading room of the Montana Historical Society Library.

onda Collection

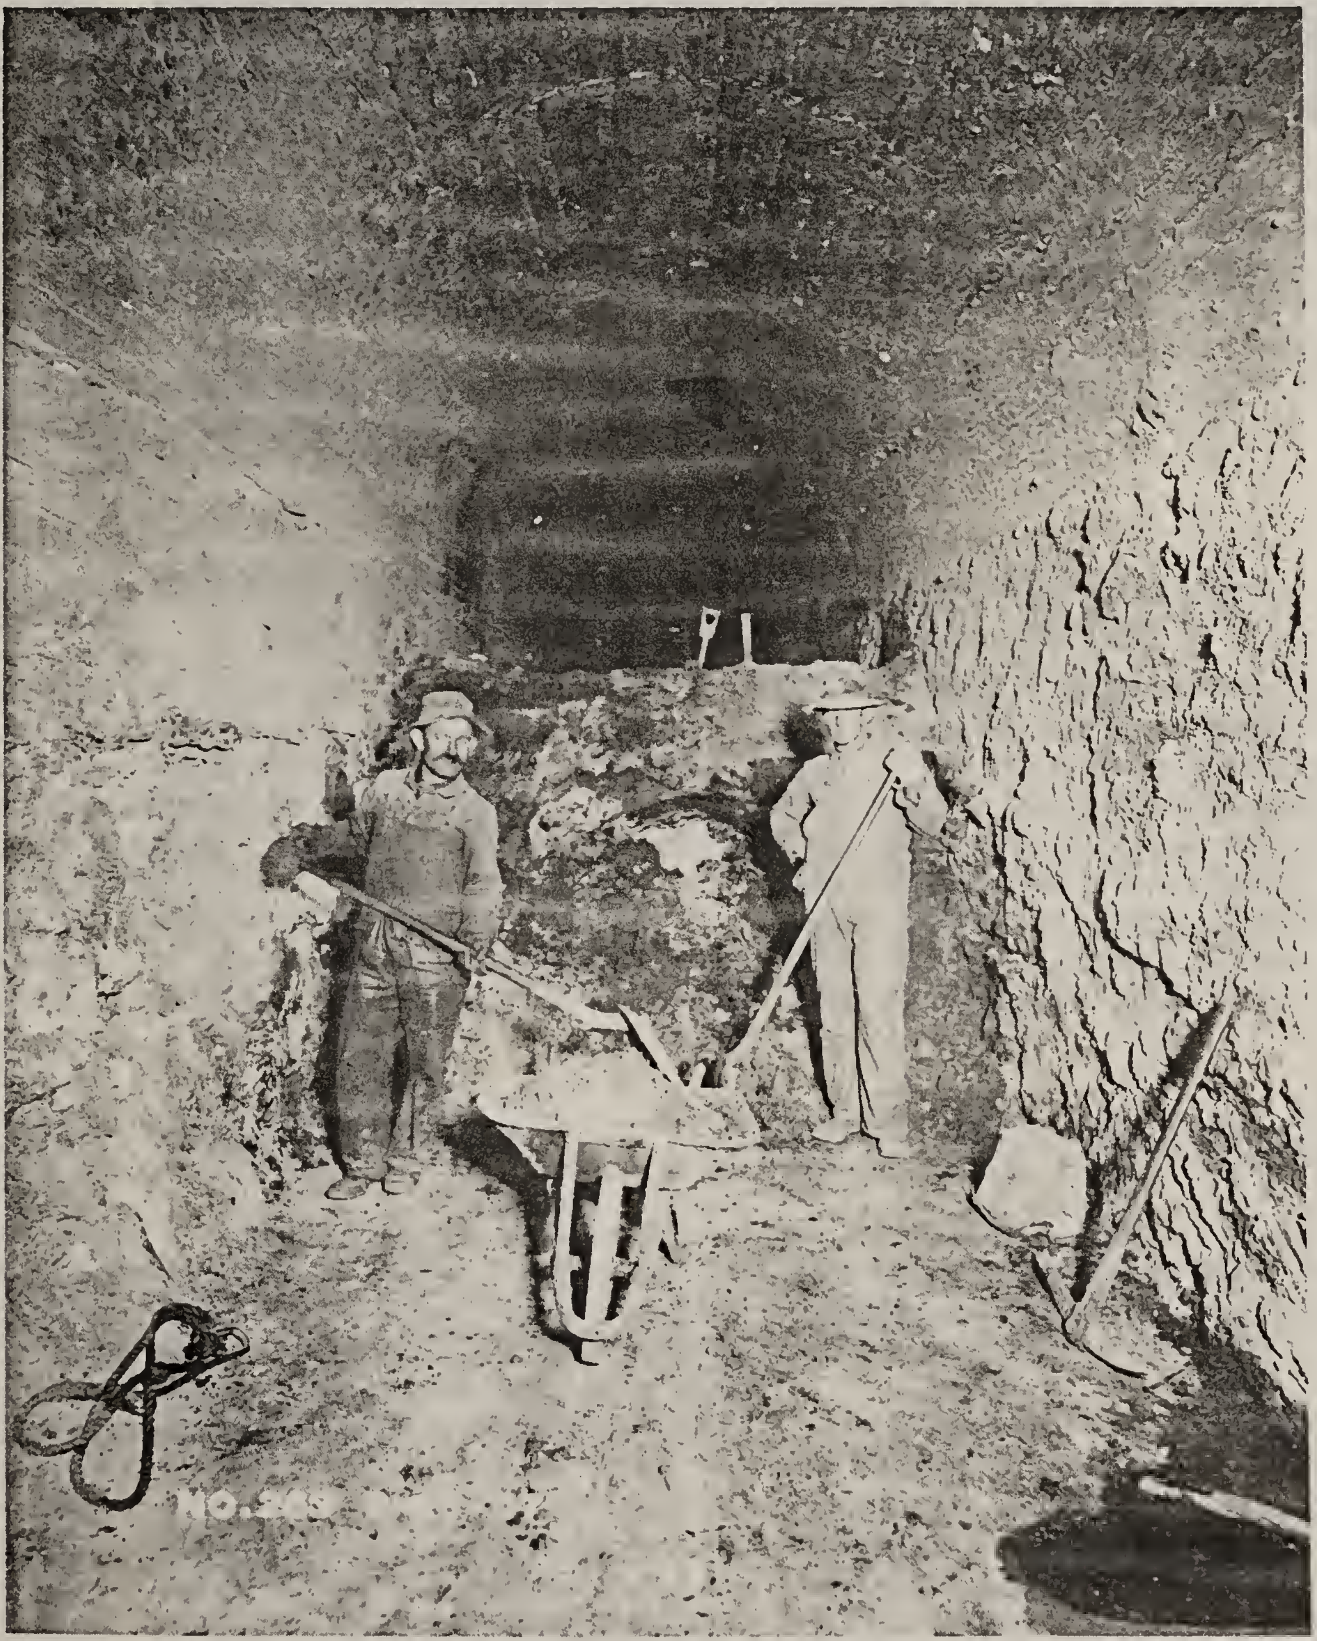
he Great Falls smelter

m the east, 1913.



Two workers shovel out the McDougall Flue at the Great Falls smelter, September 1907.

Kirby Lambert Is New Museum Registrar

At the Montana Historical Society, the Museum Registrar must be a jack-of-all-trades. The Registrar's responsibilities include keeping all records for the Museum's collections; cataloging the Museum's thousands of artifacts; supervising volunteers who assist with Museum projects; maintaining insurance on the Museum's collections; making certain that artifacts are carefully handled when they are moved; and answering mail and phone inquiries from the public.

Kirby Lambert, the Society's new Museum Registrar, is well-prepared for this demanding position. Lambert received a Master of Arts in Museum Science from Texas Tech University and specialized training in historical administration at Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia. Before coming to the Society, Kirby was the Assistant Director and Curator at the Sam Houston Memorial Museum in Huntsville, Texas.

In addition to his other duties, Lambert handles all loans of artifacts and artworks for the Museum and arranges for the packing and shipping of paintings and objects whenever they are sent out for conservation. Most recently, he shipped to conservators two paintings from the Society's Poindexter Collection—works by American abstractionists Franz Kline and Jackson Pollock—in preparation for loaning them to major exhibits in Cincinnati and Los Angeles.

"I'm very impressed with Kirby's professionalism and his enthusiastic approach," said Chief Curator Steve Germann. "He possesses a variety of skills that are already having a positive effect on many aspects of the Museum program."

Conservation Workshops Held at Society

On October 25 and 26, the Montana Historical Society will host a series of workshops on the conservation of objects and textiles. The workshops—funded through a grant from the National Museum Act, which is administered by the Smithsonian Institution—will give those who work in the state's museums and historical societies an opportunity to learn about the conservation of artifacts from the staff of the Rocky Mountain Regional Conservation Center of Denver.

Jean Brako, Textile Conservator at the Center since 1982, will teach the textile workshop. Brako was educated at New York University and received specialized training in conservation techniques in England. During the workshop, she will discuss conservation of a broad range of textiles, from quilts and flags to historical costumes and Native American weavings.

Carl Patterson, Objects Conservator and Director of the Rocky Mountain Regional Conservation Center, will conduct the objects workshop. Trained at the Institute of Archaeology in London and a veteran of archaeological digs in the Middle East, Patterson will discuss the conservation of "anything three-dimensional," including objects made of wood, metal, stone, and clay.

Each workshop will be held from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the third-floor conference room at the Society. The charge for attending each workshop will be $20. For more information, write to Meredith Gilbert, Rocky Mountain Regional Conservation Center, 2420 So. University, Denver, Colorado 80208, or phone (303) 753-3218. Those interested should register with Gilbert by October 14.

Staff Professional Activities

MHS Oral Historian Laurie Mercier presented a workshop on oral history methods to Montana Power Company employees in Butte. The utility will be conducting an in-house oral history project in celebration of its seventy-fifth anniversary. Mercier also conducted an oral history workshop in Chester for the Liberty County Conservation District and interested individuals. She then traveled to Plentywood, Forsyth, and Laurel, presenting workshops to members of the State Extension Homemakers who will be involved in the organization's "Voices of Montana Homemakers" centennial oral history project.

---

Rick Newby, editorial assistant in the Society's publication program, recently served on the advisory committee for the Yellowstone Art Center's Regional Writers Project. The Writers Project distributes books of poetry and fiction by writers from the Northwest.

National Register Update

ld Administration Building) at the lder, May 10, 1985.

mpany Historic District (Kessler dation), 2915 Country Club Road, une 27, 1985. The Lewistown Multi-following historic districts and inric District, roughly bounded by ux Street, and Eighth Avenue;

District, roughly bounded by
. and Broadway;
istrict, roughly bounded by Second and Third Avenue;
th Avenue South; and Street.

gust 14, 1985. The Hardin Multiple ing historic districts:
. roughly bounded by Fourth Street,
ight-of-way, and Crow Street; and
. roughly bounded by Fifth Street, treet.

Located within the Lewistown Silk Stocking Historic District, the Wiedeman residence at 204 W. Boulevard was designed by Helena architect C. E. Bell in 1904 as a frame structure. In 1911, the Wiedemans gave their home a veneer of dark, vitreous brick produced by the Lewistown Brick and Tile Company, which George Wiedeman had helped to establish in 1901.

County Courthouse remains the ern[illegible]t in Lewistown and is the [illegible] Historic District.

Frederic L. Quivik

A relatively intact complex that manufactured brick, paving tiles, and sewer tiles in Helena, 1890-1957, the Western Clay Manufacturing Company Historic District still houses an excellent collection of late nineteenth and early twentieth century brick and tile manufacturing machinery and apparatus.

Preservation News and Reminders

The National Trust for Historic Preservation will host its thirty-ninth National Preservation Conference in Seattle on October 9-13. The conference's theme is "Preservation in the West." If you are interested in attending and would like further information, write to the State Historic Preservation Office, 225 North Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620, or call (406) 444-7715.

In order for potential National Register properties to be considered at a State Historic Preservation Review Board meeting, nominations must be in the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) at least sixty days before the meeting.

The final 1985 Review Board meeting will be held in mid November; write or call SHPO for the date and location. A final schedule for the Review Board's 1986 meetings will be set at the November meeting. We encourage those interested in having a property considered for the National Register to send potential nominations to us by December 1 for consideration at the Review Board's first 1986 meeting.

The Montana Historic Preservation Office is currently soliciting applications for Federal Historic Preservation Fund grant projects that could be accomplished during federal fiscal year 1986 (October 1, 1985, through September 30, 1986). Congress has not yet approved a budget for that period, and President Reagan continues to recommend against any preservation grant funding. Because Congress appears likely to support preservation funding at a level similar to that of recent years, however, we urge groups or individuals interested in non-construction preservation projects to get in touch with us for application materials. Priority will be given to project applications on a first-come-first-served basis. We will probably not be able to consider application materials received after January 1, 1986.

Based on federal and state policies, priority will be given to the following kinds of projects:

- architectural and historical inventories in eastern Montana communities;
- architectural and historical inventories conducted in rural areas;
- inventory or inventory analysis projects that support the state's resource protection planning project;
- architectural, historical, or prehistorical inventories in areas jeopardized by development and lacking other sources of funding for site identification;
- communities certified within the Certified Local Government Program; and
- communities interested in accomplishing a series of specific preservation, education, survey, and planning tasks.

The Preservation Office cannot fund construction, rehabilitiation projects, or feasibility studies.

For further information, write or call Patricia Bick, State Historic Preservation Office, 225 North Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620; 444-7715.

Tax Reform, 1985

President Reagan's tax reform proposal contains a number of provisions that directly affect the preservation tax incentives for historic buildings.

Repeal of Tax Credit for Qualified Rehabilitations

The President's plan proposes repeal of the 15 per cent, 20 per cent, and 25 per cent investment tax credits (ITCs) for the rehabilitation of old and historic buildings. Repeal would be effective for expenditures incurred on or after January 1, 1986. Expenditures incurred on or after January 1, 1986, would be aggregated with expenditures incurred prior to that date in order to determine whether or not the earlier expenditures were incurred in connection with a "substantial" rehabilitation. The President's tax reform proposal, however, recognizes the congressional tax-writing committees' prerogative to design appropriate transition rules; therefore, the January 1, 1986, date for repeal may be modified as legislation is drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee.

As written in the President's proposal, the test to determine whether or not those expenditures that are incurred in connection with a certified rehabilitation are eligible for the 25 per cent ITC is not a function of when a project received certification from the National Park Service but rather a function of when qualified rehabilitation costs are incurred.

Depreciation

Under the tax reform proposal, the current Accelerated Cost Recovery System would be replaced with a new Capital Cost Recovery System. Under this system, structures would be depreciated over twenty-eight years at a depreciation rate of 4 per cent a year with the basis of the building being adjusted for inflation. There would be no difference in depreciation methods between rehabilitated historic buildings and new construction. This new depreciation method would be effective for property placed in service on or after January 1, 1986.

Use of Tax Incentives in Montana

Since passage of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, owners of forty-five historic buildings in eleven Montana counties have received either preliminary certification of proposed work or certification of final work totaling $13,492,895. Four applications for an additional $1,433,000 in rehabilitation work, including buildings in two counties where no historic rehabilitation work has been done in the past, are currently being reviewed by the State Historic Preservation Office and the National Park Service.

---

Montana Post Preservation is published quarterly as a supplement to Montana Post by the State Historic Preservation Office, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620. Funds for this publication are provided by the State of Montana and the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

The Montana State Preservation Office receives financial assistance for identification and preservation of historic properties. The U.S. Department of the Interior prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, age, national origin, or handicap. If you believe you have been discriminated against in any program, activity; or facility in this program or if you desire further information, please write to: Office of Equal Opportunity, U.S. Department of Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240.

"Small Town Montana" Completed

The small town has played a vital role in Montana's history, and with the completion of the Montana Historical Society's "Small Town Montana" oral history project, that role is now much better documented. The project, funded through coal severance tax funds for cultural and aesthetic projects awarded by the 1983 Montana legislature, focused on twelve small towns: Broadus, Chinook, Choteau, Columbia Falls, Cut Bank, Eureka, Forsyth, Philipsburg, Plains, Plentywood, Roundup, and Sidney.

Anna Gabrielson of Sidney was one of the two hundred people interviewed during the "Small Town Montana" project.

During the past two years, Laurie Mercier, Society Oral Historian, and Jackie Day, contract interviewer, interviewed as many as twenty people in each community to learn about each town's economic, political, and social life since the turn of the century.

The interviews provide illuminating glimpses into the activities, civic concerns, and perceptions of the people who live in Montana's small towns. We can hear descriptions of a variety of community social activities, such as dances, county fairs, basketball games, and card parties. We can learn about how drought affected the town of Chinook, how Roundup's economy changed after the coal mines closed, why the Tobacco Valley Improvement Association was formed in Eureka, and how a country club and golf course were organized in Broadus. And we can also hear about the popularity of fraternal organizations, the effect of rivalries between towns and counties, the demand for services such as sewers and police protection, and the effects of isolation on health service.

"The 'Small Town' project has generated a lot of enthusiasm at the local level and has sparked an interest in local and oral history," said Mercier. "In addition to the value these interviews will have for researchers, several of the towns studied have initiated exciting projects that will supplement the information that we have already gathered."

Each of the 200 taped interviews has been summarized and indexed and is available for research use in the reading room of the Society's Library. There are also copies of the interviews in libraries or historical societies in each of the towns studied.

Calendar

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| October 25 | Rocky Mountain Regional Conservation Center, Workshop on Objects Conservation, Montana Historical Society, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. |
| October 26 | RMRCC Workshop on Textile Conservation, Montana Historical Society, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. |
| November 7 | Conservation Workshop, Montana Historical Society, 9 a.m. to 12 noon |
| | Annual Meeting, Montana Oral History Association, Montana Historical Society, 12 noon to 1:30 p.m. |
| | Oral History Workshops, Montana Historical Society, 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. |
| | Montana '89ers Reception and Dinner, Colonial Inn, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. |
| November 7-9 | 12th Annual Montana History Conference, Colonial Inn, Helena |

1985 Winter Hours/September 3, 1985, to Memorial Day 1986

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society Museum225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Sundays and holidays |
| Library and Archives225 N. Roberts, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays |
| Montana State Capitol6th and Montana, Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.Closed weekends and holidays.Guided tours by reservation only. |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, Helena | Tuesday-Saturday, noon to 5 p.m.Last tour at 4, tours begin on the hour. Closed Sundays, Mondays, and holidays.Closed January-March, except for tours made by appointment. |

Admission is free for all tours. Group tours may be arranged by calling Joan Haefer, 444-4794.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capital Station, Helena, MT 59620

from the Editor's File

In honor of the late Coke Wood, Westerners International has instituted a contest for monographs or papers, 25 to 75 pages in length. Contest entrants must be active or corresponding members of a Westerners corral, and authors must examine a part of western American history with which he or she is familiar through family contacts or personal knowledge. The first award will be made in October 1986 at the Westerners' Breakfast, Western History Association Conference. For more information, write to Awards Chairman, Westerners International, P.O. Box 3485, College Station, Tucson, Arizona 85722.

With the establishment of the David Wooley Evans and Beatrice Cannon Evans Biography Award, Brigham Young University is offering $10,000 for a distinguished biography of any person significant in the culture or history of "Mormon Country" (the Intermountain West, southern Canada, and northern Mexico). Books must have been published in 1984; manuscripts should be book length and ready for publication. All authors, regardless of religious affiliation, are invited to submit entries. Entries need not be limited to Mormon subjects. The deadline for submissions is December 31, 1985. For further information, write to Dr. Ted J. Warner, Department of History, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah 84602.

Papers are being sought for the Eighteenth Annual Dakota History Conference to be held at Madison, South Dakota, on April 11 and 12, 1986. The Karl Mundt Distinguished Historical Writing Awards, totaling $1,000, will be presented for the best papers relating to some aspect of the history of South Dakota, Dakota Territory, or the Upper Great Plains region. The deadline for submitting papers is January 31, 1986. For more information, write to H. W. Blakely, History Department, Dakota State College, Madison, South Dakota 57042-1799.

If you are interested in helping to celebrate Montana's statehood centennial in 1989, you can join the "Montana '89ers," a group that has been organized through Lt. Governor George Turman's office to assist with Centennial planning. To get things started, the " '89ers" will host a reception and dinner meeting on Thursday, November 7, from 5 to 7 p.m., at Helena's Colonial Inn. For information, write to '89ers, Lt. Governor's Office, P.O. Box 1989, Capitol Station, Helena, Montana 59620.

An entry in the 1985 Montana History Day competition, "Montana on Fire: Triumph and Tragedy in the North Hills," was recently praised in Northern Region News, a U.S. Forest Service publication. "Montana on Fire"—a slide program created by Amity Feaver, Kristi Finstad, Kim Currie, and Andy Posewitz of Helena's C. R. Anderson Middle School—documents the blaze that blackened the North Hills near Helena in 1984. The slide program was also shown to a Forest Service management team.

"Friends of the Society" Looking for New Members

The "Friends of the Society"—the group of volunteers who work for the Montana Historical Society—is looking for new members. The "Friends" do work that is essential to the Society, such as guiding students through the Society's Formal Museum and Mackay Gallery of Charles M. Russell Art (4,700 during the 1985 legislative session), working at the sales counter, and helping out in the Publications Office, the Archives, the Library, and the Museum. Some of the "Friends" also plan and host an annual Christmas reception, a reception for legislators, and a Valentine's Day Tea.

The "Friends" hold a business meeting on the third Wednesday of each month, when they also hear a talk on some topic in Montana or western history. The talks are held at 10:00 a.m. in the Society's Haynes auditorium, and the public is welcome to attend.

During the coming months, Richard B. Roeder, Montana historian and a member of Lt. Governor George Turman's staff, will discuss the celebration of the state's centennial in 1989; Helena vintage clothing dealer Karma Alfredson will give her "insider's" views on historical clothing; retired educator Homer Loucks will provide some pointers on doing family genealogy; Fred Quivik, Butte architectural historian, will talk about Montana's historic bridges; University of Montana professor of history Harry Fritz will give his views on the Lewis and Clark expedition; Michael Korn, folklife specialist for the Montana Arts Council, will define and describe folklife in Montana, ranging from cowboy poetry to miners' songs; and Helena-area rancher and writer Ralph Beer will discuss the writing of his first novel, Blind Corral.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the "Friends of the Society" or if you want more information about the group, call Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794 or Joan Haefer at 444-4789.

S
78.6
6m
23 #2
ay-June
1985

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST

Vol. 23, No. 2 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society May-June 1985

Ground Broken for Society's New Addition

The Montana Historical Society is getting a new addition to its building in Helena. "We're very excited," said Society Public Relations Officer Bev Harriott. "The addition will give us greater flexibility in programming and will allow us to complete some projects we have long envisioned but could never complete because of lack of space, such as a new Formal Museum."

On the chilly afternoon of March 29, Director Robert Archibald looked on as Sue Ford Bovey of the MHS Board of Trustees and Judy Donaghy, President of the Friends of the Society, turned over the first, ceremonial shovelful of dirt. "This ceremony," noted Archibald, "marks the start of a new era for the Society."

MHS Trustee Sue Ford Bovey (above left) and Friends of the Society President Judy Donaghy break ground for the new addition as Director Robert Archibald looks on. Also attending the ceremony were (below l to r) Centralized Services Administrator Brian Cockhill, construction superintendent Ron Spragg, and architect Frank Cikan.

The addition, which will be completed by mid 1986 and is funded by the Montana Legislative Assembly's Long-Range Building Program, will include a new Formal Museum, a new gallery for the Society's collection of C. M. Russell art, a new museum shop, a photograph reference area, and expanded office and work space.

Sletten Construction of Great Falls is the general contractor for the addition, and Project Coordinator Charles Ferguson and Project Superintendent Ron Spragg represented the construction company at the ground breaking. Tom Sindelar, AIA, represented Dana, Larson, Roubal, and Associates of Billings, the firm that designed the addition, and Phil Hauck attended for the state's Architectural and Engineering Division. Frank Cikan is the architect who will monitor the contractor's operations, and MHS Administrator of Centralized Services Brian Cockhill will serve as liaison between the contractor, the architects, and MHS staff.

"The addition will give us approximately 16,000 feet of new space," noted Harriott. "With that additional space, we will be better able to meet our program objectives and serve the public."

Society Hosts Historians and Archivists

Models in vintage clothing, accompanied by the Cheap Cologne Trio, provided both entertainment and information at the Pacific Northwest History Conference.

On May 16 through 18, historians, oral historians, and archivists from throughout the Pacific Northwest gathered in Montana's capital city. The attraction in Helena was the combined program of the Pacific Northwest History Conference and the annual meetings of Northwest Archivists, Inc. and the Northwest Oral History Association.

Among the highlights of the three-day conference were sessions on communalists, racial separatists, and survivalists in the Pacific Northwest; Montana writers Hughie Call and Grace Stone Coates; the history of labor in the Northwest; oral history projects on recent environmental history; and Scandinavian and Chinese immigration to the Northwest. Montana's Governor Ted Schwinden discussed upcoming centennial celebrations in the four omnibus states, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington.

Friday night's keynote address was presented by Robert E. Burke of the University of Washington, who discussed the relationship between two powerful and unpredictable western senators, Hiram W. Johnson of California and Burton K. Wheeler of Montana. Kathleen Underwood of the University of Texas at Arlington presented "Schoolmarms and Spinsters: Teachers and the Life Course of Western Women" at Saturday's luncheon session.

The Society was the host for the conference, and several staff members led sessions, introduced speakers, sat on panels, and presented papers. Oral Historian Laurie Mercier presided over the breakfast meeting of the Northwest Oral History Association, and Photograph Curator Lory Morrow presided over the Northwest Archivists' business meeting. Archivist Ellie Arguimbau discussed the Society's large holdings of Anaconda Copper Mining Company papers; Photographer John Smart presented a historical perspective on documentary photography; Carroll Van West of the State Historic Preservation Office talked about using photography in historic preservation planning; and Editor William Lang spoke about "Montana's Wilderness Decade" at an oral history session.

"Holding these three meetings simultaneously made for a successful and stimulating program," said MHS Public Relations Officer Bev Harriott, "and we were very pleased to be able to have them here in Helena."

Staff Professional Activities

Reference Librarian Dave Walter selected photographs from the Glacier National Park Archives for an exhibit celebrating the Park's seventy-fifth anniversary. The exhibit, which is co-sponsored by the Park and the Hockaday Center for the Arts in Kalispell, will run through early August at the Hockaday. Walter also wrote "Louis W. Hill and Glacier National Park in 1915," an article that appeared in the June/July issue of Encounters, a publication of the Science Museum of Minnesota.

Susan Near, Curator of Collections, attended the Winedale Museum Seminar in Texas on March 18-29. Near was one of twenty museum professionals from the western United States selected to attend the seminar.

Magazine Editor Bill Lang and Oral Historian Laurie Mercier have published "Getting It Down Right: Oral History's Reliability in Local History Research" in the most recent issue of Oral History Review.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

Hibpshman Appointed New State Archivist

The Montana Historical Society has been collecting letters, reminiscences, diaries, financial ledgers, and business and organizational records since its beginnings in the mid 1860s, and the stacks of the MHS Archives now hold over 5,500 cubic feet of primary source materials dating from 1780. In 1969, the Archives became the official repository for all valuable state records, and the State Archives now contains a nearly complete run of the papers of Montana's governors since statehood, the minutes of legislative committees since 1959, docket files for the supreme court, and records from most state agencies since World War II.

Larry Hibpshman, Montana's new State Archivist, wants to make sure that Montanans are aware of this wealth of documentary resources. "The records in the Archives, both private and public," said Hibpshman, "are here for people to use, whether they are university scholars, local historians, or just folks wanting to learn more about their family's genealogy."

New State Archivist Larry Hibpshman at the Pacific Northwest History Conference in Helena.

A native westerner, Hibpshman was born in Pueblo, Colorado, and grew up in Alaska, New Mexico, Wyoming, and California. He received his B.A. in History from the University of Southern Colorado at Pueblo and his M.A. in American Studies and Museum Studies at George Washington University in Washington, D.C. Hibpshman has received specialized training in archival practice and administration, the conservation and repair of documents, systems analysis, and business archives.

Hibpshman began his archival career at the National Archives and Records Administration in Washington, D.C., working as a program analyst in the Records Declassification Division, and he was later an archivist at the Sacramento (California) History Center. From 1981 to early 1985, Hibpshman was South Dakota's State Archivist, where he oversaw a substantial expansion of the state archives and was instrumental in increasing awareness of South Dakota's archives.

"It is our good fortune that we were able to attract to the State Archivist position a person as well qualified as Larry," said Bob Clark, head of the Society's Archives/Library Division. "He brings experience in handling both government records and private manuscripts to a program that must constantly balance the demands of these two types of materials."

Government Records Project Progresses

Bruce Harding, the Society's Local Government Records Specialist, is a very busy man. Hired on a one-year grant from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, a branch of the National Archives, Harding is traveling to Montana cities and counties to inventory local government records and to discuss with local officials which of their records have permanent legal, fiscal, administrative, or historical value. The Montana Association of Counties, the Montana Association of Clerks and Recorders, and other local government groups are also involved in the project.

"Because Montana does not yet have a comprehensive retention and disposition schedule for municipal and county records," said State Archivist Larry Hibpshman, "local officials are often not certain which records to keep and which to throw away. Bruce will soon be able to create a schedule that will cover both those records common to all local governments and those unique to a particular jurisdiction."

Harding, who received an M.A. in history from Washington State University, has been an archivist for the Ohio Historical Society, Michigan Historical Commission, Ohio State University, and the Chicago regional branch of the National Archives. A Certified Records Manager, he was records manager for the National Records Management Council and Washington State University and is a past president of the Association of Records Managers and Administrators, who named him "Records Manager of the Year" in 1971.

Anyone interested in more information about the Local Government Records Project should write to Harding at the Montana Historical Society Archives, 225 North Roberts, Helena, MT 59620, or call 444-4774.

Sights on the Centennial: Historic Pr

by Rick Newby

Few of Montana's buildings are more than one hundred years old, and their preservation may not come immediately to mind when local historical societies, municipal governments, civic groups, and individuals begin looking for ways to celebrate Montana's statehood centennial. But historic preservation can be a very appropriate way to celebrate the state's history, and the youth of Montana's buildings need not be seen as a stumbling block. As architect Carl Feiss wrote, "In historic preservation, antiquity is relative." And the State Historic Preservation Office considers all structures built before World War II as potentially historic and eligible for consideration on the National Register of Historic Places.

Among the historic preservation projects that can be used to commemorate local history are architectural and historical surveys; the establishment of local historic preservation offices, commissions, and ordinances; participation in the Main Street program; and a variety of educational and promotional activities.

The community architectural and historical survey, the cornerstone of historic preservation, would be an excellent way to celebrate the state's centennial. "A survey can generate enormous pride within a community," said Marcella Sherfy, State Historic Preservation Officer (SHPO). "Many older buildings are taken for granted or even disdained, but people are usually delighted when they discover that they live next to or own property that has historical, architectural, or cultural significance."

Local volunteers can do much of the work required to complete a survey, but it is generally necessary for a professional architectural historian or historical architect to coordinate the survey effort. Hiring such a person is not inexpensive, and the National Park Service, through the State Historic Preservation Office in Helena, has made historical and architectural survey grant funds available to help defray the costs. The National Park Service can pay up to seventy per cent of the cost of the survey coordinator, and the local sponsor of the survey—usually a local government or historical society—must pay the remaining costs. The local share can be in cash or in the form of in-kind contributions, such as labor and office equipment.

In communities where there is no local historical society or where the local government is unable or unwilling to sponsor a survey, individuals can still conduct a survey of a neighborhood or business district in their town. If you are faced with such a situation, the State Historic Preservation Office will contract directly with a survey coordinator if you and your organization, by volunteering time or donating money, can provide the necessary match. And if you are unsure whether you want to conduct a survey and you just want to perform some preliminary research on your own, the staff of the Preservation Office will be happy to answer your questions and give you technical assistance.

During an architectural and historical survey, the surveyor catalogues each building in the area, recording its age, builder, original owner, and appearance; its historical or architectural value; how it has changed over the years; and how it has been used. Be prepared to do some intensive research into all available records on the property, including building permit books, plat records, deeds, tax records, city directories, and insurance maps. Interviews with tenants and neighbors, past and present, often help in reconstructing a building's history.

The survey makes most other historic preservation activities possible. For example, it is the most valuable tool in identifying those structures, properties, and districts that are eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places. While listing in the Register does not ensure a historic building's survival, it certainly increases its chances. And listing makes certain income-producing properties, including residential rental properties, eligible for a twenty-five per cent tax credit.

Recently, the National Park Service has made grant funds available to communities for historic preservation planning. Four Montana local governments—Butte-Silver Bow, Lewistown, Bozeman, and Red Lodge-Carbon County—have used these funds to hire local historic preservation officers and

PRESERVATION

Montana Historical Society Preservation Office May-June 1985

Parking and Preservation: Solving a Dilemma in Butte, Montana

As you have read often in this newsletter, we rarely preserve Montana's historic and prehistoric resources by locking them up or "embalming" them. Instead, we try to encourage preservation of our resources as part of our daily business or ordinary agency management work. In our first guest-written article, Janet Cornish outlines the relationship between a community's wish to preserve its historic business buildings and its methods for giving shoppers access to them.
—Marcella Sherfy, SHPO

by Janet A. Cornish
Director, Butte-Silver Bow Urban Revitalization Agency

The Central Business District (CBD) in Butte, Montana, is located entirely within the city's National Historic Landmark District, one of the largest such districts in the nation. The area, which is characterized by densely developed streetscapes of turn-of-the-century architecture, tall steel headframes, and surrounding mine yards has been strongly influenced by historic preservation values. All of these elements combine to make Butte a uniquely urban center in what is otherwise an essentially rural region.

The Butte-Silver Bow Urban Revitalization Agency (URA), which was created in 1979, was charged with promoting the "rehabilitation and renovation" of Uptown Butte. The agency soon found itself in the center of a controversy over parking.

Heritage Plaza combines a parking lot and a public square in the heart of Butte's Central Business District. The Urban Revitalization Agency has also developed a sign graphics program that uses historical photographs, as in this parking sign.

The elements of the parking problem were familiar enough. The city's zoning regulations required that new and expanding businesses or offices provide off-street parking or make cash-in-lieu payments to the Parking Commission, which would theoretically use the funds to provide area-wide parking facilities. New commercial ventures trying to locate in Butte's Uptown found the parking requirements frustrating.

Continued on page 2

Continued from page 1

In 1983, parking meter heads were removed amidst concerns that the city would lose a necessary source of funds. After eighteen months, however, the Parking Commission continues to operate without an appreciable loss of revenue.

Land for off-street parking was scarce, and there seemed to be no direct benefit from participating in the cash-in-lieu program. Merchants, property owners, and local government officials agreed that there was a shortage of off-street parking space, but no one could agree about how serious the problem was.

Requiring that each new business in the Uptown area provide off-street parking also seemed to conflict directly with preservation objectives. The redevelopment of the Uptown depends to a great extent on using historic buildings; yet, in order for Uptown Butte to grow, buildings would have to be demolished to make other buildings viable. The district's charm and the associated commercial benefit would be threatened by the haphazard development of off-street parking areas. Further, if a building had been vacant for less than a year, the zoning office could waive the requirement that a new lot be built. It was more attractive, therefore, for new businesses to locate in such "grandfathered" buildings rather than in property that had long been vacant and desperately needed attention.

The zoning ordinance did state that the creation of a special improvement district (SID) for parking would exempt participants from having to build off-street parking facilities. An SID had been attempted in 1978, but the affected property owners protested because they thought the cost was too high. The proposed parking project would have been large enough to justify the sale of SID bonds.

The issue of parking meters generated even greater controversy. Parking Commission officials and some business people argued that the meters were necessary to assure a frequent turnover. Others argued that the meters were an annoyance and a deterrent to redevelopment. During the summer of 1983, the Butte-Silver Bow Council of Commissioners voted to remove the parking meters for one year and asked that the Urban Revitalization Agency study both on- and off-street parking.

The URA hired Wirth Associates of Billings and Everly and Associates of Butte to develop a parking, circulation, and open-space plan. In February 1984, the planning team presented its findings. The Butte Uptown Plan included recommendations for open space utilization, traffic circulation, driveways, streetscape treatment as well as some very innovative approaches to the parking problem. Their findings were based on the 1980 Urban Renewal Plan, a 1983 parking inventory prepared by the Butte-Silver Bow Planning Board, public input, and original research. The URA Board of Directors adopted the plan in April 1984 and has already authorized a number of the recommended projects.

Wirth/Everly proposed that an SID for parking be established but that the cost to individual property owners be kept small. Rather than selling an SID bond to finance parking lot development, the URA would use tax increment funds to build the lots. Property owners would pay a fixed amount of the cost of parking development and maintenance, and the local government could develop additional lots without raising individual assessments. A portion of the SID payments would be used to guarantee any losses the Parking Commission might incur due to the loss of meter revenue and the maintenance requirements of the new lots.

The Butte Uptown Plan recommended an SID assessment formula that took into account Butte's special problems, such as high occurrence of mixed use and upper-story vacant space. The total cost to be charged against the SID would be $158,000, or $15,800 annually for ten years. Under the plan, fewer than five per cent of the property owners would pay more than $150 per year. The information needed to compute the assessment formula was easily gathered in preparation for its presentation to the Council of Commissioners, and calculations were performed on a computer.

The SID proposal was taken before the Council of Commissioners in the summer of 1984 and was passed with fewer than three per cent of the property owners registering formal protest. The first of five new lots (a net addition of about one hundred spaces) is currently under construction, and the remainder will be completed during the 1985 construction season.

New businesses, offices, or housing may now locate in Uptown Butte without having to provide new off-street parking; and at the end of the first year, the Parking Commission showed no deficit as a result of parking meter removal. The redevelopment of Historic Uptown Butte now holds greater promise, and a rather sticky problem seems to have been solved. This is especially important in light of the specific objective of preserving one of Butte's most valuable resources—its historic buildings.

A Note on Tax Increment Financing

Tax Increment Financing (TIF) is authorized in the Montana Urban Renewal Law and has been used in six Montana communities. The program has been extremely effective in downtown redevelopment efforts across the state. TIF is a method of self-financing, whereby tax revenues that accrue from new development, after an established date, and within a specifically designated area (usually a CBD) are used for redevelopment activities within that area. TIF uses the entire ad valorem tax levied, including local government and school district mill levies. Butte established 1980 as its base year for calculating each year's increment and the CBD as its designated area. The increment for the 1984-1985 tax year is about $450,000.

For further information on tax increment financing or our new parking program, please write or call Janet Cornish, Urban Revitalization Agency, Butte-Silver Bow Courthouse, Butte, Montana, 59701, (406) 723-8262, ext. 354.

This photograph of Butte taken in the mid 1880s shows the buildings on the corner of Alaska and Quartz streets. The large building in the center of the photo is the old Miners Union Building.

Preservation Observations

The designs that a society imposes upon its territory and its living space constitute some of the most powerful statements that it can make about itself. Why then does history continue to concentrate so much on the verbal—to be so largely words about words?

Rhys Issac
Reviews in American History, June 1984

A society necessarily leaves marks of use upon the terrain it occupies. These marks are meaningful signs not only of the particular relations of a people to environment but also of the distribution and control of access to essential resources. Incised upon a society's living space appears a text for the inhabitants—which who runs may read—of social relations in their world. Moving more slowly, anthropologists for present societies, and historical ethnographers for past ones, must seek to interpret such texts—both to understand the relations of production inscribed upon the land and to decipher as much as they can of the meanings that such relations assumed for those who were part of them.

Rhys Issac
The Transformation of Virginia

National Register Update

Beaverhead County
Barrett Hospital, Chapman and So. Atlantic St., Dillon, January 1, 1985.

Gallatin County
Burr Fisher House, 712 S. Willson Ave., March 28, 1985.

Missoula County
Forkenbrock Funeral Home, 234 E. Pine St., Missoula, December 27, 1985.
Northern Pacific Railroad Depot, Railroad Ave., Missoula, March 28, 1985.
University Apartments, 400-422 Roosevelt Ave., Missoula, March 28, 1985.

Pondera County
Valier Public School, 820 Third St., Valier, March 28, 1985.

Eric Hefty, photographer

Johnson Flats (University Apartments), Missoula

Cascade County
Fort Shaw Historic District and Cemetery, one mile northwest of Fort Shaw, January 11, 1985.

Lewis and Clark County
Young Women's Christian Association (Independent), 501 N. Park St., Helena, December 27, 1985.

Debbie Bowman, photographer

Valier Public School

Preservation News and Reminders

Municipal and county officials interested in promoting historic preservation projects and activity in their jurisdictions are encouraged to get in touch with Pat Bick in the State Historic Preservation Office (444-7715, 225 North Roberts, Helena, MT 59620) for information on Montana's Certified Local Government Program. The Preservation Office sets aside a special category of funding for regrant to communities that are certified as having historic preservation expertise, a local preservation statute, and a preservation commission that guides preservation work in the community. The Preservation Office assists communities in reaching the qualifications needed for certification and welcomes hearing about even tentative interest in the Certified Local Government program.

From July 15 through July 19, Western Montana College is offering a fifteen-hour, one-credit Historic Preservation Workshop. Staff members from the State Historic Preservation Office will provide students with an introduction to preservation history and project work. Information on the course and enrollment procedures is available from the Registrar's Office, Western Montana College, Dillon, MT 59725.

---

Montana Post Preservation is published quarterly as a supplement to Montana Post by the State Historic Preservation Office, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620. Funds for this publication are provided by the State of Montana and the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

The Montana State Preservation Office receives financial assistance for identification and preservation of historic properties. The U.S. Department of the Interior prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, age, national origin, or handicap. If you believe you have been discriminated against in any program, activity, or facility in this program or if you desire further information, please write to: Office of Equal Opportunity, U.S. Department of Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240.

servation and Local History Projects

Tim Huneck, photographer

Communities and civic groups could commemorate the centennial by nominating a significant building to the National Register of Historic Places, such as the Eureka Community Hall (above), which was built in 1942; or a historical and architectural survey might be undertaken, such as the one recently completed in downtown Hardin (left) by the Big Horn County Historical Museum.

are working toward becoming certified by the National Park Service. Certification requires that a community have a historic preservation ordinance that establishes a historic preservation commission and the position of historic preservation officer.

Hiring preservation officers and establishing preservation commissions is not inexpensive, but the National Park Service planning grants help defray some of the initial expenses. The costs of planning are split equally between the Park Service and the participating local government, and as in the case of the survey grants, the fifty per cent from the locality may be in-kind contributions.

If you are interested in seeing your community become certified, you should suggest to your local governing body that a local historic preservation officer be hired. Work to get the support of the local historical society, downtown business groups, and other interested parties. The benefits of certification, after all, can be significant. They include a strong local commitment to historic preservation, preservation expertise on the local level, and some funding from the State Historic Preservation Office.

Another potential centennial project that is new to Montana is the Main Street program. A strategy to revitalize America's downtowns by emphasizing their historic assets, the Main Street program is sponsored by the National Trust for Historic Preservation. Since a demonstration project in three midwestern communities during the late 1970s, the program has expanded to include more than 130 towns in 15 states and has been highly successful in bringing new businesses and new energies to declining downtowns. Although the Main Street program is often sponsored by state government development agencies, it can be undertaken by a single town, which would receive financial assistance from the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the State Historic Preservation Office.

There are several other ways to use historic preservation to celebrate local history and the centennial. The variety of educational and promotional projects possible are limited only by your imagination. Those cities or towns with historic districts can establish walking tours, for example, or publish booklets describing particular historic properties or the entire district.

Local historical societies could publish the report generated during the local architectural and historical survey, making available all the fascinating information that has been uncovered about the community's historic buildings. Preservation organizations could encourage local schoolteachers to provide information on historic preservation in their classrooms. They could also provide the local library with technical materials concerning the care and rehabilitation of historic buildings. They may want to devote their energies to saving a specific historic building that is threatened by demolition or decay. Individuals can volunteer to work on the local survey team, and they can lobby the town newspaper to run a series of articles on historic and prehistoric sites in the community.

"The celebration of Montana's statehood offers the state's preservationists a marvelous opportunity to start new projects or to complete those already begun," said Sherfy. "If anyone—a member of a historical society, a local government official, or an individual—is interested in finding out more about the various potential projects, they should give us a call."

The State Historic Preservation Office may be reached at the Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts Street, Helena, Montana 59620; 444-7715. If you are visiting in Helena, the office's street address is 104 Broadway, in the historic Masonic Temple building.

---

For further information about historic preservation, see: Preservation News and Historic Preservation, publications of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, 1785 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036; Arthur P. Ziegler, Jr., and Walter C. Kidney, Historic Preservation in Small Towns: A Manual of Practice (Nashville: American Association for State and Local History, 1980); Albert Rains and Laurence G. Henderson, With Heritage So Rich (New York: Random House, 1966); Report to the President and the Congress of the United States (Washington, D.C.: Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, 1983); and Linda S. Glisson, Main Street: Open for Business (Washington, D.C.: National Main Street Center, National Trust for Historic Preservation, 1984).

Second Annual History Day a Success

It was Montana's second annual History Day, and topics ranged from General George Armstrong Custer and Jeannette Rankin to the Third Reich and the Spanish Armada. Over one hundred students from fifteen schools competed in Helena on April 27, presenting papers, projects, performances, and media programs on this year's theme, "Triumphs and Tragedies of History." Volunteers judged the entries, and Governor Ted Schwinden presented awards to the winners at a ceremony in the old Supreme Court chambers in the Capitol.

"The turnout for this year's History Day far exceeded our expectations, and we're delighted," said MHS Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson. "The competition was well attended, and the students were very creative in producing their projects."

First place winners in the Senior Division (grades 9-12) were: Historical Papers—Peter Jennings, C.M. Russell High School, Great Falls; Projects—Joli Lessley, Shannon Ryan, Darla Lackey, Jody Wilson, and Kathy Denecke, Manhattan High School; Performance—Jennifer Lucas, Choteau High School; Media Presentations—Darcy O'Brien, Bryan Franz, Brian Waterman, Annie Chenovick, and Amy Christenson, Helena and Capital high schools.

First place winners in the Junior Division (grades 6-8) were: Historical Papers—Kari Vadheim, Lincoln School, Miles City; Projects—Janelle Ramaker, Choteau Junior High, and Erin Olson and Gwen Gray, C.R. Anderson Middle School, Helena; Performance—Mary Jo Reynolds, Choteau Junior High, and James Robertson, Krista Lee, and Frank Gaugler, Judith Gap School; Media Presentations—Allene Whitney and Claire Lee Martin, C.R. Anderson Middle School, Helena.

Governor Ted Schwinden presenting awards to the winners of the 1985 Montana History Day competition.

Mary Jo Reynolds of Choteau and Joli Lessley, Shannon Ryan, Darla Lackey, Jody Wilson, and Kathy Denecke of Manhattan received traveling plaques for earning the highest scores in their divisions. Gwen Gray and Erin Olson of Helena's C.R. Anderson Middle School received a special cash award for their entry on a women's history theme, "Jeannette Rankin: The Road Less Traveled."

All students receiving more than seventy points are eligible to enter the National History Day competition, which will be held on the University of Maryland campus on June 10-15.

Bradley Fellowship Awarded

Every two years, the Montana Historical Society offers the James H. Bradley Summer Fellowship to a researcher who plans to work in the collections of the Society's Archives and Library. Named for Lt. James H. Bradley, a nineteenth century amateur historian and early supporter of the Society, the $4,000 fellowship is funded by an endowment from an anonymous donor and supports research in MHS collections that may result in a book or article.

Clyde A. Milner II, Associate Professor of History at Utah State University, has been awarded the second Bradley Summer Fellowship. Milner received his doctorate in American studies from Yale University and is currently the associate editor of Western Historical Quarterly. He is the author of With Good Intentions: Quaker Work Among the Pawnees, Otos and Omahas in the 1870s (University of Oklahoma Press) and has edited (with Floyd O'Neil) Churchmen and the Western Indians: Six Case Studies, 1820-1920 (University of Nebraska Press). His articles have appeared in many professional journals.

This summer, Milner will spend eight weeks studying letters, diaries, memoirs, and oral interviews to "understand the development of Western identity in Montana" and to discover if "cultural patterns may be uncovered in the personal histories of . . . westerners."

Mansion Furnishings Surveyed

Since it first became a house museum in 1969, the Original Governor's Mansion in Helena has been furnished with donated artifacts, ranging from a magnificent oak dining room set to simple towels and washcloths. Using funds from a Conservation Project Support Grant from the Institute of Museum Services, the Society hired Carl Patterson, director of the Rocky Mountain Regional Conservation Center in Denver, to survey the more than 1,500 artifacts that have been donated to the Mansion. After spending two weeks doing an item-by-item survey of the Mansion's furnishings, Patterson reported that the artifacts are in good condition and made recommendations for their care in the future.

"Care of our collections is important," said Mansion Curator Mary Hoffschwelle, "but we also need to expand those collections. The Mansion's kitchen, for example, needs many new furnishings." The kitchen, which has been restored over the last several months, will be opened this summer, furnished as it was between 1900 and 1917. For the restoration to be complete, however, Hoffschwelle still needs several artifacts, including a bin table with a metal top, an icebox, pots and pans, kitchen crockery and bowls, a stove board or pad to protect the floor under the stove, a small tin sink with a wooden drainboard, and kitchen linens. Other rooms in the Mansion need mirrors, wall light fixtures, a ceiling light fixture with two or three bulbs, framed prints, a doll or child's table and chairs, and linens.

If you have any of the items needed at the Mansion and are willing to donate or sell them, please call Mary Hoffschwelle at 444-3714.

Calendar

Special Events

SUMMER AT THE SOCIETY—all performances on the Society lawn at 12:00 noon

| | |
|---|---|
| June 26 | "Montana Wildlife," Vince Yannone |
| July 3 | "Toni and Puppet Friends," Toni Person |
| July 10 | "Montana's Big Sky at Night," Dorothy Starshine |
| July 17 | "Lewis Celebrates His Birthday," Ed Noonan and Company |
| July 24 | "Montana Folk Music," Homemade Jam |
| July 31 | "Mountainmen and Rendezvous," Durty Murphy Fox |
| August 7 | "Community Theatre & Youth," Grand Street Young Performers |
| August 14 | "Montana Wool: Shearing, Spinning and Weaving," Montana Woolgrowers Association |
| November 7-9 | 12th Annual Montana History Conference |

1985 Summer Hours/Memorial Day Through Labor Day

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society Museum225 N. Roberts St., Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.Saturday, Sunday, and holidays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. |
| Library and Archives225 N. Roberts St., Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Saturday, Sundays, and holidays |
| Montana State CapitolJune 10-Labor day, guided tours begin on the hour | Open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. dailyMonday-Saturday, Guided tours 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., last tour at 4 p.m.Sundays, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., last tour at 3 p.m. Closed holidays |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, Helena | Tuesday-Sunday, Noon to 5 p.m.Last tour at 4 p.m., tours begin on the hour |

Admission is free for all tours. Group tours may be arranged by calling Joan Haefer, 444-4794.

Summer at the Society

Puppets and stargazers, mountain men and folk musicians, actors and woolgrowers will crowd the front lawn at the Society this summer for the annual Summer at the Society series. Every Wednesday at noon from late June to mid August, the popular series will feature instructive and entertaining speakers and performers. The series begins on June 26 with a talk on Montana wildlife by Vince Yannone of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks.

Other programs include a puppet show by Toni Person; "Montana's Big Sky at Night," a talk by astronomer Dorothy Starshine; "Lewis Celebrates His Birthday," a centennial performance by actor Ed Noonan; Montana folk music by Homemade Jam; a discussion of mountain men by Durty Murphy Fox; a performance by the Grand Street Young Performers; and "Montana Wool: Shearing, Spinning, and Weaving," a talk and demonstration by Montana Woolgrowers Association Director Bob Gilbert.

from the Editor's File

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAY 19 1986
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Second Class Postage Paid at Helena, Mont. 59601 and Additional Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capital Station, Helena, MT 59620

Montana the Magazine of Western History is offering the Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award to the best manuscript submitted by an undergraduate or graduate student on any aspect of western and Montana history. To be eligible, students may be in any discipline but they must be enrolled in a college or university and be sponsored by a faculty member. The prize, which is named for two of Montana's most respected history professors, includes a $75 cash award and publication in Montana. The deadline for submissions is July 1, 1985. Applicants should provide two typed copies of the manuscript and follow the Chicago Manual of Style for form. Send manuscripts to William L. Lang, Editor, Montana the Magazine of Western History, 225 N. Roberts St., Helena 59620.

The Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation will be holding its annual meeting this year on August 4-7 in St. Louis. This meeting will be the seventeenth annual gathering for the organization, which has a national membership and whose officers are drawn from the eleven states through which the Lewis and Clark expedition passed. The St. Louis meeting will feature lectures, slide presentations, and tours of the twenty-three Lewis and Clark historic sites in the area, one of the largest concentrations of such sites in the nation. Among the most prominent places to visit are the Museum of Westward Expansion under the Gateway Arch, the Wood River camp site, and St. Charles on the Missouri River. For more information on the meeting, write to William P. Sherman, President, Lewis and Clark Heritage Foundation, 8885 S. W. Canyon Rd., Portland, Oregon 97225.

The Coalition for Western Women's History is a new organization that has been created to support new research in women's western history, to provide an association for researchers and teachers of women's history, and to aid in integrating women's history into the general history curriculum at all educational levels. The coalition plans to sponsor summer workshops, a resource guide, a regular newsletter, and conferences. The first conference is scheduled for summer 1986. The tentative conference theme is "The Women's West: Race, Class, and Culture." For more information write to the Coalition for Western Women's History, Women's Studies, Washington State University, Pullman, Washington, 99164.

MHS Accessions

| Archives | |
|---|---|
| C. Dale VermillionBillings, Montana | 4 letters from Roy Van Vleck, Keaton Gulch, Radersburg, and Eagle Gulch, Montana, to Eugene Van Vleck, Rossville, Kansas, 1889-1890 |
| Florence KetteringLibrarian, Lewistown City Library,Lewistown, Montana | 2 volumes, Maginnis Mining Company records; Fort Maginnis Post Office register, 1922-1927; Judith Club minute book, 1905-1927 |
| 163rd Infantry Association, Museum Committee, Howard A. McKinney, Secretary,Helena, Montana | Diaries, scrapbooks, clippings, photographs, orders, certificates, awards, etc. related to the 163rd Infantry (a Montana unit), World War II |
| Chester FrojenMissoula, Montana | Newsletters from Montana and North Dakota Civilian Conservation Corps camps, 1934-1942 |
| Louise CrossFrontier Gateway Museum,Glendive, Montana | Board of Institutions miscellaneous files belonging to board member, John Melvin Cross, 1968-1975; record of the 10th reunion of Montana Constitutional delegates, Helena, 1982 |

| Museum | |
|---|---|
| Kathy RameyHelena, Montana | Fur scarf of matched silver foxes |
| Mrs. Charles RonsePortland, Oregon | Green and white weaving made by Marguerite Maloney |
| Gary HoltMissoula, Montana | Brown leather pocket notebook from the Hotel Finlen in Butte; brochure: "Your Oil Cloth Guide for 1931/Columbus Coated Fabrics" |
| Myhre AdvertisingHelena, Montana | Yellowstone bus, 1931 |
| Cornelia A. RobinsonHelena, Montana | 2 wood carvings by J.L. Clarke: "Mountain Goat" and "Bear Cub"; booklet on J.L. Clarke; Flathead moccasins, ca. 1960 |
| Gary & Sharon MorrowHelena, Montana | Silhouette of woman, ca. 1935 |
| Mr. & Mrs. George DorranceBillings, Montana | Horse-drawn timber sled, post hole digger, fanning mill |

S
978.6
H6m
v.23#1
Feb.-March
1985

PLEASE RETURN

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
MAY - [illegible]
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

MONTANA POST

Vol. 23, No. 1 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society February-March 1985

Society Hosted Legislators at Open House

An air of excitement filled the lobby of the Montana Historical Society on January 29. The occasion was the Society's Legislative Open House, attended by over two hundred Montana history enthusiasts, including legislators, Society board members, lobbyists, and preservationists. "Homemade Jam" played traditional American folk music in the lobby, staff members explained the Society's activities and programs, and the Friends of the Society served refreshments. A high point of the evening was the recognition of Montana's preservationists. At a ceremony held in the Mackay Gallery, Lt. Governor George Turman and the staff of the State Historic Preservation Office presented the 1983-1984 Historic Preservation Awards and Certificates of National Register listing (see Preservation Post, page 4).

The night before, OGM Curator Mary Hoffschwelle and the OGM Restoration Board had hosted an open house at the Original Governor's Mansion. During the evening, legislators and their guests toured the Mansion, saw first-hand the discoveries that Hoffschwelle and the Museum staff had made while doing restoration work, and learned how the Mansion had been used in the past.

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

Students to Participate in History Day

During the next few months, Montana's libraries, museums, historical societies, and courthouses will swarm with young researchers looking through old diaries, scrapbooks, and business records. The students will be looking for ways to illustrate the "Triumphs and Tragedies of History," this year's theme for the second annual Montana History Day competition. The competition, sponsored and hosted by the Montana Historical Society, will be held on April 27.

Open to students in grades six through twelve, the History Day competition encourages young historians to present papers, dramatic performances, three-dimensional exhibits, or media presentations. Students must do at least part of their research in primary sources.

The widespread and enthusiastic response from Montana's students and teachers has prompted the Society to schedule regional competitions in Bozeman, Billings, Great Falls, Glendive, and Missoula. In cooperation with the Society, the Western Heritage Center, the Cascade County Historical Society, the Gallatin County Historical Society, the Glendive School District, the University of Montana, and the Historical Museum at Fort Missoula will host these preliminary competitions in late March and early April. The winners of the regional competitions will advance to the state competition in Helena on April 27.

National History Day has been funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities' (NEH) Youth Projects, which supported the Society's History Day projects in 1984 and 1985. But the NEH funding for Montana's History Day ends this year, and Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, the Society's Curator of Education, is seeking new sponsors for this increasingly popular program. "In order for History Day to continue in Montana," said Thompson, "we must find new funding sources, and soon. As an incentive for Montana's children to expand their research skills and learn more about the state's history, History Day could become a valuable and productive tradition. I urge anyone interested in promoting Montana history to support this program."

If you would like more information about this year's History Day or if you have any ideas about future sources of funding, call or write to Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Department of Education, Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, 59620, 444-4794.

Jeannette Rankin Honored

On May 1, 1985, at 11:00 a.m., Montana's Jeannette Rankin will once again stand in the halls of Congress when her statue is unveiled in the rotunda of the U.S. Capitol. The larger-than-life-size statue of this pathbreaking congresswoman is the work of Great Falls artist Terry Mimnaugh; another casting of the statue stands in the state capitol in Helena. The unveiling ceremony will be open to the public, and a number of speakers from Montana and Washington, D.C. will comment on Rankin as a private individual and as a public figure.

Paid for by funds appropriated by the 1983 Montana Legislative Assembly and raised privately by the Rankin family, the statue of Rankin will ultimately stand in Statuary Hall, joining Montana's other honoree, cowboy artist Charles M. Russell. "Each state is allowed only two statues in the hall," said David Nelson, executive director of the Montana Arts Council, which is coordinating the dedication, "and it is most fitting that Montana's two representatives are an artist and a national figure in the cause of peace and the equality of women."

Best known as the first woman elected to Congress and as the only member of the U.S. House of Representatives to vote against America's entry into both world wars, Jeannette Rankin was born near Missoula, Montana, in June 1880. The eldest of seven children, Rankin early displayed strong convictions, frontier independence of spirit, and a capacity for hard work. From the beginning of her political career, she linked the drive for women's rights with the quest for peace, believing that "the work of educating the world to peace is the women's job." Although her positions were sometimes unpopular, throughout her life Rankin promoted peace and worked for the rights of women and children.

For more information about the dedication and the activities surrounding it, call or write to Glenda Bradshaw, Montana Arts Council, 35 South Last Chance Gulch, Helena, Montana 59601, 444-6430.

All Montanans are invited to attend the dedication of the Jeannette Rankin statue. The dedication will be held in the rotunda of the Capitol Building in Washington, D.C. at 11:00 a.m. on May 1, 1985.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

More Architectural Surprises Found at Original Governor's Mansion

The detective work at the Original Governor's Mansion has uncovered more surprises. The first discoveries made during the kitchen restoration project at the Mansion (see Post, February-March 1984) intrigued Mansion Curator Mary Hoffschwelle and presented her with puzzles. Where were the appliances located in the kitchen and what type were they? What kind of cupboards were in the original pantry? What traffic patterns connected the back hallway, the kitchen, and the dining room?

As Museum Preparator Jim Warner stripped off old flooring and wall coverings, he found more and more remnants of the materials in the original kitchen. The rotted section of flooring on the kitchen's north wall, for example, was first thought to be caused by leaking water. It turned out to be a burn, and sanding the floor revealed the outline of the stove or a protective stove pad. The final clues were found when removing the sheetrock from the wall uncovered a patched-over round hole (for a stove pipe) and a square one (for a grille) into the flues. With this information, Hoffschwelle could establish size and position of the original stove.

In the back hallway, Warner found a section of original parquet flooring under a cabinet that had been added in the 1950s. There had been some question whether this hallway with the intriguing curved wall was a formal part of the house where guests might enter. Because the parquet matched that in the entrance hall, Hoffschwelle surmises that the hallway was intended to be formal.

There were no fewer architectural puzzles in the pantry. Hoffschwelle speculated that domestic help used the area to store dishes and to provide direct access from the kitchen to the dining room. When Warner stripped the wallboard off the pantry wall, he was surprised to find tongue-and-groove boards inside the wall. He soon discovered that the boards enclosed the sliding door of a "pass through" window from the kitchen to the pantry, which helped substantiate Hoffschwelle's speculations.

The pantry area, which had swinging-door entries to both the kitchen and the dining room, shielded the kitchen area from the view of dinner guests. The discovery of a heavy swinging door in the Mansion's carriage house that matches the hinges on the pantry doorframe gave Hoffschwelle the kind of bonus she hopes for in the restoration project: a piece of the original kitchen that can be used. The donation of a 1906 model stove (probably similar to the one used in the original kitchen) by Lon Johnson of the State Historic Preservation Office is another bonus that makes the restoration more authentic.

Most of the restoration is exacting work that would test the skill of the best finish carpenters. Warner carefully built the curved wall to match the outline on the floor of the original wall. Local craftsman Fred Eggli has painstakingly reproduced the original woodwork, including the kitchen wainscoting. Eggli produced a marvel when he bent oak molding to fit the curved wall in the back hallway. The result of Warner's and Eggli's expert work is a restoration as close to the original kitchen as possible.

Mary Hoffschwelle's research on the specifics of the Mansion kitchen's layout, appliances, and furniture continues. Discovering the surprises behind the walls and beneath the floors is an exciting kind of research, one that is unusual and probably bound to change how we understand the history of the Original Governor's Mansion.

Museum Preparator Jim Warner double checks the installation of new kitchen wainscoting, which was crafted by Warner and Fred Eggli to reproduce the kitchen's original woodwork. The photo also shows a portion of the curved wall in the main hallway and the kitchen's entry to the pantry. The upper photo shows the "discovered" pass-through from the pantry side.

MHS Staff Remember Mel Hallauer, 1

On the evening of February 5, Melvin Hallauer, Stock Clerk Supervisor for the Montana Historical Society, died. He was forty-three years old. Born on October 26, 1941, in Maple Creek, Saskatchewan, Canada, Mel first came to the Society in March 1969, when he was hired as a clerk in the Museum Store and part-time security guard. By 1973, Mel had been named Shipping Supervisor, although his duties came to resemble, more and more, those of a building supervisor. Beyond his shipping and receiving responsibilities, Mel framed artwork, handled mail, ordered supplies, built displays for the Museum Store, assisted in the construction of museum exhibits, maintained the Society's electrical system, repaired audio-visual equipment, showed films, chauffeured dignitaries, and generally assisted all programs in the Society.

With his wit and his sunny disposition, Melvin Hallauer was well-liked by his co-workers, and he left behind a legacy of humor and affection. The following anecdotes, reminiscences, and tributes written by MHS staff members give evidence of that legacy.

---

There are stories, less commonly told today, of a Montana Historical Society staff that never made it through a day without innumerable wisecracks, practical jokes, and the telling of tall tales. There was a mythical quality about that earlier staff, and until his death, the only person remaining who embodied that spirit of fun, who had taken on a certain mythic (and comic) proportion himself, was Melvin Hallauer. As man-jack of all trades, Mel was everywhere, assisting, at one time or another, everyone at the Society, and in his role as ubiquitous (and reluctant) helper, with his flow of jokes, mock complaints, and sometimes camouflaged kindness, he brought to every work situation a certain lightness and genial wit, human qualities that many of us had neglected or forgotten in our pursuit of a high-minded and dull-witted "professionalism." Because Mel enjoyed his life, because he held the difficulties and the pain always in perspective, he shared his joy with us; he never let us forget the pleasures of laughter. Like those other mythical figures in the Society's past, Mel understood that all work and no jokes make us less than human, that the ability to laugh is as important as the ability to breathe, or to catalog a book, or to create a museum exhibit, or to save a historic building. Melvin Hallauer will be sorely missed.

Rick Newby
Archives and Publications

Mel reminded me of men I knew and admired when I was growing up in a small town, men who were remarkable because they seemed to be able to do everything. Those were the people you wanted around when your car broke down, the plumbing sprang a leak, the oil furnace blew up, or you wanted to put an addition on your house. Mel was like that at the Society, where most of us are hired for fairly narrow specialties, and are often pretty helpless outside of them. It was Mel who saved the library money by stringing cables and grounding the outlets for a new computer. It was Mel who commandeered new venetian blinds for the reading room after the old ones had been ravaged by the hail storm. It was Mel who could show you how the sound system worked in the Haynes Auditorium. It was Mel who was comparing prices and knew where to go to find filters to reduce the dust coming in the library stacks. When I was a new staff member at the Society, I quickly learned that, for a hundred different things, the wisest course of action was to "ask Mel."

Bob Clark
Library

Mel and I were having lunch in the employees' lounge just the day before his death. He seemed unusually thoughtful as he remarked "the problem with Christians today is that they are so filled with compromise—They are afraid to be different from the rest of the world." I think that was the driving force in Mel's life—to be an everyday Christian with the genuine stamp of love written all over him.

Murleen Hiatt
Capitol Tour Guide

TO ME: Mel was a helpful caring friend. He gave a special meaning to the phrase, "He's my friend." Always concerned, helpful, and eager to listen. He was devoted to Jesus and was always giving of himself to encourage you to be of good faith. He'd always tell me, "It's not easy, look at me, the biggest sinner, always looking for forgiveness." He accused me of having "trash lips," or being "a great garbage mouth." My vocabulary was not of the best. I will treasure Mel's friendship and guidance for years to come.

Wilma Catron
Museum Security Officer

The five years I was privileged to know and work with Mel Hallauer leave me with memories of a kind and good-natured man who never failed to pass me in the hall without a warm greeting. What I remember most about Mel is his sense of humor and cheerfulness. He would often see me standing for long periods of time at the photocopy machine and joke about the printing business I must be in. I came to depend on Mel for many things: besides being one person here who made me feel good, he helped fix office equipment and furniture, tried to get hard-to-find office materials, and got postal and UPS mail out without delay. He always offered and provided assistance with determination and sincerity. Mel was a strong and personable pillar here upon whom, I believe, all of us came to depend, and he is and will be greatly missed.

Patti Borneman
Oral History Office

One of the very few staff "get togethers" I ever remember Mel attending was one held purposely for him. We assembled a robot, called "Melvina," to be used in his shipping department at Christmas time since he was forever muttering about the heavy work load around that time of year, and justifiably so. Well, we put a tape recorder inside with a sexy lady's voice and it really made a big hit with Mel.

That robot was one of the very few projects that Mel didn't help me build. He was always there: to lend a helping hand, a word of wit, to make you laugh, to add a cheery note to a regular day. He was a guy who we all loved and will miss and think of in quiet, secret moments, or talk of with endearing thoughts to our loved ones, friends, and even strangers. He was a man who spiritually and otherwise affected many in his short life here and one whom I personally loved as a brother.

Jim Warner
Museum

941-1985

To say a few simple words about Mel Hallauer is impossible. Because Mel was not just an ordinary or simple friend, he was and is so much more. Not a day would pass where Mel wasn't able to make me smile and laugh by a quick-witted saying, sometimes a senseless joke, or his moaning and groaning about his work. He was a fountain of information to and about the Society. Ask him where a ladder was, when the Russell Gallery was added on, or how to send a package and Mel would have the answers.

Mel was not only a friend with an endless sense of humor, he was a friend who you could count on to lend a hand, a friend who could lift your spirits when down, and a friend who will be sorely missed but never, ever forgotten.

Yvonne M. Kangas
Museum Information Assistant

One of Mel's favorite quotes: "There are two seasons in Montana—July and August and winter."

Vivian Hayes
Archives and Photo Archives

I worked with Mel for almost fourteen years. He and I had different responsibilities through the years but the small size of the Historical Society staff put us in constant and enjoyable contact. Mel had an entertaining, teasing sense of humor and could weather an exchange of friendly jibes with a smile and good will. He had the ability to see the less serious side of situations and often put perspective to what might have initially appeared as a disaster.

Mel's work defied encapsulation in a job description. His responsibilities and his talents were many and varied. Repair, create, facilitate, Mel could do it. For these characteristics Mel will never be replaced at the Historical Society. I will always miss him. He was a good friend and a valuable employee.

Brian Cockhill
Centralized Services

There was a standing joke around here about Mel and his studied avoidance of work. It was a joke that Mel told on himself and at almost every opportunity. "I'm built for comfort, not speed," he would often say to me. We always laughed, knowing that Mel did more to keep this place running than anyone else. And we all enjoyed laughing with Mel because he reminded us all not to take ourselves too seriously. "How long are you guys going to keep killing Custer in the magazine?" he would ask, with that curled grin he had. Another time he'd say: "Why don't you give Charlie a rest from painting all those covers?" When the day wasn't going right, so often it was Mel who poked fun and showed the comic view of the mess we had created. In many ways, Mel's humor was the essential lubricant for this place and, while we will all miss him for the good and generous person he was, I think we will miss all the more his jibes and puns that made tough days easier.

Bill Lang
Publications

MHS Calendar

Montana Historical Society Exhibits

| | |
|---|---|
| Poindexter Gallery: | "A World to Remember: Bronzes of the American West" is an exhibit of forty-seven bronzes from the Montana Historical Society collection. |
| Haynes Gallery: | "F. J. Haynes: Photographer" portrays the life and achievements of Haynes, who as the official photographer for the Northern Pacific Railroad and Yellowstone National Park, documented the growth of the Northwest. |
| Mackay Gallery: | A permanent exhibit of Charles M. Russell paintings, drawings, artifacts, and sculptures. |

Special Events

| | |
|---|---|
| March 6 through 27 | Lunchtime lecture series, "Montana's Historical Landscapes," Wednesdays, 12 o'clock noon, third floor meeting room. Dr. Carroll Van West will give four lectures on the Highline, the Yellowstone Valley, the Judith Basin, and the mountains. |
| March 20 | Friends of the Society meeting 9:30 a.m., Haynes Auditorium. Program, 10:00 a.m, Superintendent Jim Court, Custer National Battlefield, "New Archeological Findings and What They Tell Us About the Battle." |
| April 17 | Friends of the Society meeting, 9:30 a.m., Haynes Auditorium. Program, 10:00 a.m., Dr. Harry Fritz, "Lewis and Clark in Montana." |
| April 26-27 | Annual Meeting, Montana Archeological Association and Montana Archeological Society, Park Plaza Hotel. |
| April 27 | Montana History Day, Montana Historical Society and State Capitol building. |
| May 2 | Historic Preservation Review Board meeting, Montana Historical Society. |
| May16-18 | Joint meeting of the Pacific Northwest Historians, Northwest Archivists, and Northwest Oral History Association, Colonial Inn, Helena. |

1984-1985 Winter Hours and Tour Schedules

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical SocietyMuseum, Galleries, Library, and Archives | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Sundays and holidays. |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, HelenaTours begin on the hour | Tuesday-Saturday, noon to 5 p.m. Last tour at 4 p.m. Closed Sundays, Mondays, and holidays. Closed January-March, except for tours made by appointment. |
| Montana State Capitol6th and Montana Avenue | Daily, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., guided tours by reservation only. During legislative session, tours on the hour, Monday-Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. by appointment only. |

Admission is free for all tours. Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson at 444-4794. Group tours should be scheduled at least 2 weeks in advance.

Projects to Study Women in Montana History

ST PETERS PRO-CATHEDRAL
MONTANA STATE FEDERATI

Among the women's groups to be studied during the Montana Women's Centennial Project are the Montana State Federation of Negro Women's Clubs (above), shown at a meeting in Helena in 1938, and the Billings Ladies Aid Society (below), who gathered for this group portrait in about 1913.

Women's History Week was celebrated from March 3 through March 9, and many Montana communities and organizations sponsored programs and events to commemorate the role that women have played in the state's history. But the study of women in Montana is not restricted to one week of research and recognition. Several groups and individuals are currently involved in projects that will broaden our understanding of women's role in the development of the state and give us insight into the concerns that women had as they worked to make a place for themselves in Montana communities.

The Montana Women's Centennial Project, for example, is exploring and documenting the changing roles that women's voluntary organizations have played in the establishment and maintenance of Montana's communities. The project, which is sponsored by the Montana Women's History Project and the Bozeman Women's History Group, is planning to hold a series of educational programs in 1989.

The Montana Women's History Project (315 South Fourth East, Missoula, 59801) is sponsoring "Women and the West," a course that will be held this summer at the Flathead Valley Community College in Kalispell.

The Bozeman Women's History Group (c/o Women's Resource Center, Montana State University), composed of researchers, writers, historians, and educators, is creating a videotape program that will explore the lives of older women who lived in rural areas.

Members of the Montana Herstory Project (c/o Lydia Vizcaya, 269 West Front Street, Missoula, 59802) are conducting research on women photographers, collecting photo images of women, and preparing curriculum materials on women and photography for Montana schools.

The Montana Division of the American Association of University Women (Nancy Lundwall, 315 Terra Verde Drive, Butte, 59701) sponsors an annual essay contest for Montana high school students in celebration of Women's History Week.

Jeanne Eder, Eastern Montana College, and Nancy Tucker, Montana State University, have begun an oral history project, "My Grandmother's Star Quilt Honors Me," which explores the development and uses of the star quilt by Sioux and Assiniboine women on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation.

The interest in and support for these and many other projects on Montana women demonstrate that there is both a need and a desire to understand the lives and accomplishments of the women who helped shape our state's history. If you have information or documentation to contribute to these efforts or if you know of other projects that focus on women in Montana history, please get in touch with the groups mentioned above or let us know so that we can pass the information along.

Historian Joins Museum Exhibit Team

Historian David Halaas has been hired to research and write the interpretive plan for the Society's Formal Museum. Born in Denver, Colorado, Halaas received his Ph.D. in western frontier history in 1978 at the University of Colorado at Boulder, where he studied under noted western historian Robert G. Athearn.

Halaas is the author of Boomtown Newspapers: Journalism on the Rocky Mountain Mining Frontier, 1859-1881 (University of New Mexico Press) and Fairmount and Historic Colorado. He has also written several articles on frontier journalism, railroads, mining, and Indian-white relations.

Before joining the Museum Department's exhibit team, Halaas was Senior Historian (1981-1982) and Curator of Books and Ephemera (1982-1984) at the Colorado Historical Society, where he wrote the interpretive plan for the permanent Colorado history exhibit. His experience at Colorado, said MHS Chief Curator Steve Germann, "has prepared David well for this task." Halaas will complete his interpretive plan for the Formal Museum by the fall of 1986. The museum itself is slated for completion in time for Montana's statehood centennial in 1989.

Archives' Kessler Collection Processed

The Nickolas Kessler Family Papers (1856-1953), approximately forty linear feet of Kessler family and business records, have been processed and are now available for research use. The collection focuses primarily on the Kessler Brewery, founded in Helena in 1865 by Nickolas Kessler and operated after his death in 1901 by his sons, Charles N. and Frederick. The brewery closed in 1958.

The collection also documents Charles N. Kessler's involvement in the Montana State Brewers' Association, which represented the state's brewery owners in their negotiations with brewery workers and in their political opposition to prohibition; the family's interest in the Montana mining and oil and gas industries; the Kessler Brick and Sewer Tile Works (later known as the Western Clay Manufacturing Company); and a Kessler-owned Helena saloon.

Nickolas Kessler immigrated to the United States from German-speaking Luxembourg, and some of the early correspondence he received was written in nineteenth century German script. Some of these letters were written by Charles Beehrer, founder in 1863 of Montana's first brewery, the Virginia Brewery in Virginia City.

Archivist Bill Summers, who processed the collection, is searching for someone who can help translate these letters. "Relatively little is known about Montana's nineteenth century German-speaking community," said Summers, "and these letters, once translated, should shed considerable light on the subject. But even those fluent in modern German can find that nineteenth century German script is difficult to read. Any help in translating these letters would be greatly appreciated."

Researchers interested in the Kessler family, Montana's brewery industry, political opposition to prohibition, and the many other topics covered in the Nickolas Kessler Family Papers may use the collection in the reading room of the MHS Library.

Edward M. Reinig of Helena photographed this Kessler Brewery wagon and driver in about 1907.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th-Documents
Helena, MT 59620

Postmaster Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capital Station, Helena MT 59620

from the Editor's File

Readers interested in the history of the Pacific Northwest—Alaska, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana—will want to take in the 1985 Pacific Northwest History Conference to be held in Helena, May 16-18, at the Colonial Inn. The Northwest Archivists and Northwest Oral Historians will also hold their annual meetings at the conference.

A highlight of the conference will be an address by Governor Ted Schwinden on the celebration of the state's centennial in 1989. Papers on Montana's Chinese population and on women writers, Hughie Call and Grace Stone Coates, will interest students of Montana history.

For information, write to Dr. Richard B. Roeder, Lt. Governor's Office, Capitol Building, Helena 59620.

Montana the Magazine of Western History will debut its new, revised look with the first two issues of the year. In addition to some new graphics, the magazine will introduce two new regular features, include more color, and publish more articles about the general history of the American West. Some of the nation's most prominent authors and historians of the American West have been added to the magazine's editorial board. The purpose of these changes is to expand the scope of the magazine and to offer more variety to our readers.

The new look of the Post's masthead is the creation of Geoff Wyatt, the Society's exhibit designer. Wyatt, who joined the Museum Department last June, took on the difficult task of designing an entirely new typeface, which he calls "Montana Post." Wyatt has also given valuable suggestions on the newsletter's design and format, helping to make the Post into a more attractive and readable publication.

Paying taxes was no less a burden in nineteenth century Montana than it is today. There were complaints that federal taxation in the territories restricted development of the frontier and that the "revenuers" were not always honest in their collections, showing favoritism whenever it served their purposes. Montanans were a skeptical lot when it came to taxes and some resisted paying their federal tithe. Nathaniel P. Langford, Collector of Internal Revenue for Montana Territory in 1865, wasn't about to make it any easier on Montanans; taxpayers had to come to him. Langford had an office on Wallace Street in Virginia City where, as he instructed citizens, Montanans had to pay their taxes between January 25 and February 4. Langford wasn't going to knock on anyone's door, and he assured all that those who failed to pay on time would be assessed a 10 per cent penalty surcharge.

From the "love conquers all" folder comes this glimpse of Montana courting in the 1890s. The opposition to this match must have been formidable, but Butte kids are known for being resourceful, as the New-Northwest reported:

"Harry K. Holmes, a Butte street car conductor, and Maggie Brown, both in their teens, eloped from that city and were married at Boulder, Monday. The sensational feature of the affair was the chloroforming of Miss Brown's mother by the latter in order that no alarm could be raised until herself and lover had made good their escape. The runaway pair were arrested at Helena, Tuesday, and taken back to Butte."

Burlington Northern Helps Fund Formal Museum

On December 19, 1984, Burlington Northern Vice-President John Etchart, acting for the Burlington Northern Foundation, presented Director Robert Archibald with a check for $75,000, "the culmination," said Archibald, "of an intensive, three-year fundraising drive to renovate the Formal Museum." The Burlington Northern grant supplements funds already received from several other sources, including $75,000 from the M. J. Murdock Trust and $10,000 from the Atlantic Richfield Company.

"The renovation," continued Archibald, "gives us the opportunity to update the Museum both in terms of new historical information and new interpretations. With the funds generously donated by Burlington Northern and others, we can present our many visitors with a more integrated, more accurate, and more engaging view of Montana's past."

According to Steve Germann, Chief Curator and director of the renovation project, construction of the Formal Museum will begin in mid 1986. The Museum staff plans to complete the project in time for the state's centennial celebration in 1989.

Burlington Northern Vice-President John Etchart (right) with Society Director Robert Archibald in the Formal Museum.

S
978.6
H6m
v.22
#1+2
Feb-March
May-June
1984

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST
® REGISTERED TRADEMARK

Vol. 22
Nos. 1 and 2

Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society

February-March
May-June 1984

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

Dr. Glen Halver and Jo Newcomb of Helena display some of the many veterinary instruments, medicines, and archival materials that will be accessioned by the Montana Historical Society Museum.

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

JUL 1 6 1984

MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Veterinarians Document Their Past

Dr. Glen Halver's family room at his home in Helena looks like a museum storage area. Piled on his pool table, the floor, and shelves is an array of some very odd-looking metal instruments. Some items have a familiar shape—a large syringe, a foot-long forceps, a case full of cylindrical bottles—but their application is not immediately apparent. The items are part of a most unusual collection of veterinary medical instruments, medicines, and archival materials. This congeries is all the more unusual because of the manner in which it was collected.

Museums usually acquire artifacts on an item-by-item basis. It is rare that an entire collection is donated and even rarer that an individual or group collects artifacts for the purpose of donating them. Dr. Halver, a retired Montana State Veterinarian and a member of the Montana Veterinary Medical Association (MVMA), and Jo Newcomb, a member of the MVMA's Women's Auxiliary and the wife of a Helena veterinarian, began collecting veterinary artifacts over a year ago. They hope to complete the collection by autumn, when it will be accessioned by the Montana Historical Society, becoming the Society's only collection representing veterinary science.

These materials will add to and enhance the Society's holdings in agricultural history. "Ironically, in a state as agriculturally oriented as Montana," Museum Curator Steve Germann commented, "our museum collections in agricultural history are relatively weak. This is the kind of collection we need to document Montana's agricultural past." It is especially important to acquire materials, such as veterinary instruments, that can be studied by historians. "Much of what a museum collects," Germann explained, "rarely goes on exhibit but comprises 'study collections' that are essential to scholarly research."

The project began several years ago when Kaye and Dr. Howard Holloway of Harlowton encouraged veterinarians to save old instruments and other artifacts of their profession. In 1983, Dr. Halver and Mrs. Newcomb picked up where the Holloways had left off and got in touch with MHS Director Robert Archibald who assured them that the Society would eagerly accept the donation.

Halver and Newcomb have received an enthusiastic response from veterinarians throughout Montana and from the MVMA, which gave financial support to the work. "These items were just waiting for us to collect," Halver commented. Mrs. Newcomb added, "So many times the instruments were just discarded when newer ones came into use, and veterinarians are very pleased that we have begun collecting them."

The collection contains over 260 items that were used by veterinarians who served Montana farmers and ranchers; as such it will become a significant addition to the Society's holdings of artifacts representing Montana's agricultural history. The collection also documents and helps trace the development of an important profession in Montana—veterinary science.

The items that Halver and Newcomb have collected include instruments and medicines that date from the 1880s to the 1940s. Many are obstetrical or dental instruments, and nearly all were for use on large animals. For example, there is a black leg pill gun, which is a large syringe used to inject medicinal capsules under an animal's skin, predating the use of liquid-injecting syringes. There is an equine speculum, a large hinged and ratchet contraption that is still used to forcibly hold a horse's mouth open while the veterinarian files molars or works on other dental problems. One particularly dangerous looking instrument, a fetatome, was used to cut up and remove stillborn fetuses. The advances made in performing Caesarean sections on animals and the introduction of antibiotics have eliminated the use of this gruesome device.

Also in the collection are class notes taken by a student at the Chicago Veterinary School in the 1890s—fascinating documents that underscore how great the advances in veterinary science have been during this century. There are also two fully equipped field cases containing labeled vials that held medicines veterinarians used thirty to fifty years ago, and there are weekly field reports to the Montana State Veterinarian from District Deputy State Veterinarians in 1916 and 1917.

Dr. Halver is organizing and describing all of the items, which further enhances the usefulness and importance of the collection. He has practiced in Montana since 1941 and knows the history of veterinary medicine in the state and has gathered biographical information on many of the state's veterinarians. Each instrument in the collection is associated with a veterinarian and a practice that served a specific region of the state.

"It is quite a bonus," Germann remarked, "when we can have a person with Dr. Halver's expertise identify a specialty collection of this sort. He has taken great care in this and it will greatly simplify our cataloging." Germann hopes that Dr. Halver and Mrs. Newcomb's collecting effort will inspire others who are inclined to collect artifacts and documentary evidence of their professions and occupations. It is the kind of donation that museum curators hope for but rarely receive.

A veterinarian's bag, ca. 1890, containing spirits of ammonia aromaticum, chloro camphor, calf sowers capsules, and other essential medicines.

Among the medicines collected are Columbia Heave Powder, used to cure "mud fever" and "barbwire cuts" and also to give "immediate relief" to "aching, blistered, or perspiring feet"; Columbia Healing Powder, whose label warns that "Many a good horse has been ruined from a kick in the stomach by an inhuman driver"; Watkin Germicide, Dip and Disinfectant; and Horse Colic Relief. Also donated was a 1916 edition of the Complete Stock Doctor: A Cyclopedia.

A sample of dental tools still used by veterinarians: an equine speculum (top) used to hold horses' jaws open and molar clippers used to extract teeth.

Collecting Programs Enter Computer Age

Two harmless-looking rectangular objects sitting on a table in the library stacks give forth a low hum, and a green glow emanates from the offices of the Museum, the Photo Archives, and the Library, the Society's collecting programs. Staff members hunch over keyboards, manuals in hand, trying to "interface" with the newest Society staff member.

Its name is Altos 586, upgraded to 986—a 16-bit, 1 megabyte RAM, 10-port microcomputer with 30 megabytes of hard disc storage, linked to four terminals and two printers by hundreds of feet of sky blue cable. Thanks to $25,000 worth of equipment donated by Mrs. Helen Hornby of Livingston and the Schnitzler Foundation, the Society's collecting programs are entering the computer age.

Although the equipment arrived only recently, staff members prepared for it during months of planning and consultation. Library Cataloger David Girshick has been at the center of the project, and he is planning to acquire even more training so that he can effectively work with a contracted programmer, the next step in the project.

"David is already finding it hard to talk to the rest of us about the computer," Librarian Bob Clark notes. "He's mastered the peculiar terminology, while most of us are still working only in English. But we're all learning." Terms such as "menu-driven" and "default," "disc drives" and "floppies," "C-language" and "dot commands" are increasingly being bandied about in the collecting programs with an ever greater air of comprehension.

The computer and its attached printers should produce quick benefits by freeing staff from repetitive typing, by shaving the expense involved in having catalog cards duplicated, and by speeding the processing that makes new items available for public use.

The long-range goal, as Librarian Clark describes it, is a Society collections data base that contains extensive information that can be found and retrieved by the machine. "Some day," Clark says, "we want the reference librarian, when asked what we have on, say, vigilante activity in central Montana, to be able to turn to the computer and have it quickly furnish a list of pertinent books, pamphlets, maps, photographs, manuscripts, and even museum artifacts that bear on the subject.

"That day is a long way off," Clark cautions. "But now we can at least start to build such a computerized file, beginning with the Library and Photo Archives collections."

"This is not only a chance to take advantage of some of the obvious efficiencies that computers offer," says Society Director Robert Archibald, "but a chance to help the collecting programs to gain additional control and use of their collections. It is wonderful to have a donor such as Mrs. Hornby, who understands our desire to move ahead as quickly as we can and who provides us with the means to do just that."

Library Cataloger David Girshick at work at the Library's new computer terminal.

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 444-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

The Montana Post is the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Unless otherwise specified, modern photographs are by John Smart and historic photographs are from the MHS Photo Archives. The Montana Post appears quarterly in Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. and contains articles on Society holdings and news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership. Permission is granted for reprinting articles that appear in the Post, provided that credit is given to the Montana Historical Society. Editor: Marianne Keddington; Assistant Editor: Rick Newby.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first newspaper of the same name, published at Virginia City beginning on August 27, 1864.

Van West Receives Research Grant from AASLH

Dr. Carroll Van West, who is currently under contract to the Society's Historic Preservation Office, has received a research grant from the American Association of State and Local History (AASLH). The grant, funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, has allowed West to continue his research on the Clark's Fork Bottom of the Yellowstone Valley. His work has focused on the relations between the white settlers and the Crow Indians in the years preceding the arrival of the Northern Pacific Railroad and the development of Coulson (present-day Billings).

West has conducted his research at the Montana Historical Society, the Montana State University Library in Bozeman, the Miles City Library, the Western Heritage Center in Billings, the University of Wyoming Library in Laramie, and the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

In his search, West has uncovered several exciting sources, including an 1878 manuscript about the Yellowstone Valley by Colgate Hoyt, who would become a director of the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific railroads; correspondence from agents on the Crow Reservation detailing the amount of trade between the Crow and the settlers in the Yellowstone Valley; papers relating to early white settlers, such as the O.N. Newman family and P.W. McAdow; and the 1878 and 1880 censuses of the Crow Indian Reservation.

West's grant application was sponsored by the Western Heritage Center, where he has served as a consultant. Articles based on West's research will appear in future issues of Montana the Magazine of Western History.

In the Poindexter: OGM, Father Ravalli, and D.F. Barry

The Society's Poindexter Gallery has been a busy place this year. From January 25 through March 17, the gallery held an exhibit that grew out of renovation of the Original Governor's Mansion. The exhibit, "Domestic Beauty: Decorative Art from the Original Governor's Mansion," placed some of the mansion's chairs, beds, glassware, china, rugs, and light fixtures in a gallery setting where they could be appreciated as decorative art objects.

During the late nineteenth century, when the Chessman family constructed the mansion as a private residence, the availability of inexpensive machine-made furniture made "interior decoration" accessible to the middle class. Gothic, Renaissance, Oriental, Colonial, and other popular revival styles of furniture became available through catalogs as well as in Helena's furniture stores. The pieces in "Domestic Beauty" demonstrate the change from hand-made to machine-made furniture, much of which had a simple style due to the limitations of the machines.

At the reception that opened the exhibit, Reference Librarian Dave Walter spoke about Helena's social history from 1880 to 1910, and Mansion Curator Mary Hoffschwelle explained the role of decorative arts in Americans' lives in the late nineteenth century.

Two other events were held in conjunction with the exhibit. A lecture series entitled "Montana's Art and Culture: 1880-1910" was held at the Society each Wednesday at noon. Lecture topics included "Helena's Social/Cultural History: 1880-1910," by Bill Lang; "Decorative Arts," by Mary Hoffschwelle; "Fanny Cory Cooney: Children's Illustrator," by Bob Cooney; and "Helena's Architecture: 1880-1910," by Pat Bick. The money raised by the series was donated to the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Fund.

The second event was the Saint Valentine's Day tea sponsored by the Friends of the Society. The tea was held at the Society to commemorate similar events that took place at the mansion when it was the home of Montana's governors from 1913 to 1959.

From April 1 through May 25, the Poindexter Gallery hosted "Father Ravalli's Missions: The Photography of Harold Allen," which documents the life and work of the pioneer Jesuit missionary. Harold Allen, who taught photography at the Art Institute of Chicago, has an intense interest in Father Ravalli and in 1972 published a book entitled Father Ravalli's Missions. The exhibit featured many artifacts and sixty-two of Allen's photographs of St. Mary's Mission in Stevensville, Montana, and of Sacred Heart Mission in Cataldo, Idaho.

Antonio Ravalli was born in Italy in 1812 and came to the United States in 1843. He was a talented craftsman and architect, but Ravalli was also a skilled physician and priest who had a rare ability to communicate. He had a reputation among the Indians as a great healer. Father Ravalli died at St. Mary's in 1884.

At the opening reception for the exhibit, Connie Flaherty Erickson, historian for Helena's Catholic diocese, spoke about Father Ravalli's career, and John Smart, Society photographer, commented on Allen's photographs. In conjunction with the exhibit, Smart also presented two public lectures on "The Documentary Photograph: Its Historical and Cultural Importance."

Beginning on June 1, the Poindexter will house another photography exhibit that has been made available to the Society by Paul Harbaugh of Primitive Art and Photography, Denver. The exhibit will feature photographs from the negative collection of frontier photographer David Francis Barry. Barry, who was obsessed with the Battle of the Little Big Horn, photographed the survivors of the Seventh Cavalry and acquired original negatives of others who had photographed the Indians and soldiers involved in the battle, including many negatives taken by his mentor, O.S. Goff. Barry was the first person to photograph Chiefs Gall, Low Dog, Crow King, and Crow Foot, Sitting Bull's son, and he was the only photographer allowed to attend the tenth anniversary of the battle.

The exhibit contains approximately 60 photographs selected from the more than 1,000 Barry negatives held by the Western History Department of the Denver Public Library. Label copy for the exhibit will be drawn from essays written by noted authorities on plains Indians and frontier military history, including Royal B. Hassrick, John M. Carroll, and Alvin M. Josephy, Jr. The Barry exhibit will run through July 16.

Furniture and decorative arts from the Original Governor's Mansion comprised the "Domestic Beauty" exhibit, which was in the Poindexter Gallery from January 25 through March 17. This full-length pier mirror (top) with an American Eastlake frame was brought to Billings from Illinois in 1916 by Sterling M. and Grace A. Wood and was donated to the OGM by Mary Louise Wood and Marjorie Wood Williams.

Docent Rita Sheehy uses artifacts to introduce young children to the history of Native American cultures. The "Friends" have become an important part of the Society, with its seventy-five members acting as Docents (teachers and guides), Muses (hostesses), and Department Assistant Volunteers.

"Friends" Strong and Growing

One of the most important parts of any historical society, large or small, is the volunteer staff. Historical societies rely on volunteers to do everything from clerical work to giving guided tours for school groups. The Montana Historical Society is no exception. The Society first organized its volunteers in 1971, when Museum Curator Bob Morgan asked Gayle Shanahan of the Helena Arts Council to form a "docents" organization to help with the Society's educational programs. Mrs. Shanahan persuaded the Society's Board of Trustees that the plan had considerable merit, and the docent group became a reality.

The docents gave tours of the museum, acted as hostesses at exhibit openings and special receptions, and contributed their skills and energies to other Society programs and offices. By 1980, the organization's membership and responsibilities had grown considerably, and a decision was made to place the docents under the direction of the Society's new Curator of Education, Jennifer Jeffries Thompson.

The docents were strong in membership, talent, and service, but the organization also had limitations in 1980. Their lengthy membership list, for example, included many who were no longer active. Some docents preferred being involved in certain activities, such as serving at receptions or working in the Library or the Archives. It was time for the volunteer organization to make better use of its members' desires and talents.

With the support of Society staff and the docent board, Thompson revised the organization. The docents became the "Friends of the Society," and membership to the group was opened to the public. Members were given a choice of serving the Society as a Docent, a teacher and guide who leads tours and instructs as part of the Society's educational program; as a Muse, a hostess who plans and staffs receptions; or as a Department Assistant Volunteer, an aide to Society staff in specific departments. The Friends have elected officers and a board of directors, whose chairperson attends the meetings of the Society's Board of Trustees.

There are now about seventy-five members of the Friends of the Society, and the group is growing. The organization is strong and provides essential services for the Society, thanks to a solid constitution, flexible management, and a Society staff that genuinely appreciates the help.

Society Photo Exhibits Available to Communities

Museums, schools, banks, and libraries in Montana and other northwestern states are bringing some special visual history to their communities. They are taking advantage of three traveling exhibits that have been produced by the Montana Historical Society and that are available to any institution at no charge except for the cost of transporting the exhibit to the next scheduled host.

"F. Jay Haynes: Fifty Views" presents fifty photographs taken by F. Jay Haynes, the official photographer of both the Northern Pacific Railroad and Yellowstone National Park. The fifty images were selected from among the approximately 9,000 glass plate negatives in the Montana Historical Society's Haynes Foundation Collection. Haynes's photographs document the growth of farms and towns in the Northwest, the building of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and the scenic marvels of Yellowstone National Park during the years 1876 through 1899. Available with "Fifty Views" is a 25-minute slide and tape show (designed for use on a dissolve unit) that presents Haynes's life and work. Teachers, civic clubs, social groups, or other organizations may borrow the show at no cost.

"Montana Collage: Our History through Photographs, 1880-1910" consists of fifty photographs selected from the Society's Photo Archives. The images in the exhibit are divided into five areas: Native Americans, Transportation, The Settlers, Towns and Cities, and People. Viewers often recognize their grandparents, the family homestead, or even themselves in these photographs.

Viewing the photographs in the "Children in Montana" exhibit is better than looking at the family album. The photographs show Montana's children at play, at home, at work, and at school from 1865 to 1935. The photographs take on even more meaning when viewed in the context of excerpts from children's diaries, journals, and letters and from the oral histories of men and women who remember being children in Montana. This popular new exhibit is booked through January 1985.

The exhibits are packaged in sturdy crates designed to safely hold the photographs. Before the crates arrive, exhibitors will receive an information packet from the Society that includes suggested exhibit techniques and condition reports and a sample press release. Informational booklets on "F. Jay Haynes: Fifty Views" and "Montana Collage" accompany those exhibits and can be distributed to members of the community.

Information on reserving the three traveling exhibits is available from Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Curator of Education, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620; (406)444-4794.

Rick Newby Named Editorial Assistant

The publications office is pleased to announce that it has added a new editor to its staff. Rick Newby, who has worked as an archival technician for the Society since 1981, has been promoted to a half-time position as Editorial Assistant and will work on the Montana Post, Montana the Magazine of Western History, and the various book projects of the Montana Historical Society Press. Newby will continue to work half-time in the Archives.

A native Montanan, Newby brings to his position considerable writing and editing experience. After studying creative writing at the University of Montana, he was a proofreader and copy editor for the Montana Legislative Council. Newby is a former editor of CutBank, the University of Montana literary magazine, and of Scratchgravel Hills, a Helena journal of the arts published in the late 1970s. His articles and book reviews have appeared in several Montana newspapers, including the Helena Independent Record, the Western Star, and the Montana Eagle.

Newby has also written two books, A Radiant Map of the World, which received the Montana Arts Council's First Book Award in 1981, and The Man in the Green Loden Overcoat, a collaboration with Helena visual artist Jack Jasper.

Newby also finds time to serve on the Montana Arts Council's Advisory Panel for the Poets/Writers in the Schools/Communities Program and is a judge for the Helena Film Society/Friends of the Helena Film Society Grants to Artists Program.

"It's a great pleasure for me to work on the publications staff," Newby says. "My two great passions are literature and Montana history, and with this position, I'll be able to indulge them both."

Accessions

Archives

| | |
|---|---|
| Jerry Calvert, Department of Political Science, MSU | Microfilm of the papers of the National Nonpartisan League and of the Nonpartisan Leader, 1915-1923 |
| Clark Pyfer and the Helena office of Galusha, Higgins and Galusha | 11 vols. of financial records of concessionaire companies in Yellowstone National Park, 1909-1931 |
| M. Virginia Brown, Sun City West, Arizona | "Historical Register of Pioneers"; 1895 financial statement, Pardee and McDonald Addition, Philipsburg |
| Board of Directors, Parmly Billings Library | 8 diaries kept by Joseph Richard "Skookum Joe" Anderson, 1886-1895 |
| Raymond A. Grant, Jr., Miles City | Records of the Southeastern Montana County Association, 1936-1944 |
| Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen, Division 356, Great Falls | Correspondence, financial records, pamphlets, legal documents, and artifacts of the organization, 1919-1977 |
| Thomas D. Tobin, Helena | Papers of Charles Benton Power, 1868-1953 |

Library

| | |
|---|---|
| Bureau of Land Management, State Office, Billings, Michael J. Penfold, Director | 94 microfilm reels containing tract books from Montana land offices |
| Mark H. Brown, Storm Lake, Iowa | 2 Russell manuscripts; several books with CMR doodles and sketches on the flyleaves; Owen Wister's The Virginian with CMR's notes for illustrations for new edition |
| Richard Merritt, San Francisco, California | 7,000-card index of the Montana News Association Inserts, 1917-1942 |
| Purchased from National Archives | Indian Census Rolls, 1885-1940 |

Museum

| | |
|---|---|
| Audrey Lloyd, Clancy | Pillowcases, early twentieth century |
| Elizabeth Herrin, Helena | Linens and matched set of crystal used at Original Governor's Mansion, ca. 1920s |
| Helen Huggins Wells, Carmel, California | Cavalry items of General Eli Lundy Huggins, Congressional Medal of Honor winner |
| Edward C. and Margaret Miller, Helena | Army and WAVE uniforms, World War II |
| Minnie Dissett Webb, Hamilton | Crazy quilt made by Ellen Busbee of Philipsburg, ca. 1894 |
| Anne Brewster, East Helena | The White House Cookbook for Original Governor's Mansion, 1894 |
| Nick Himber, Missoula | Letterpress from Helena Publishing Company |
| Mrs. Homer C. (Betty) Bailey, Hamilton | Ethelyn Harrison's Red Cross volunteer uniform, dress and head scarves, World War II |
| Mrs. Marilyn Staples, Helena | 10 articles of women's clothing (aprons, bloomers, camisole), early twentieth century |
| Reginald G. Faragher, Minneapolis, Minnesota | Spur used at Terry, Montana, ranch, ca. 1890 |
| Bill Summers, Missoula | Trade token from Lutty's marketeria stores |

Transfers from Montana State Agencies

| | |
|---|---|
| School for the Deaf and Blind, Great Falls | John Fery oils, On Belly River and Saint Mary's Lake |
| Liquor Division, Department of Revenue | John Fery oil, See America First/Iceberg Lake |

Archives Receives Grant and Donations

The Montana Historical Society Archives has received a $38,427 grant from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC) to begin implementing recommendations made by the 1982 Montana Historical Records Assessment Project. The Archives has found that historically valuable municipal and county records in Montana are being threatened by a lack of proper storage space, by potential natural disasters, and by an inability to care for the growing amount of material.

An important first step toward remedying these conditions is to create a practical and enforceable retention schedule for all local government offices that generate records. More room and care can be provided for permanent records if those that have no further legal, fiscal, or administrative use can be eliminated.

Toward this end, the Archives will use NHPRC grant monies to hire a full-time records manager who will work with local government and state officials to create a records retention schedule. He or she will also conduct workshops for local government workers on records management and preservation and on preventive measures in the case of disaster. The project is scheduled to begin early this summer.

---

Members of the Archives staff presented a two-hour workshop at the 1984 Montana Library Association Convention held April 26-28 in Helena. The workshop, entitled "Archival Materials in the Public Library, or What Do I Do with These Things?" offered librarians and others introductory training in identifying, organizing, storing, and retrieving archival materials, such as private manuscripts and local government records.

---

Jerry Calvert of the Department of Political Science at Montana State University has donated twenty-five rolls of microfilm containing the papers of the National Nonpartisan League and copies of the Nonpartisan Leader (1915-1923), the league's official newspaper. The Minnesota Historical Society owns the originals.

Clark Pyfer and the Helena office of Galusha, Higgins and Galusha have donated eleven volumes containing the financial records of various concessionaire companies that operated in Yellowstone National Park from 1909 through 1931. Included are the Yellowstone Park Hotel Company, Yellowstone Park Transportation Company, Harry W. Child, Whittaker and Company, Yellowstone Park Boat Company, Yellowstone Park Company, and Vernon Goodwin Company.

M. Virginia Brown of Sun City West, Arizona, has donated a "Historical Register of Pioneers," a list of members of the Society of Montana Pioneers, and an 1895 financial statement for the Pardee and McDonald Addition of Philipsburg.

The Board of Directors of Parmly Billings Library has donated eight diaries kept by Joseph Richard "Skookum Joe" Anderson from 1886 through 1895. The diaries detail Anderson's discovery of several noteworthy mining claims in Montana, including the Spotted Horse Mine near Maiden. Anderson was noted for making discoveries, selling them at low prices, and moving on to the next mining district, leaving the mines to be developed by others.

Raymond A. Grant, Jr. of Miles City has donated the records of the Southeastern Montana County Association (1936-1944). Grant's father, Raymond A. Grant, Sr., was secretary of the organization for several years. The association was formed during the Depression to stimulate the economy of southeastern Montana, encourage the construction and maintenance of good roads, conserve water resources, and develop a sound reclamation policy.

The Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen, Division # 356, of Great Falls has donated a portion of its records dating from 1919 to 1977. The donation includes general correspondence, financial records, pamphlets and other printed materials, legal documents, and artifacts.

Thomas D. Tobin of Helena has donated the papers of Helena businessman Charles Benton Power (1868-1953), including the records of his estate. Power, the son of pioneer entrepreneur T.C. Power, had interests in a wide range of Montana businesses, including the Cascade Mill and Elevator Company, Sun River Stock and Land Company, Yellowstone Mining Company, Faith Mining Company, Powhold Company, Power-Townsend Company, and T.C. Power and Brother.

MHS Archives Contributes to National Inventory

With the assistance of volunteers Mary Lou Tobin, Betty LaSalle, and Gary Holt, the Archives staff has completed a comprehensive review of its holdings for specific and selected notations in the National Inventory of Documentary Sources, to be published by Chadwyck-Healey Inc., a British company that has produced comprehensive guides to dozens of archives and libraries in Great Britain and the United States.

The Chadwyck-Healey project is producing microfiche copies of finding aids and descriptive guides to archival materials held by the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress; the National Archives, the seven Presidential Libraries, and the Smithsonian Institution; state archives and state historical societies; and academic and research libraries.

Because the cost of the inventory will be high, larger institutions, such as large research libraries, will be the primary consumers of the complete inventory. The Montana Historical Society, however, will be selling microfiche copies of the descriptions of its own archival collections for a minimal fee to libraries and other interested groups. The Archives hopes that the publication of the inventory, scheduled for later this year, will provide national exposure for the variety of manuscripts and records housed here.

Archivist in Glacier National Park

In late 1983, Curator Ellen Seeley of Glacier National Park requested the assistance of the Montana Historical Society in making the park's records more readily available to researchers. As a result of that request, Society Archivist Ellie Arguimbau spent January 30 through February 3, 1984, at Glacier National Park headquarters, helping Seeley and Librarian Beth Ladeau reorganize the park's historical files, which date to 1910. The files include materials on people and events in Glacier's history as well as on the park's wildlife, natural features, geology, and man-made facilities. Glacier's library also has several valuable collections of private manuscripts, including original letters from naturalist George Bird Grinnell.

Architectural Investigation of OGM

On the kitchen ceiling in the Original Governor's Mansion (OGM) in Helena, two faintly visible parallel lines running diagonally across the southeast corner of the room caught historical architect Jim McDonald's attention. The lines were a curiosity. McDonald had spotted other unusual things in the mansion's interiors, but in this case, there was no immediate explanation for the lines. McDonald was noting such details during an architectural investigation of the mansion's kitchen, the first step in completing a major restoration of the room.

McDonald's objective was to describe as accurately as possible what the original kitchen looked like, including the color and type of paint on the walls and ceilings, the number and placement of doors, and the style and type of flooring. Determining the original layout of the mansion's kitchen, however, was not a simple matter. This room—and much of the rest of the house—has undergone several remodelings since William Chessman built the mansion in 1888. During those remodelings, wall and floor coverings were changed, fixtures were added or removed, and walls and doors were altered. Every detail that can be discovered about the original construction and subsequent remodelings is important, especially when restoration is the goal. Those details are also important in the historical interpretation of the OGM and how people worked, entertained, and lived in it over the years.

The location of walls and doors, for example, can tell us a lot about the pattern of living in the OGM. Not only can a skilled interpreter such as OGM Curator Mary Hoffschwelle determine basic traffic patterns from this information, but she can also speculate on the ease of communication in the house, how domestic help might have gone about its work, and how guests were entertained. "In Victorian homes," Hoffschwelle explained, "there were public and private areas. The kitchen and bathrooms were private; guests were not brought into the kitchen. The physical layout of the house then had everything to do with directing guest traffic away from the kitchen, away from where the domestic help worked."

An architectural investigation of this sort, MHS Historical Architect Lon Johnson pointed out, is much like putting together a puzzle, and the historical architect gathers piece after piece of evidence to complete it. McDonald's investigation identified one of those pieces when he spotted those mysterious lines on the ceiling. Society staff discovered a second piece when they took up the kitchen's linoleum floor and found a strip of wood that corresponded exactly to the lines on the ceiling, indicating that a wall had once existed there. When they removed some flooring in the pantry adjoining the kitchen they found an additional puzzle piece: another wood strip similar to the first, indicating another wall, this time a curved one. The curved wall's placement was confirmed with the discovery of older plaster adjoining newer plaster where the curved wall had butted up against the pantry's south wall. The original kitchen, McDonald determined, had included an enclosed butler's pantry (see diagram).

It soon became clear that the kitchen's outer wall had originally included a doorway—in what had become a corner after later remodeling—and the entire pantry area had originally been closed off from the mansion's main hallway by a curved wall. During the early years, guests to the mansion would have seen the curved wall at the end of the main hallway next to the dining room, thereby shielding the kitchen and pantry from public view. More marks on the pantry wall indicated that a built-in cabinet, which probably held plates, linens, glasses, trays, and other dining utensils, had stood against the curved wall.

Hoffschwelle related these discoveries to other information she had gathered on the original kitchen. It allowed her, for example, to make sense of a reference to "tearing out cabinets" that she had recorded in an interview with Elsie Jones, who has been the chief cook for Montana's governors since the early 1950s. During Governor John Bonner's tenure, Jones had remembered, the southeast corner of the kitchen was remodeled and evidently the cabinet and curved wall were removed. Identifying the original locations of doorways and walls, of course, makes all of the difference in how the historian interprets a room. Hoffschwelle was able to speculate on several possible traffic patterns in the kitchen, hallway, and the dining room.

Other discoveries will have a bearing on the accuracy of future restoration work. Remnants of the paint and wallpaper that covered the original plaster walls will be microscopically analyzed to determine their composition, color, and perhaps age. The outline of where the original linoleum lay on the kitchen floor indicates that it was installed about ten inches from the wall. Research in historical catalogs suggests that this linoleum probably carried a geometric design in light and dark shades, perhaps black and white. McDonald also found blocking on the kitchen walls with closely spaced nail holes that matched those used on three extant sections of tongue-and-groove wainscoting in the pantry, indicating that the wainscoting originally lined the kitchen as well as the pantry.

The discovery of the curved, east wall of the pantry (B) and the angled doorway (A) aided mansion interpreters in their effort to establish the original dimensions of the kitchen. Finding evidence of a sizable cabinet in the pantry (C) allowed interpreters to speculate further on traffic patterns between the kitchen and the dining room. Note how the curved wall closed off the kitchen and the pantry from the main hallway and public view.

Hoffschwelle and McDonald use a

Yields Interesting Historical Clues

Schematic by Lon Johnson from an architectural drawing by Jim McDonald.

A strip of wood that filled an indentation in the kitchen's original flooring (detail below) established the previous existence of an angled wall that included a doorway. In removing layers of wall coverings, which had been added during kitchen remodelings, wooden blocking with distinctive nail holes (right) was uncovered, indicating that tongue-and-groove wainscoting originally lined the kitchen's walls.

variety of sources in their restoration research. Period photographs of the interiors of similar homes, books with contemporary floor plans, and catalogs of home furnishings aid in establishing the OGM's interior details and the style of life of the residents. Oral histories of members of former governors' families, individuals who worked at the mansion, and others who have information about the building or events connected with it are valuable. Contemporary cookbooks, mail order catalogs, and manuals on how to furnish a fashionable home also supply information. The society columns in Helena's early newspapers contained news of social activities at the mansion, and other columns included advice on cleaning, decorating, and entertaining.

It is the building itself, however, that continues to yield the most intriguing evidence. Some of that evidence answers questions or adds to knowledge of the mansion, while other discoveries pose more questions. In the course of replacing old wiring, for example, workmen discovered a 1906 tag on an electrical conduit. With this discovery, Hoffschwelle changed the date assigned to the electrification of the mansion. Because contemporary newspaper reports had commented so extensively on Peter Larson's remodeling work in 1900, it had previously been assumed that Larson had refitted the house with electricity at that time.

The discovery of indentations on the kitchen floor in front of where the gas stove sat, which were found during the architectural investigation, poses questions. What created the wear pattern that can be seen in the wood flooring, and what caused the floor to rot in that spot? Was it the result of some accident, or was the wear created by individuals standing in front of the stove—while at work or for heat? Perhaps an attached water heater had leaked.

What the discoveries at the Original Governor's Mansion underscore is that historical research and interpretation of buildings require all of the tools at the historian's disposal. Interpreting the patterns and texture of life in a building that is as historically interesting and complicated as the OGM requires the historian to be a detective and to go well beyond the written record. He or she must be prepared to look for evidence in the most unusual places—behind walls, under flooring, and under layers of paint.

Sherfy Talks About Historic Preservation

In the following interview with the Post, Marcella Sherfy, State Historic Preservation Officer, describes how people can discover and learn more about the historic sites and structures in their communities. During the last few years, the Preservation Office has helped many Montana communities with historical surveys, building preservation, and nomination for the National Register of Historic Places.

Marcella Sherfy, State Historic Preservation Officer.

Post: Marcella, your office encourages the preservation of historic and prehistoric sites in Montana. How can communities in Montana use the resources of your office to discover the properties and sites that deserve such preservation?

Sherfy: Although we tend to forget it, the buildings and places in our home towns can tell us a lot about how the community was settled, who lived here, how much money the residents made and how, and what their interests were. These physical places—parks, street corners, business blocks, churches, homes, roads, and bridges—can tell us about the past, and they can stimulate our curiosity so that we want to find out more. If we are willing to dig, we can discover the dramatic events of community settlement as well as the humdrum but important details of ordinary life.

Post: How can buildings tell us something about the past?

Sherfy: There are a number of ways in which structures can provide us with historical information: building arrangement can tell us whether the town was platted by a railroad company, by land speculators, or through other means; building style can tell us about the relative wealth of a community at different times and perhaps how permanent the builders thought the town would be; and degree of building decoration can tell us about a community's ethnic origins and tastes and whether its residents had the leisure and the means to decorate their homes and businesses.

Post: If communities want to learn more about their historic buildings or want to appreciate them more, what kinds of projects can they consider?

Sherfy: We often encourage communities that are just getting interested in older buildings to conduct an inventory or survey of all the buildings in town or at least of all the buildings in older neighborhoods. Then, using the information they've gathered, individuals can nominate worthy buildings to the National Register of Historic Places. A community organization can design a walking tour for residents and visitors as an introduction to local history, using buildings and places to illustrate the lives of important people and the history of local events and settlement patterns. Community groups can even do things as simple as helping property owners whose buildings are already listed in the National Register to secure informational plaques or signs. In larger communities, local historical societies and school groups have started an "adopt-a-building" program, which encourages individuals and organizations to adopt a building and to research its history, keep track of whether it is threatened by new construction, and assist the owner with ideas and support of various kinds.

Post: Some communities have published pamphlets or books. How are they written and used?

Sherfy: One useful publication is a pamphlet that people can take with them on walking tours. The pamphlet should contain historical and architectural information and give users directions to historic sites and buildings. Booklets or books can also be written on historic buildings. For example, publications that place historical and modern photographs of historic buildings side by side and provide narratives on the history of each building can encourage interest in older buildings. Most communities that have published pamphlets or books on older properties have concentrated on the grand old houses. That's a good beginning, but much more can be done. Booklets based on the historical overview written for an architectural survey are a good possibility.

Post: You've mentioned architectural and historical inventory or survey work several times. What is a survey, and how does a community begin one?

Sherfy: An architectural and historical survey of buildings isn't a mysterious process. It simply involves cataloging or itemizing all buildings in a given area (just as a store owner conducts an inventory of his or her merchandise), examining their condition, and determining their historic and architectural value. The first step is to outline clear and reasonable boundaries for the actual building-by-building inventory. It may be a block, a neighborhood, or a downtown district.

An inventory form (a single page with blanks on the front and back) is then completed for each building. The form contains space for a photograph, information on when the building was built and by whom, and a description of its historic and its current appearance. The surveyor identifies major changes and uses. There is also space to summarize the building's relative historic or architectural value.

Post: How can a person or group find community support for such a survey?

Sherfy: First of all, it is important that a clear explanation of the purpose and scope of the survey appear in the local paper and that the project is discussed on radio or TV. These presentations should be followed by public meetings. Senior citizens' centers are wonderful places to present ideas about the survey and to gain information about the community. The survey director in Libby, for

Summer Activities at the Society

Summers are always busy, exciting times at the Montana Historical Society as the library, hallways, and museum galleries fill up with visitors and researchers from all over the country. This summer promises to be no exception.

The Society's Curator of Education, Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, has once again organized the popular noontime series, "Summer at the Society," which will be held on the Society's lawn each Wednesday from June 20 through August 15. The series will begin with a talk and demonstration by Vince Yannone, of the Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks, on the animals that have played a part in Montana's history.

Families are encouraged to pack a lunch and attend the programs in the series, including "Montana History through Folk Music" with musicians Liz Pauly and Scott Crichton; a demonstration of the role of sheep in Montana's history, with a sheep wagon, a sheepherder, and live sheep; a group of local musicians playing sheet music from the Society's J.B. Mason collection of band music; and a flint knapping demonstration by Society Archeologist Alan Stanfill.

Inside the building, from June 1 through July 16, a traveling exhibit of photographs printed from the D.F. Barry negative collection will be on display in the Poindexter Gallery. Barry was a noted photographer during the late 1880s who captured the images of many Indian warriors, cavalrymen, and battle sites on the frontier. The collection includes Barry's own negatives as well as those of other photographers of the period.

Down the street at the Original Governor's Mansion, at 304 N. Ewing, the annual Ice Cream Social will be held on August 11. This fund-raising event will feature food and entertainment and is sponsored jointly by the Society and the Mansion Restoration Board.

As always, of course, there will be tours of the Society, the State Capitol, and the Original Governor's Mansion. At the Society, visitors can meander through Montana's history in the Formal Museum, see the art of Charles M. Russell in the Mackay Gallery, get a taste of the frontier photography of F. Jay Haynes in the Haynes Gallery, and view the new exhibit in the Poindexter Gallery.

From June 11 through Labor Day, guided tours of the State Capitol will be given every hour from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday. The renovation work on the Original Governor's Mansion has been completed, and guided tours there begin every hour from noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. Admission is free for all tours. To arrange group tours, call 444-4794.

---

example, arranged for local senior citizens to visit historic blocks and neighborhoods, which prompted all kinds of discussion about the architectural changes that had taken place. Another activity that has attracted community support is "Share a Photo Day." Through the local press, people are invited to bring photos of historic buildings or areas to a central location. Interesting and little known views are often discovered during these sessions.

Post: Can local people, most of whom are untrained in history or architecture, perform an inventory?

Sherfy: Yes, they can do much of the required research and photography. Ordinarily, we recommend that a survey coordinator supervise local efforts, because he or she has experience in architectural and historical surveying and skill in architectural history (understanding building styles and materials). But we have also learned that these skills can be learned, especially by people who are extremely interested in and dedicated to the survey.

Post: What resources are available that can be used to research the history of buildings?

Sherfy: Information can be found primarily in four places: among county or town legal records, at your local historical society or library, among the belongings and memories of family and friends, and in the Montana Historical Society Library and Archives. Here are some resources to keep in mind: building permit books, plat records and deed indices, tax assessors' records, sewer permits, Sanborn fire insurance maps, city directories, newspapers, photographs, and oral histories. [The February-March 1982 Montana Post Preservation provides an explanation of these resources. For a copy, write to State Historic Preservation Officer, 225 North Roberts Street, Helena, MT 59620.]

Post: How many Montana communities have completed or are working on surveys?

Sherfy: There are quite a few, and the number is growing. Two neighborhoods in Billings have been surveyed, and surveys have been completed in Troy, Kalispell, Fort Benton, Livingston, Red Lodge, Hot Springs, and portions of Helena and Missoula. Surveys are currently being conducted in Libby, Dillon, Great Falls, Alberton, Philipsburg, Butte, and Deer Lodge. Even Glacier National Park has conducted an inventory of its buildings, and the Highway Department has funded an inventory of all highway bridges that are over forty-five years old.

Post: We have been talking a lot about buildings. What other kinds of physical remains should be preserved?

Sherfy: Montana is rich in historic and prehistoric remains: camp sites, tipi rings, hunting routes. When thinking about ways to recognize your community's history, don't forget that the "community" includes the surrounding area and that its history begins long before the advent of the white man or the date of incorporation. Consider prehistory and geology, and commemorate them with markers, field trips, and informational handouts.

Post: What role does the State Historic Preservation Office play in helping Montanans with community surveys?

Sherfy: We are always happy to provide information on surveys and survey forms, guidance on how to conduct research and use volunteers, and additional information on the uses of survey information. As long as Congress continues to appropriate federal historic preservation funds and allocate them to state preservation offices, communities can apply to our office for federal funding. This funding, which is granted on a matching basis, is available year-to-year, so we urge interested communities to talk with us regularly.

I want to emphasize that providing inventory information on a building or listing it in the National Register of Historic Places does not take away anyone's private property rights or obligate the owner in any way. Our programs encourage rather than force preservation, and surveys are an important part of that process. Several communities and historical societies have found that when they take a complete look at the older buildings in their communities, they can work together more enthusiastically and with less rancor as they try to decide which buildings and sites should be preserved.

History Day Competition Held

Montana educators and students have been invited to take part in an exciting program of historical research. With the endorsement of Montana's Office of Public Instruction, the Montana Historical Society held its first Montana History Day competition on May 26 in Helena. Students from the sixth through the twelfth grades were encouraged to submit papers, presentations, or projects focusing on this year's theme, "Family and Community in History." Winners of the competition will be encouraged to participate in the national competition on June 13-16 at the University of Maryland.

National History Day was established to give students an opportunity to do original historical research; to create a historical exhibit, paper, or presentation incorporating a variety of academic disciplines; and to compete against others in the same division and category at state and national competitions.

Other states have participated in National History Day since 1974, but this is the first year that Montana has been involved. Governor Ted Schwinden helped mark the day by signing a proclamation that announced Montana's participation in National History Day and encouraged "all participants in this important test of scholastic achievement and understanding, together with the public-spirited businesses whose support has made our state contests possible."

OGM Carriage House Sale Planned

The Restoration Board of the Original Governor's Mansion will hold a special Carriage House Sale on September 15, 1984. The sale will feature homemade jellies, jams, preserves, and breads as well as the usual bric-a-brac and collectibles. Proceeds from the sale will go toward the continuing restoration of the OGM. The Restoration Board is seeking contributions of items for the sale, which can be delivered or sent to the Original Governor's Mansion at 304 North Ewing in Helena. For more information about how you can help, call OGM Curator Mary Hoffschwelle at 444-3714.

"Small Town Montana"

As part of the Society's "Small Town Montana" oral history project, Oral History Coordinator Laurie Mercier will be in Sidney during the early summer to interview people about their perceptions of the town's history. While in Sidney, Mercier hopes to conduct fifteen to twenty interviews and gather information about the role of local institutions, major employers, community organizations that contributed to town development, and the changes in local forms of transportation, communication, and recreation.

Ranging in population from 800 to 4,500, the twelve towns involved in the project reflect the diversity of the Montana small town experience and represent a variety of geographical regions, economic bases, and settlement and growth histories. Focusing on various aspects of each community's history, from earliest beginnings to recent developments, "Small Town Montana" will be completed by July 1985, when the resulting 180 to 240 tapes will be made available to researchers, both at the Society's Library and through local historical societies or other public institutions.

SUMMER BOOK SALE

GEORGE CATLIN
Episodes from "Life Among the Indians" and "Last Rambles"
edited by Marion C. Ross
An informative documentation of American Indians by the author/artist George Catlin.
softcover $14.50 Sale price $9.50

THE MONTANA FRONTIER
by Merrill Burlingame
An authoritative history of the dramatic frontier period in Montana.
softcover $9.00 Sale price $6.00

JIM BRIDGER
by J. Cecil Alter
An authentic and exciting biography of Jim Bridger—mountain man, trapper, and guide.
hardbound $18.95 Sale price $13.95

URBAN POPULISM AND FREE SILVER IN MONTANA
A Narrative of Ideology in Political Action
by Thomas A. Clinch
A detailed investigation of the activities of the Populists and their impact on Montana history.
softcover $4.95 Sale price $3.75

MANY STRANGE CHARACTERS
Montana Frontier Tales
by James Willard Schultz
The romantic spirit of the Old West is captured in these remembrances, anecdotes, and adventures.
hardbound $11.95 Sale price $8.95

CUSTER'S LUCK
by Edgar I. Stewart
One of the best and most accurate historical documents of the Indian War era.
hardbound $25.00 Sale price $17.95
softcover $14.95 Sale price $11.95

OLD YELLOWSTONE DAYS
edited by Paul Schullery
A collection of the best early writings on Yellowstone National Park, providing insights into what it was like before it became more accessible to tourists.
hardbound $12.50 Sale price $7.95

NATURE'S YELLOWSTONE
by Richard A. Bartlett
A historical record of Yellowstone that discusses the primitive region and the establishment of the national park.
hardbound $12.00 Sale price $7.95

SEND ORDER TO
Montana Historical Society
Museum Store
225 North Roberts
Helena, MT 59620

Supply limited to stock on hand. Sale ends July 15, 1984. Please add $1.00 postage on the first book and $.50 on each additional book.

Montana Historical Society
225 NORTH ROBERTS, HELENA

OGM Gets Face Lift

This spring, the Original Governor's Mansion (OGM) received a face lift. Work on the OGM's exterior included installing a new roof and new rain gutters and repainting the woodwork. Helena architect Richard I. Shope designed the projects, and Dick Anderson was the general contractor.

According to OGM Curator Mary Hoffschwelle, as the work was being done Anderson's workers discovered several items of historical interest, including old pieces of wallpaper and tags from the manufacturers of the original wiring, including those of the Helena Electric Light and Railroad Company.

Scaffolding graces the north side of the OGM, allowing workers to reshingle the gables and repaint the trim (above). At left, one of general contractor Dick Anderson's employees lays shingles during the OGM face lift. Below, a worker installs roofing felt prior to reshingling a portion of the OGM's roof.

The mansion was built in 1888 by Helena entrepreneur William Chessman, and in 1913 the state of Montana purchased it as the official executive residence. In 1969, the building became the property of the city of Helena, which worked with the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board to begin the long and expensive process of restoring the historic home. The mansion was returned to state ownership in 1980, under the curatorial supervision of the Montana Historical Society.

Tours of the OGM, which was reopened to visitors on April 24, are conducted on the hour from noon to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday, and admission is free. Group tours can be arranged by calling 444-4794.

New Faces, New Titles in Preservation

Members of the State Historic Preservation Office staff are, from left, Marcella Sherfy, Diana Vanek, Lon Johnson, Pat Bick, Alan Stanfill, and Lisa Pocha.

In early February, Governor Ted Schwinden appointed Marcella Sherfy as State Historic Preservation Officer, or SHPO. Sherfy, who is program manager for the Preservation Office, had been the Deputy State Historic Preservation Officer for the past three and one-half years. In making the recommendation to the governor, Society Director Robert Archibald, who had previously held the title of SHPO, observed that "Marcella has admirably performed all the duties of SHPO throughout her tenure at the Society. Transference of the title merely recognizes the work she is doing."

There have been other staff changes in the Preservation Office, and current members have assumed new titles.

Lisa Pocha became the office's new secretary last September after Margaret Dykstra moved to Idaho. Pocha is a native of Helena and a 1983 graduate of Helena High School. She has had special training and experience in word processing and easily mastered the office's new computer equipment. She has also helped the rest of the staff make productive use of the system.

In January, Alan Stanfill was hired as staff Archeologist, moving into the position previously held by Diana Vanek, who became the office's permanent Archeologist/Anthropologist, replacing Tom Foor. Stanfill, an Ohio native, received his B.A. from Ohio University and a Masters in Anthropology from the University of Arkansas. He has worked with several private consulting firms and was on the staff of the Forest Service in Idaho, Montana, and Arkansas. Stanfill's special interest in the field of prehistory is stone tool technology.

Three staff members have been named Deputy State Historic Preservation Officers: Lon Johnson, Historical Architect, is Deputy SHPO for Rehabilitation; Pat Bick, Architectural Historian, is Deputy SHPO for Survey and Registration; and Diana Vanek, Archeologist/Anthropologist, is Deputy SHPO for Agency Review.

"Lon, Pat, and Diana have all taken major responsibility for representing the office and proposing patterns and standards of work for the office in their respective areas of concentration," Sherfy commented. "I am pleased to be able to acknowledge their talents and skills as they formally assume these new positions."

Sherfy noted that the Preservation Office continues to provide a variety of services to Montanans. Preservation Office staff are available for guidance on nominating properties to the National Register, starting an architectural or historical survey, rehabilitating older properties, determining whether financial aid is available for preservation work, identifying prehistoric resources and their values, and finding out whether historic and prehistoric properties are in jeopardy as a result of federal or state agency plans.

Land Records and CMR Manuscripts Donated

The Bureau of Land Management, State Office, Billings, Michael J. Penfold, Director, has donated ninety-four microfilm reels containing the tract books from Montana land offices. District offices kept these ledgers to record, by township, all settlement and other land use. The donation saves the Society a nearly $2,000 purchase price, while the filming makes these invaluable land records readily accessible for the first time and ensures their preservation.

Mark H. Brown, Storm Lake, Iowa, author of The Plainsmen of the Yellowstone and Before Barbed Wire, has once again donated materials from his private collection. His recent gifts include two Russell manuscripts, one a draft for a piece later published in Trails Plowed Under, the other apparently a report of a rodeo in Chinook for a newspaper. Several books presented by their authors to CMR have his doodles and quick sketches on the flyleaves, and a copy of Owen Wister's The Virginian contains CMR's notes for the illustrations he was planning for a new edition.

Richard Merritt of San Francisco, California, who grew up in Helena before going to work for the San Francisco Examiner, has given many valuable hours of his time and indexing skills to produce a detailed (7,000 cards) index of eleven years of the Montana News Association Inserts. These eight-page supplements to Montana weeklies, published from 1917 through 1942, featured historical articles, often written by such notable Montana literati as Grace Stone Coates. The inserts are especially valuable because the writers were often either themselves participants in the events they described or they were able to interview those who had been. Clippings from these inserts form the backbone of the Library's extensive vertical file, but this index opens the way to much more material.

The Library has also purchased from the National Archives the Indian Census Rolls for 1885-1940. These sixty-four reels of microfilm contain all the special censuses taken by the federal Indian agents or superintendents on Montana reservations during the period and the censuses of the Fort Shaw Indian School and of the Turtle Mountain band of the Chippewa. Information on the rolls varies, but usually given are the English and Indian names of the individual, roll number, age or date of birth, sex, and relationship to head of family. Census rolls compiled after 1929 show the degree of Indian blood, marital status, ward status, and place of residence.

MHS Calendar

MHS Events

| | |
|---|---|
| May 26 | Montana History Day, Montana Historical Society and State Capitol |
| June 13-16 | National History Day Competition, "Family and Community in History," University of Maryland, College Park |
| August 11 | Ice Cream Social, Original Governor's Mansion |
| October 25-27 | 11th Annual Montana History Conference, Lewistown |

Summer at the Society

The "Summer at the Society" series will take place on Wednesdays at noon on the lawn of the Montana Historical Society. Programs are designed for the entire family, and sack lunches are encouraged.

| | |
|---|---|
| June 20 | Wildlife in Montana History, Vince Yannone |
| June 27 | Montana History through Folk Music, Liz Pauly and Scott Crichton |
| July 11 | Here Comes the Sheep Wagon (sheep, wagon, songs, and stories), arranged by Bob Gilbert |
| July 18 | The Jack Mason Band Music Collection: A Musical Sampling, arranged by Janet Sperry |
| July 25 | Grand Street Theatre Young Performers, directed by Janet McLaughlin |
| August 1 | Puppets, by Toni Person |
| August 8 | Mountain Men and the Fur Trade Era, Durty Murphy Fox |
| August 15 | Flint Knapping, Alan Stanfill |

Special Exhibits

Poindexter Gallery: "Visions of One Hundred Years Now Past: Chiefs of the Sioux Wars," photographic prints from the D.F. Barry Negative Collection, June 1-July 16.

Poindexter Gallery: An exhibit of bronzes from the Montana Historical Society Museum Collection, opens August 1.

1984 SUMMER HOURS AND TOUR SCHEDULES

| | |
|---|---|
| Montana Historical Society Museum225 N. Roberts St., Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.Saturday, Sunday, holidays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. |
| Library and Archives225 N. Roberts St., Helena | Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.Closed Saturday, Sunday, and holidays |
| Montana State CapitolJune 11-Labor Day. Guided tours begin on the hour | Monday-Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.Last tour at 4 p.m.Sunday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.Last tour at 3 p.m. |
| Original Governor's Mansion304 N. Ewing, HelenaTours begin on the hour | Tuesday-Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.Last tour at 4 p.m. |

Admission is free for all tours. Group tours may be arranged by calling Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, 444-4794.

Museum Store Expands Staff

Since the Society's merchandise program was reorganized a year and a half ago, the Museum Store has operated with a limited staff. That situation was alleviated somewhat with the recent hiring of Theresa Nugent, a participant in the federally funded Green Thumb program. Green Thumb is a nonprofit organization established by the National Farmers Union to provide part-time public service jobs for people who are over fifty-five years old.

Theresa Nugent

Nugent brings to the Store considerable skills in working with the public. She was graduated from Carroll College in 1981 with a degree in social work, has had experience as a bookkeeper, is a Hospice volunteer, and serves on the Governor's Women in Employment Advisory Council. Nugent was born and raised in eastern Montana and is the widow of former Missoula legislator James Nugent. She has five children and eight grandchildren.

Nugent works twenty hours a week in the Museum Store, greeting the public, answering questions, selling books and prints, stocking the shelves, and compiling a list of mail order customers. Says Museum Store Manager Rosie Wynkoop, "With her experience in working with the public as well as her office and bookkeeping skills, Theresa is a very welcome addition to our staff."

Over the last several months the focus of the Museum Store has changed. The Store will concentrate on C. M. Russell prints and an expanded book inventory, which will include the latest in western history along with the classic works in the field.

¶ from the Editor's File

Montana State Library
1515 E. 6th - Documents Section
Helena, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capital Station, Helena, MT 59620

¶ The Montana Wool Growers Association celebrated its centennial in 1983 and has recently published a book on the history of the association and sheep raising in Montana. In Montana Sheep Trails: The First 100 Years, Jim Drummond of Bozeman describes the origins of the wool-raising industry in Montana, from the introduction of large flocks in the 1860s to the effects of recent federal legislation. Highlights include sketches of association leaders, descriptions of early problems with predators, and personal reminiscences about conditions over the last fifty years. The book sells for $12 and can be purchased by mail order from: Montana Wool Growers Association, P.O. Box 1693, Helena 59624.

¶ Also celebrating its centennial, the Montana Stockgrowers Association has just published a special edition of the Montana Stockgrower. In 128 pages with over 100 illustrations, the book covers the history of the organization from 1884 to 1984. Vivian A. Paladin, former editor of Montana the Magazine of Western History, edited the book and contributed five essays covering the period from 1929 to the present. Mons Teigen, Executive Vice-President of MSGA, wrote the section on historical origins of the association, and Dr. Glen Halver contributed chapters on early veterinary techniques.

On the cover, Charles M. Russell's oil painting, Roping, is reproduced for the first time. Painted in 1903, the work was displayed at the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904 and purchased soon thereafter by Charlie Bair. It is reproduced courtesy of Alberta Bair of Martinsdale. The price of this very special publication is $10. Orders should be sent to: Montana Stockgrowers Association, 420 N. California St., Helena 59601.

¶ Lewis and Clark enthusiasts will be interested in the 6th Annual Lewis and Clark Expedition Festival to be held July 27-29 at Cut Bank, Montana. The festival will be hosted by the Cut Bank Area Chamber of Commerce and will feature a pageant, art auction, and social events. For information write: Cut Bank Area Chamber of Commerce, Box 1243, Cut Bank 59427.

¶ Even as late as 1884 the news of a gold strike sent Montanans stampeding to the diggings in hopes of making a fortune. A letter from a Helenan working the mines around Couer d'Alene, Idaho, home to his brother described the frenetic activity there:

> I got here all right and found things better than I expected. Everything is flying high. This beats any stampede I ever saw. People are rushing in by the thousands, all afoot, and hauling their blankets, grub, and tools on hand sleds. The transportation of freight from the railroad at Trout Creek, about thirty-two miles, costs from 20 to 30 cents per pound. I am on the route and doing well.
>
> Wages for any kind of work is $5 per day. Meals cost $1 each—beans and bacon at that, and then wait an hour for your turn. I carry enough grub when I leave the railroad to last me the round trip. Eggs cost $2.50 per dozen; coal oil, $5 per gallon. There is lots of stud poker. One large house rents for $300 per month for a saloon. Money is plenty.
>
> One woman is on her way to the mines. She is dressed in man's clothes. I saw her on my last trip. Her name is Hart. She is from Missoula. She has fifteen men to pull her tent and baggage. The trail is a terrible one. . . . People seem like they are crazy, loading 200 pounds on sleds to a man. I pass hundreds every day. . . .

But in every rush there was always hype of one sort or another, and there was always someone who took pleasure in pricking the balloon. A Fort Benton man who stampeded to Couer d'Alene with the rest wrote his friends, warning them to stay home.

> I am now in the mines. There is nothing doing here, and I scarcely know more about the mines than you do, because there are no claims open yet. The booming stories you see in the papers are not true. Every claim holder wants to sell out at big figures, and they have nothing but snow to show for the money. . . . All that is going on now is the sale of town lots to some of the excited fellows who think this is to be a big camp.

¶ Poetry written about and by ranchers and ranch hands—cowboy poetry—will be the subject of the first Cowboy Poets' Convention, sponsored by the Institute of the American West, to be held this coming winter at Elko, Nevada. Poets from nine western states will gather to read their work and to share ideas, and the Montana Folklife Project wants to be certain that Montana is well represented. Michael Korn of the Folklife Project has interviewed many of Montana's cowboy poets, but there are many more who should be represented at the convention. Anyone interested in contributing to the convention or with information on Montana's cowboy poets—especially on published poems—should get in touch with Michael Korn, The Montana Folklife Project, P.O. Box 1181, Helena 59620.

¶ Clark Spence, a contributor to Montana the Magazine of Western History and author of several books on western mining and Montana history, is currently hard at work researching the Conrey Placer Mining Company. Conrey ran an extensive dredging operation in the Virginia City area during the early years of this century. Spence would like information on the company's dredging work, personnel, work conditions, living conditions, and events connected with the dredging operation. You can give Professor Spence a hand by dropping him a line: Clark Spence, Department of History, University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois 61801.

CORRECTION

In the last issue, we reported that the newspaper project in the library was cataloging Montana newspapers on an OCLC terminal in the Montana State Library. The cooperating library is the Montana State Law Library, Brenda Grasmick, Acting State Law Librarian.

S
978.6
H6m
vol 21 no 4
Nov.-Dec.
1983

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST
• REGISTERED TRADEMARK

PERIODICALS

Vol. 21, No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Nov.-Dec. 1983

Where Are Montana's Old Newspapers?

Grant to MHS Library Funds a Wide Search

Kathryn Otto at the OCLC terminal at Montana State Library in Helena, where the Montana newspaper catalog will be entered into a nation-wide library information network.

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
JAN 16 1984
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Montana has always been a state of readers and from the earliest days town after town—and many boom camps—established newspapers before nearly any other urban trappings. Most faltered before long or changed titles and ownership over the years to emerge as a current Montana weekly or daily. Historians and librarians, while using these newspapers for years as essential source material, have always grumbled when they could not find any extant copy of a specific newspaper. Then the plaintive questions usually came: where are all of those newspapers? didn't anyone save at least one copy?

A near definitive answer is on its way, at least that is the hope of Society Librarian Bob Clark, who is directing a $102,596 project to locate, catalogue, and list on a computer all of the extant Montana newspapers. The project, which is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) in Washington, D.C., is a two-year effort that is part of a nation-wide search for extant newspapers to be included in a national computer catalogue, a certain boon to researchers throughout the country. The NEH goal is to catalogue all newspapers in the nation on a state-by-state basis.

The work of the Montana project entails a thorough search—in libraries, historical societies, court houses, city halls, and even private holdings—to locate newspapers published in the territory or state. Full runs or partial runs will be noted. Repositories outside of Montana, such as the Bancroft Library in California, will also be contacted on the chance that they may hold some issues. Results from this survey, combined with information from the Society's extensive newspaper holdings, will provide researchers with the most accurate bibliographical data about each newspaper and where copies are located. All of this will be fed into the computer at OCLC, a library network centered in Ohio that serves thousands of member libraries throughout the country.

Through a cooperative arrange- ment with the Montana State Library, one of Montana's five OCLC members and located conveniently across the street from the Society, all information will be entered through the State Library's OCLC computer terminal. Because very few Montana libraries will have direct access to the newspaper catalogue on computer (including the Society), an additional project product will be a card catalogue of all the newspapers, which will be available on microfiche and easily duplicated for use by individuals or libraries. Yet another part of the project will be to microfilm significant Montana newspapers that at present exist only in the original.

Library assistant Mary Lisa Pryne shelving bound volumes of Montana newspapers in MHS library stacks.

"Montana is something of a pioneer in this," Librarian Clark remarked, "or maybe a guinea pig. Along with what has to be an unusual companion for Montana, the Virgin Islands, we are the first to receive a grant for a state-wide cataloguing and microfilming project." Montana got the jump on other states, as Clark explains, because the Society's extensive newspaper collection gave us a head start, especially when we are compared with more populous states that might have thousands of different newspaper holdings scattered among dozens of libraries. The second largest Montana newspaper collection, for example, is University of Montana with only fifty older titles, whereas the Society annually films nearly 100 runs and holds over 600 older runs in the collection.

The lead worker and cataloguer at the Society is Kathryn Otto, whose experience in the lengthy map cataloguing effort over the last two years will be of great benefit. She has already completed preliminary training on the OCLC system and will also attend periodic meetings, the next perhaps in Helena, as part of a committee that will define the methodology for other state projects. Missoula native, Mary Lisa Pryne, will assist Ms. Otto in most phases of the project.

"Although we have been collecting newspapers practically since our founding in 1865 and believe that we have some 90 per cent of the issues ever published," Clark commented, "we know there are still significant gaps, especially in the runs of papers from the homesteading towns that sprang up in the teens and early twenties. And already in the project we have identified at least sixty possible newspapers we do not have at all."

This is the challenge, of course, to find those missing papers. The library is encouraged by the fact that in recent years it has already been able to locate and put on microfilm missing portions of such Montana weeklies as the Circle Banner, the Plains Plainsman, and the Fromberg Herald. This more concentrated search should turn up many more.

Rosie Wynkoop, New Museum Shop Manager

The new manager of the Society's Museum Shop is Rosie Wynkoop. Ms. Wynkoop is a graduate of Montana State University, with degrees in English and Art Education. She has worked in the Museum Shop for three years, serving customers at the counter, keeping track of inventory, and working on accounts receivable. With the reorganization of the merchandise operation, Rosie was elevated to the position of manager of the gift shop.

Nearly one year ago, the Society began a reevaluation of the Museum Shop and its relation to the Society as a whole. It was decided to limit the merchandise carried in the gift shop to items that related directly to Montana history and the overall educational mission of the Society.

This change in orientation has made the job of gift shop manager a genuine challenge. Rosie's background in art gives her an advantage in working with the C.M. Russell prints that are sold through the shop. The shop also carries a full range of books on western art and history, special publications, and gifts with history as a theme. "It is really a challenge," she says, "to run a retail operation in an efficient way, making sure to order the right kind of merchandise, to keep our shelves stocked, and to serve the thousands of tourists who come here every year." The gift shop also fills mail orders, as many of our readers know, and Rosie oversees that facet of the operation as well.

MONTANA POST
Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
ISSN 0047-7958 (406) 449-2694
Written and edited by William L. Lang as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.
The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

Highlights of the Montana History Conference

Well over 350 people crowded into meeting rooms at the Colonial Inn and at Carroll College, October 27-29, to take in the activities and programs of the Tenth Annual Montana History Conference. As in previous years, the Montana Committee for the Humanities funded the conference, and, as in previous years, the enthusiasm of the participants and audience proved that interest in Montana history continues to grow. This year's meeting also demonstrated that many subjects in need of study are also ones with great popular appeal.

Northwestern University geographer John C. Hudson, specialist on the development of small towns.

New conference subjects treated at this meeting included the effect of World War II on Montana, Helena's world famous Archie Bray Foundation, and sheep raising in Montana. The centennial of the completion of the Northern Pacific Railroad prompted a session on the railroad's impact on the new territory of Montana. And there were two very informative panel discussions that delved into the use of archival collections and the use of local records in historical research.

Picking out a few highlights is difficult, but the audience at the Friday evening banquet would agree that Dr. Mary Clearman Blew's address was exceptional—one to be remembered. Dr. Blew, who serves as Dean of Arts and Sciences at Northern Montana College in Havre, spoke poignantly and vividly of her own Montana background as a foundation for her writing and her understanding of Montana's past. The clarity of her language, the depth of her expression, and the content of her ideas left a considerable impression.

Two interesting sessions, one on the coming of the Northern Pacific and the other on the history of the development of natural resources in Montana, dealt with what has become a contemporary concern—the future of Montana's resource wealth and the efficiency of the state's transportation network. Participants in the resource session, Joan Brownell of Montana State University, Ed Bingler of Montana Tech, Thurman Prosper of Ronan, and Bill Cunningham of the Montana Wilderness Association, agreed that planning for the effective use or conservation of Montana's resources (from wildlife to coal and timber) has come late and with significant consequences. Many contemporary resource problems, the panelists concluded, stem from an inadequate appreciation of the state's resources in earlier decades.

MHS Cataloguer Janet Sperry demonstrating for conference participants the proper ways to handle and store artifacts.

The impact of the Northern Pacific's building through Montana, however, created a much different history. The anticipation of the railroad's arrival, Dr. Rex Myers of Western Montana College explained, sent politicians and capitalists tumbling over each other to be part of the new era. The reality of the NP's corporate dominance in the region and especially its exploitation of the timber resources, as panelist Edward Butcher noted, prompted widespread and justified criticism of the railroad. As a powerful corporation, Tom White of the James J. Hill Library in St. Paul pointed out, the NP intruded into Montana's political affairs as dramatically as its economic life.

Dean Mary C. Blew, featured speaker at the conference.

Jeanne Eder, Indian Studies Coordinator at Eastern Montana College, in costume as Waheenee, the Buffalo Bird Woman. Ms. Eder recreates Waheenee's explanations of traditional Hidatsa origin stories.

Perhaps the most dramatic highlight of this year's conference was Jeanne Eder's sensitive portrayal of Waheenee, Buffalo Bird Woman. Ms. Eder, who went into authentic costume and role-playing that depicts an elderly Hidatsa woman in the early years of this century, related stories from Hidatsa oral tradition, danced to Hidatsa music and fielded questions from the audience. Her transformation into Waheenee was stunning and effectively communicated Hidatsa oral tradition and the most personal side of Indian life. Jeanne Eder is Coordinator of Indian Studies at Eastern Montana College in Billings.

Next year the Montana History Conference travels to Lewistown, in the center of the state. The meetings will be held at the Yogo Inn, with local arrangements and other help for the conference coming from local history groups. The conference will meet October 25-27, 1984. Save a place on your calendar for the Lewistown meeting.

Cataloging Our Montana Maps:

by Robert M. Clark

In early 1981, a National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) program offered a solution to the problem of locating a specific map in the Society's large collection with no public catalog or efficient finding aid. With $43,025 from NEH for two years, supplemented with funds from the Mackay Family Endowment, the Library hired Ms. Kathryn Otto to produce a detailed catalog of the entire collection. Now, after two years of steady work, we have a 13,000-card public catalog that has also been filmed onto an eight-page set of microfiche. For the first time in the Society's 118-year history, it can be said that our map collection is ready to be used.

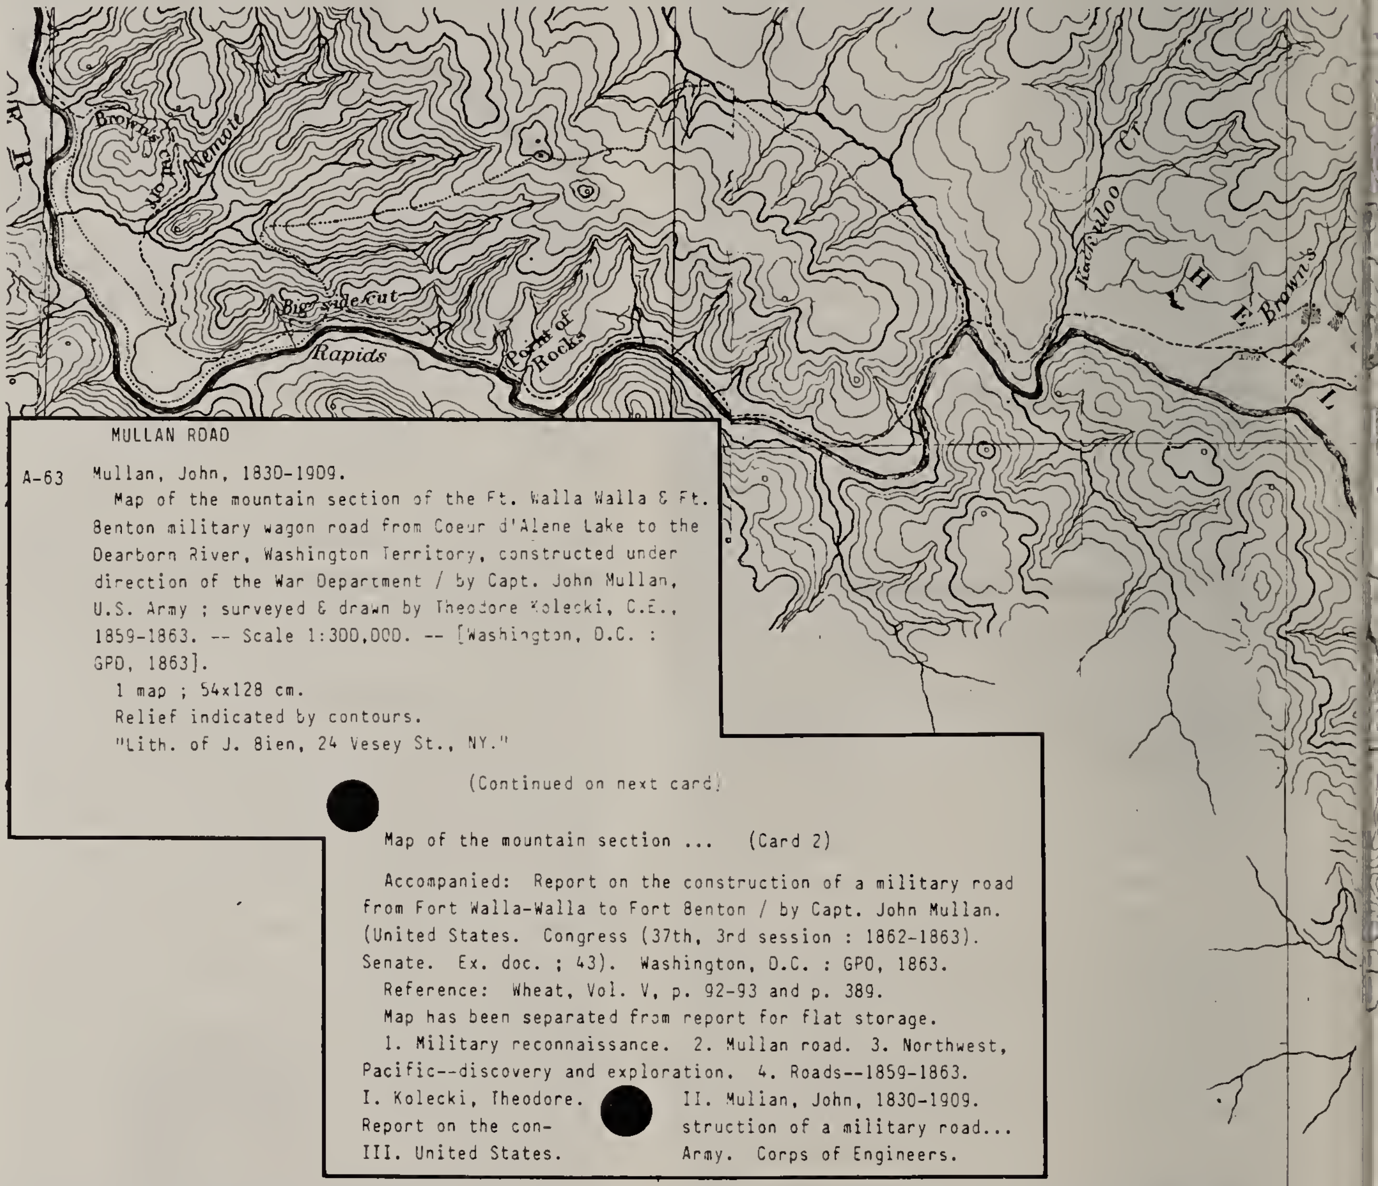
Cataloging maps, however, is not a simple task of gathering and labeling each item; maps create special and exasperating problems. Proper cataloging, despite some "rules" that can seem bizarre, is nonetheless designed to aid the researcher and to accommodate the way most of us approach catalogs. While researchers need not know of the details and vicissitudes of map cataloging to use the catalog, some understanding of how it is organized might aid in the locating of pertinent maps.

Aside from such technical problems as determining a map's scale or type of projection, Ms. Otto had to contend with seemingly simple matters such as identifying "author" and "title." Who is the author of a map? the publishing company? the cartographer? a government bureau? Cataloging rules, perhaps from an admirable principle of giving credit where credit is due, want the cartographer tabbed as the author. Unfortunately, cartographers are not well known to the public; catalogers know that maps are much more likely to be approached as "authored" by Rand McNally or the Highway Department. All of this means that several different "authors" for one and the same map may be identified in the catalog.

If the catalog multiplies author entries, it often ignores "titles," leaving what passes as a title to the main description further down the catalog card. Almost no one really knows the exact title of a map. Frequently maps have long descriptive titles: "A map representing Sections 5 and 6 of Township . . . including the lower east half of the adjacent military reservation." Who would look for this under "M," where the title card would be? Moreover, a high percentage of maps do not have what catalogers call a "distinctive" title, meaning one more-or-less unique to it. Scores of maps are entitled "Montana" or "State of Montana," but it would be a waste of catalog space to dedicate a title card to each of these. And then there are those maps with titles that are meaningful only to those who already know the map, such as the U.S.G.S. 7.5′ topographic quadrangle maps that backpackers revere. These maps carry seemingly distinctive titles, such as "Square Butte," when, in fact, there are at least nine such buttes in nine different counties. To find the area covered by the "Square Butte" quadrangle you must consult an index map.

Geographic area is, of course, the way most people approach maps, and reasonably enough. That is what maps generally show. Large map collections may be classified and cataloged completely according to geographic location, and there was a possibility of organizing our catalog on that basis, with a machine-readable format to conform to a computerized, rationalized catalog now being compiled by the National Cartographic Information Center (NCIC) in Denver. But such a system requires unchanging and universally understood descriptive terms, such as latitude and longitude. Missoula, for example, has not always been called that, and may change its name again, but where it is located, baring catastrophe, should always be 46°51.7′ N. latitude, 114°00.5′ W. longitude. While a geographer might ask

Bob Clark is MHS Librarian and a specialist in rare books.



MULLAN ROAD

A-63 Mullan, John, 1830-1909.

Map of the mountain section of the Ft. Walla Walla & Ft. Benton military wagon road from Coeur d'Alene Lake to the Dearborn River, Washington Territory, constructed under direction of the War Department / by Capt. John Mullan, U.S. Army ; surveyed & drawn by Theodore Kolecki, C.E., 1859-1863. -- Scale 1:300,000. -- [Washington, D.C. : GPO, 1863].

1 map ; 54x128 cm.

Relief indicated by contours.

"Lith. of J. Bien, 24 Vesey St., NY."

(Continued on next card)

Map of the mountain section ... (Card 2)

Accompanied: Report on the construction of a military road from Fort Walla-Walla to Fort Benton / by Capt. John Mullan. (United States. Congress (37th, 3rd session : 1862-1863). Senate. Ex. doc. ; 43). Washington, D.C. : GPO, 1863.

Reference: Wheat, Vol. V, p. 92-93 and p. 389.

Map has been separated from report for flat storage.

1. Military reconnaissance. 2. Mullan road. 3. Northwest, Pacific--discovery and exploration. 4. Roads--1859-1863. I. Kolecki, Theodore. II. Mullan, John, 1830-1909. Report on the construction of a military road... III. United States. Army. Corps of Engineers.

Capt. John Mullan's Report in 1863 on the construction of the first wagon road across the Montana Rockies was accompanied by four large maps. A section of the third (above) shows the region around Missoula in the early 1860s. Note that the Bitterroot Valley was known to the expedition as St. Mary's. Mullan labeled the upper reaches of the Clark's Fork of the Columbia the Hellgate River and called it the Bitter Root once it joined the Big Blackfoot.

This is one of the many maps in the Society's collection that is valuable enough to be described in Carl I. Wheat's standard reference, Mapping the Transmississippi West. The detail is such that the map is still consulted by people attempting to trace the original route. Not only is the map rich in historical information, showing the location of some of Montana's earliest gold diggings and white settlements, but it also represents a landmark in mapmaking. As Wheat wrote, "Never in the West . . . had an engineer shown the hardihood to adopt the contour system for portraying topography over a large area."

On the "main entry" or "author" catalog cards for the map, note that the "author" is the head of the expedition, not the cartographer. But the card does reveal that the mapper whom Wheat admired as a "cartographical pioneer" was Theodore Kolecki. The "added entries" at the bottom of Card 2 show that these two cards can also be found in the catalog under "Kolecki," "Mullan," and "United States. Army. Corps of Engineers." The arabic numerals indicate "subject head-

MHS Holdings, Rich & Varied

through NCIC for maps covering that precisely identified point, historical researchers will still want to see a map of "Missoula" or of "Hellgate Station." Thus Ms. Otto used commonly known geographic terms as the most frequent extra heading in the catalog.

Because people will want to know which maps will give them information about such historical topics as forts, Indian-white battles, and the Lewis and Clark Expedition, many cards are filed under "subject headings." Especially helpful to the inexperienced researcher, subject headings do have pitfalls; researchers may not use the same terms as catalogers who usually follow Library of Congress (LC) usage. To LC, forts are "fortifications" and highways must appear as "roads."

ings" under which the same map would appear and where maps on the same subject would be filed. "A-63" is the call number indicating which map it is and where it is located.

The subject headings and notes also provide clues to historical features, map size, number of sheets, and technical features, such as landmark contours. A major advantage of having such a complete description is that a researcher can select the appropriate map without having to actually see and handle it.

Subject headings can be misleading in a more fundamental way. The hard truth is that, even with meticulously consistent subject headings and a special effort to supply them, fully 75 per cent of our map holdings that might bear on that subject will not appear under it in the catalog. Subject headings can only supplement, not substitute, for a researcher's ingenuity in ferreting out pertinent maps.

For one thing, the catalog by no means includes all the maps in our collection. Technical maps, which focus on geology or hydrology rather than the historical, are excluded. For another thing, each map represented in the catalog does not have its own card. One map may have fifteen cards, but thousands of maps may be reflected on only a single card. A "series" card, such as the one for 2,300 separate U.S.G.S. quadrangle maps, is sufficient to tell researchers that we have the maps. For the very important and numerous Sanborn fire insurance maps, which contain detailed building descriptions in 200 different Montana communities in 480 map sets, Ms. Otto, to free time for other maps, created one generic description and duplicated it 480 times with individual town names added at the top to identify each set. The description on the card does not exactly fit any one of the sets.

Generally, series entries were used only where they served both catalog and researcher best, but at times the sheer number of maps in a related group forced such an entry and a loss of specific information that could aid the researcher. Fourteen reels of microfilm contain the initial federal surveys of Montana townships. Because these large-scaled maps depict small geographical areas, they show great detail. A researcher can find, for example, the exact location of a long-effaced wagon road laid out in 1868 and trace it from township to township. But suddenly, to his dismay, he looks at the next township to pick up the road's continuation only to find that it has vanished, because that township was not surveyed until fifty years later. The date each township was surveyed is obviously of great import but cannot appear on the series entry that tells researchers that the library has 6,300 maps.

Worse, a cataloger describes only what she has in hand, in this case a microfilm edition filmed only recently, not the originals. The researcher, looking for the surveys under the "author" headings for the Surveyor-General or the General Land Office, because he knows they did the mapping, will find them only under the successor to these agencies, "United States. Bureau of Land Management," because BLM did the filming.

All told, the catalog contains 1,921 main entries and over 12,000 extra entries that represent some 12,500 maps, and 16,700 map sheets, and it does open the way to efficient use of the largest single collection of maps pertinent to the study of Montana history. This unmatched research potential, which the National Archives' Ralph Ehrenberg spotted in 1974, led to the NEH grant. Of the seventeen maps listed in the University of California Bancroft Library's Index to Printed Maps, the Society had copies of all but two broad, regional maps and one other that was a unique manuscript, while of twenty-five older maps randomly selected for comparison, the Bancroft held only one.

The catalog also serves as the most comprehensive bibliography of historical Montana maps available to the researcher today. Vincent K. Shandy's Published Maps of Montana: An Annotated Bibliography (1958) lists federal, state, county, commercial, and privately published maps but emphasizes only those in print at the time of publication. The only guide to historical maps in other Montana repositories at the moment is Constance M. Piquette's Indexed, Annotated Cartobibliography of the University of Montana . . . Historical Map Collection (1983), which lists 373 maps, many for foreign countries.

The Society's collection contains maps that range in time from a later copy of a Blackfeet manuscript map of 1801 to city and county maps published as recently as 1982. About 14 per cent of the main entries are for unique manuscript maps, while another 17 per cent were probably published, but only in a few copies. Montana as it was before 1864 is represented by 5.4 per cent of the entries, while 24.2 per cent deal with Montana's territorial period and 32.3 per cent document the period from 1890 to 1930. The collection is particularly rich in early Montana imprints, territorial and state agency maps, and nineteenth-century federal government maps bearing on Montana.

Perhaps the greatest boon to researchers is the microfiche edition of the catalog, which duplicates the seventeen-drawer card version here at the Society. As part of the NEH project, the Society distributed the microfiche version to thirty-nine selected libraries and historical societies in Montana and the neighboring region, including all branches of the University System and all libraries serving as Public Library Federation regional headquarters. The Library of Congress and the National Cartographic Information Center also received copies. Duplicate copies can be purchased from the Society Library for only $3.00, a bargain result from a long-needed project.

W. Thomas White Wins Paladin Award

Every summer the Editorial Board of Montana undertakes the pleasant but difficult task of selecting the best of the articles published in the preceding four issues. This year, as in previous years, the board chose the best article on the basis of three criteria: 1) readability; 2) research; and 3) contribution to historical knowledge. Named for former editor Vivian A. Paladin, the award is presented each year at the Montana History Conference and carries with it a cash prize and a commemorative gift bowl.

The winner of the Vivian A. Paladin Writing Award for 1983 is W. Thomas White, Curator of the James Jerome Hill Reference Library in St. Paul, Minnesota, for his article in our summer issue, "Paris Gibson, James J. Hill & the New Minneapolis: The Great Falls Water Power and Townsite Company, 1882-1908." White's treatment of Paris Gibson's decades-long effort to make a dynamic city of his town by the Great Falls detailed how Gibson schemed to draw James J. Hill and the "Empire Builder's" influence into his plans. White, utilizing primarily the James J. Hill Papers, explained the complicated business dealings Gibson entered into with Hill over the years to make Great Falls a "New Minneapolis" on the northwestern frontier, and how frustrated Gibson became as one obstacle after another blocked his path.

Tom White accepting Paladin Award from editor Bill Lang.

W. Thomas White received his Ph.D. in history from University of Washington, after taking an M.A. in history from University of Montana. White specializes in railroad labor history and published an article on Montana events during the Pullman Boycott of 1894 in the magazine in 1979.

Recent Donations to the Archives

Two recent donations to the Society Archives document disparate activities in Montana—goldmining and politicking—from two chronologically distant eras—the placer halcyon days and the mid-20th century.

Leif Erickson, former Associate Justice of the Montana Supreme Court, Democratic National Committeeman, two-time gubernatorial candidate in Montana, and the man who defeated Burton K. Wheeler in the Democratic primary election in 1946, has donated a unique scrapbook. Given to him anonymously during his campaign against Wheeler, the scrapbook contains clippings from ultraconservative publications that applauded Wheeler's anti-war and isolationist pronouncements. The anonymous compiler evidently gathered the material to document what he believed to be Wheeler's traitorous collaborations and anti-semitic beliefs.

Mr. Q.H. Hale of LaCrosse, Wisconsin, and his three daughters, Mrs. Jane Utterback, Mrs. Molly Olsen, and Mrs. Helen Thiesen recently donated the letters of John Barnes Wilson, father of Mr. Hale's late wife, Helen Wilson Hale. Wilson mined at Blackfoot City, Montana, and wrote letters home to his brother James in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, describing the brothers' joint goldmining operation at Blackfoot City. The letters, which cover the period 1871-1883, include detailed descriptions of mining equipment, modes of transporting water to the mines, labor problems, and difficulties in trying to sell the mine after John Wilson's health deteriorated.

Marianne Keddington, Asst. Editor

After a lengthy search and sorting through dozens of applications, we have selected Marianne Keddington as the new Assistant Editor for Montana the Magazine of Western History. She joins our staff to edit Montana Post, assist in editing the magazine, and assist with editorial duties at the Montana Historical Society Press, which includes sitting on the MHS Press Advisory Committee.

A graduate of University of Utah, with degrees in literature and education, Ms. Keddington comes to us from Bozeman, where she has worked for the last three years as chief editor for the Political Economy Research Center, a private research firm. At Montana State University, where she also served as editor for the Center for Political Economy and Natural Resources, she taught courses in technical writing for the Speech and Communications Department.

Ms. Keddington has solid experience in a number of areas that make her an especially important addition to our staff. Before coming to Montana, Marianne was Director of Publications for the International Development Institute at Indiana University in Bloomington, Indiana. There she directed research and publications, supervising all aspects of editorial and production work. She also has experience in book editing, newsletter writing, and typesetting.

As a westerner with a fascination for regional history, she has developed a keen interest in Montana's rich heritage. "History is personal with so many of us from the West," Keddington remarked, "and it is no different with me. My interest in history comes from the stories told in our family about the early days in Utah and the struggles of the pioneers. Montana has a similar frontier history. I have wanted to get back to editing literature and history, and this position is just perfect for that. I know that working with the resources at hand here will be exciting."

Two of Montana History's Best Friends Are Gone

by Vivian A. Paladin

The year 1983 brought an end to the lives and careers of two extraordinary historians whose impact on Montana, this institution, the writing of the history of the American West and the odyssey of many in the field, including this writer, can hardly be overdrawn. It seems appropriate here to write, in a sort of informal tandem, a tribute to the contributions of Ernest S. Osgood (1888-1983) and Robert G. Athearn (1914-1983), two of the most erudite and exciting teachers and writers of Trans-Mississippi West history.

The two men were not only close personal friends, but also represented two generations of historians—teacher and pupil. Dr. Osgood, a native of Lynn, Massachusetts, graduated from Dartmouth College in 1912 and came directly to Helena, Montana, where he taught history at Helena High School for a decade. After earning a Ph.D. in history from University of Wisconsin in 1927, he went immediately to University of Minnesota, where he began a thirty-year tenure as a Professor of History.

Two years after Ernest Osgood began teaching at Helena High School, Robert G. Athearn was born in Kremlin, Montana, a small town on the Great Northern Railroad near Havre. After taking an undergraduate degree from Northern Montana College in Havre, Bob found it easier to board the Great Northern and go to University of Minnesota than to "work one's way down the ladder of roads to the state university at Missoula."

Athearn soon found himself in Osgood's history seminars at Minnesota. As Bob said in his presidential address to the Western History Association in 1971, Dr. Osgood was the Pied Piper. "We followed him westward," Athearn said, "unquestioningly and even devoutly. From a practical standpoint, he knew his stuff, in that he instinctively ferreted out one's interest and then pulled out all the stops to bring forth any latent historial desires that lay sleeping beneath the surface."

Dr. Osgood, in effect, bestowed upon Bob Athearn his profession. After taking his Ph.D. in 1947, Athearn began his career of thirty-five years at University of Colorado. Here, as can be attested by many historians working in the field today, Bob was the Pied Piper, much as Osgood had been for him. Athearn's seminars, rife with excitement, argumentation and enthusiasm, infected a new generation of historians.

These historians have honored him most by worthy careers of their own in teaching and writing; their regard for Bob took tangible form early this year with the appearance of A Taste of the West, a compilation of ten essays on western history written by his "cubs" and published by Pruett Press in Boulder. Duane Smith, one of the contributors, edited the whole and was kind enough to ask this writer to do the introduction, an assignment that was more fun than work.

Earnest Osgood, who retired from the faculty at Wooster College in Wooster, Ohio, in 1970, was as loathe as his "cub," Bob Athearn, to give up his association with western history and those he had guided along its path. Since his first encounter with Montana, he nurtured a passion for its land and people. Until 1978, he and his historian wife, Helen, made yearly pilgrimages to their special cabin on Alice Creek, near Lincoln, Montana.

It was during those years, in the 1970s, that this writer, then editor of Montana the Magazine of Western History, came to know this extraordinary man and had the opportunity to publish some of his unforgettable writings, especially those about the Lewis and Clark Expedition. More importantly, there was also an opportunity to profit from his no-nonsense and still exciting approach to history.

In 1966, I came to know in an even more practical, workaday manner, the personality and professionalism of Bob Athearn. For a number of years, he had been book review editor for Montana, and when I succeeded to the editorial chair in 1966, he agreed to stay on, and he did until 1978.

The extra dimension both these historians brought to their profession has been evident to all who have known them, as teachers, colleagues, writers or editors. Both possessed the ability to cut through the mundane and the tiresome, to the "meat" and sheer drama of history. Both possessed remarkable gifts for communication, whether in the seminar or on the printed page. Neither could have achieved so much had it not been for their addiction to history, an addiction they happily passed on to so many others.

Harriott in Public Relations Position

The number of programs, exhibits, outside projects, traveling exhibits, conferences, and other public events sponsored by the Society have increased significantly in recent years. Getting the word out on all of this has become a job that demands professional attention. With that in mind, the Society has recently moved Bev Harriott from her former position as assistant in the Education Department to the newly created Public Relations Officer position.

Mrs. Harriott worked for several years at both high schools in Helena before spending five years in Maryland, where she gained valuable experience on a magazine staff and in the offices of a major textbook publisher.

Her duties, which include writing press releases, coordinating all publicity, arranging for newspaper, radio, and TV coverage, and generally keeping track of activities in the Society, plunge her into what she regards as fascinating work. "I have a great interest in history," Mrs. Harriott commented, "and working with the talented people here at the Society—especially given the opportunity to write—makes this a very enjoyable job."

Archives to Process Holter Papers

In October, the Montana Historical Society Archives received a generous donation from the Holter Research Foundation of Helena. The Foundation not only donated its extensive records, but also pledged funds to employ a professional archivist to process this special collection.

The Holter Research Foundation, founded by the late Dr. Norman J. Holter, conducted research in biotelemetry, nuclear medicine and biophysics from the 1940s until 1983 at the Holter Laboratory located in Helena.

"For a small, private foundation," archivist Sue Jackson commented, "the Holter Research Foundation made remarkably important contributions to science and medicine. These records reflect the broad spectrum of Dr. Holter's scientific interests and represent the first major scientific collection we have received in the Society Archives. We are fortunate that Mrs. Joan Holter and the Foundation have donated these materials to us."

Processing this valuable collection will involve the sorting, evaluating, organizing and describing of more than 60 cubic feet of records. The project, which will also produce an inventory and an index that will aid researchers, will take from fourteen months to two years to complete. The Archives hopes to have an archivist on staff and working on the collection by March 1, 1984. Applications for the archivist position will be accepted until January 16, 1984.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster Send address changes to Montana Historical Society Capital Station Helena MT 59620

¶ from the Editor's File

¶ The Butte Historical Society has been very active over the last several years, sponsoring conferences, helping to preserve Butte's historic buildings, organizing an archives, and actively promoting the study of Butte and southwest Montana history. Their work has garnered them some much deserved recognition. The American Association for State and Local History bestowed one of their Certificate of Commendation awards on the Butte Historical Society at the AASLH annual meeting in Victoria, B.C. in September. AASLH boasts a membership of 8,000 individuals and institutions in the United States and Canada and has been presenting awards annually since 1944.

The award-winning society will soon launch yet another important project in Butte when it commences publishing The Speculator, a semi-annual historical journal that will concentrate on the history of Butte and southwest Montana. The first issue is due by late December. The Speculator will be forty-eight pages in length and present articles written by professional and amateur writers. The Butte Historical Society is taking subscriptions at $10 per year; write Butte Historical Society, P.O. Box 3913, Butte 59702.

¶ In the last issue of the Post we somehow contrived to move a Society donor to another state! The donation, two exceptional illustrated Russell letters, is an important addition to our collections, and the Society is very appreciative. The donation is from Mrs. Carrie McDowell and family in memory of Sam E. "Sarpy Sam" McDowell. The McDowell family lives in Joliet, Montana, not Joliet, Illinois, as earlier reported. "Sam McDowell truly treasured his letters from Charlie Russell," a family member writes, "and we, his family, were pleased to donate them to the Montana Historical Society."

¶ Even in the cold days of January in 1885 the officers of the law in Helena could be merciless. One vagrant, by report in the local paper, objected to his sentence of working on the city streets after he had been found guilty of obscene and aggressive behavior in a local pub. The marshal then took corrective action and tied the poor soul to a post—with a ball and chain—at the corner of Wood and Main streets. A couple of days of bread and water, the chill of January in Montana, and the hoots of passersby convinced the man to shoulder a pick and shovel.

¶ Those interested in the history of women in the West will want to take note of a conference to be held in Park City, Utah, July 11-14, 1984. Organizers of this meeting, sponsored by the Institute of the American West, have issued a call for papers, presentations and workshop proposals to fill out their conference program. They especially encourage primary, secondary and post-secondary teachers to submit proposals. Send proposals to Institute of the American West, P.O. Box 655, Sun Valley, Idaho 83353.

Newell Gough Receives Award

Newell Gough, Jr. received the Montana Historical Society Board of Trustees award for Contributions to Montana History at the Tenth Annual Montana History Conference in October. Mr. Gough, senior partner in the Helena law firm of Gough, Booth, Shanahan & Johnson, is a native of Missoula and a graduate of University of Montana Law School. Governor Hugo Aronson appointed Mr. Gough to the Montana Historical Society's Board of Trustees in January 1957, and he served in that capacity for twenty-one years.

He also served the Society as its legal counselor for many years and was involved, with the late E.E. "Boo" MacGilvra, in establishing the Heritage Foundation in the 1960s as a non-profit organization to aid in preserving Montana history. Newell Gough also worked on behalf of the Society in behind-the-scenes efforts that brought donations of artifacts to the Society. These contributions and his unflagging support over the years brought Mr. Gough this much deserved honor.

Newell Gough, MHS Director Bob Archibald, and Trustee Mike Malone.

Archives Gets Help From Mining History Specialists

When the Society Archives recently received the massive, 800-cubic-foot Anaconda Copper Mining Records, containing hundreds of thousands of documents from the 1890s to the 1960s, they knew that processing would be time consuming and complicated by the highly technical nature of the materials, and their preliminary work confirmed it. With folders labeled "Reverberatory Charge Calculations," "Concentrator Overflow Treatment," or "Shipments of Silver Slimes" staring at them from box upon box in the collection, they decided to call in experts in the field of mining technology to help determine which of the records are of value in studying the history of the copper industry.

The Archives, through a grant from the National Historic Publications and Records Commission, has contracted with two specialists. Larry Lankton, Professor of the History of Technology at Michigan Technical University, spent a full week in October reviewing the collection from his viewpoint as a historian of mining technology. The second specialist, Robert Corbett, will spend portions of the next few months evaluating the materials. Corbett, retired Vice-President of the Anaconda Company who spent forty years with the company in many different phases of Anaconda operations, will bring his knowledge of the inner workings of the company to bear on the relevancy of the records.

S
978.6
H6m
vol. 21, #3
Aug-Sept.
1983

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST
® REGISTERED TRADEMARK

Vol. 21, No. 3 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Aug.-Sept. 1983

Haynes Exhibit Opens

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTIO
OCT 3 1 1983
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Governor Ted Schwinden, Isabel Haynes, Trustees President George O'Connor and Burlington Northern Vice-Chairman Tom O'Leary (top photo) prepare for official ribbon-cutting and watch, with Society Director Robert Archibald looking on, Mrs. Haynes cut the strip (right photo). Over 300 guests walked through the new exhibit (lower photo) on opening night.

F. Jay Haynes
PHOTOGRAPHER
F. Jay Haynes
PHOTOGRAPHER
Contemporaries
Jackson
Carleton Watkins
Andrew Russell

The sounds of the Spokane Brass Band playing marches one might have heard at the Last Spike celebration at Gold Creek, Montana Territory, in 1883, and the impersonation of Helena's mayor in 1883, T. H. Kleinschmidt, were part of the gala opening of the F. Jay Haynes Exhibit at the Montana Historical Society, Wednesday evening, September 14. The completion of the exhibit, the publication of Northern Pacific Views, and the commemoration of the centennial of the completion of the Northern Pacific Railroad were all celebrated.

The program began with the master of ceremonies, Dr. Rex Myers of Western Montana College playing T. H. Kleinschmidt, bidding all to join in a melding of the past and the present, as the new exhibit and book illuminate and document the work of a remarkable photographer and a century of the railroad's involvement in the development of Montana.

Board of Trustees President George O'Connor, Montana Governor Ted Schwinden, Bulington Northern Inc. Vice-Chairman Tom O'Leary, and Society Director Robert Archibald delivered opening remarks on the occasion of opening the exhibit, while the Spokane Brass Band played appropriate fanfare. Each speaker in turn paid tribute to the Haynes family and especially to Isabel Haynes, widow of Jack Ellis Haynes, who generously donated the Haynes Foundation Collection to the Society in 1978. Mrs. Haynes, as the speakers noted, has shown remarkable public spiritedness in depositing at the Society the unique materials her family generated and collected over the years.

Isabel Haynes graciously responded to the accolades by complimenting the Society trustees, director and staff on the superb manner in which the materials are being used and exhibited. Mrs. Haynes commented that depositing the collection at the Society was important to her because there is assurance that they will be maintained properly and will be available for generations of Montanans to use and see.

Northern Pacific Views
author, Edward Nolan

Northern Pacific Views author, Edward W. Nolan, followed with a description of the book and the nature of the research behind the volume. The work of archivists, photo technician John Smart, and the publications staff produced the book. In a genuine way, Nolan explained, the book reflects a group effort on the part of the Society and MHS Press.

As Nolan pointed out, F. Jay Haynes was a very private man who left few records about his feelings toward the craft and art of photography. Haynes was, Nolan commented, a man who brought a new technology to the West and exploited the region in a way that was much different from the trappers, miners, and agriculturalists. The result of his work as Northern Pacific's "Official Photographer" provides historians with an unexcelled documentation of a western railroad and its impact on the West.

The Spokane Brass Band announced the ribbon-cutting with familiar sounds of the William Tell Overture, as Mrs. Haynes cut through the ceremonial strip, officially opening the exhibit to well over 300 guests.

The exhibit, which begins with an introduction to F. Jay Haynes and his contemporaries, takes visitors through the major phases of his career. Panels, life-size photo murals, mannequins, reconstructions of Haynes' Fargo, Dakota, studio, his Palace Studio Car and a typical Northern Pacific depot highlight the 3800-foot exhibit.

The Society museum staff has worked for over one year to create the Haynes Exhibition, which also includes an appended Haynes Auditorium for formal lectures and audio/visual presentations. Artifacts from the Haynes Collection, including several cameras used by Haynes, are placed throughout the exhibit, along with many of the photographer's best views of Montana and the West. Also in the exhibit are sections on Jack Ellis Haynes, F. Jay Haynes' son and successor as the premier photographer in Yellowstone, and the family's Yellowstone National Park business.

"The Haynes Exhibit," Society Director Archibald commented, "is an example of what the Society aspires to in the future in museum exhibits, library and archives services, educational programs, and publications. We welcome all Montanans and visitors to the state to come to Helena and see the new exhibit."

Montana History Teachers and Society Plan New Projects

The initial meeting of the Society's Education Advisory Committee, composed of ten social studies teachers from across the state, met on June 18 in Helena. Funded in part by a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the meeting was held to discuss and plan publications, audio-visual materials, field trips, and other aids to the teaching of Montana History in the schools. In content and concept, according to Education Curator Jennifer Thompson, the meeting was a success and led to formalizing a team approach to program planning among educators in the classroom and educators at the Society.

The members of the Education Advisory Committee are: Ken Ballagh (Gardiner); Bruce Campbell (Helena); Nancy Eby (Billings); Mary Horstman (Deer Lodge); Keith Jensen (Froid); Dave Lubick (Butte); Lorraine Randall (Lewistown); Jim Scalf (Kalispell); Mike Shook (Stevensville); and Judy Stephenson (Judith Gap).

Joining the Committee as consultants were Dr. Richard Roeder of Montana State University and Dr. Rex Myers of Western Montana College. Laurie Mercier, Barbara Fifer, Bill Lang, and Jennifer Thompson of the Society staff also participated in the meeting. The session was taped and a 100-page transcript is available (for a nominal fee) to those who are interested.

In January, the Society sent a questionnaire to social studies teachers across the state, querying them about what kinds of materials would aid them in teaching Montana history. The results of the questionnaire indicated that teachers most desired workbook-style publications and audio-visual materials. They also expressed interest in field trips for teachers and a lecture series. Working with these suggestions, the Committee suggested a publication format and audio-visual programs and discussed plans for field trips and lectures.

The Society's Education Department hopes to offer a publication that will serve as a supplement to other classroom materials by summer 1984. The publication as currently planned, will include four or five articles on Montana history, literature, arts, and current events.

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
[406] 449-2694
ISSN 0047-7958

Written and edited by William L. Lang as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.
The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

Tenth Annual Montana History Conference in Helena

The Tenth Annual Montana History Conference will be held in Helena, October 27-29, 1983, at the Montana Historical Society, the Colonial Inn, and Carroll College. Sponsored by the Society and funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the conference will begin at the Society on Thursday evening, October 27, with registration open at 6:00 p.m.

Before the official opening of the conference, there will be two workshops offered, one by the Society and a second by the Montana Oral History Association. The Society's "Small Museum Workshop" will begin at 9:00 a.m. on Thursday at the Society and conclude by 12:00 noon. The museum workshop will cover the basics of museum operation and be directed primarily and those individuals who are considering beginning a small museum. The MOHA's "Perspectives on Family Heritage" workshop, which will focus on using oral history in genealogical research, begins at 1:30 at the Colonial Inn and will conclude by 5:30 p.m. The MOHA will hold its annual meeting just prior to the workshop, from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., also in the Colonial Inn.

Thursday evening at the Society, beginning at 6:30 p.m., Helena author Jean Baucus will present an illustrated lecture in the Haynes Auditorium, "Helena's Residential Architecture." Following the lecture, pre-registered tour guests will board shuttle buses for tours of three historic Helena homes. Tour buses will run on a regular schedule, beginning at 7:30 and concluding the tours by 10:00 p.m.

Conference sessions and panels will begin on Friday morning, October 28, at the Colonial Inn. A panel discussion on the use of primary resources in historical research, meeting from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., will feature Society archivist Sue Jackson, archives volunteer Joan Bishop, Carroll College professor Robert Swartout, Society reference librarian Dave Walter, and contract researcher Glenda Bradshaw. The panel will discuss the problems and potential in archival research.

Meeting on Friday morning, from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m., Dr. Rex Myers of Western Montana College, Ed Butcher of Winnifred, Montana, and Dr. John Hudson of Northwestern University will discuss the importance of the coming of the Northern Pacific Railroad to Montana. Their presentation will deal with economic impact of the railroad, the question of timber depredations, and the role played in settlement along the mainline.

One panel discussion and two sessions will take up the majority of Friday afternoon. A panel devoted to the problems of identifying, preserving and using local history records will meet from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., and include presentations by Society archivist Bill Summers, Dr. Paula Petrik of Montana State University, Lewis and Clark County Clerk and Recorder Sue Bartlett, and Missoula County Records Manager Jim Dopp. The panelists will explain how important local records are becoming to social historians and how best to find them, maintain them and put them to use.

The first of two afternoon sessions will deal with the impact of World War II on Montana. Dr. C. Van West of Helena, librarian Karen Fischer of Montana State University, retired mining engineer Clarence Wendel, and Earl Old Person of Browning will discuss how the war affected Blackfeet people, copper miners and Montanans who trained sled dogs for wartime use. The session will run from 1:30 to 3:15 p.m.

The second Friday afternoon session, beginning at 3:30 and concluding at 5:00 p.m., will probe several aspects of Montana's sheep raising business. Hugo Turek of Coffee Creek, Montana, Jim Drummond of Bozeman, Art Christiansen of Dillon, and Lloyd Eikum of Minneapolis, will talk about everything from the history of the Montana Woolgrowers Association to how wool and sheep are marketed. The Friday afternoon sessions will be capped with the showing of a film, "On the Cowboy Trail," from 5:00 to 6:00 p.m. The film is a documentary about traditional and modern ranching operations in the Tongue River country of Montana and Wyoming.

Mary Blew

Saturday's workshops, meetings, and sessions will be held at Carroll College. The morning workshop, which will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., will address the subject of teaching Montana history in the schools. Society Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, and classroom teachers Joyce Decker of Ronan, Bob Anderson from Helena, Dick Corne from Bozeman, JoAnne St. Martin and Marie Marres from Great Falls, will explain how audio/visul programs, oral history resources, Native Americans study materials, artifacts, and maps can be utilized to best advantage.

The history of Montana's treatment of the state's natural resources is the subject of Saturday morning's session, which will begin at 9:00 and end at 11:00 a.m. Dr. Duane Hampton of University of Montana, Joan Brownell of Montana State University, retired forest ranger Thurman Trosper, Dr. Edward Bingler of Montana Tech, and Bill Cunningham of the Montana Wilderness Association, will comprise the panel. They will discuss how first the territory and then the state of Montana dealt with wildlife, mineral resources, wilderness regions, and timber resources on Indian reservations.

Concluding the conference on Saturday afternoon will be a session on the history and traditions of the Archie Bray Foundation, and a tour of the Foundation (west of Helena) to follow the session. Society Curator of Collections Patty Dean, Judge Peter Meloy of Helena, Ralph Esposito of Carroll College, and Francis Senska of Bozeman will discuss the great traditions of pottery, ceramics and other artistic endeavors that have made the Archie Bray Foundation an important cultural resource in Montana. Foundation Director Kurt Weiser will conduct the tour from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. for a limited number of preregistered tour guests.

This year the conference features three speakers at two luncheons and an evening banquet. Dr. John C. Hudson of Northwestern University, an expert in rural settlement patterns on the northern plains, will address the Friday luncheon on the topic of the growth of towns along the Northern Pacific mainline. This is the centennial year of the completion of the Northern Pacific and Prof. Hudson's address promises to explain how the railroad laid out, promoted and aided settlement in those trackside towns.

Dr. Mary Blew, Dean of Arts and Sciences at Northern Montana College in Havre and a noted regional writer, is the featured speaker at the Friday evening banquet. Dr. Blew, whose work is familiar to many and is the author of Lambing Out and Other Stories (1977), will speak on the influence of Montana history and culture in the writing of fiction.

The Saturday luncheon, which will be at Carroll College, will feature an experience in living history when Jeanne Eder, Coordinator of Indian Studies at Eastern Montana College, goes into costume and role-playing as Waheenee, Buffalo Bird Woman. Waheenee, a Hidatsa speaking as an Indian woman in 1910, is played by Ms. Eder with the added ingredient of audience participation. For additional information contact Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Curator of Education, at the Society.

Sights on the Centennial:

Editor's Note: In communities across Montana, this is a time for centennials and diamond jubilees. It is also time for long-range plans for celebrations of the centennial of statehood in 1989. This is the second of four pieces, written by Society staff, offering ideas and suggestions on ways to commemorate local history with programs and projects having lasting value.

Publishing Local History

by William L. Lang

"Let's publish a book." This is one of the first impulses local history groups have when the subject of centennial celebrations is raised. Everyone is enthusiastic about the idea and the eagerness to work on the project is nearly contagious. But as many local historians can verify—especially anyone who helped produce one of the fine Bicentennial histories—publishing a book is hard work. What's more, the work is often frustrating, confusing, and full of hidden snags that trip you up when you are the least suspecting. But the effort is all worth it; the satisfaction of seeing your book in print is difficult to match.

All of the "surprises" that one encounters in publishing cannot be eliminated, but careful planning and taking some basic precautions can help you avoid most pitfalls. There are many "do's" and "don'ts" that will give any group a headstart in publishing local history, whether the project is a pamphlet or a book.

Before looking at the "do's" and "don'ts" however, a question we should ask is who is responsible for the publication. All too often committees attempt to write books; the results are often disastrous. One caveat, then, is to avoid producing your publication with a group in charge rather than one individual.

Publishing projects need to have one person in a position to make final decisions. And the larger group must accede to those decisions. This individual, the editor, should assign the writing to members of the committee, review the written work, edit, and oversee the production. Members of the committee should serve as writers, typists, photographers, researchers, and compilers of materials for the book. In effect, the committee becomes the author and the editor manages the entire project.

GETTING STARTED

The first order of business is defining your purpose. Regardless of the format—tour booklet, a pamphlet describing an historic site, a small publication, or a book—it is essential that the purpose of the publication be clearly outlined and understood by everyone involved. There is nothing worse than realizing, one third of the way through your project, that you are unsure of just what you intended in the first place. Then you are lost, without a charted course to follow:

There are several questions that should be asked at the outset: Is the publication to be offered for sale? Is it to be aimed at the general public, only a limited audience, or tourists? Is it to be a full-scale history of a specific subject or geographical area, such as a community or city district? Is it intended to be primarily a picture book, or is it to be a narrative history?

Answering these and other questions will help define what you expect the publication to accomplish. Being realistic about your publication goals is the best guide throughout the project. A pictorial community history that is written for the tourist audience, for example, cannot be expected to answer the local historian's questions about specific historical developments. And such a book will necessitate a much different format than, for example, a narrative history of area ranching operations. Everything involved in the publication, from the gathering of information to the writing style and size of the book, is affected by what it is intended to do. Time spent on this phase of your project will be repaid many times over.

PLANNING

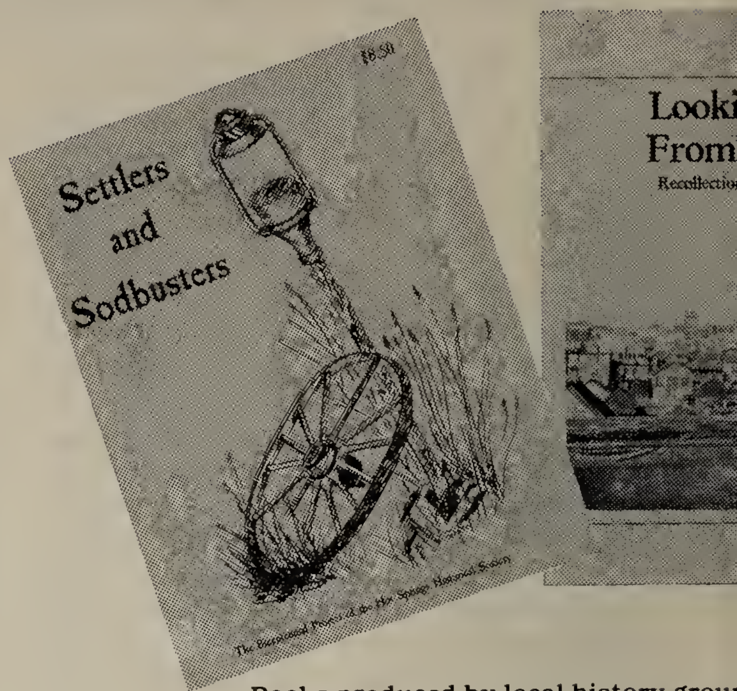
If there is one rule in publishing, it is that all of the allotted time (and often more) will be consumed. Deadlines, which at first look quite distant, seem to rush up with frightening speed—and they are numerous. The best way to handle deadlines, of course, is to be be prepared and this means planning.

Once you have identified the project (let's use a 100-page community history to be written for a general audience as our example), the next step is to determine the general range of the book's contents. A narrative community history, if it covers the full story of the town's settlement and growth, entails the discussion of many subjects and the chronicling of several decades of activity. How thorough should such a book be? Should you attempt to mention every development? Only the most important? What seem to be the most important and interesting subjects in your community's history? Does more information exist on some subjects than others? How much can you expect to cover in 100 pages? How many chapters will be needed to tell the story? Answering questions such as these will help you to define the book's contents, but also be sure to keep the overall purpose of your book well in mind.

To produce your book you need a schedule—as specific a listing of the tasks to be accomplished as you can write with deadlines attached to each task. The tasks, which in most cases need to be completed in sequential order are: tentative organization of the book by prospective chapters; assignment of researchers and writers to work on specific chapters; identification and gathering of illustrations and photographs that might be used (good maps are often the most difficult to find or create); acquisitions of permissions for use of photos and other materials; editing of the chapter manuscripts; writing captions for photographs; making up page layouts; prepare all materials for delivery to the printer. Each of these steps includes many smaller tasks, but establishing deadlines for the completion of each step will keep order in the process. It is always prudent to build in some extra time into the schedule at each step.



Books produced by local history grou

The next order of business is to determine how long the book will be, what type of paper and binding will be used, approximately how many photographs and other illustrations might be used, and what physical size you prefer. Each of these elements affects the book's cost and production time. With these decisions made, you can approach a printer with book specifications and obtain an estimate of printing costs and how much time you need to allot for printing and binding.

To set your book production schedule, begin with the date you want finished books to be in your hands and work backwards, starting with the printer's estimate of the time necessary to print and bind the book. For each step leading to the printing phase, allow yourself at least as much time as that allocated to printing. Now, with a work schedule made up, be prepared to be flexible. Adjustments in the schedule may have to be made several times before the project is completed. The importance of having the schedule is to assure that you have a plan and that you can measure your progress at any time in the process.

CHOOSING MATERIALS

The first choices are determined by the nature of the book. A 100-page volume that is planned to contain seventy pages of text and fifty or more photographs requires a careful choice of the paper to be used.

Publishing Local History

Hot Springs, Butte and Nashua.

Printers can help you out with this choice. Higher grades of paper, especially coated paper, may be more than you need. If high quality reproduction of photographs is very important for your publication, however, using coated paper is advisable.

Hardbound books cost a great deal more to produce than softbound volumes, but if durability is desired, the extra expense may well be worth it. Hardbounds can be covered with either cloth or paper—another choice that affects cost—and softbounds can be either stitched and glued or merely glued together and the variety of covering available ranges from thin paper to durable plastic compounds.

Obtaining the best illustrative materials is always a problem. The best source for photographs—either historical or contemporary—is a good quality glossy print. Prints that are copies of copies often reproduce poorly. Avoid using photographic prints or printed pictures from magazines, newspapers, or books. All illustrations will likely be covered by copyright, whether they are drawings, photographs, or maps. Be sure to obtain permission to use each illustration, and also be certain to credit the source somewhere in the book.

Choosing the correct illustrations takes care and thought. Too often good books are spoiled because the pictures accompanying the text are either inappropriate or poorly identified. It is worth the extra effort to search for photographs that will achieve the desired result. Also, spend a little time researching the photograph, including who took the picture, where it was taken, the names of the individuals in the photo, and other facts relevant to the picture. The information will guarantee better, more informative captions.

WRITING AND EDITING

Writers should strive for clarity. Narrative history must tell the story in direct terms, using factual information and a prose style that encourages reading. Editorializing or polemical writing has no place in a community history. Including legends or "tall tales," of course, lends appropriate "color" to any history, but readers need to be assured that the history published in your book is documented, and is, in fact, accurate. Legends and tall tales should be identified as such if they are included.

Who should write the book? This is a question that is often one of the first that needs to be answered. Generally, it is best to keep the number of writers at a minimum. It is difficult to edit the work of several writers and produce a single narrative that holds together and reads well. Dividing up the writing chores, however, works well when each author is assigned a specific chapter or subject. If several authors contribute to the book, be sure to give them fairly tight word limits and encourage them to stick to their subjects.

Authors should keep their writing purpose in mind as they gather information and begin to put words on paper. They should outline their subject, assign a word limit to each section of their outline, and write in a clear and uncluttered style. The finished chapter should proceed easily and clearly from topic to topic, with more detail and discussion given over to those events that had the greatest historical importance. Writing at great length on trivia or very minor events, while skimping on the more important developments, does little to explain your community's history.

In the stack of small reminders for authors, a couple of items deserve comment. One of the most overlooked aspects of writing local and community history is the need to be precise about geographical locations, people and their biographies, and physical descriptions of places. Authors often assume that everyone knows where "dry gulch" is or where the hardware store used to be or when the Jones family moved to town, when in fact, they do not. Another obvious, but often forgotten, detail is the failure to check and re-check dates, people's names, and place names.

When editing the work of several authors, the guide should again be clarity. Changes should be made in syntax and style when easier and clearer reading are served. Editors should avoid rewriting simply to suit their own personal tastes; a light editorial touch is much preferred to a heavy one.

PRODUCTION AND MARKETING

Preparing the book for the printer involves many steps. A clear copy of the text, with as few handwritten additions and notes as possible, makes typesetting much easier, and that means fewer errors. The printer can help you choose the best typeface for your book, including the size and weight. All illustrations, especially photographs, need to be as clean and sharp as possible. All materials must be together and properly prepared before delivery to the printer; avoid giving the printer only a portion of the book at a time.

The printing and binding cannot be rushed if you desire high quality, but it pays you to be very diligent in requesting progress reports from the printer. Printers expect you to inquire about the job. Most printers will require, and you should demand, that proofs of all type, photographs, and page layouts be checked for accuracy before any printing is undertaken. Take extra care in going over those proofs, because it is your only guarantee that what you want will be printed.

Marketing and distributing the finished product is often a task that is left to the last and is given little thought. More than one good book has faded into obscurity because no one knew it existed or was for sale. Long before the printing is begun, you should determine the retail selling price, select the most likely outlets for your book, and consider what discount you can afford to offer retailers. Retail booksellers must have a discount, anywhere from 20 percent to 50 percent, before they will carry a book.

If you want to distribute the book yourself, (perhaps through a local historical society or by arrangement with a community group) your sales will likely be fewer, but you will receive a higher return per book sold. Offering the book at pre-publication discount, or offering a discount for a limited length of time after the book is first published, can stimulate sales. Marketing books, however, is a specialized business. If you want to maximize sales, it is best to contract with an organization that markets books as a business. When the book is completed and in your hands, there is the matter of copyright. Books and other literary productions, under the new copyright laws, are automatically protected, but it is a good idea to formally register the book with the copyright office in the Library of Congress. They will send you the proper forms upon request. Again, however, a word of caution—be sure that you have permissions for use for all of the photographs, maps, and other materials in your book.

Publishing local history is a challenge, but you will be more than repaid for your effort. There is a great satisfaction in producing books. You will learn more than you thought possible about your community and region, and your book will educate your neighbors. Keep your purpose well in mind, stay with your plan, keep your eye on the details, and enjoy the satisfaction of creating a pamphlet, tour guide, or book for your centennial celebration.

Northern Pacific Views Published by Montana Historical Society Press

When the Northern Pacific Railroad began its final phase of construction across the northern plains in the mid-1870s, they contracted with several photographers to produce promotional views of the country along the mainline. One of those photographers, F. Jay Haynes of Moorhead, Minnesota, gave the Northern Pacific what they wanted and by 1876 Haynes began providing the railroad with photographs on a regular basis. Soon he became the railroad's "Official Photographer." For nearly thirty years, Haynes took pictures all along the railroad's mainline and branch lines. The result was an unparalleled visual documentation of the opening of the Northwest, from railroad engines and rolling stock to depots, towns, farms and western landscapes.

Northern Pacific Views
The Railroad Photography of F. Jay Haynes, 1876-1905
by Edward W. Nolan

The Montana Historical Society Press, utilizing the negatives in the Haynes Foundation Collection, has just published Northern Pacific Views: The Railroad Photography of F. Jay Haynes, 1876-1905. Funded by a generous grant from Burlington Northern Inc., the book describes the mutually beneficial business relationship that developed between the Northern Pacific and F. Jay Haynes, and it is the product of a cooperative effort that utilized the talents of Society staff in the Photo Archives, Archives and Publications departments.

Edward W. Nolan, author of the book, researched the Haynes photographs and manuscripts housed here at the Society, the Haynes manuscripts at Montana State University, and the Northern Pacific Railroad Company records at the Minnesota Historical Society. The story that emerged from Nolan's research tells of a nearly chance arrangement between photographer and railroad and the importance of Northern Pacific's General Passenger Agent in St. Paul, Charles S. Fee, in the ongoing business partnership that Haynes enjoyed.

The book presents that story along with 197 of Haynes' best railroad photographs. The photographs, which were reproduced from direct contact prints from the glass plate negatives by Society Photo Technician John Smart especially for this book, are presented in 200-line fine screen duotone format. Northern Pacific Views also includes index, bibiliography, and a listing of the Haynes photographs appearing the volume.

The book is available by mail order from the Society. Although the retail price has been set at $24.95, Montana Historical Society members may purchase the book for $19.95 (please include $2.00 for shipping) until December 31, 1983. Address all book orders to: R. Wynkoop, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, 59620.

Haines Donates Calfee Stereographs to Photo Archives

Aubrey L. Haines, author of the two-volume history of Yellowstone National Park, The Yellowstone Story, (1977), recently donated to the Society's Photo Archives sixty-three stereographs taken in the 1870s and 1880s by Montana photographer Henry Bird Calfee.

During the course of his research on the history of Yellowstone, Haines collected information about and photographs by early-day photographers of the Park. Although Calfee was one among many (other early Yellowstone photographers include J. S. Crissman and W. H. Jackson of the Hayden Surveys; Thomas J. Hine, Chicago; Thomas H. Rutter, Butte; and C. R. Savage, Salt Lake City) Haines quickly discovered that Calfee was a "much more important photographer" than anyone had thought. He began to collect Calfee stereographs in earnest, making possible his large donation to the Photo Archives. With the exception of a few photos of Crow Indians, the Haines donation is made up of Yellowstone scenes.

Photograph Curator Lory Morrow notes that "these priceless images are historically significant, not only for their content, but also because relatively few of Calfee's photographs appear to have survived."

Calfee came to Montana Territory in 1867 and for several years worked as a painter, prospector, and miner. According to M. A. Leeson's History of Montana (1885), "Having a natural taste for art and photography [Calfee] gave his attention to that and for the past . . . years has been engaged in making sketches and views of the natural scenery in the Territory, mostly in the National Park."

A resident of Bozeman and, later, Missoula, Calfee sold all manner of art through his studios, including oil paintings, lithographs, picture frames, and his own photographs. Historian Haines notes that Calfee's stereographs were also sold through the mail and by railroad news agents on the Union Pacific Railroad. Calfee's name also graces Yellowstone National Park, denoting a beautiful stream that drains into the Lamar River from the crest of the Absaroka Mountains.

Henry Bird Calfee stereograph of Grotto Geyser in Yellowstone National Park

Illustrated Russell Letter Donated

C.M. Russell's letter to Sarpy Sam McDowell

In 1926 Charlie Russell wrote to "Sarpy Sam" McDowell in praise of McDowell's poem "In Memory of the Cayuse," a poem inspired by Sarp's anguish at the ruthless slaughtering of wild horses on the Montana and Wyoming ranges. Sarp McDowell invited Russell, then living in California, to come up for a visit, but Russell had to decline. The second letter Russell wrote to McDowell has recently been donated to the Society in memory of the Sam E. McDowell Family by Mrs. Carrie McDowell of Joliet, Illinois.

Sam E. "Sarpy Sam" McDowell, a Texan, came to Wyoming in 1909, homesteaded on Sarpy Creek east of Hardin, Montana, and then rode for Willis Spear in the Hardin area. McDowell was well-liked by his fellow wranglers and evidently good at his work. He later became wagon boss for Frank Heinrick's cattle company in Big Horn County over a range that extended from the Big Horn River to the Yellowstone and west to the Pryor Mountains.

Sarp got his name in an unusual way. He had lived on Sarpy Creek and one day while he was working for Spear a rider came with mail for the cowboys, announcing he had a letter for "Sam." When a cowboy asked "which one?" the rider said: "Sarpy Creek Sam." McDowell had the name from that time on; later friends dropped the "Creek" and close friends simply called him "Sarp."

Sarp later worked in law enforcement, according to his daughter Ora Jean Blakely, and was chief of police in Hardin at one time. He died in 1959 at age 72 while on the job as a stock inspector for Big Horn County.

The following is the text of the Russell-McDowell letter written from California in Russell's own vernacular.

> Friend Sam, I am writing to thank you for the kind invetion to your wagon as you know I am an old horse rangler one of the has beens. In this day of caned music I would trade it all to here the bells of a saddel band like most men of my age my harte lives back on trails that have been plowed under by the nester most of the men I knew and worked with on the open range have crowsed the tall range good ore bad it seems to me now when my memory difles back that they were all good enough so when it comes to my cash in I want to go to thair. An if the Injun is right when he says hosses to I want my same string. Sam no body [would] like more to join you than I would but the last fiew years old rheumatism has stove me up till I wouldent be as good as a loos pack horse around a cow outfit. Im thanking you just the same and hope you will allways find a cow country with an open range. good luch to you and all other cow men and punchers. Your friend, C. M. Russell I am camped now at 6816 Odin St. Hollywood, California. you see Im near the moovie cow boys.

Roeder Lectures on Montana History Topics

Dr. Richard Roeder, Professor of History at Montana State University, will present a series of lectures in the Haynes Auditorium at the Society on Thursday evenings, beginning on September 8 and continuing through November 3 (with the exception of October 27). Dr. Roeder will examine some recent topics in Montana political and cultural history.

The lecture series will include: Second Thoughts on the Territorial Period, a Reexamination of the Vigilantes and the Political Geography of Cultural Conflict; C. M. Russell—The Romantic Exile; Paris Gibson—The Romance of Community Building; Joseph Kinsey Howard and the Search for Community; Women on the Homestead Frontier; Montana Literature and Poetry; A Comparative Analysis of the 1889 and 1972 Constitutions; The Montana Study.

The class is co-sponsored by the Office of Continuing Education at M.S.U. Registrants are entitled to 1.6 Continuing Education Units that can be applied to certification renewals. The cost of the eight-week series is $35.

Archives Receives Donations in Ethnic and Ranching History

The Archives has received an exciting donation from the Croatian community in Lewistown, Montana. Anton and Anna Tuss, on behalf of the Drustva Kralj Tomislav (King Tomislav Lodge) of Lewistown, donated the old record books of the Lodge to the Montana Historical Society. These record books include membership and dues ledgers, financial records, and some minute books. Many of them are in the Croatian language. This donation, along with an interview done with Daisy Tuss Monkelin in 1969, provides the only documentation the Archives currently has of the Croatian community in Montana.

Additional materials received in recent months reflecting Montana's rich ethnic heritage include six oral history interviews with long-time Italian residents of the Butte area, especially Meaderville. These interviews were conducted (and donated) by Russell Magnaghi of Northern Michigan University and vividly document life among Italian immigrant mine workers and their families earlier in this century.

The Archives has also received the handwritten reminiscence of Mathias (Mike) Martinz, an Austrian-born Slovene, who traveled as a young boy to Malta, Montana, to join his father. Martinz, who is now in his 90s, poignantly describes his immigration to Montana, life in early Malta, and his work as a sheepherder and hotel operator. His reminiscence is supplemented by a two-hour taped interview conducted by Laurie Mercier of the Society's Montanans at Work Oral History Project.

Other recent donations to the Archives include the transcript of a 1905 U.S. Circuit Court case in which Fred J. Bliss and the Deer Lodge Farmers' Association sought unsuccessfully to enjoin the Washoe Copper Smelter at Anaconda on the grounds that its emissions poisoned the farmers' livestock and crops. The 74 volumes of court papers were donated by the Anaconda Minerals Company.

Ranching is the focus of two other recent additions to the Archives' holdings. Donated by Lillian Miller Westin and Erwin Miller, the records of Miller Brothers, Inc. (supplementing a collection received in 1977) include financial records, correspondence, land abstracts, leases, photographs, organizational materials, etc., which document the operation of the large cattle and sheep ranch in the Chinook-Cleveland-Loyd area, 1900-1967. Wilbert J. (Wib) Harrer, known as "Mr. Angus of Montana," has donated the records of his Green Meadow Ranch near Helena.

from the Editor's File

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59620

Postmaster Send address changes to Montana Historical Society Capital Station Helena MT 59620

The study of the history of women in the West is fast on the rise and the more digging historians do the more they unearth about women's activities and the responses those activities generated. One such interesting footnote in the history of Montana women, passed on to us by Andra Browman and Diane Sands, deals Dr. Maria M. Dean of Helena and a particularly challenging address she delivered in 1891. Known for her skill as a physician and her strong opinions, Dr. Dean never shied from public debate.

Before a women's group meeting at the Broadway Methodist Church on March 14, 1891, Dean explained that many women married out of sheer economic necessity and that marriages often enslaved them. Although she did not attack the institution of marriage, she asked her audience why women should not stand "with equal rights of man, that is, the right to maintain and develop her own individuality . . ." Dr. Dean's remarks did not sit well with the editor of the Missoula Gazette who wrote the following comment on his editorial page:

> Dr. Maria L. Dean of Helena is an estimable woman and a good physician, but she is one of those unfortunate women who thinks she has a mission. She recently lectured on the "Right of Self." If the doctor had the right of permission of a good husband she would be a happy woman. She isn't happy now.

But if only we had Dr. Dean's reaction to the Missoula editorial. One can be sure that she would have had a pithy remark ready for that editor.

Custer Battlefield National Monument has been in the news this summer more than is usual, and the news has the historic battlefield threatened by two dangers. The easier of the two to understand and to contend with was the flash brush and grass fire that blackened a considerable amount of the battlefield acreage; the grass and brush will return, and none of the buildings at the monument were damaged.

The other problem is knottier. Randy Real Bird, a Crow, owns land that slices through the heart of the battlefield—between the slope where Custer fired his last shot and a point where Benteen's soldiers were pinned down. Furthermore, Real Bird wants to build a house on the site. This has Custer Battlefield Superintendent Jim Court very concerned, because Real Bird's house would intersect the national monument. It is a dilemma. The National Park Service cannot buy Real Bird's land; Real Bird simply wants to build a house on good land and happens to own this prime piece of historical real estate; Court and others concerned about the area's historical integrity want to preserve the land without penalizing Real Bird.

One answer is a fund drive to purchase the land with private donations. The land could then be gifted to the Department of the Interior and be protected. The Custer Battlefield Preservation Committee has raised $30,000 but needs to raise in the neighborhood of $8 million. A nation-wide fund drive is now underway.

Railroad fans, those interested in the history of the Canadian West, and anyone who enjoys fine museum exhibitions should take in "The Great CPR Exposition" at the Glenbow Museum in Calgary, Alberta. Sponsored by the Canadian Pacific, the exhibit will run from mid-August 1983 to mid-May 1984. The exhibition includes artifacts, publications, special "stage set" exhibits of railway scenes, large dioramas, historical photographs, maps, and artwork. For more information contact Joyce Gibson, Glenbow Museum, 130-9th Ave. S.E., Calgary, Alberta, T2G 0P3.

Great Falls will be celebrating its centennial next year. Plans are already underway for several events, including a reenactment of Lewis and Clark's portage of the Great Falls of the Missouri in 1805. the portage reenactment, which will be authentic in all details, is scheduled for June 24 through July 4, 1984. Planning is now underway for the event and organizers stress the need for help in planning and organizing. Those interested should contact the Great Falls Centennial Committee in Great Falls.

MONTANA
THE MAGAZINE OF WESTERN HISTORY

HOLIDAY GIFT RATES:
$15 for the first subscription, $13 for every other. Gift cards will be sent during the holidays.

From:

Name ____________________

Address ____________________

City/State/Zip ____________________

I enclose ________ for ________ subscriptions.
(Please pay now to avoid processing errors.)

Mail to:
Montana Historical Soceity
224 No. Roberts
Helena, MT 59620

PLEASE ENTER THE FOLLOWING GIFTS:

Name ____________________
Address ____________________
City/State/Zip ____________________
sign card: ____________________
☐new ☐renewal

Name ____________________
Address ____________________
City/State/Zip ____________________
sign card: ____________________
☐new ☐renewal

S
978.6
H6m
V.21 #2
May-June
1983

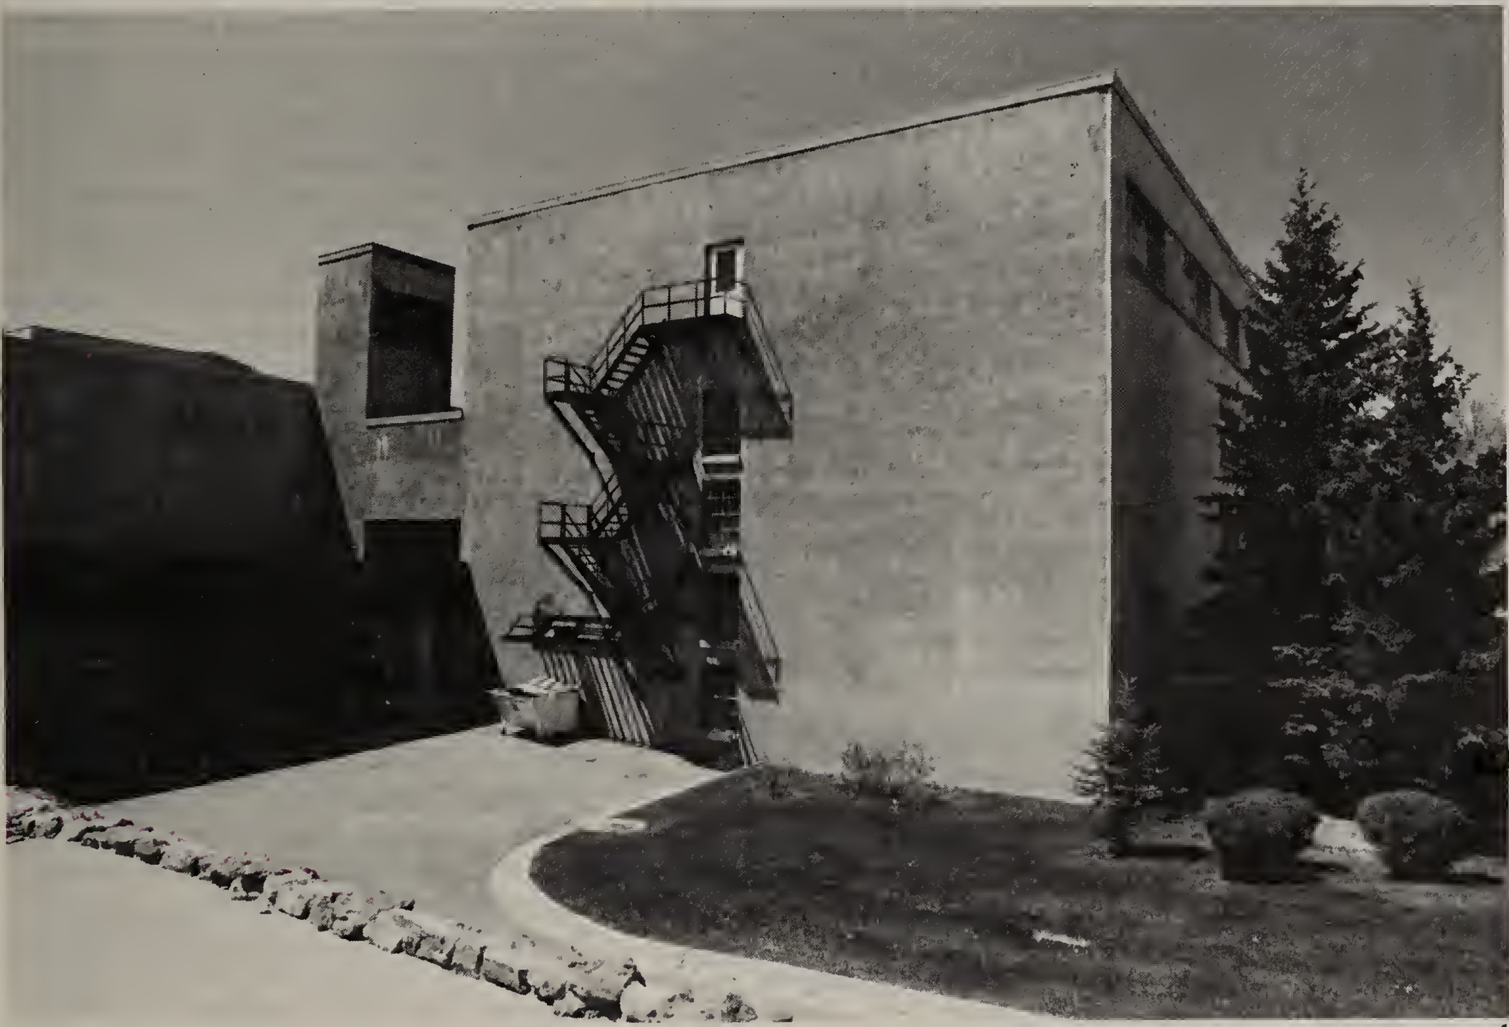
SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST

* REGISTERED TRADEMARK

Vol. 21, No. 2 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society May-June 1983



John Reddy

This view of the back, or east, side of the Veterans and Pioneers Memorial Building shows where the new addition will go. The fire escape descends from the third floor; the vertical windows light four levels of the Library stacks.

TE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
NOV - 1 1983
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
1515 E. 6th AVE.
HELENA, MONTANA 59620

Building Expansion to Give Needed Space

The Montana Historical Society has run out of space. The Archives, required by law since 1969 to house state government papers along with private manuscript collections, has no place to put more. Museum staff can be glimpsed processing artifact collections in public areas sometimes. Photo Archives, located in what was built as library stack space, has quadrupled its collection in the last decade, and processes over 16 times the number of inquiries it handled then. While some staff are trained in paper and object conservation, they have only a makeshift work area in the library stacks. Researchers in the Library must view microfilm in a crowded staff work-space.

The 48th Montana Legislature, in session this winter, agreed with our plea for more space—both in exhibit and office and work areas—and appropriated over $2,063,000 for a building expansion of basement and three floors. The addition, to extend the east side of the building, is expected to be complete in three years.

Besides adding 19,000 square feet to our building, the expansion will include climate-controlled storage and work facilities for the Library, Museum, Archives, and Photo Archives, essential for long-term preservation of various types of art and artifacts, documents, and photo prints and negatives.

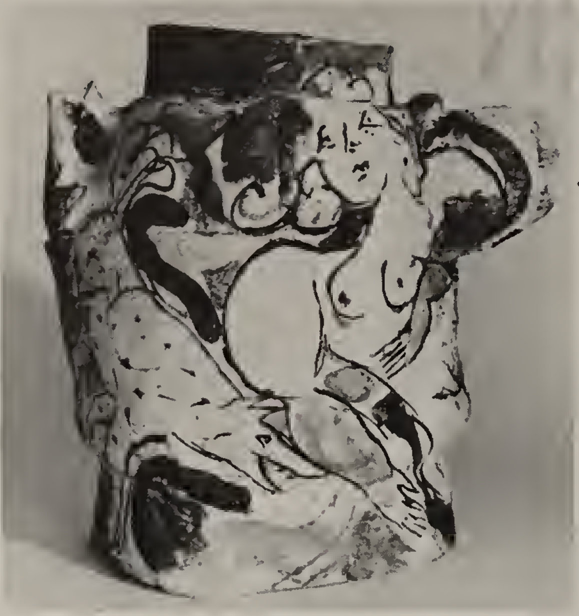
Museum storage will more than double with the addition of 3,000 square feet of high-security, climate-controlled space.

Archives, currently storing 10,000 cubic feet of documents on 7,200 square feet of floor space, will receive an additional 5,000 square feet. Photo archives' addition of 1,500 square feet will improve patron access as well as working and storage conditions.

Preliminary plans call for the Library to move into the new addition while continuing to utilize current stacks. The reading room would then house offices long located on the first floor, such as Publications. In the new Library location, patrons will welcome a specific area for genealogical research and better facilities for microfilm viewing.

Additional exhibit space on the first floor, where all gallery space now is, and removal of the sales area from the lobby, are further features of the building's change.

Current scheduling calls for architectural plans to be designed in 1984, with construction completed in 1986.



John Reddy

"Victorville Ladies" (1980) by Rudy Autio, lent by Exhibit A Gallery, Chicago.

Autio Retrospective Runs From June 18 to July 24

A public reception on June 18 will open the "Rudy Autio Retrospective" show in our Poindexter Gallery, where the Montana artist will exhibit abstract ceramic sculptures through July 24. The artist will speak, following an introduction by Ray Steele, Director of the C. M. Russell Museum in Great Falls. The show is a cooperative venture, created by the Society with the University of Montana School of Fine Arts, Missoula, and Yellowstone Art Center, Billings.

After closing here, the show will travel to Yellowstone Art Center where it can be seen from August 1 through September 24, and then to University of Montana School of Fine Arts for exhibit from October 7 through November 30. In 1984, it will be seen at Bellevue Art Museum, Bellevue, Washington; Kohler Art Center, Sheboygan, Wisconsin; and American Craft Museum, New York, New York.

Autio, a Butte native who is head of the Ceramics Area of the University of Montana School of Fine Arts, was a resident artist at the Archie Bray Ceramics Foundation in Helena during the 1950s. As Assistant Curator of Montana Historical Society in 1957, he created the Lewis and Clark diorama in our formal museum.

The current retrospective will exhibit 33 ceramic pieces dating from 1952 to 1983, including two new works created especially for this show. Nine drawings by Autio are also to be seen. All items have been lent by collectors and by the artist.

Funding for the traveling show comes from grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, Montana Arts Council, First Bank System, Inc., and Champion International Corporation. A color catalogue, funded by Champion, will be available for sale wherever the show travels.

"Summer at the Society" Scheduled

"Summer at the Society" will present a variety of programs on our lawn each Wednesday at noon. 1983 marks the third year for this popular, free-admission series, which includes programs with a western emphasis to appeal to all ages. Attendees are encouraged to bring sack lunches.

Vince Yannone, Department of Fish, Wildlife and Game, will present "Wildlife in Montana" for the opening program on June 15. He will bring some animals to show to the audience.

On June 22, members of the Grand Street Theater group will perform with excerpts from "Shamrock," the story of Marysville, once a thriving mining town and now a partial ghost town near Helena.

"Montana Legends in Mime" by Wally Bivins, and a puppet show by Toni Person will delight children and adults on June 29.

William Rossiter, from Kalispell, will offer a discussion of the transition from innocence to realism among the pioneers of the West as mirrored in the songs they sang, on July 6. In "Going Out West to See the Elephant," Mr. Rossiter accompanies himself on guitar, banjo, autoharp and harmonica, illustrating his theme with representative songs of the pioneers. This program is funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities.

On July 13, "Durty" Murphy Fox will illustrate his talk about "Mountain Men and Indians" with appropriate artifacts and costumes.

Homemade Jam, a Helena-based group, will present "A Musical Tale of String and Reed Instruments" on July 20. This program will be presented in public schools throughout the state starting next fall.

"Sapphire Mining" is the title of the program on July 27. It will be presented by Ruth and Wes Castles, who own and operate a sapphire mine outside of Helena.

On August 3, another presentation funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities, "The Eye Juggler, Storytelling and the Living Culture of the Montana Indians," will feature Rodney Frey, of Helena. The culture of traditional tribal groups is brought to life through the telling of a series of Native American legends and stories.

On August 10, Homemade Jam will provide music for square dancing.

Demonstrations of various textile crafts on August 17 will include quilting by the Helena Quilters Guild. Spinning, weaving, natural dyeing, and basket weaving will also be demonstrated by local artists.

Rudisill Gives Lecture

"The Southwest as a Photographic Place," a slide-illustrated lecture, was given by Dr. Richard Rudisill on May 23 at the Society. The evening program was open to the public at no charge.

He spoke of how unique elements in the Southwest—land forms, light, aridity, space, and native materials—have contributed to scenes photographers have recorded for over 125 years. With vintage photographs, he compared and contrasted the uses of similar subject matter by various photographers.

Rudisill, Curator of Photographic History at the Museum of New Mexico, is the author of Mirror Image: The Influence of the Daguerreotype on American Society. A native of Butte, he attended public schools in California, and received his Ph.D. in American Studies from the University of Minnesota. His photographic works have been exhibited throughout Minnesota and New Mexico, and he has directed a number of photographic exhibitions throughout the West.

Dale C. Hawkins, Art Promoter, Dies at 74

Historic preservationist and Western art enthusiast Dale C. Hawkins of Billings died March 18, at the age of 74.

Among many affiliations and activities, he was instrumental in saving the former Parmly Billings Library building and locating the Western Heritage Center there. In 1964, he served on the Governor's Commission for the Montana Territorial Centennial, and for nine years was a member of the Governor's Historic Sites & Antiquities Council, forerunner of the present State Historic Preservation Review Board. He was the first Sheriff of the Yellowstone Corral of Westerners, which he organized.

Three years after his 1962 retirement from a career as store manager for J. J. Newberry & Co., he opened the Big Sky Gallery in Billings. Through his gallery and other means, he actively supported and promoted Western art.

Society Receives Bequest from Paul J. Wolf

Paul J. Wolf, who adopted Missoula as his home upon retiring from New York Telephone Company in 1970, died in March following heart surgery. Among several bequests to public organizations was his $40,000 gift to Montana Historical Society.

Mr. Wolf was an active member of National Audubon Society, and also collected stamps and antique arms. He was widely known as both exhibitor and accredited judge of philately, and had published articles on antique arms. He was also a Fellow of the Photographic Society of America.

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 449-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

Written and edited by William L. Lang and Barbara C. Fifer as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

Montana Records Project Completed by Summers

Field Archivist Bill Summers has completed the Montana Historical Records Assessment Project, having driven nearly 7500 miles throughout the state, visiting 149 sites where manuscript records are held. The collections assessed included those of local governments, historical associations and museums, formal archives and libraries, and school districts.

This project, funded by the National Historic Publications and Records Commission, was designed to determine the condition of storage and cataloging of Montana's archival materials. Summers gathered information through a questionnaire, his on-site assessments, and a public hearing held in Billings in December. Minimal response to the questionnaire and the hearing made Summers' travels the core of the project.

His final report will be available to the public here at the Society, at the libraries in the university system, and at the State Library. It describes the current state of records which could aid research into many aspects of Montana's development, and puts forth 14 recommendations that emphasize training of local government personnel in the handling and storage of archival documents.

Also recommended are printed and computerized inventories of what records are stored where, along with legislation establishing retention schedules for specified official documents. Summers noted that worthless materials frequently take space needed for documents of permanent value, that well-meant but uninformed attempts at paper conservation have actually harmed items, and that documents holding private information have been publicly exhibited as interesting artifacts.

These recommendations mark the first step in a long but worthwhile process. As Gov. Ted Schwinden points out in his cover letter on the report, "much is yet to be done if we are to preserve and make available this written heritage."

SUMMER HOURS

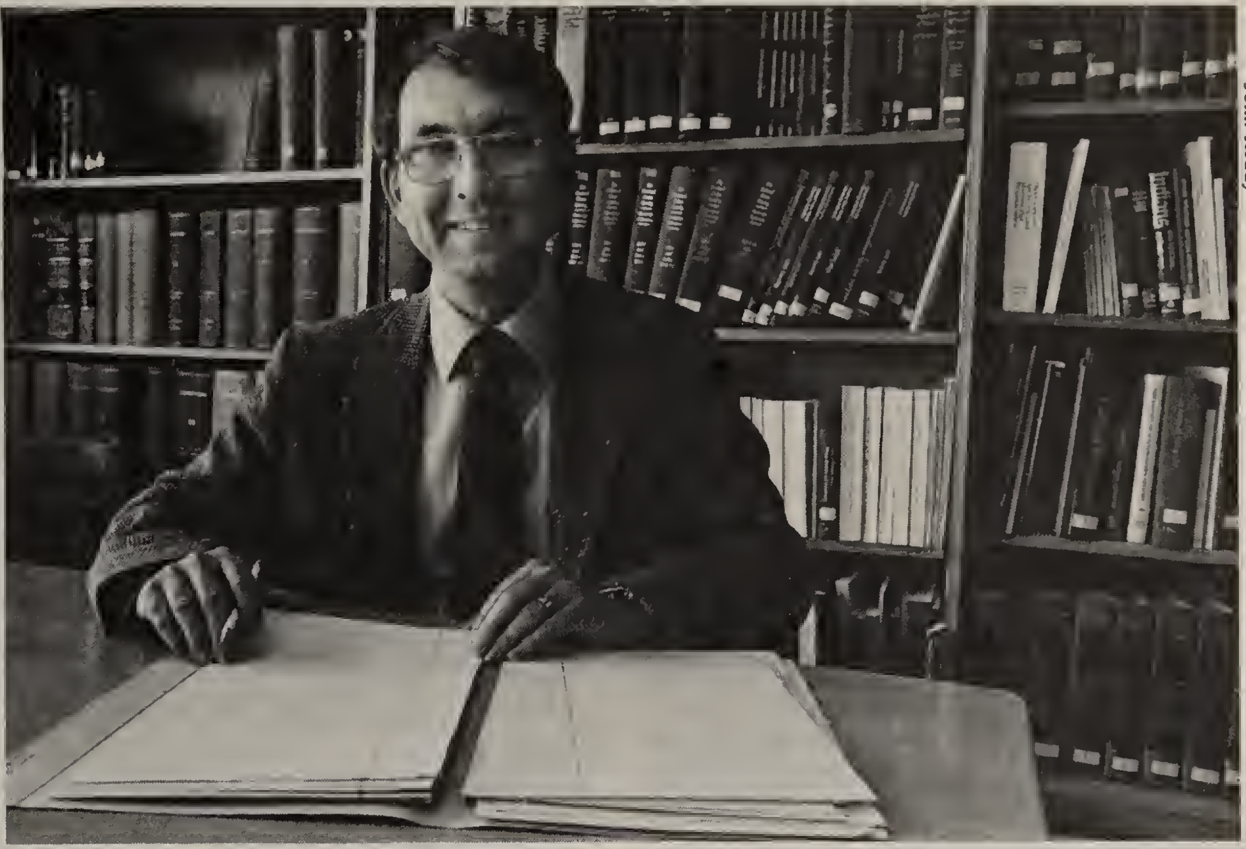
Museum: 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mon.-Fri., 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sat., Sun. & Holidays, Memorial Day through Labor Day.

Library & Archives: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mon.-Fri., June through August. Closed Memorial Day, 4th of July, & Labor Day.

Original Governor's Mansion: Noon to 5 p.m. Tues.-Sat., tours on the hour. Memorial Day through Labor Day.

Capitol Tours: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mon.-Sat., 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sun., from June 13 through Sept. 4.

Last Chancer Tour Train and London Double-Decker Bus: Operated by Helena Unlimited and not by the Historical Society, these may be boarded on Sixth Street beside our building. Tours begin hourly from 8:30 through 3:30 each day, June 15 through Labor Day, alternating between the train and the bus along the same route. Fee of $2.00/adult or $1.50/child is payable to the driver.



John Reddy

Robert R. Swartout, Jr., poses with archival research materials in our library.

Swartout Receives Bradley

The first Bradley Fellowship for research at Montana Historical Society has been awarded to Robert R. Swartout, Jr., an Associate Professor of history at Carroll College in Helena. The $5,000 grant will support his research here for eight weeks this summer.

Describing his planned study of the Chinese in Montana from 1860 to 1910, Swartout notes that little serious research has been published about Chinese immigrants here, even though they comprised almost 10 per cent of Montana's official population in 1870. Swartout's project has the working title "From Kwangtung to the Big Sky: The Chinese Experience in Montana." He explains that the majority of Chinese immigrants in the latter 19th century came from the Kwangtung region of southeastern China, where Canton is located, because of socioeconomic disruptions in the region during the years the American West offered vast employment opportunities.

The book-length work that will eventually result from Swartout's research will describe the reasons behind this emigration pattern, and Chinese involvement in Montana mining development and in railroad construction. He will examine Chinese entrepreneurship in the establishment of local businesses here, and how Chinese society was organized in Montana. Rounding out the seven-chapter study will be discussion of white Montana's reaction to the Chinese, and a summation.

Swartout has been on the Carroll College faculty since 1978, and teaches both western history and American-East Asian relations. He has published studies in both areas of his dual interests, including "Montana History's Decade: A Review Essay," in the Winter 1983 issue of Montana the Magazine of Western History. Swartout will bring a combination of international, regional, and local perspectives to the current project.

Resources he expects to utilize in our holdings include government documents, historical Montana newspapers, and manuscript collections of people and companies having contact with Chinese immigrants. Should any rare Chinese-language items surface, his ability to read them will further enrich the study.

The Bradley Fellowship, which the Society hopes to award biennially, is funded by an endowment from an anonymous benefactor and is named for Lt. James H. Bradley, a 19th century amateur historian and early friend of the Society. The fellowship supports Montana Historical Society collections, which can result in a book or article-length publication.

Montana History Conference Receives Funding Grant

The Montana Committee for the Humanities has awarded funds to the Montana Historical Society in support of the 10th Annual Montana History Conference. The Conference will be held October 27, 28, and 29 in Helena, at the Colonial Inn and at Carroll College.

Panel discussions will be "The Coming of the Northern Pacific: Its Impact on Montana," "Impact of the Second World War on Montana," "Sheep Raising in Montana," "Managing Montana's Natural Resources," and "Archie Bray: History and Tradition." Panel presentations offering technical assistance include "Using Primary Resources in Research," "Problems in the Identification, Maintenance and Uses of Local Government Records," and "Teaching Montana History in the Classroom."

Featured dinner and luncheon speakers will be Jeanne Eder, Instructor of Native American Studies at Eastern Montana College, who will offer the monologue "Waheene: Buffalo Bird Woman"; John Hudson, professor of Geography at Northwestern University, who will describe "The Growth of Towns on the Northern Pacific Mainline"; and Mary Blew, professor of English at Northern Montana College, who will discuss "Montana History in Fiction."

Sights on the Centennial: Public

Editor's Note. Throughout Montana, this is a time for centennials and diamond jubilees in individual communities—with some long-range plans begun for observations of the statehood centennial in 1989. Beginning with this issue of Montana Post, Society staff members offer some ideas—and how-to's—for ways to celebrate local history with programs and projects that have lasting value. This is the first of four installments.

PUBLIC PROGRAMS

by Jennifer Jeffries Thompson

There are four kinds of public programs that will be considered in this article. Each is different in format, though the success of each is guided by the same principles. They are: lecture with one speaker who may or may not illustrate his/her talk with slides; panel presentation with opportunity for discussion; conference or seminar with many speakers discussing similar topics, usually over a period of two or more days; and workshop, which implies hands-on activities and less formal presentations and discussions.

Public programs are an excellent way of marking a community's anniversary. The educational value is doubtless, public reaction is generally very supportive, it is an opportunity to combine the mutual interests of schools, museums, and the general public, and well-planned programs are usually easy to fund. Whether you are considering a single speaker from your own community, or are planning a week-long symposium enlisting the help of scholars from around the nation, there are some practical concerns of which you should be aware.

Think about the theme or focus of your celebration. Attempt to design a lecture series that adds new information to the history of your town or community. Who is your intended audience? students, general adult public, historians, or museum workers? Reflect upon the kinds of programs that your community has enjoyed in the past. Is there something about them that could be adopted, to insure the success of your program? Include representative members of the community in planning the series, both for the mixture of ideas and to develop broad-based support.

There are costs inherent in all public programs. For any speaker you may invite to participate in your celebration, consider travel expenses (20¢ per mile is most often acceptable); per diem ($3.00 for breakfast, $3.50 for lunch, $7.00 for dinner, and $24.00 for lodging are appropriate current rates for reimbursement); and honorarium. The honorarium varies from speaker to speaker, and is often dependent upon the given assignment. When you correspond or speak with the intended lecturer, simply ask his/her preference. University personnel usually receive $50.00 to $100.00; speakers of some national reputation may ask $300.00 and up.

Often there are rental fees for meeting halls, chairs, and public address systems. Sometimes you may need to consider paid advertising in addition to newspaper articles, and free public service announcements on radio and television. There are costs in duplicating posters, programs and handouts. But don't be discouraged about what may seem to be an expensive proposition. There is some funding assistance available.

Banks, schools, or local businesses may be interested in supporting portions of the program. When approaching any institution for funding, be prepared to offer a clear and organized summary of the proposed program, including specific suggestions of how that institution might contribute to its success. You might contact the Montana Committee for the Humanities, Hellgate Station, P. O. Box 8036, Missoula Montana 59807, for financial assistance with programs involving the humanities, issues of contemporary concern, and their relationship. For assistance with topics focusing on the arts, contact the Montana Arts Council, 1280 S. Third St. West, Missoula, Montana 59801.

Once you have selected your program format and speakers, communicate with the speakers regularly. Even if they are simply a telephone call away, it is best to write a letter mentioning dates, times, topics and reimbursements. Inquire about their needs: will he/she be using slides; does he/she need a microphone, and if so, what kind; will it be necessary to provide a stage, chalk board, pointer, tape recording, water? Get enough information about the speaker and the topic so that you can properly introduce him or her. Information for publicity is a must. A black and white photograph of the featured speaker or some illustration of the topic will add greatly to the appeal of publicity efforts. Begin early to assure adequate coverage of the event; visit local clubs and organizations to promote the upcoming events. Select someone to introduce the sessions and provide that person with as much information as possible.

At the time of the program, arrive early at the meeting place. Check lights, seating, heat or air conditioning. See that everything is in working order. Meet and greet guests as they arrive; check with speaker(s) to be certain their needs are met. Be prepared to document the proceedings, either by photographing or recording the speakers. At a later time those recordings could be transcribed, edited, published and sold.

Once the program is completed, take time to evaluate the proceedings either by questionnaires or through a less formal survey. Make notes about negative and positive elements of the program for future reference. Thank the participants in person, and also write letters. A written communication, particularly a flattering one, can become a part of the speaker's file or portfolio. Then publicize the success of your efforts; everyone likes to share in your good news.

Mrs. Roy Kuchenbrod is interviewed by Laurie M and microphone need not be so close to the inter

ORAL HISTORY PROJECTS

by Laurie Mercier

An oral history project can make a meaningful contribution to a community's local history resources. The tape-recording of people's reminiscences can yield new insights and information regarding the area's past, and enhance and enliven the existing written record.

Before going out into the community with tape recorder in hand, though, decide what it is you want to accomplish. Without defining the purpose of your project and setting goals, you will likely end up with a stack of interview tapes that will reveal very little and will share no consistent theme. Instead of collecting miscellaneous reminiscences from community members that deal with a disparate variety of subjects, select a focus for your interviews. There are, of course, hundreds of topics that will strike you as important or interesting; you must limit your choices and select one central topic or a series of closely related topics as the focus of your project.

In choosing a topic for a community oral history project, planners should consider those things that have been important in the community's development. Each community has a unique history that will require careful thought. Do not allow a preoccupation with the community's early history to dominate other equally important areas of study; remember that it is best to capture a person's first-hand experiences rather than trying for information dating prior to the person's lifetime. Examining available written sources to

---

Jennifer Jeffries Thompson is Curator of Education at Montana Historical Society, and is responsible for our public programs. Laurie Mercier, Oral History Coordinator, recently completed the "Montanans at Work" oral history project for the Society.

rograms and Oral History Projects

er (right), who has notes at hand. The tape recorder
e, if he or she is a bit shy of it, Mercier points out.

determine the existing gaps in historical information will help lead to topics that should be explored.

One of the most common traps in community oral history projects is being too ambitious and taking on far more than your group can handle. This can lead to frustration and, possibly, abandoning plans. You can do only what money, volunteer labor and the time everyone has will allow. Costs, for example, can range from a few dollars per interview (if all labor is donated and the only costs are tapes) to hundreds of dollars for each interview (when paid professionals tape, transcribe and edit interviews). Generally it takes about 30 to 40 hours of time to produce a single one-hour tape-recorded interview. This includes the research and preparation time before the interview, the interview itself, transcribing, editing and processing. That time can be cut in half by eliminating transcription of tapes, and producing instead a written index or guide to the tape contents.

The final quality of an oral history project depends on the appropriateness of the narrators (persons interviewed) and the competency of the interviewers. Interviewers should examine the available literature on interviewing techniques and conduct trial interviews to familiarize themselves with recording equipment and the interview process. In choosing narrators, interviewers should select those people who were actual observers of or participants in the subject being documented. In any community-wide project, narrators who represent a variety of views and backgrounds should be interviewed.

After collecting the interviews, store the tapes in an appropriate repository and make them available to the public. For communities celebrating anniversaries, the oral history interviews can be utilized in any number of formats, such as photographic exhibits, slide-tape shows, publications, theatrical productions and radio programs.

The slide-tape show can be an effective way of highlighting various themes of an area's history, is self-contained and appropriate in almost any setting, and appeals to a wide range of audiences. Through the use of visuals and audiotape, the producer of the slide-tape show has an opportunity to interpret, educate and entertain. As with any project, the first step is to plan and define the purpose of the production. Once the objectives have been established, the next step is to create an impressive presentation that will communicate the desired information.

Slide-tape programs can be put together at very little expense, using one slide projector and one audio-cassette recorder, or they can be much more elaborate affairs utilizing two or more projectors, with a dissolve unit synchronizing the recording with the slides. A dissolve unit ($300-$600) can interpret a silent code on the tape, which signals the machine to change slides. The viewer sees a program where one slide melts into the next visual image. This more expensive equipment requires some expertise and guidance in use; a reliable audiovisual dealer should be able to help.

Regardless of which approach you choose, the slide-tape program itself will require many hours of planning before it is shown. The show should not be any longer than thirty minutes, using from 100 to 400 slides, depending on how quickly you wish the slides to change. A script is written first, then visuals are found to complement the text. When the script is ready to be recorded, every effort should be made to produce a high-quality recording. Remember that the audience will be listening to a tape instead of a speaker, and the sound should be clear. If oral history excerpts are to be used, they should be audible and free of distortion. For the narration, it is best, if possible, to have professionals supply the voices. People tend to pay closer attention to broadcast-quality voices, especially if the narrator comes from outside of the community. Appropriate music and sound effects are important, too, for keeping the viewer attentive.

When selecting slides for the program, you must be concerned with their visual continuity. All should be horizontal and not vary too much in color. It may be necessary to make your own slides to provide the appropriate visuals to match the text. The script should carry bold reference marks to indicate a change in slides, if the projectors are to be operated manually. This is less distracting than relying on beeps recorded on the tape to signal slide changes. If a dissolve unit is used, the signal can be cued into the machine, and the operator can sit back and enjoy the program.

Videotape offers another means of disseminating information about a community's history to a wide range of audiences. While relatively expensive (prices range from $1300 to $2000 for a three-quarter-inch videocassette player, $1900 to $3300 for the recorder, $800 to $3000 for a camera, and $25 to $35 for a single 60-minute cassette), the video unit can capture and quickly reproduce movement and sound and can be put to creative use in documenting and exhibiting local history.

There are numerous possibilities for the uses of videotape. It can offer additional interpretation of historical sites and exhibits; demonstrate local crafts, music, dance; record oral history interviews; document restoration projects; and dramatize or reenact scenes from the community's past. Once a group has committed itself to the expenditure, many programs can be produced and shared with school groups, hospitals, senior citizen centers, civic clubs, libraries and local television stations.

Once again, it is important for you to plan your production and establish priorities. Play lengths can vary from five minutes to one hour, depending on the purposes of each program. Groups can contract professionals to produce the videotape, but if you are convinced that you can put the equipment to good use, you should plan on spending several days becoming familiar with the equipment, studying the manuals and recording several practice tapes. Space does not allow an examination of existing hardware; equipment literature and dealers should be consulted.

A problem with video tape is its short storage life. Tapes should be stored vertically in dust-free rooms with temperatures between 65 and 75 degrees Fahrenheit. Cassettes are prone to wear out after extended use, and it is recommended that a replacement copy be make after every 100 showings. However, with each copy generated, the picture quality declines.

For further information:

Jolly, Brad. Videotaping Local History. Nashville: American Association for State and Local History (708 Berry Road, Nashville, TN 37204), 1982.

Oral History for Montana: A Manual. Montana Oral History Association, 1982.

Davis, Cullom, et al. Oral History: From Tape to Type. Chicago: American Library Assoc., 1977.

Ives, Edward. The Tape-Recorded Interview: A Manual for Field Workers in Folklore and Oral History. Knoxville: Univ. of Tenn. Press, 1974.

Attebery, Brian. "Preparing a Slide Tape Show," Idaho Oral History Center Newsletter (Idaho St. Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Dr., Boise, 83702), Vol. 2, No. 2, Oct. 1980.

Smith, Arthur. "Producing the Slide Show for Your Historical Society," Technical Leaflet 42, History News, Vol. 22, No. 6, June 1967.

Legislature Funds Mansion Repairs; Board Continues Research

Exposed wires, rusted gutters, and split shingles will soon be things of the past at the Original Governor's Mansion. The state Legislature appropriated $70,500 to address these unsightly problems, some of the building's major maintenance needs.

Most of this money will be used ro replace the Mansion's electrical wiring. Turn-of-the-century knob and tube wiring is still in use, intertwined with older gas tubing through the walls. Its deteriorating condition poses a serious hazard and makes replacement a necessity before any further restoration can begin.

Another problem is the guttering, which is clogged in some sections and rusted through in others, causing water to back up into the original gutters in the eves of the building. The results are leaks, rotting woodwork, and peeling paint. With new gutters, repairs to the woodwork, and a new coat of paint, the Mansion will be protected from water damage. New roofs for the Mansion and its carriage house will prevent water damage also. Last summer a severe hailstorm damaged the shingles on these as well as many other Helena roofs and they must be replaced.

Thanks to the Legislature's support, the Mansion will continue to be preserved and its condition improved. We look forward to the completion of these projects within the next year.

Deteriorating wiring is hidden behind the light fixtures at the Original Governor's Mansion, but not for long.

Long hours spent in front of a microfilm reader or with tape recorder in hand are becoming a way of life for members of the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board. Chairman Bill Coddington has appointed Carla Cronholm, Homer Loucks, Lloyd Markell, and Marjorie Sharp to a committee that will assist Mansion Curator Mary Hoffschwelle in the creation of an overall Restoration and Furnishings Plan. The first step to be taken by curator and committee is to widen the search for information documenting the history of the building's occupants and furnishings.

Making use of the Society's newspaper collection, they are scanning Helena papers of the late 19th and early 20th centuries for clues about the activities of Mansion inhabitants and their home. When not involved in this time-consuming work, Board members are out conducting oral history interviews with Helena residents who lived, worked, or socialized at the Mansion. Recording Secretary Judy Donaghy has volunteered to transcribe these interviews. This project will soon expand beyond Helena, in the search for first-hand recollections of the Mansion.

Board members also are documenting the work of their own organization by interviewing former members and having them speak at their monthly meetings. Complementing these efforts is the work of Society photographer John Smart, who is recording the results of the Board's work with his camera. His photographs will comprise a complete visual record of the restored Mansion's appearance.

Teachers Advisory Committee Will Meet at MHS in June

Ten teachers of Montana history have volunteered to serve on an Advisory Committee for the Education Department, announces Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, Curator of Education. Their first meeting, with two consultants and with Society staff members, is set for June 18 and is made possible by a Montana Committee for the Humanities grant.

Teachers include Ken Ballagh, Gardiner; Bruce Campbell, Helena; Nancy Eby, Billings; Mary Horstman, Deer Lodge; Keith Jensen, Froid; Dave Lubick, Butte; Lorraine Randall, Lewistown; Jim Scalf, Kalispell; Mike Shook, Stevensville; and Judy Stephenson, Judith Gap. The consultants are Dr. Rex Myers, professor of history at Western Montana College, Dillon, and Dr. Richard Roeder, professor of history at Montana State University, Bozeman.

In January, Thompson sent a questionnaire to all of Montana's secondary schools, asking those who teach Montana history about what new things the Society could do to help them both in and out of the classroom. Their strongest support went to audiovisual productions, a supplemental publication with worksheet or workbook components, regional lectures, and regional field trips.

Through the questionnaire, teachers could volunteer for the Advisory Committee. Those selected represent a wide geographical area, have a reputation for teaching innovation, and, Thompson says, "above all were enthusiastic about the work."

John Reddy

Betty Manny Helps in Library

Betty Manny, on our Library staff since December, states that she enjoys the diversity of her job as well as the interesting subject matter. Her duties include aiding in research for genealogy inquiries, preparing newspapers for microfilming and checking the films, and typing map-catalogue cards.

Her position is funded by Green Thumb, Inc., a program of the National Farmers Union, U.S. Department of Labor, that employs older citizens in part-time public service jobs. There are currently 184 Green Thumb workers in Montana.

Ms. Manny, a former art gallery owner, took courses in library science at Western Montana College in Dillon.

She is involved in a long-term project with one of the Library's more unusual holdings—a large collection of band and orchestra music. Ms. Manny is cataloguing the estimated 4,000 pieces in the John B. (Jack) Mason music collection. Mason, who died in 1976, was a member of the Helena Capital City Band for 60 years and founder of Helena's Shrine Band. The sheet music that he spent a lifetime collecting was given to the society by his grandson, Sean O. O'Leary.

Tours and More Tours

Each biennium, while the Montana Legislature is in session, thousands of students, their teachers and parents, come to the capital to watch lawmaking in action. Many times, their day or days in Helena include tours of the Society and of the Original Governor's Mansion. This year, according to Curator of Education Jennifer Jeffries Thompson, we had a record-breaking number of people on such tours—from as far north as Sylvanite and as far east as Baker.

In this first year that the Society was responsible for Capitol tours, Supervisor Van West, with Joan Haefer and Ed Madej, provided over 500 tours to 9,687 individuals, from January through mid-April.

At the Society and at the Original Governor's Mansion, volunteers contributed over 600 hours in guiding tours. The Mansion received 1,424 people, and 5,420 people toured the Society's exhibits.

"All the volunteers and guides," Thompson says, "are to be commended for their outstanding efforts in meeting and greeting so many young people and adults during the past few months. Thanks and commendations go out especially to the chairperson of the Friends of the Society, Betty Jones, who spent hours on the phone arranging for and coaxing an overburdened cadre of volunteers to give 'just one more' tour."

100-piece Clothing Collection Received

What costumes did young Helenans attending Mrs. Sulgrove's Dancing Academy in the late 1920s wear? How modish was a woman's camel coat sold by the Boyington Gown Shoppe in Butte? These specific questions have probably crossed the minds of few people. But seeing such clothing on exhibit or in a study collection can provide those "sharp glimpses of reality experienced by real people" that museums strive to present to their visitors. A recent donation to the Society has enhanced our ability to provide those glimpses.

From a member of a long-time Helena area family have come nearly one hundred costumes and accessories dating from the 1920s through the late 1950s—virtually doubling the Museum's 20th century clothing collection. Curator of Collections Patty Dean says that the Museum is especially interested in collecting 20th century items for "future history." She states that "everyday items one might be inclined to dismiss as too common or unimportant for a museum are in fact those we are most eager to acquire in order to properly reflect and represent the culture of 20th century Montana."

Among the newly-received items are homemade silk frocks dating from the 1920s that imitate the cut and ornamentation of their ready-made counterparts, house dresses worn by the donor's mother in the 1940s and early 1950s, and other items bearing the labels of Montana stores. One of the most interesting of these, Dean points out, is a small pink crepe hat trimmed with satin flowers and tulle, circa 1940, bearing the label: "Custom Made/Alice/Helena, Montana."

As noted in the Montana Post by Curator Steve Germann last year, our costume collection needs more items of everyday wear from the 1920s and 1930s, and clothing of all types from the 1940s and on.

John Reddy

Janet Sperry, Cataloguer, displays items from the newly-acquired clothing collection.

The difficulty of collecting 20th century clothing in Montana, according to Dean, can be fully appreciated by recalling the subtitle of K. Ross Toole's history of Montana in this century: "A State of Extremes." The geographic expanse and varied activities that occurred in the state complicate the Society's collecting activities: What would a 14-year-old boy on a homestead near Dagmar have worn in about 1910? Where did the construction workers on the Fort Peck Dam buy their clothes? Did high school girls in Baker wear miniskirts in the 1960s?

"Museums," she states, "have long ceased serving as repositories for only those items judged to be rare or old. We hope to broaden our collections, and for the future, provide a perspective of the everyday, the routine—those parts of our lives so obvious to us now but so easily, irretrievably lost."

Russell Letter Given

That Charles M. Russell was nicknamed Ah Wah Cous (Antelope) by the Blackfeet people is well known, but now the Society has the reason for this name—in Russell's own handwriting.

Dr. John Iwakiri of Lakewood, Colorado, has given us a 1926 illustrated letter by Russell. His gift honors his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Iwakiri, who lived in southeastern Montana for nearly 30 years, both in Hardin and in St. Xavier.

Writing to Wilbur Tomkins to thank him for his book on Indian sign language, Russell reminisced:

". . . a long time ago among the Black foot I was called Antelope not because of my swiftness but I wore darke pants with a white buck skin seat in them."

The letter, now on exhibit in our Mackay Gallery of Russell Art, includes a stylized pen and watercolor sketch of an antelope and of the head of a Blackfeet Indian.

According to Russell authority Frederic G. Renner, this letter is the only instance where Russell himself explained how he came to be called Ah Wah Cous.

Staff Members Participate in Diverse Programs

Archivist Ellie Arguimbau and State Preservation Review Board member Fred Quivik of Butte traveled to St. Paul, Minnesota, in mid-May to participate in the annual convention of the Society of Industrial Archaeologists. Industrial archaeology, a relatively new profession, specializes in studying the remains of early factories, mines, mills, and similar sites. Until now, its emphasis has been primarily on the eastern United States, but this year's conference has a more western orientation, with sessions on lumbering, oil, sugar beets, and mining.

Quivik presented two papers illustrated with slides, the first on his study of Montana's early bridges, with emphasis on those built by Minneapolis' pioneer bridge builders, who predominated here.

Quivik and Arguimbau jointly participated in a session on the copper mining and smelting industry. Quivik described the history of the smelters now being dismantled at Anaconda and Great Falls, focusing on the research and development done there, which advanced zinc and copper metallurgy. A similar presentation was well received at the Montana History Conference in Great Falls last year. Arguimbau described the Anaconda Copper Mining Company records now in the Society's Archives, and outlined some of the types of research which will be possible with these records.

Two Society staff members gave presentations at, and a third attended, a workshop sponsored by the American Association for State and Local History in Cody, Wyoming, late in May. Entitled "Collection Management," the three-day event presented modern collection management techniques and their application to historical agencies.

Among the workshop's seven instructors were Patty Dean, Curator of Collections, and Lory Morrow, Photograph Curator.

Ms. Dean spoke on acquisition collection policies, how to tailor them to a museum's particular needs, and their role in maintaining the integrity of a collection.

Ms. Morrow described creation, maintenance, and use of photographs as a special collection, including cataloguing and preservation, and photos for research and exhibition.

Susan R. Near, Registrar of the Museum, was among the 21 attendees, who were selected from applicants at museums, historical societies, and historical sites across the nation.

Lory Morrow, Photograph Curator, and Ed Nolan, Researcher/Writer, were among six speakers in a daylong seminar at the Museum of the Rockies on May 21. "The Photographers' Craft" was held at the museum on the campus of Montana State University, Bozeman.

Exhibiting their work with a slide presentation, Morrow spoke on 19th century Montana photographers, including government-survey workers, traveling independents, and those who established studios—the latter group clustering mainly in Butte and Helena. She also told of the rise of camera clubs and the effects of amateur on professional photography.

Nolan, author of the Society's forthcoming book, Northern Pacific Views: The Railroad Photography of F. Jay Haynes, 1876-1905, detailed Haynes's career development as an entrepreneur who contracted with the Northern Pacific to produce promotion photos—and also sold prints of his views to individuals by mail order.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

¶ from the Editor's File

¶ Oral historians in the Northwest have the opportunity to attend the 18th National Oral History Association's Workshop and Colloquium without traveling to a distant location. The 1983 meeting will be held at the Edgewater Hotel in Seattle, September 29-October 2. The meetings are open to all interested individuals and a good share of the sessions will deal with the basics of oral history and oral history applications to local history research. The panels and discussions at the meeting include: women's oral history in the West; oral history of businesses; oral history and legal testimony; oral history and its use in biographical research. These gatherings are great opportunities to learn about oral history techniques, projects and much more. For registration information write Oral History Association, North Texas State University, Denton, Texas 76203.

¶ The Museum of the Rockies at Montana State University, in recognition of the city of Bozeman, Montana's centennial, has issued a newly revised and expanded version of Dr. Merrill G. Burlingame's classic article "John M. Bozemen, Trailblazer," which first appeared in the Mississippi Valley Historical Review (March 1941: 541-568). The 48-page publication adds introductory comments by Museum of the Rockies historian Ken Karsmizki, a full-color reproduction of E. S. Paxson's The Death of John Bozeman (1898) on the cover, numerous maps and documents, historic photographs and engravings. Dr. Burlingame, MSU Professor Emeritus and an expert on the frontier period in Montana history, has continued his research on John Bozeman, the road Bozeman pioneered and the history of the Gallatin Valley. In this new revision, Burlingame describes John Bozeman's early activities in Montana, the surveying and pioneering of his cutoff route from the Oregon Trail to the goldfields, and the documented details of Bozeman's untimely and mysterious death in August 1867. It is good reading that is handsomely presented. Copies, at $4.50 each, can be purchased from the Society or from Museum of the Rockies, Bozeman 59717.

¶ Dr. Harold McCracken, author of over thirty books and Director of the Whitney Gallery of Western Art at the Buffalo Bill Historical Center for many years, died on March 16 at Cody, Wyoming. McCracken, who was born in Colorado in 1894, grew up on a ranch in Idaho, spent part of his youth tramping the British Columbia wilderness, served in the Army Air Corps in World War I studying aerial photography, and led a scientific expedition to Alaska for the American Museum of Natural History before accepting an Associate Editor's position at Field and Stream in New York. His accomplishments are all the more remarkable when we find out that Harold McCracken dropped out of high school and essentially taught himself nature photography, journalism, and the history of western art. A specialist on the works of Russell and Remington, McCracken wrote The Charles M. Russell Book: The Life and Work of the Cowboy Artist (Doubleday 1957), one of the standard works on Russell.

Exhibit Grant from Atlantic Richfield

The Atlantic Richfield Foundation has given the Society $10,000 towards the new permanent history exhibit that's now in the early planning stages. Director Robert Archibald describes this gift as "a tremendous help toward reaching our fund-raising goal" for this major area of the Museum.

As announced in the August-September 1982 Montana Post, the exhibit will cover Montana people, lifeways, and events, from prehistory through statehood in 1889.

Brewers' Records: Where Are They?

Making a manuscript collection available for researchers usually leads the archivist into exciting "side trips" into related topics. These sleuthing exercises, while often frustrating, are always interesting.

Such has been the case for archivist Bill Summers, who is processing the Nickolas Kessler Papers. Mr. Kessler founded his brewery in Helena in 1865. (The first Montana brewery was established in 1863 in Virginia City.) The Kessler family operated the brewery until 1958, interrupted only by Prohibition (1918-1933). The extensive records of the brewery and the Kessler family will provide an additional source for research into early Montana enterprises.

Included in the Kessler records is a handful of correspondence from the Montana State Brewers' Association, which represented the brewers' interests on the local level. The brewers were organized on April 17, 1902, with affiliated breweries in Bozeman, Butte, Great Falls, Helena, Kalispell, and Missoula. In 1915, the M.S.B.A. was incorporated as the Montana Brewers and Wholesalers Association to combat the growing prohibition movement. (The M.S.B.A. charter expired in 1955.) The Brewers' Association also negotiated wages with the International Union of the United Brewery Workmen of America.

Where are the records of the M.S.B.A and the I.U.U.B.W.A.? Inquiries have gone out to the United States Brewery Association, the Master Brewers' Association, the Cascade County Historical Society, Machinist Union Local #88 in Butte, the Wisconsin Historical Society, the Montana State AFL-CIO, and the University of Montana Archives. It is likely that the Brewers' Association records remain with officials of the local breweries, although they are not included in any of the records in the Montana Historical Society or the University of Montana Archives. It is possible that the union records, too, remain in the state. Union officials in Butte (home of the last brewers' local) are checking through its holdings for the Historical Society. Anyone having information about these records is urged to contact the Archives of the Montana Historical Society.

Meanwhile, those interested in pursuing research in brewery records will be pleased to know that the Nickolas Kessler Papers should be completely processed by this summer and will be available through the Society Library. Questions about the collection may be directed to Bill Summers in the MHS Archives.

The University of Montana Archives has records from breweries in Great Falls, Missoula, Billings, and Anaconda. Reference questions should be addressed to Dr. Dale Johnson, Mansfield Library Archives, Missoula, Montana 59812.

Legislature Allots Funds for 'Small Town Montana' Project

The Montana Legislature has allotted funds to support "Small Town Montana," an oral history project that will gather taped reminiscences from residents of 12 smaller communities. Oral History Coordinator Laurie Mercier will conduct the project.

The communities, selected because of their backgrounds and as representatives of different geographical areas, include Plains, Forsyth, Columbia Falls, Philipsburg, Broadus, Eureka, Cut Bank, Choteau, Plentywood, Chinook, Sidney, and Roundup. Mercier will conduct from 15 to 20 interviews in each town, and plans to spend two months at each location.

Copies of the resulting 180 to 240 tapes are to be placed in the local historical society or another public institution, with duplicates available for researchers here at the Society. Each interview narrator will receive a copy of his or her own tape. Summaries and indexes will assist researchers who use this resource to examine a significant, if little-studied, aspect of the state's development.

Oral history, Mercier notes, has become increasingly important as modern communications methods have limited the number of letters written, and as fewer people keep journals or write memoirs. Through the "Small Town Montana" project, the Society will compile a lasting record of the 12 towns, their histories, and their people.

S
978.6
H6m
v.21 #1
Feb.-Mar.
1983

PLEASE RETURN

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION

MAR 2 4 1983

KY

59620

SHELVED WITH
PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST®

® REGISTERED TRADEMARK

Vol. 21 No. 1 | Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society | Feb.-Mar. 1983

Left, "Alders, Prairie Creek Beach, Northern California, c. 1949," by Ansel Adams, courtesy Ansel Adams Literary Trust, copyright 1949.

Right, "Pepper, 1930," by Edward Weston, copyright 1981 Arizona Board of Regents, Center for Creative Photography.

"Three Photographers" Exhibit Opens

February 4 saw the opening of an exciting and different exhibition in our Poindexter Gallery, a showing of twentieth-century photographic artistry. It will be in place through June 15.

The show, "Three Photographers," presents over 40 black and white prints by Ansel Adams, Edward Weston, and Wynn Bullock, from portfolios given to the Society by Dr. Norman J. Holter of Helena. Protected by plastic, the prints are matted but unframed, and affixed directly to gallery walls. Titles and dates appear with minimal intrusion, being printed on clear plastic plates. The simplicity of its hanging allows the exhibition to bring viewers directly into the photographs.

Director Robert Archibald, in introducing Dr. Holter at the show's opening, thanked him not only for the gift of the photograph portfolios from which these prints are taken, but also for his long-standing interest in and support of the Society. Archibald noted such gifts as the extensive family and business papers that make up the Holter Collection in our Archives.

Speakers at the opening included Holter himself, and the show's guest curators, John Smart of Montana Historical Society and Rudi Dietrich of Montana State University. Holter's comments on Adams' "zone" technique, and on his own experience of studying with him, appear overleaf.

John Smart reminded opening-night viewers how young the art of photography is — having been practiced for only a century, compared to the thousands of years of human artwork. He characterized the work of Adams as developing out of the early romantic tradition of landscape photography, and speculated on the historical value of Adams' wilderness photography in preserving such images for future viewers. He spoke of Weston's subtleties and his finding significance in common objects, and the mystery and drama of Bullock's work, which "evokes many questions but does not attempt to impose answers."

In his comments, Dietrich spoke of each photographer's distinctive use of light, his style and purpose of work, and of personality factors that shaped his approach and the content of his work. Dietrich went on to describe his personal reactions, as a photographer, to specific photos in the exhibit.

A capacity crowd listened to the speakers in the Mackay Gallery, among the Russell paintings, before entering the photographers' show in the Poindexter — and a different approach to artistic expression.

My Experiences with Ansel Adams

by Norman J. Holter

Norman J. Holter

John Smart

Rudi Dietrich

My acquaintance with Ansel Adams was a memorable one. Somewhere over ten years ago I had the privilege of being one of his students for a two-week course in photography in Yosemite Park, which was his real homeland. What I would like to talk about is his original approach to photography. This, I think, could be useful to both photographers and non-photographers.

Mr. Adams is one of the finest gentlemen I have ever met. He is an accomplished pianist, hindered lately by arthritis, but he exemplifies to me the close marriage of art and music.

His technique, which is really what I would like to talk about, is terribly far from what the general public and even some professional photographers know about. The first thing he does when planning a photograph is to walk the hills without a camera. He will look around and see something that needs to be recorded and he will look at the scene from several vantage points at dawn, at noon and at dusk. He will record in his head what he is up to. The next day, or maybe two days later if he thinks another day's hiking is necessary, he will carry his heavy 8 x 10 equipment or maybe 5 x 7 and tripod, etc., to the scene. He will have picked the time of day for the proper exposure and he will finally let his camera in on his plans. This is only a bare start toward what he is going to do. He will compose the picture on the camera screen, and when he is done with that he will start thinking about the darkroom. Again most of the public will think that the job is done with a click of the shutter, but Mr. Adams has hardly started. When he is satisfied with the composition on the camera screen he will start "thinking darkroom." This is something that I think few photographers can do very well. When looking through the camera he sees a final piece of art—not just what the camera sees. In his brilliant head he will at that time know what developer to use, what temperature variations are needed, what development time is indicated and everything else about darkroom work to bring out this or that shadow or subdue this or that feature. In other words, as an artist he visualizes the final project and does not just go "click" and the job is finished. He would take notes on these various darkroom variations and possibilities and then finally when the print came out of the soup it would be what his inner self wanted and could be a far cry from what the camera saw.

This is the essence of Mr. Adams' genius. He is believed by many to be the foremost photographer of the western geological scene — he doesn't mind a horse or two in the picture and I have renamed one of his great photographs entitled "Winter Sunrise, Sierra Nevada from Lone Pine 1944," "The Horse."

His great contribution to photography was the concept of the zone system. As his student, I tried very hard to put this into practice, but I found it difficult because I cannot think as far ahead as Adams when he is about to go click with his camera. The zone system, for which he is well noted, involves shades of gray. On a scale of zero to nine he has jet black like that of a black night watchman in a blackboard factory at midnight during an eclipse of the moon. His zone nine is whatever is whiter than a brand new snowfall. To obtain a startling standout sort of photograph one should have some of these zones in it plus all of the gradations of gray between the two.

You might keep this in mind when you visit the show at the Poindexter Gallery in the Montana Historical Society. If you find a photograph that sort of jumps out at you with its precision, clarity, and general quality, you should examine it for zones. Those of us who try to use Adams' technique are called "zones," whether we succeed or not.

These are my memories of Mr. Adams while trying to keep up with him in tramping the hills of Yosemite. At this time, I believe he is 82 years old and has given up making any more original photographs but is hard at work at a number of new albums. He is one of the finest gentlemen I have ever met with a great sense of art and music and a sense of humor. Please come to the show.

Women's History Lecture Series

In commemoration of National Women's History Week, March 6 - 12, the Society is sponsoring a series of presentations on topics in women's history in Montana. They will be offered during the noon hour on Fridays, with the public invited to bring lunches. A small registration fee is charged. Topics and speakers include: "Women Photographers of Montana," a slide presentation by Lory Morrow, Photograph Curator of the Society; "Occasions of Unhappy Differences: Divorce in the Mountain West. Lewis and Clark County, 1865-1900," by Paula Petrik, Associate Professor of History, Montana State University; "Jeannette Rankin: The Woman Who Voted No," a video presentation, produced and directed by Ronn Bayly and Nancy Landgren of Bozeman; "Women of Montana's Homestead Frontiers," by Richard Roeder, Professor of History, Montana State University.

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 449-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

Written and edited by William L. Lang and Barbara C. Fifer as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

Ideas to Be Offered for Anniversaries

Many Montana communities, now and in the next few years, will be marking anniversaries, especially centennials and diamond jubilees. Local celebrations may commemorate the town's founding, incorporation, date of first post office's opening or other significant event in the town's history.

Anniversaries are times for celebrations, speeches and parades; they are also times which give us the opportunity to reflect upon our heritage and culture.

The next four issues of the Post will contain a series of articles suggesting ways in which anniversary celebrations can be organized and observed. In the first article of the series, media presentations will be discussed.

For those individuals or groups interested in doing a publication to commemorate their community's anniversary, the second article will describe the possibilities and offer some guidelines. The third article will be concerned with the organizing of special events such as tours. The final article in the series will emphasize projects which can be completed by museums. It will include ideas on exhibits, demonstrations, living history celebrations and ways in which one can encourage the donation of artifacts.

We are interested in your input concerning local celebrations. If you have ideas from past events which you found to be particularly valuable or have suggestions to share for future observations, please send them to Jennifer Jeffries Thompson or Laurie Mercier at the Montana Historical Society by April 15. We will look forward to hearing from you.

Merritt-Wheeler Memorial Fund Will Assist Library Acquisitions

An endowment honoring two pioneer Montana families will assist our Library's book acquisition budget in future years, according to Librarian Bob Clark.

The Merritt-Wheeler Memorial Fund has been established by Richard Lee Merritt of California, and Dr. Fred Merritt, Jr. and his wife Grace Wheeler Merritt of Hawaii, honoring their parents who came to Eastern Montana homesteads in the 1910s.

The gift of $10,000 is to remain in trust, and after six years half of its annual income will be utilized for Library book purchases. The books obtained will hold bookplates denoting that Merritt-Wheeler Memorial Fund monies purchased them.

Richard Lee Merritt has offered personal assistance to the Library in recent years, voluntarily indexing the two-volume work From the Quarries of Last Chance Gulch, which collects historical quotes from early Helena newspapers. He is currently preparing an index to the Montana News Association inserts, the four-page supplements that appeared throughout the state from 1917 to 1941.

Horsedrawn hay wagon given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Pascavage of Whitehall.

Farm Equipment Added to Collections

Recent acquisitions of farm equipment by the Museum point to the new emphasis in types of items gathered for study and exhibit purposes here. This equipment, according to Curator Steve Germann, "reflects our beginning to collect in another, more recent, era."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Pascavage of Whitehall have given us five pieces of field equipment, all of wood and steel construction and dating from around 1915—and all horsedrawn. These include a hay wagon, manure spreader, seeder, rake, and scraper.

From Ken Burnside of Montana City have come a sulky plow, road grader, grain grinder, and an intriguing homemade bait spreader used to fight grasshoppers.

Germann looks forward to impending donations of a restored McCormick reaper and threshing machine, as well as other equipment. Some of the items, he points out, are worse for the wear and may be restored for future exhibits.

"Mac" Retires from MHS

In January, Wilbur McKinney retired from his "third career," as a volunteer at the Society, and we lost the services of one of our most dedicated volunteers.

"Mac" has given over 20 hours a week, since 1975, helping the Photo Archives staff to sort and preserve photographs. A recently-completed and time-consuming, project of his was to create a photocopied "catalog" of many images in the collection — allowing researchers to examine pictures of interest without having to handle the historic prints.

Many of Mac's duties, Photograph Curator Lory Morrow points out, gave behind-the-scenes assistance. He sorted newly-acquired collections, cleaned and repaired photos, organized the postcard collection and the Haynes lantern slides, and helped process uncataloged materials.

Mac's first career, with the National Weather Service, brought him to Helena, where he stayed upon retirement. Two different jobs with the Montana Chamber of Commerce comprised what he calls his second career.

His generosity with his time, cheerful demeanor, and serious concern for our photo collection will be missed.

Museum Needs Rogers Sculptures to Exhibit

"Do our members have Rogers Groups, and will they donate them to us for the Haynes Exhibit?" Curator of Collections Patty Dean asks.

Tens of thousands of the popular Victorian statues graced American homes, but far fewer of the plaster-cast objects survive. Their sentimental subjects were advertised as "educational," and the sculptor, John Rogers, purposefully utilized plaster to keep the price affordable for the masses.

Besides portrait busts that included Shakespeare, Byron, Beethoven, and U. S. Grant, Rogers statues featured "groups" that told stories.

The Society is seeking Rogers sculptures for inclusion in the permanent Haynes exhibit. Early in his career, photographer F. Jay Haynes sold the popular items in his studio, a sideline along with musical instruments that he would drop after succeeding in photography.

If you have a Rogers statue to donate, please contact Patty Dean here.

Another need of the Museum program, according to Registrar Susan Near, is increasing our collection of mail order catalogs. These are used for reference in dating and identifying artifacts, and we would welcome gifts of national retail catalogs (such as Sears, Roebuck or Montgomery Ward) or wholesale trade catalogs for various types of merchandise, dated from 1900 through the 1970s.

Ravalli to Richland: M

U.S. Signal Corps photo, Brady Coll., National Archives

James G. Blaine

Thomas H. Carter

James J. Hill

by Paula Ladenburg

Rosebuds and granite, musselshells and glaciers, Teddy Roosevelt and Mansfield Daniels, Liberty and Lincoln. These diverse, seemingly unrelated terms and names interconnect in one important way. They all appear on the county map of the state of Montana.

The choosing of Montana county names offers an interesting insight into the factors and values which influenced people at a particular moment in Montana history. Some of the names honor national heroes, some honor local ones. Some preserve an area's Native American heritage, celebrate a natural wonder or advertise the region's charms.

Twenty-two Montana counties were named for the various natural phenomena within or on their boundaries, accounting for many descriptive, colorful titles. Cascade County (established in 1887) was named for the Great Falls of the Missouri River; Lake County (1923) borders Flathead Lake; Prairie County (1915) is aptly named for its topography; Rosebud County (1901) took its name from the Rosebud River, so called because of the wild roses growing along its banks; Silver Bow County (1881) took its name from a creek which, when touched by the sun, reminded the early miners of a silver bow; Valley County (1893) derived its name from its location in the valley of the Milk River. Carbon (1895), Granite (1893), Mineral (1914) and Petroleum (1925) were all named for their rich deposits of natural resources. The counties of Wheatland (1917) and Sweetgrass (1895), likewise, are named for these abundant cultivated and natural crops of south-central Montana.

Park (1887) and Glacier (1919) Counties were named for the national parks, Yellowstone and Glacier National Park, which lie within or on their borders.

County names of Indian derivation offer perhaps the most interesting etymology. Some of these names were taken by Lewis and Clark from their Indian guides. Big Horn (1865), Musselshell (1911), Yellowstone (1883) and Powder River (1919) Counties were all named after rivers, the names of which Lewis and Clark received from the Hidatsa Indians. Beaverhead County (1865) was named for a landmark rock formation called Beaverhead Rock by Lewis and Clark's Shoshone Indian guide, Sacagawea.

Deer Lodge County (1865) was named for a mound at Warm Springs with a hot spring at its top which gives off a stream of vapor. When viewed from a distance, it resembled a lodge to the local Indians. They called it "the lodge of the white-tailed deer" because deer frequently grazed at its base. Early French traders and trappers called it "la loge du chevreuil." Later, the name was translated to Deer Lodge and given to the valley, river and, eventually, the county.

Missoula County (1865) drew its name from the Salish Indian word, "Lm-i-sul-etiku," meaning the place of surprise or ambush. The Salish gave this name to Hellgate Canyon because it was often the site of ambushes by enemy Crow and Blackfeet warriors.

Stillwater River was named by Indians for its frequent still pools of water. The Indian word "Itchkeppearja" was translated by the party which named it officially, a party which included J. M. Bozeman. In 1913, the county was given the name Stillwater also.

Twenty-six of Montana's counties were named for individual persons in national and Montana history or tribes of Indians. Flathead (1893), Teton (1893) and Pondera (1919) counties were named for the Indian tribes. Pondera is a corruption of the name give these people by the French, "Pend d'Oreille," meaning earring.

An interesting assortment of Montana historical figures left their names to Montana counties. Broadwater County (1879) was named for Charles A. Broadwater, entrepreneur and prominent figure in the affairs of Montana in the late 1800s. Carter County (1897) honors Thomas H. Carter, Montana's first representative in Congress and later U. S. senator. Daniels County (1920) took its name from Mansfield Daniels, pioneer rancher and storekeeper near Scobey, Montana. Dawson County (1869) memorializes Major Andrew Dawson, a Scotsman who served as clerk for the American Fur Counpany and later operated the trading post at Ft. Benton. Fallon County (1913) was named for O'Fallon Creek, which had been named for Benjamin O'Fallon, an Indian agent with the Atkinson military expedition that travelled up the Missouri

James Fergus

ontana's County Names

River in 1825. Fergus County (1885) was named at the urging of Andrew Fergus, a local settler, for his father, James Fergus. James Fergus, a native of Scotland, emigrated to the United States in 1883 and later settled, mined and ranched in various places in Montana. He was the clerk of the first miners' gulch government organized in Alder Gulch and became involved in the Vigilante movement in 1863. (Marcus Daly's name was given, for one month in 1901, to Deer Lodge County — but removed after legal action by Anaconda residents.)

Judith Basin County (1920) is the only Montana county named (if indirectly) for a woman. The area was given the name by Lewis and Clark in honor of Miss Judith (Julia) Hancock, who would later become Captain William Clark's wife. McCone County (1919) was named for George McCone, one of the county's organizers and later a state senator. Meagher County honors Thomas Francis Meagher and was created in 1866, during his incumbency as acting territorial governor. Phillips County (1915) was named for B. D. Phillips, a pioneer sheepman and owner/operator of gold mines in the Little Rockies. Powell County (1901) was named for Powell Mountain, which had been named for John W. Powell, a mountain man and member of James and Granville Stuart's Gold Creek party.

Ravalli County (1893) was named in honor of Jesuit Father Antonio Ravalli, an Italian who emigrated to the United States at the request of another famous missionary, Fr. Jean-Pierre DeSmet. Ravalli served among the Flathead Indians for forty years. Sanders County (1905) was named for Colonel Wilbur F. Sanders, prosecuting attorney during the time of Vigilante action and prominent figure in Montana political affairs from 1863 to 1905. Toole County (1914) was named for Joseph K. Toole, first governor of the state of Montana. Wibaux County (1914) was named for Pierre Wibaux, native of Roubaix, France, who ranched and banked in eastern Montana in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Twelve Montana counties were named to honor United States historical personages. Five were named for presidents, two for military figures, one for a political figure and two for men of business and development.

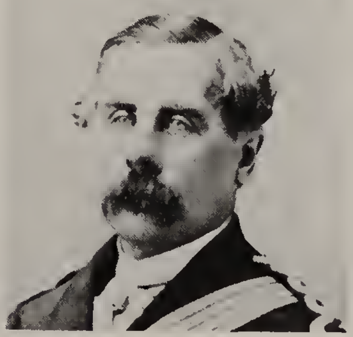
Blaine County (1912) honors James G. Blaine, eminent statesman, Secretary of State in the Cabinet of Benjamin Harrison, and presidential candidate opposing Grover Cleveland in 1884. Chouteau County (1865) takes its name from Pierre Chouteau, one of the partners in the American Fur Company. Custer County (1877) was named to honor General George A. Custer, who died in the Battle of the Little Big Horn the previous year. The Gallatin River had been named in 1805 by Lewis and Clark for Albert Gallatin, then Secretary of the Treasury under President Jefferson. In 1865, the county of the same name was created. Hill County (1912) was named for James J. Hill, "the empire builder," Great Northern Railroad tycoon. The Jefferson River, named by Lewis and Clark in 1805 for President Jefferson, gave its name to the county created in 1865. Lewis and Clark County was created in 1867 from the original county of Edgerton (1865), named for Sidney Edgerton, first Territorial Governor of Montana.

Madison County (1865) was named for the Madison River, which had been named by Lewis and Clark for Jefferson's Secretary of State, James Madison. Garfield (1919), Lincoln (1909) and Roosevelt (1919) Counties were all named in tribute to the Presidents. Sheridan County (1913) honors General Phillip Sheridan of Civil War and Great Plains Indian wars fame.

Four Montana counties were named in attempts to attract settlers by advertising the area's riches. Golden Valley (1920) was named for the color of the grain fields at harvest time, Liberty County (1920) was named in a patriotic sentiment, and Richland (1914) and Treasure (1919) Counties' names advertise their vast agricultural resources.

Paula Ladenburg, a senior at Carroll College, is currently serving as an intern in the publications department of the Montana Historical Society. Paula is an English major with minors in history and philosophy. She is from Columbia Falls, Montana. After graduation from Carroll in May 1983, Paula plans to pursue a career in publishing.

Thomas Francis Meagher



Charles A. Broadwater

B. D. Phillips

Fr. Antonio Ravalli

Secretary of State's Papers Open to Use

Staff Archivist Ellie Arguimbau has completed processing records received from the Secretary of State's office, and these are now available for researchers. The records include material from both the Territorial and State Executive Offices and the Territorial and State Legislatures. They consist of correspondence of both the Governor and the Secretary of State, including some communications with the Legislature; an office diary 1877-1885; reports to the Governor by various state agencies and institutions, including lists of inventories of their offices; petitions to the Legislature by citizens on a variety of social and political issues; and a wide variety of documents on different subjects.

Ellie Arguimbau with 1928 petition from John W. Darnell to Montana's Secretary of State.

Many of the most interesting and unique items do not fit handily into any category but exist as separate items. Mentioning just a few of these will give some idea of the scope of the records.

In September 1868, a treaty between the United States and the Bannock, Shoshone and Sheepeater tribes was negotiated and signed at Virginia City. If ratified it would have created a tiny, 72-square-mile reservation on the North Fork of the Salmon River at Point of Rocks near Ft. Lemhi, Idaho. The reservation would have been provided with a physician, a farmer, a carpenter, a blacksmith, an engineer and an interpreter, plus annuities of $30,000 the first year, $20,000 the second year, and $18,000 for each of the next 18 years. In exchange the Indians would have had to give up all other land claims and to have pledged to keep the peace. A hand-written copy of this never-ratified treaty is included in the records from the Secretary of State's Office.

Also of interest regarding policy towards Indians is Gov. Schuyler Crosby's 1884 report to Secretary of the Interior Henry M. Teller, in which among other recommendations, he suggested ending the reservation system, alloting each family an alternate section of land in the same type of checkerboard pattern as used for railroads' land grants. This, he claimed, would put the Indians in close proximity to progressive white settlers who would teach the Indians modern farming methods.

Of additional interest to researchers are the Muster Rolls of the Montana Militia, 1877; reports of the Territorial Prison and the Insane Asylum, listing inmates; and oaths of office for Notaries Public, Land Commissioners, and others.

Of interest to students of Montana's architectural history are a number of items. There is a record of expenditures of the original investigative team that selected Deer Lodge as the site for the Territorial Prison in 1868. There are also the specifications and an architect's drawing for construction at the Prison in 1884-1885. There are also contracts and specifications for the building and furnishing of the Capitol Building, and various buildings at the state institutions. Especially notable are the contracts with painters Charlie Russell and Ralph DeCamp to paint murals in the Capitol in 1911.

Among the early legislative records are notes and correspondence concerning the controversial first session of the State Legislature, when the Democrats and Republicans were meeting in separate quarters, each claiming to be the legitimate legislature.

Also included in the Legislative records are investigations of various state agencies and institutions, investigations of electoral fraud in Silver Bow County, an investigation of the Liquor Control Commission, and the impeachment proceedings against Secretary of State Charles T. Stewart for alleged misconduct in office, and against Judge Charles L. Crum of Forsyth for alleged pro-German activities during World War I.

Perhaps the most unique item is contained in a separate wooden briefcase with a gold-painted handle. It is a petition filed with the Secretary of State in 1928 by John W. Darnell, a World War I veteran and former mental patient, describing his treatment at several military mental hospitals, during the period 1921-1927.

All of these are available to researchers with access through indexes in the Society Library.

Legislators See Behind the Scenes

Every two years, when the Montana State Legislative Assembly is in session, the Montana Historical Society hosts an evening open house for the 150 legislators and their families. It is our opportunity to show the lawmakers our latest exhibits, to explain recent projects and ones yet to begin, and to give them a behind-the-scenes look at the Society's operations.

On February 3 our Legislative Open House began with ceremonies honoring nine recipients of 1981 and 1982 State Historic Preservation Awards for significant contributions to historic preservation in the state. Governor Ted Schwinden handed out the awards after he addressed the large crowd on the merits of historic preservation in Montana and the importance of recognizing those individuals who have contributed so much to the preservation effort.

Informal tours of each department in the Society gave visitors an idea of how much and what kind of work goes on in the care of archival, library and museum collections, in the identification and description of historic sites, in the preparation of educational programs and the production of Society publications.

The things of the past — artifacts — always hold a special fascination for museum visitors and the museum department accommodated their interest. Registrar Susan Near and Cataloger Janet Sperry took guests into the archival storage area, where Indian beadwork, old saddles and guns, and antique clothing drew comments and questions. Curator of Collections Patty Dean gave others a look at the works of Russell, Seltzer, and other famous western artists that are currently not on exhibit.

One of the questions asked most often about museum storage is why so little of the Society's holdings are on exhibit at any one time. Those on the tour found out that museum artifacts need special care, including specially designed cases, wrapping materials, hangers, and more. Extended exposure to harsh light, dramatic changes in temperature and humidity, and handling take a toll on artifacts. Just placing an item on exhibit can affect its longevity. And, as the museum staff explained, the collections need conservation work before individual artifacts can be exhibited. One other use of materials in storage, which might surprise most museum visitors, is research. Scholars in art history, anthropology, cultural history and numerous other branches of historical inquiry study artifacts to gain a broader understanding of everyday life in the past.

Visitors to the archives learned about a related problem with manuscripts. Archivists Sue Jackson and Ellie Arguimbau explained to their tour groups in the archives that conservation of archival materials is an essential and complicated task. New materials, such as acid-free folders and boxes, help reduce the natural deterioration of paper manuscripts, but stabilizing and repairing distressed paper materials demands skill and the application of the latest technology.

Guests at the open house also toured the Haynes Exhibit, which is now under construction, the photo archives, library, and publication office. It was a social evening that included a lot of learning about how and why the historical society operates as it does.

Correction

The donor for a pair of Flathead saddle decorations that were pictured on page 4 of our August-September 1982 issue, was mistakenly identified. Wiley Glenn Mountjoy gave these items to the Society in 1975, having obtained them from Elizabeth Ashley around 1930.

Slides Show Rituals of Gros Ventres, Assiniboines

A special resource has come to our Archives, given by J. W. "Duke" Wellington, who, as Superintendent of Fort Belknap Agency from 1947 to 1954, made several series of slides documenting Gros Ventre and Assiniboine sacred rituals. These were performed by tribal elders at Fort Belknap in 1952, and photographed with their permission. Wellington wrote a slide-by-slide narrative of each event, naming the participants and explaining symbolic meanings.

Wellington has deposited a duplicate set of the color slides and their narratives at Newberry Library Center for the History of the American Indian, in Chicago.

The slide sets include:

Assiniboine Sun Dance (122 slides), in which, over three days of fasting and thirsting, "the dancers are volunteering to suffer themselves as a petition to the Creator for His blessing," as Wellington writes.

Grass Dance (65 slides), a social dance including Gros Ventre and Assiniboine people, old and young, in both fancy and plain dress.

Assiniboine Fool Dance (111 slides), combining slapstick humor and mockery with serious prayers for the people.

Opening of the Gros Ventre Feathered Pipe Bundle (52 slides), an honoring ceremony to display the sacred pipe that is used to solicit intercession with the Supreme Being for protection from severe storms or droughts.

Opening of the Sacred Flat Pipe Bundle (Medicine Pipe or Bundle) of the Gros Ventres (91 slides). The Pipe is important in various versions of the story of how land came to be created or located out of endless seas that covered the world, and the Bundle includes related symbolic items.

Opening of Red Whip's Medicine Bundle (34 slides), which holds the war talisman that protected Gros Ventre warrior Red Whip during an attack on a Sioux party in the 1870s. The fragile Bundle was given to Wellington by Phillip Shortman, who retually opened it as these slides were taken.

Photo Archives: More Pictures, More Use

Vivian Hayes has joined the Photo Archives staff under a six-month, grant-funded, contract—and will give much-needed assistance in cataloguing photos and updating the collection's card catalogue. Hayes is a Helena native who holds an M.A. in Library Science from Indiana University, and has cataloguing experience at Emory University, DeKalb Library System, and Georgia State University of Urban Life, Atlanta.

As Photograph Curator Lory Morrow notes, about three-fourths of our 140,000 pictures remain uncatalogued, and we are currently receiving about 15,000 aditional images each year. Increasing interest in photographs for research, publication, and exhibition has demanded much of the work time of Morrow, archival technician Becca Kohl, and photographer John Smart. Consequently, reference duties have had to take precedence over cataloguing.

Reference requests come from around the state and the nation, sometimes from overseas, and include an intriguingly diverse spectrum of purposes. Last year, 1,755 inquiries came to the Photo Archives, and nearly 400 orders (averaging approximately five pictures each) resulted. Of course, the original, or vintage, prints in our holdings never leave the building for reference use. Pictures needed by researchers are copied by photographer Smart in our own darkroom, and copy prints go out in the mail.

Many pictures are for publication or exhibit use. Copy prints of images in our collection are used for exhibits by historical societies and museums in Montana and other states, and for illustration by textbook and general publishers, and television and film producers. The National Park Service has drawn on our collection over the years for various exhibitions. Sometimes committees or individuals compiling local histories have found needed portraits and other scenes here, to complement those that have remained in their area.

And then there are photographs used for research purposes—by artists who need to study historical details for their paintings, people who are restoring old buildings, scientific researchers who want to see how a forest plot appeared before logging, technologists looking at the types of steam-powered farm equipment Montanans used, genealogists tracing their ancestors. In Yellowstone National Park, for example, the National Park Service has utilized F. Jay Haynes photos for restoration of historic structures.

Rarely, very rarely, the vintage prints themselves can be lent to major museums for exhibition, if care and handling requirements are met. Two recent shows that included Montana Historical Society photos are the Library of Congress exhibit on the American cowboy and the Rhode Island School of Design's showing of the works of black photographers, 1840 to 1960.

Meanwhile, the generosity of donors continues to increase our photo collection, and conservation and cataloguing efforts continue so that pictures can be both preserved for the future and made accessible to the interested public.

Huffman Photos Donated

The extensive photographic collection of Miles City photographer L. A. Huffman, previously on loan to the Montana Historical Society's photo archives, has been permanently donated. In September 1982, Huffman's heirs, Nancy, Robert, James and Richard Koster, gave us over 1700 glass and film negatives. Since that date, the negatives have been cleaned, copied and catalogued, and reference prints have been made of each negative. The process of making copy negatives from the original glass plates allows us to make new prints from the copy, thus insuring that the fragile originals remain unharmed, in storage.

A catalogue to the collection will soon be available in our library for use by the public.

Montana Historical Society Photo Curator Lory Morrow says of the collection, "It is one of the most historically valuable photo collections by a Montana photographer and I'm excited and pleased to have it in our collection."

Curator of Exhibits Dan Tomberlin designed the directory to main-floor gallery exhibits, at left, that is now in place in our lobby. At right below (l. to r.), Tomberlin and Exhibits Preparator Jim Warner review a blueprint in the permanent Haynes Exhibit, now under construction for a summer 1983 opening.

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Montana State Library
930 E. Lyndale
Documents Section
Helena, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

¶ from the Editor's File

¶ Oral history is about the lives of ordinary people and how they looked at a world that has changed. At its best oral history takes us back with the narrator and tells us things we never knew about yesteryear and how people felt about work, home, country, and more. The Butte Historical Society has produced a gem of a book that does just that. Looking Back From the Hill: Recollections of Butte People (softcover, 1982, $8.95), compiled by Ray Calkins, presents passages from the lives of Butte people who tell what life was like below ground, in the neighborhoods, and growing up in one of the world's great mining towns.

Ray Calkins spent years collecting taped reminiscences of Butte people, the ones who worked their years in the mines, in the uptown stores or making products they sold in Butte. He collected these materials because of his love of Butte, and the care he had for the place shows in the narrations printed in Looking Back From the Hill. Ray Calkins died just before the book went to press. Standing as evidence of what one man's dedication to history can mean, Looking Back From the Hill is also evidence of what a local historical society can do and why those who know understand that local history is one of the most exciting branches of the discipline. For anyone who likes oral history, and certainly for anyone who has affection for Butte, Looking Back From the Hill comes highly recommended. Order from Montana Historical Society, or Butte Historical Society, P.O. Box 3913, Butte 59701.

¶ Readers who remember her or enjoyed the article about her by Liz Stiffler and Tona Blake (Spring 1982 issue of the magazine) will be saddened to know that Fannie Sperry Steele, world champion bucking horse rider and Montana native, died on February 11 at age 95. She lived the last years of her life in a rest home in Helena, but it was not until her 78th year that she retired from horse wrangling and it was still nine years later before she left the ranch and her horses. Where rodeo aficionados gather, her name comes up and the stories of her rides and daring still spark comment, and her fame eventually won her an honored place as a member of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame. She was one of Montana's native-born champions.

¶ The Little Big Horn Associates and the Custer Battlefield Historical and Museum Association are planning a joint meeting, June 18-26, to take place at Northern Hotel in Billings (June 18-24) and at battlefield sites (June 25-26). Included in the program activities are lectures by well-known historians of the Indian wars: Dr. Robert Utley, Dr. John S. Gray, Dr. Brian Dippie, Dr. Don Rickey, Robert Murray, Dr. Jerome Greene, and Don Powers. Field trips are to Fort Custer, Pompey's Pillar, Reno-Benteen battlefield, and the Rosebud battlefield. Art exhibits, illustrated talks, dinner speakers and other events will keep attendees busy throughout the eight days. For further information and registration materials, contact Supt. James V. Court or Park Historian Neil C. Mangum at Custer Battlefield National Monument, P.O. Box 39, Crow Agency, Montana 59022, or call (406) 638-2622.

¶ The Montana Association of Museums will hold their annual meeting in Roundup, April 22 and 23. This year's program features presentations by: Mary Hoffschwelle, Curator of the Original Governor's Mansion in Helena, on the care and conservation of collections; Bill Summers, Montana Historical Society Archivist, on the care and value of local archival collections; and Jennifer Jeffries Thompson and Dan Tomberlin, respectively Curator of Education and Exhibits Designer at Montana Historical Society, on low-budget exhibits and how to plan them. The program registration fee will include continental breakfast and lunch on Saturday. The luncheon speaker will be Louise Rasmussen, editor of the Roundup Recond-Tribune. For registration, lodging and general information on the meeting, contact: Shirley Parrott, 323-1403 in Roundup.

Mansion Open House, Spring Schedule

Members of the Original Governor's Mansion Board hosted a reception and open house on February 9, welcoming legislators, former Mansion Board members, and Montana Historical Society staff members. The crowded mansion, ablaze with lights on a winter night, reminded some of the days when Montana governors entertained yesteryear's politicians and their wives there.

Mansion Curator Mary Hoffschwelle announces that the regular schedule of public tours will resume. Beginning on April 1, tours will be offered from noon until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday. Each tour begins on the hour. Those planning to bring groups to the Mansion should make an appointment by calling Jennifer Thompson at the Society.

Lee Metcalf Papers Open to Researchers

The papers of Senator Lee Metcalf were officially opened to researchers on January 12. Although Archives staff are still processing the collection, the material is accessible because of preliminary work done years ago by an archivist Metcalf himself hired.

Included in the collection that currently occupies 550 linear feet are papers from Metcalf's terms in the U. S. House of Representatives (1952-1960) and in the Senate (1960-1977), along with campaign materials, speeches, and constituent mail.

Although he arranged in 1972 to donate his official papers, the Senator specified that they not be open for research and publication until five years after he left office. He died in January 1978, a few months before the end of what he had stated would be his final term in the Senate.

When Metcalf hired Dale Johnson, now University Archivist at University of Montana, to do the preliminary arranging of his official papers, he was the first Senator to hire a professional archivist while still in office.

The Metcalf papers will offer researchers much information about political concerns and sentiments in Montana over nearly three decades, along with documentation of Metcalf's House and Senate careers.

Other recent acquisitions in the Archives include photographs, county records, and additions to two important collections of family papers.

Willard B. Robinson, a Texas architect and architectural historian, has given us 243 architectural photographs taken mainly in Montana from 1959 to 1961. The largest group documents Helena's commercial buildings, including some since destroyed, with notable segments on Butte, Bozeman, Virginia City, and Castle.

An addition to the Holter Family Papers includes correspondence, photos, and memorabilia of Norman B. and Florence Jefferis Holter and their children, Marian, Richard, and Norman J. (Jeff).

The third installment of the Wilbur Fisk Sanders papers has been received from William R. McIver III, a great-grandson of the Montana lawyer-politician. It includes letters on personal and public matters, manuscripts of speeches and legislation, printed materials, and memorabillia.

From Lewis and Clark County have come 145 volumes of county records dating from 1868 to 1950, that include title abstracts, tax lists, lode and placer books, prisoner registers, widow's pension records, and more.

S
978.6
H6m
v.20#4
Nov.-Dec.
1982

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS
PLEASE RETURN

MONTANA POST
® REGISTERED TRADEMARK

Vol. 20 No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Nov.-Dec. 1982

MHS Press to Undertake New Book

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
DEC 28 1982
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
[illegible]
Helena, Montana 59601

F. Jay Haynes Photo, Haynes Coll., MHS

Golden Spike Pavilion, Gold Creek, M.T., September 8, 1883

On September 8, 1883, at Gold Creek, Montana Territory, near present day Garrison, hundreds of celebrants gathered to mark the completion of the nation's second transcontinental, the Northern Pacific Railroad. The gala occasion was highlighted by speeches delivered by dignitaries, including Northern Pacific president Henry Villard and General U. S. Grant. Next summer is the centennial of that celebration. With the generous aid of a grant from Burlington Northern, Inc., the Montana Historical Society Press will join in the centennial observance with the production of a substantial volume on F. Jay Haynes' documentary and promotional photographs of the Northern Pacific Railroad, from 1877 to about 1905.

Utilizing the fabulous Haynes Photo Collection, already the basis for the Press' prize-winning F. Jay Haynes, Photographer, Montana Historical Society staff will oversee the writing, editing and production of a 200-page, large-format book that will trace the relationships between Haynes and the NP. Haynes, who carried the title of "Official Photographer" for the NP, took photographs of NP construction, excursion trains, structures, rolling stock and engines, roundhouses, scenic views and more, over a thirty-year period. The purpose of the new book, which will be published in late August 1983, is to view the progress and promotion of the NP through the lens of its official photographer and to tell the story of Haynes' photographic efforts on the railroad's behalf.

Edward Nolan has joined the staff of the publications department at the Society for the duration of this project, as a researcher/writer. Nolan will research the 9,000 image F. Jay Haynes Photo Collection, aid in the selection of the best NP-related photographs, research the Haynes-NP connection, and write the text for the book. The task is a challenge for historian Nolan and the Society staff who will be involved.

Nolan, a native of Yakima, Washington, on the NP mainline, has been researching Northern Pacific Railroad history for many years. His master's thesis, written at University of Oregon in 1971, dealt with W. Milnor Roberts, chief engineer of the Northern Pacific in the 1860s. Nolan is also very knowledgeable about the NP mainline and branch line development, the styles and varieties of station houses and other railroad structures, and the general history of the NP.

(continued)

Researcher Edward Nolan and Photo Curator Lory Morrow look over Haynes photos to be selected for new MHS Press book.

He has also had years of experience in archival and historical library work, most recently at Lane County Museum in Eugene, Oregon, and before that at Seattle Historical Society Museum. In addition, Nolan has long been an admirer of F. Jay Haynes' photography, and he believes Haynes' work has been overlooked for too many years. He is ideally suited for this project. As Nolan commented after a couple of weeks of research work, "It seems that I have been preparing for this job for years without knowing it." The Montana Historical Society Press is fortunate to have been able to hire Ed Nolan to research and write this book.

The book is planned to include 175 to 200 photographs, many of them presented in 7" x 9" size or larger. The photographs have been selected to portray the historical development of the NP as it encouraged settlement along its line and the historically important photographs Haynes took in his official role. Many of the photographs originally were commissioned by NP officials, while others were of Haynes' own selections that were utilized by the company in their promotion efforts.

Regardless of Haynes' premise for taking the specific photos, the historical photographic record produced by Haynes is impressive and very enlightening. In it we see views of roadbed construction, bridge and trestle construction, engineers with their locomotives, immigrants to a new land, the promise of bountiful farms and new towns. Haynes' camera, as this book will present, caught the images of a civilizing force piercing the new land — the Northern Pacific transcontinental.

Although Burlington Northern, Inc. is providing substantial support for this book, the contents, design and production of the volume are the sole responsibility of the Montana Historical Society Press. An arrangement has been worked out with University of Washington Press to distribute the book on an international basis. Initial press run is expected to be 5,000 copies.

Van West, Supervisor of Capitol Tours

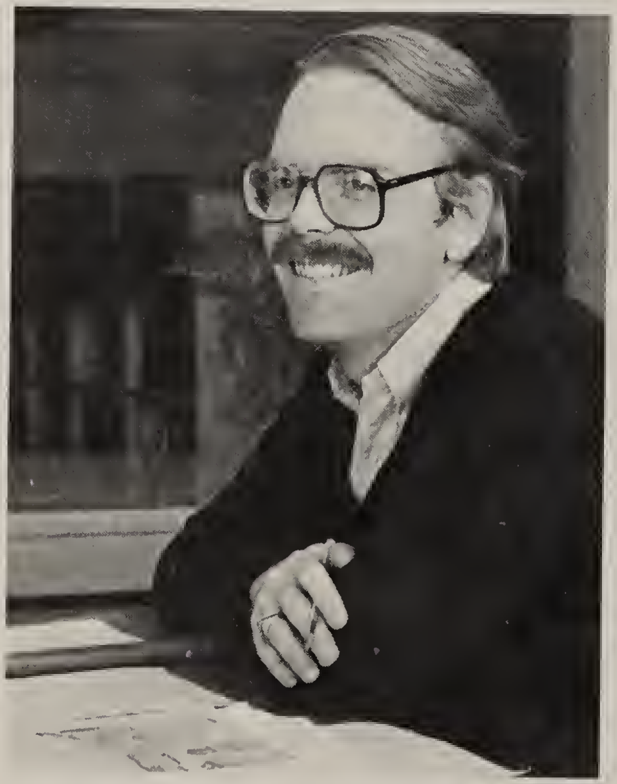
In September, Van West became supervisor of the Montana State Capitol tour program, which has been under the direction of the Society since late spring. As part of his duties, he is continuing to prepare an interpretation plan for the guides' use.

He is emphasising, he says, that "we are interpreters rather than only tour guides, presenting themes" for Montanans to consider as they view the art and architecture and hear the history of their capitol.



West describes the capitol as "where the people's representatives and representations of the people are combined in a symbolic structure," adding that its decorations demonstrate how turn-of-the-century Montanans saw their past.

An historian who is currently pursuing his own research into Montana topics, West received his B.A. from Middle Tennessee State University, an M.A. from University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and a Ph.D. from the College of William and Mary. He has worked as an interpreter at Colonial Williamsburg.

Serving with West as capitol tour guides are Joan Haefer, a longtime Society docent and former teacher, and Ed Madej, an ecologist and freelance writer who has taught at the college level.

Group tours during the winter season, including the Legislative Session, must be scheduled at least two weeks in advance—by calling Jennifer Thompson at the Society.

New Appointments to OGM Board

The Society's Board of Trustees has appointed two new members to the Original Governor's Mansion Restoration Board. Joan Bousliman, who has long been an active supporter of the Mansion, replaces retiring Board member Hugh McWhorter. Marjorie Sharp, who is also on the Board of the Friends of the Society, will fill the unexpired term of Janeen McCarvel, who resigned from the Board. The Trustees also reappointed Carla Cronholm and Bill Coddington to their second terms on the Board.

The Mansion Board elected a new slate of officers at its October meeting. Bill Coddington is the 1982-83 Chairman, Carla Cronholm is Vice-Chairman, and Sue Bartlett is Secretary-Treasurer.

AASLH Selects Mary Hoffschwelle

Mary Hoffschwelle, Curator of the Original Governor's Mansion, has been selected by the American Association for State and Local History to attend a national seminar in early December. "Interpreting the Decorative Arts in Historical Agencies" is hosted at the Louisiana State museum and The Historic New Orleans Collection in New Orleans.

Ms. Hoffschwelle will join other historical agency professionals from across the nation, including staffers from museums, other historical societies, and historical sites. Participants were selected on the basis of their involvement in decorative arts and their ability to pass seminar-gained skills on to others.

Experts in various fields of decorative arts will offer modern interpretive techniques and their application for historical agencies. Participants will study research techniques and methodologies, collecting strategies, aesthetics and provenance, form and function, and exhibit themes and techniques.

History Conference Sessions Taped

All sessions and individual speakers at the History Conference were tape-recorded, and copy tapes (in cassette form) are available for $3.00 per tape, postage included. Because some sessions ran long enough to require more than one cassette, you might want to inquire before placing an order. Contact Jennifer Thompson here at the Society.

Society Announces Bradley Fellowship

The Society has announced creation of a $5,000 summer fellowship for researchers of our library and archival collections, with the first to be awarded next summer. It is funded by an endowment from an anonymous benefactor. Applications are open to both professional and amateur historians.

The fellowship is appropriately named, for 19th century Army lieutenant James H. Bradley whom Joseph Kinsey Howard claimed as "one of us amateurs," adding "to whom Montana will always be in debt." Howard described Bradley's collecting of Indian folklore as being done from an attitude of respect, and also credited him with a careful recording of frontier life.

Extending from June 1 through September 15, the fellowship requires its recipient to be in residence at the Society for a minimum of eight weeks, and to file a brief report on work accomplished, at the end of that term.

Criteria for projects are: appropriateness of the research to the Society's holdings, the applicant's experience and training, and potential of the project to result in a published work of either article or book length.

While the fellowship will not be awarded to subsidize thesis or dissertation research, it may be used to research an area that will be included within a later thesis or dissertation.

Works may be considered for publication by the Montana Historical Society Press, or by Montana the Magazine of Western History.

Although applicants need not be professional historians, they should evidence experience as well as ability in historical research. Applications should consist of a resume including a list of publications, if any, three letters of reference, and a project proposal. The Fellowship Award will be made by a committee comprising three Society staff and two additional members. They must be submitted no later than March 1, 1983, to the Director's Office at the Society. Additional information is available from Brian Cockhill, Assistant Director.

Roeder Wins Paladin Award

This year's Vivian A. Paladin Writing Award, which is given to the author of the best article to appear in Montana the Magazine of Western History, was presented to Dr. Richard B. Roeder at the Ninth Annual Montana History Conference in Great Falls.

He was honored for his biography of Ella Knowles, Montana's first woman attorney, that was entitled "Crossing the Gender Line" and appeared in the Summer 1982 special issue, "Women on the 19th Century Frontier."

Each year the editorial board of the magazine is polled by the editors for their choice as the best article. The award criteria include the literary style, use of research materials, and contribution to our knowledge of Montana and western history. Named for Editor Emerita Vivian A. Paladin, the award carries a cash prize of $150 and an engraved silver bowl.

Roeder, a Professor of History at Montana State University, is a specialist in Montana political history, especially the 1890 to 1920 period. He is co-author, with Michael P. Malone, of the standard textbook on Montana history, Montana: A History of Two Centuries, and he has also co-authored with Malone a reader, Montana's Past, and Montana As It Was: 1876. A frequent contributor to the magazine and other regional history journals, Roeder is known by readers for his exceptional article "Joseph Kinsey Howard and His Vision of the West" (Winter 1980). In "Crossing the Gender Line," Roeder did what he does best by digging out elusive facts, explaining an historical event with clarity, and writing it with grace.

MHS Press Wins Book Award

F. Jay Haynes, Photographer, the recent publication of the Montana Historical Society Press, has received one of the American Association for State and Local History's Commendation of Merit Awards. Each year AASLH receives carefully screened nominations from all over the nation for awards in three categories. The Commendation of Merit, the largest of the award categories, honors state and local historical societies for outstanding contributions to local and regional history.

AASLH, a non-profit association headquartered in Nashville, Tennesee, has operated an annual awards program since 1944, and has a current membership of over 7,500 individuals and institutions in the United States and Canada.

This year there were over 150 nominations considered at the AASLH annual meeting in Hartford, Connecticut. The Haynes book, which presented 160 of F. Jay Haynes' best photographs in full-size duotone format, received the award for the excellence of the book as a product of a state historical society.

"This award," Society director Robert Archibald commented, "is particularly gratifying to all of us who participated in making this book or watched it being done and lent support. It was a group effort of staff members from publications, photo archives and library departments."

The Montana Historical Society Press, which is now embarking on another volume of Haynes photographs, hopes soon to be capable of producing two to four books per year. The AASLH award, strong support from the Board of Trustees and the Society staff, and the prospects of good sales point to a strong future for the Press.

Christmas Show and Sale Set

The Seventh Annual Christmas Show and Sale is open in our lobby from December 4 through December 31, offering art and craft items in a wide variety of media. The show was coordinated by our Education Department, with proceeds going to benefit their programs. Members of Friends of the Society assisted in creating the display.

Available at the show are paintings, stained glass, stoneware, beadwork, weaving, pottery, wood carvings, bronzes, photographs, and Christmas decorations.

The Christmas show traditionally opens with a public reception, this time on Saturday, December 4, with an evening of half-hour programs including choral and solo singing, a puppet show for children, harpsichord and flute music, and dramatic readings.

But the Christmas show is also an occasion for a family event that's not open to the public. Just before the reception, Society staff and volunteers, and their children, gather for treats and a visit from Santa Claus. On November 20, the children had attended a workshop here to make the ornaments decorating our lobby Christmas tree.

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 449-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

Written and edited by William L. Lang and Barbara C. Fifer as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

The Original Governo

by Mary Hoffschwelle, Curator, Original Governor's Mansion

There are new plans afoot for the Original Governor's Mansion. These plans are the result of an intensive study of the Mansion's history and they are set out in an interpretive plan for the Mansion's next five years. What is involved is really a change of focus: instead of a house and tour generally attuned to the late nineteenth century, we will gradually move to an interpretation and furnishings plan centered on the years between 1900 and 1917. During these years, the Mansion went from private home to official residence, a crucial turning point in its history. It is easy to announce these new plans, but it was quite another matter to develop them and ensure their historical accuracy. Let me outline the process and illustrate it with a few examples of the kinds of information used to study and interpret the Mansion's history.

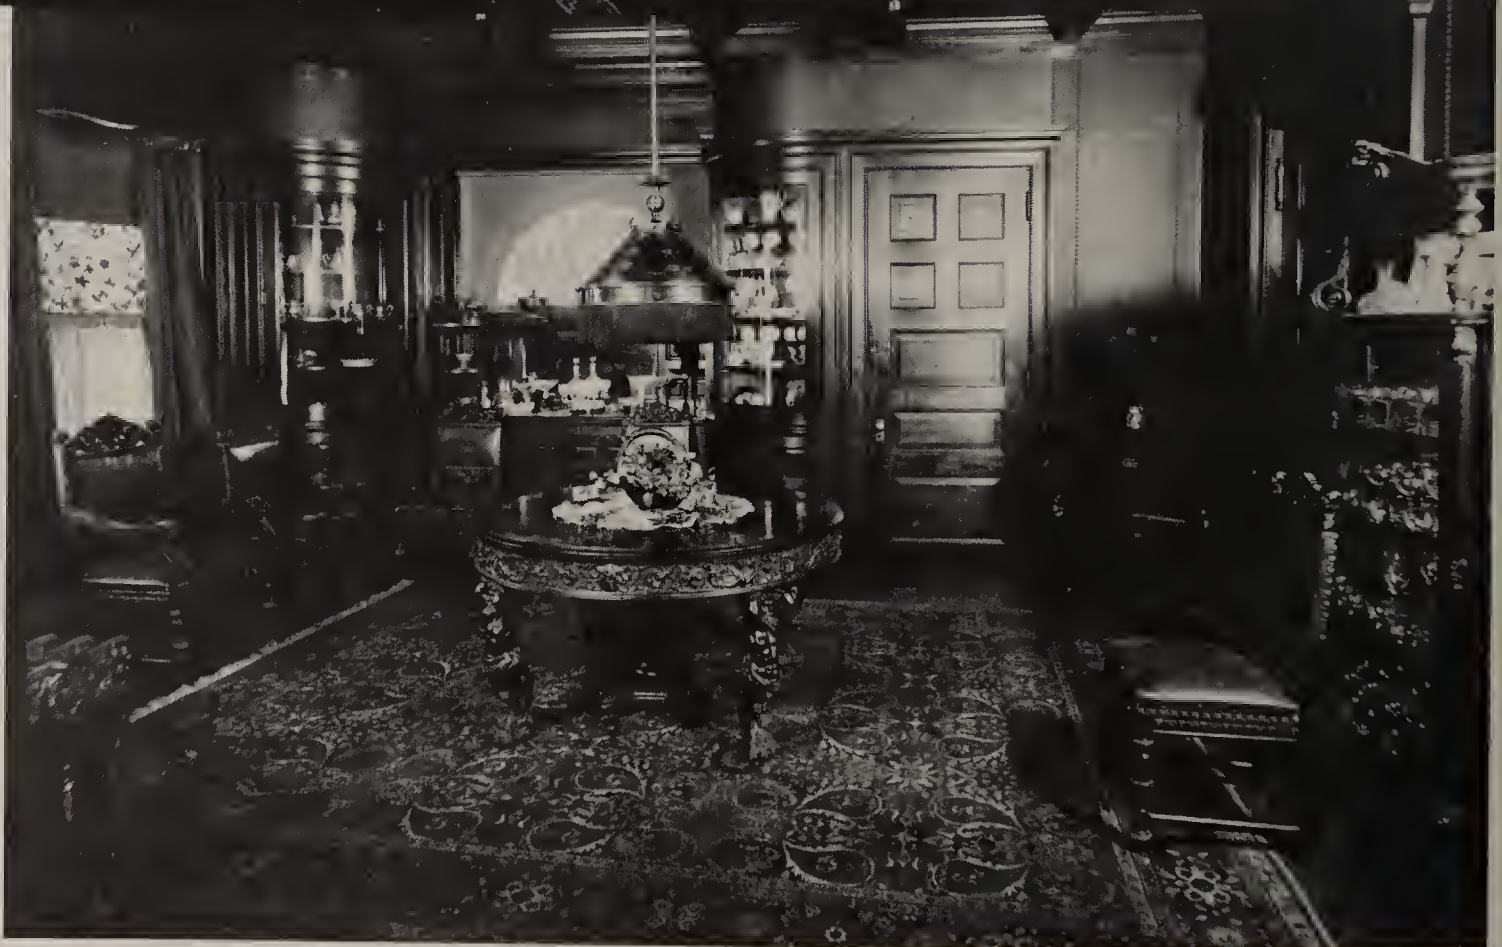
It all began with the collection of bits of information, information which had to be evaluated, corroborated, contradicted, and connected. The next step was to compile this information about the Mansion, from its construction through to its restoration, to provide a general overview of the history of the building.

Historical information about the Original Governor's Mansion comes in all shapes, sizes, and media. Sources of information include written documents, oral history, pictures, and artifacts. No one source tells the whole story and it was the ability to connect these individual pieces of information that enabled us to reconstruct the Mansion's history.

A few examples will show how different types of information were put together to answer specific questions about the building. For instance, the date of the Mansion's construction has long been a mystery. Was it built in 1885? 1887? 1888? And who was the architect? Cass Gilbert perhaps? Frank Chessman, son of the original owner, wrote in a letter that he distinctly remembered that the house was built in 1885 and that his father had hired Cass Gilbert as the architect.

A recollection, however, is not always accurate and must be verified. Official records offered no help, and so the next source of information to be mined was the Helena press. William Chessman's construction projects were the subject of a number of short articles in the Helena Independent and Herald. They first reported that Chessman had plans to build a new home in April of 1887. An article in the Independent in

The Study, 1913. Peter Larson had the Study decorated in the Mid-Eastern style in the 1900s. According to Emily Stewart Stephens, "Mr. Larson may have enjoyed this room, but during our stay, it was used for telephone conversations, private conversations of a business nature and for putting children who for one reason or another needed to regain their manners and tractability."



The Mansion Dining Room (right), 1913. Today this room is probably the one which most closely resembles its original appearance.

’s Mansion: New Plans

August gave a complete account of Chessman’s building plans, reporting that the Chessmans intended to demolish their old home and build a new mansion at the corner of Ewing and Sixth to be designed by the firm of Hodgson, Stem and Welter of St. Paul and Helena. Later articles in 1888 noted that construction took place in that year.

To set the date at 1888 and identify the architects, all that was needed was a long search through the newspapers. Frank Chessman’s memory was not correct in this instance, but such recollections cannot be dismissed as sources of accurate information. Indeed, memoirs can be used very effectively in conjunction with other sources. Let’s take another example.

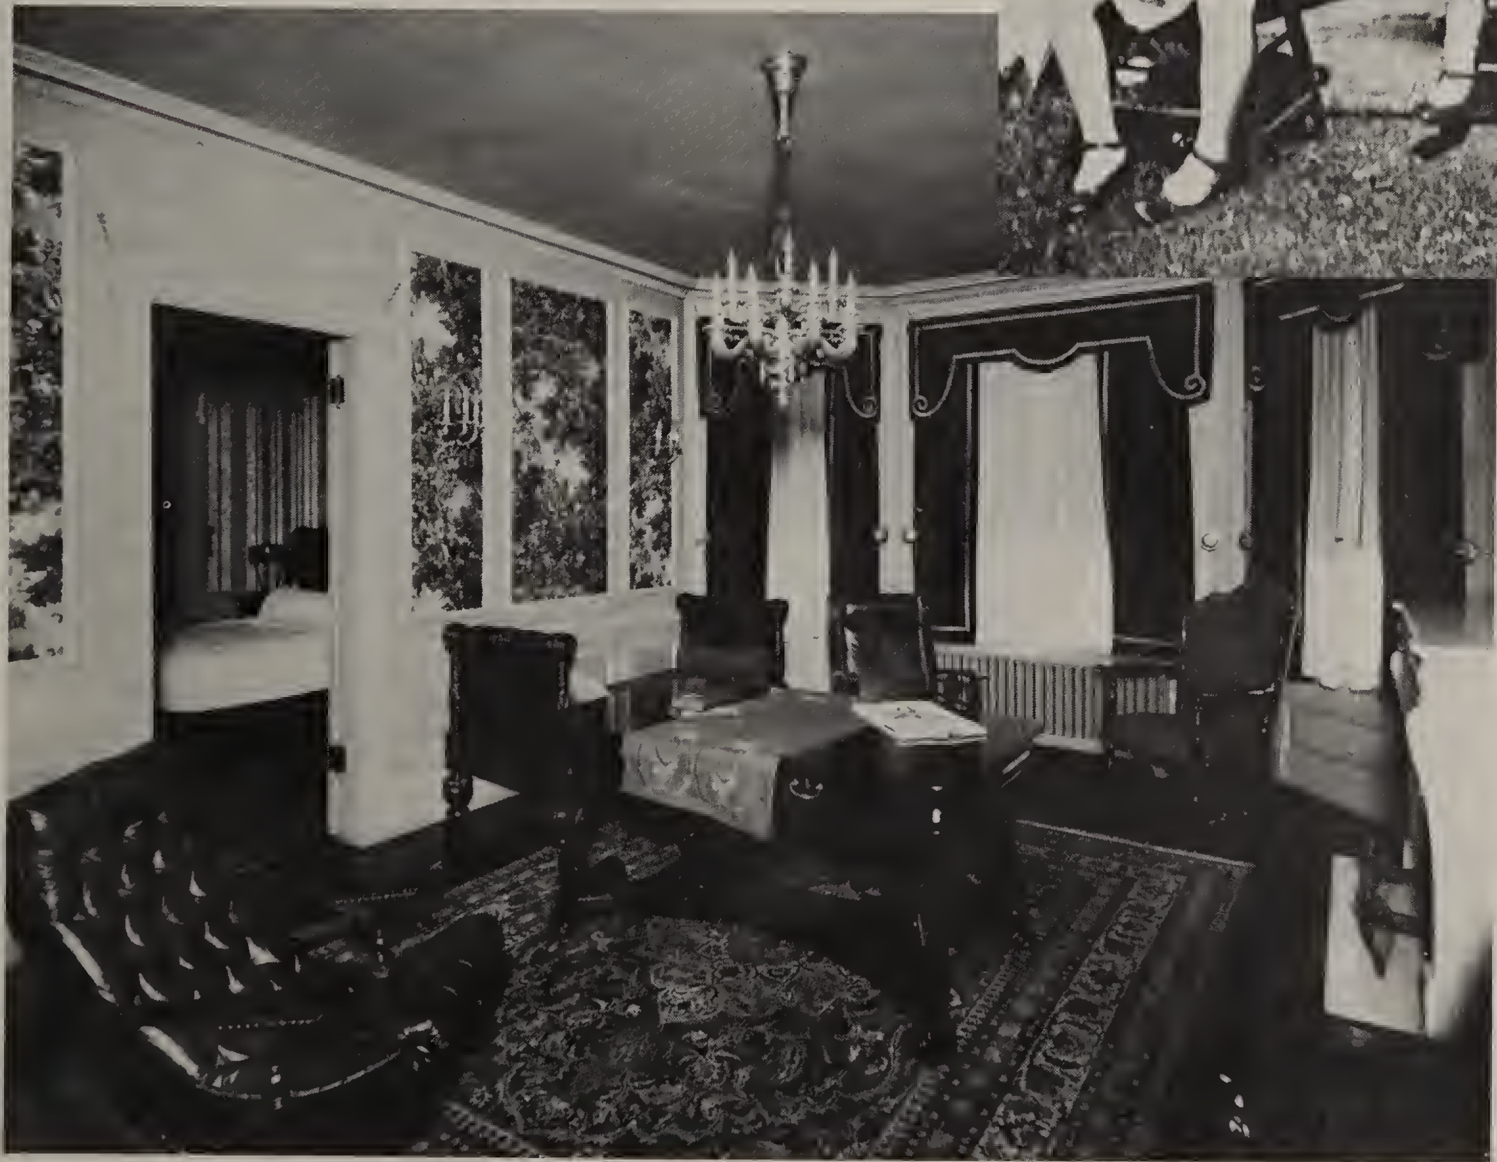
Governor and Mrs. Stewart’s three daughters, Emily Stewart Stephens, Marjorie Stewart Keeton, and Leah Stewart Brickett, have each written accounts of their lives at the Mansion from 1913 until 1921. These memoirs can be compared with each other to check their descriptions of specific rooms. But we do not have to stop there, for in the Society’s Photo Archives are five photographs of rooms at the Mansion, dated 1913. The written recollections of these rooms correspond generally to the photographs, an important agreement of evidence that validates the most complete sets of both written and pictorial information about the Mansion’s interiors that we have for any period in its history.

These important sources are further complemented by artifacts, in this case some original furnishings still in the Mansion today. The Tobey Furniture Company dining room set now in the Mansion is the same pictured in the 1913 photograph; oral tradition takes it back even further. Two chairs now in the Mansion Sewing Room can be glimpsed in the 1913 photograph of the second floor sitting room; this photograph also shows the floral fabric wallcoverings that still hang in that room. A photograph of the Study at the same date was crucial in the identification and repurchase of the large brass chandelier from that room. And the Stewart daughters, in their memoirs and correspondence, remembered and described all of these things.

Those are just a few examples of the value of both two- and three-dimensional historical documents to a balanced and accurate history of the Mansion. With that history in hand, the next step was to consider its evidence and use it to develop a plan to guide the building’s continued restoration, furnishing, and public tours. The goal was to select a period and theme that combined the most complete, fully integrated body of information with an important aspect of the house’s history. For the Original Governor’s Mansion, the years between 1900 and 1917 are the most fully documented and also the years during which the important transition from private dwelling to official residence occurred, a transition that secured a continuing position of prominence for the building. The theme that illuminates these years for us is that of the life of the household, for the Mansion was always a home for a family.

Like all restoration projects, this one will move slowly at first, as we continue to assemble information, especially about the Mansion’s furnishings and its occupants. There is also a very practical side to this pace — the building must be rewired and other maintenance projects completed before we presume to begin. As our plans progress, we continue to interpret the history of the house for the public in our tours. We hope that you will join us in our venture into a new phase in the history of the Mansion.

Emily, Leah, and Marjorie Stewart (above) in the Mansion Yard, 1915. There were many other children in the neighborhood for the Stewart girls to play with but, as Marjorie recalled, “we always had to dress up which annoyed us no end.”



The Sitting Room (left), 1913. Mrs. Stewart played “Schubert’s Serenade” on the victrola in this room as a hint to her children that it was bedtime.

Ninth Annual Montana History Conference

James Welch

James Welch, acclaimed poet and author from Missoula, capped a most successful Ninth Annual Montana History Conference with a beautiful address at the Rainbow Hotel on October 30. It was the concluding banquet of the conference and Welch was the master of the evening. He quietly pulled his audience into his world of Blackfeet warriors of a century and more ago by reading from his new novel on the subject. In understated tones, he explained how deeply an individual's heritage affects his historical viewpoint, and how the Blackfeet past conveys to him as an author so much more than a story of tragedy and sorrow. Yet, as Welch explained, his stories often have sad endings because there is much sadness in Blackfeet history. In his new work, he will probe the interplay of courage, fright, success and failure in one Blackfeet warrior group as Welch the author takes them through the waning years of Indian freedom on the plains of northern Montana.

The Ninth Annual Montana History Conference, which was partially funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities, featured James Welch as part of a broad but cohesive theme: "From the River North: The Heritage of Western Canada and the United States." For the first time, the Montana History Conference offered a thematic approach to the three-day meeting that included panel sessions, lectures, illustrated talks and workshops. Informal comments made at the conference indicate that the theme approach was a welcome change and succeeded in alerting everyone to the common historical bonds between the United States and Canada.

Blackfeet, in both Canada and Montana, were the focus of a very interesting formal session on Saturday afternoon. The session featured Dr. Murton McCluskey, Director of Indian Education in the Great Falls Public Schools, Dr. Hugh Dempsey of the Glenbow-Alberta Institute of Calgary, Dr. Thomas Wessel of Montana State University and John C. Ewers discussing the full range of pre-reservation and reservation period history of the Blackfeet and Chippewa-Cree peoples who hunted and migrated back and forth across the international boundary. The same focus on international communication was the topic of discussion in another Saturday afternoon session on the trade patterns north from the Missouri River. Prof. David Dinwoodie of University of Alberta at Edmonton, Jack Lepley of Fort Benton and James Francis of Idaho Falls explained how central the development of Missouri River steamboat trade was to the high plains of the United States and Canada.

Perhaps no greater expression of the historical and political links between the two nations can be found than in the creation of the Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park. Dave Walter, Reference Librarian at Montana Historical Society, challenged a panel, including Duane Barrus of Waterton Lakes National Park, Glacier Park Superintendent Robert Haraden, Prof. Hans Peterson of Northern Montana College and Prof. William Furdell of College of Great Falls, to reevaluate how successful the peace park concept has been. The panel and audience responded to Walter's paper with a full-range discussion of the merits of international cooperation in park administration and environmental management and politics.

Two workshops, on Friday and Saturday, and one formal session on Friday afternoon discussed homesteading. In the session, specialists presented papers on the settlement of the plains in Canada and the United States, on the founding and settlement of Great Falls as a booster town, and on the literature of women on the homestead frontier of both nations. As distinct as the conditions in Canada and the United States were, the sum of the presentations clearly indicated that there was much more similarity than dissimilarity in the homestead frontiers of both countries.

The homestead workshops featured specialists, including Jim Muhn of the Bureau of Land Management, John Lehr of University of Winnipeg, Allan Newell and Dan Gallacher of Historical Research Associates in Missoula, and historian Kurt Schweigert of Bismarck, North Dakota, explaining how to research the history of homesteads and homestead developments. They introduced new research methods and suggested how best to evaluate the significance of historic sites associated with the history of homesteading on the plains. As Martha Bowers of Iowa City, Iowa, explained, the most important research into homestead history needs to be directed at the patterns of development, not at just the exceptional or unique sites.

There is great interest in researching homestead history, from as diverse interests as genealogical to legal questions associated with energy developments on the plains. The two workshops stressed the variety of research materials that should be used in these studies, from the historical changes in homestead architecture as settlers moved westward to the specifics of how homesteads were located and titled. And the workshops made it clear that homesteads are legitimate objects for historical research and that the interest in these studies is high.

Fred Quivik

Delores Morrow, Photo Curator at Montana Historical Society, chaired another workshop at the conference, this one dealing with the use of photographs in historical research. Architect Jim McDonald of Missoula demonstrated, using slides of historical and contemporary photographs of the Montana State Capitol, how architects can piece together a tangled architectural history. Ellen Seeley of Glacier National Park demonstrated the same type of use of comparative photographs in land management and natural history research. Society Photo Technician John Smart explained the intricacies of handling, copying and appreciating historical photographs.

Oral history was the subject of another workshop, which featured a live interview of Vivian A. Paladin, former editor of Montana the Magazine of Western History. In a most interesting demonstration of what oral history can do, Diane Sands of the Montana Oral History Association asked Mrs. Paladin about her life in the publishing and printing business, from her earliest days in Glasgow as a young linotype operator to her years at the Society.

An illustrated lecture, "Toward a Pictorial History of the Blackfeet Indians," presented by Senior Ethnologist Emeritus at the Smithsonian, John C. Ewers, equalled James Welch's evening address for interest and insight. Ewers, the first curator at Browning's Museum of the Plains Indian in the early 1940s and for years a consultant to Montana the Magazine of Western History, explained how artists' perspectives on the Blackfeet had changed over nearly a century, and gave the audience the benefit of his years of study of the Blackfeet and western art.

Another illustrated lecture, presented by Fred Quivik of Butte, gave viewers a nostalgic and informative look back at the recently demolished Great Falls smelter. Quivik, an architectural historian, showed a mixture of historic and contemporary photos taken just before destruction of the facilities. He explained how the Great Falls smelter complex operated, and described many of the architectural features of the smelter buildings.

From beginning to end, the Ninth Annual Montana History Conference proved again how much interest there is in the history of our state and region. Next year's conference will be held in Helena at the now traditional time, sometime in October.

New Society Volunteers Program

Since the early 1970s, docents have been an important part of the Montana Historical Society, helping with duties that range from preparing receptions to guiding school groups through the museum. Over the past summer, the docents' own board and Curator of Education Jennifer Thompson worked together to reorganize the program, now to be known as the Friends of the Society.

Under this umbrella title, three separate branches now exist for volunteer activity. About 70 people are currently participating in the program, some in two or all three aspects. Membership is open to public application annually in the autumn, for individuals interested in Montana history and willing to devote a regular time each week to their duties.

One branch of Friends of the Society retains the title of Docents, and continues the traditional function of "leading"—from which their name derives. They are trained to give tours of our own museum exhibits, or of the Original Governor's Mansion, and can also offer specially-designed tours.

Docents have given walking and bus tours to Helena and visiting school groups, focusing on a specific theme to enrich a current classroom topic. For example, a group of third graders learning about how communities develop were given a chronologically-arranged tour of some Helena neighborhoods. A junior high group studying architecture were guided among buildings that exhibited particular styles and features.

Pre-tour preparation is another aspect of Docents' duties, in which they visit classrooms before a planned school trip to the Society and explain how a museum can teach. They also take "treasure box" presentations of artifacts that pupils can examine, artifacts relating to a topic under study. Currently, 39 people participate in the docent program.

Docent Rita Sheehy with preschool children in the new Haynes Auditorium

The Muses, second branch of the Friends of the Society, serve the social arm of the Society's functions, by preparing and hosting receptions and gallery openings. We currently have the assistance of 25 muses.

Finally the Departmental Assistants are the group who become extensions of departmental staff by assisting with responsibilities ranging from research and indexing, to inventory and reception work. They have already proved invaluable in departments throughout the building as they help with both special projects and ongoing workloads.

Trustees Award Given To Stanley R. Davison

The 1982 Board of Trustees Award for Outstanding Contribution to Montana History, presented at the concluding banquet of the Ninth Annual Montana History Conference in Great Falls, went to Dr. Stanley R. Davison, Professor Emeritus at Western Montana College in Dillon. Dr. Davison, a native of East Helena and a graduate of University of Montana, was selected as the award recipient for his many years of unselfish service to the study and promotion of Montana history. As a scholar, teacher and collector of historical materials, Davison has greatly contributed to the development of Montana historical studies.

Dr. Davison, who received his Ph.D. in History from University of California at Berkeley, taught for a number of years at University of Montana and joined the faculty at Western in 1957, where he stayed until retirement. Davison continues to research and write Montana history, to do, as he says, "all of those projects I had no time to do."

Several of his articles have been published in Montana the Magazine of Western History, including "1871: Montana's Year of Political Fusion" (1971) and "Confederate Backwash in Montana Territory" (1967). One of the most influential of his articles, "Hopes and Fancies of Early Reclamationists" (1955), appeared in Historical Essays on Montana and the Northwest, a volume honoring Paul C. Phillips and edited by K. Ross Toole and J. W. Smurr.

Society Hires Public Affairs Director

J. Anne Skinner joined the Society as Public Affairs Director during the summer, a new position that answers a long-felt need. As she describes the job, it is to "provide information to allow the public to use our many services—including ongoing basic ones, as well as the wide variety of educational and special events."

A native of Broadus, Ms. Skinner graduated from Powder River County High School and Eastern Montana College, obtaining a master's degree in Mass Communications from the University of Denver. She has served as Public Information Director for the Montana Department of Health and Environmental Sciences.

At the Society, she states, "it's exciting to be working with so many developing programs, and to inform the public about the diversity of methods used in preserving our Montana heritage."

Merrill G. Burlingame—K. Ross Toole Award Announced

The Merrill G. Burlingame-K. Ross Toole Award has been created by the Society to honor two of Montan's most influential and admired teachers of history, and to encourage student research and publication. To be given annually, the award will include a cash prize and publication of an article-length work in Montana the Magazine of Western History.

Manuscripts by undergraduate and graduate students will be considered, on topics of Montana or Western history. Students must be currently enrolled in a college or university, but need not be majoring in history or attending a Montana school. They must be sponsored by a faculty member from their institution.

Criteria for the award include readability and style of presentation, use of research materials, and overall conception of the article. Deadline for manuscript submission is July 1, 1983. Articles should be typed double-spaced, with notes and bibliography on separate sheets. Students should send them, with a cover letter and letter of sponsorship from a faculty member to William L. Lang, Editor, at the Society.

¶ from the Editor's File

1865

DEADHEAD

Montana State Library
930 E. Lyndale
Documents Section
Helena, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

ARTCRAFT PRINTERS

¶ An item from Butte in the 1890s conjures up most everyone's contemporary hope that additional coin will appear at holiday time to lessen the financial impact of the gifting season. It seems that one William Mulcare of Butte carefully evaluated the Montana-bred turkeys for sale at the West Park street market and chose what appeared to be a plump, young Tom for his family's holiday feast. In that turkey's gizzard Mulcare fished out two smallish gold nuggets and one sizable sapphire. Although there was no comment from Mulcare on how tasty the bird was, a local jeweler sweetened Mulcare's holiday coffer by offering him $11.48 for the gem and gold pieces. Mulcare's 75¢ investment in the market-sold turkey had turned a nice profit, but it also set him to thinking. As the Butte paper put it: "Bill is now hunting for the original grazing ground of that rooster, to see if he worked out all the claims before his timely demise."

¶ Transportation schemes in the American West often verged on the bizarre and many readers are no doubt aware of the attempt to use camels in the American Southwest, but few probably know about the introduction of camels into Montana in the mid-1860s. In a delightful reminiscence of early-day Helena, pioneer Charles W. Cannon described the camel train that was housed at the stables on Upper Main Street and disturbed the peace each morning they left their quarters.

> Everybody in town used to go there in the morning to see the strange beasts loaded, to watch them swagger to their feet and start off with tons of freight on their humps for the scattered mining camps of the territory. The train used to come down the gulch, its Main street now, and every horse, cow and beast that encountered the camels would get into a hysterical fright. "The camels are coming" was the warning cry that made every teamster turn from the main trail and the wild fear of the native horses to get away from the outlandish monsters caused many a runaway. . . . They were never popular with the pioneers, but it was because no other beast of burden could be "broke" to them.

¶ Patricia Dean, Assistant Curator in the Society's museum department, authored a recently-published article, "The True Carlsbad of America: The Hotel Broadwater and Natatorium of Helena, Montana," that Society members will find enlightening. Published in The Victorian Society of America's Victorian Resorts and Hotels, edited by Richard Guy Wilson, Dean's article discusses the character of Charles Broadwater's spa as a Victorian Era hostelry and resort. Also of potential interest to readers of the Victorian Society's publication is an article by Rodd L. Wheaton on the interior furnishings of early hotels in western national parks, which includes a lengthy discussion of hotels in Yellowstone National Park.

---

Three Forks Society Book Plans Set for Diamond Jubilee

The Three Forks Area Historical Society announces that the pre-publication sale of their book, "Headwaters Heritage History," will continue until February 1, 1983. The book contains photos and family histories covering Gallatin County communities. At 700 pages in length, the book will be published in August 1983 to coincide with the Diamond Jubilee Celebration of Three Forks. Pre-publication price is $35, with an extra $5 for postage and handling. Orders shoud be sent to: Ruth Myers, Box 682, Three Forks, MT 59752.

Tour Group Reservations

School groups and organizations who plan to visit Helena during the 1983 Legislature are invited to include tours of the Capitol and the Original Governor's Mansion in their travel plans.

Now that the Society is coordinating tours of both buildings, reservation arrangements should be made through the Education Department here at the Society. "We rely upon volunteer assistance," Curator of Education Jennifer Thompson states, "and so must have reservations at least two weeks in advance." From January through March 1983, the Original Governor's Mansion will be open only to groups that have made reservations.

Photo Show Scheduled For 1982

Works by three prominent 20th century photographers will be the featured exhibit in our Poindexter gallery from February 4, 1983, through June 15. They will replace the "Presence of the Past" exhibit that's been on view since summer.

Photographers represented are Ansel Adams, Wynn Bullock, and Edward Weston. Emphasis upon Western scenes, especially landscapes, is the guiding theme, according to Curator Steve Germann. Among the three photographers, pictures range in date from the 1920s to the 1970s.

The 30 to 40 prints to be included in the show are selections from limited edition portfolios given to the Society by Norman J. Holter in 1980. All are in black and white.

Photo Technician John Smart, Exhibits Curator Dan Tomberlin and Collections Curator Patty Dean select photos from an Ansel Adams portfolio.

"Children in Montana" Exhibit Schedule

"Children in Montana," the traveling photograph and text exhibit created by Curator of Collections Patty Dean for the Society, has received an enthusiastic response from organizations around the state. It is already reserved for one-month showings throughout 1983 and 1984.

The exhibit, funded by the First Bank System, is available free except for transportation to the next institution. It opened at the end of October at First Bank, Helena.

With pauses for refurbishing, the show's schedule is:
Dec. 1982—First Bank, Butte
Jan. 1983—First Bank, Havre
Feb.—First Bank, Bozeman
Apr.—Fort Missoula Historical Museum
May—First Bank, Missoula
June—First Bank, Great Falls
July—Committee for the Arts, Polson
Aug.—Parmly Billings Library, Billings
Sept.—Mineral County Museum, Superior
Oct.-Dec.—Montana Historical Society

S
978.6
H6m

PLEASE RETURN

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
OCT 18 1982
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST
* REGISTERED TRADEMARK

Vol. 20 No. 3 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society Aug.-Sept. 1982

The current Formal Museum entrance, at left, and the central corridor that features transportation models along the walls.

Formal Museum to be redesigned, enlarged

When the first silent film using closeups was shown, and a human head suddenly filled the screen, audiences panicked—unprepared by all art for this new sight. Today that may be amusing. Throughout our lives, new and changing film effects have continuously sophisticated our vision. We and our children unconsciously expect, even require, that entertainment and information be presented in a visually interesting manner. And, the more actively we ''participate'' in receiving information, the better we retain it.

This is one reason why the Montana Historical Society is beginning a major redesign of our Formal Museum.

Another reason is the nature of history. It is a living, growing body of knowledge that continues to change. Lost diaries come to light; public figures write memoirs of events they shaped; business and government papers are opened to researchers; and modern events and developments cause historians to re-examine and reinterpret old knowledge.

The Formal Museum, created three decades ago, tells Montana's story from ancient times to the mid-20th century. But it has become outdated—both in historical interpretation and in exhibit presentation. It is time for change.

To answer the expectations of today's museum visitor, current exhibit practices emphasize more ''participation''—a chance to experience sights, sounds, and even smells in an environmental exhibit, the opportunity to touch or manipulate artifacts, and guidance in relating historical knowledge to our own experiences. Glass cases and dioramas such as those now in the Formal Museum do not allow participation, and tend to appeal most to adults who like to read. If placed too high, they can be difficult for children (a significant portion of our 125,000 visitors per year) to see and understand.

The last major changes to the Formal museum—done during the 1960s—supported the exhibition's original 1950s ''successive frontiers'' approach to Montana history. That method, which emphasized major economic forces that shaped the state's history, has been significantly revised by historians. Today's more integrated view of the past will guide our new design. This approach will allow visitors to learn more about ordinary people and what their lives were like—the effects of major events upon the people, as well as how those events developed.

The current Formal Museum attempts to tell the Montana story from prehistory into the 1950s in 5,000 square feet of floor space. The new exhibit will utilize double that amount, replacing the entire Formal Museum with coverage only up to statehood in 1889. The Museum staff are currently designing this new exhibit, with construction scheduled to begin in the summer of 1983, and completion slated for mid-1985.

Over the past two years, a $17,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities has funded the planning process. Last year, the Montana Legislature indicated its support by funding three new permanent positions in the Museum program. And recently, the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington, gave us $75,000 towards actual construction.

Drawing upon our own collections of various kinds, the new exhibition will utilize artifacts (many more than have been on view before), photographs and maps, graphics and text from primary materials such as letters and personal diaries, and music and film. The design will be flexible, allowing for the changing of artifacts selected from our 30,000-piece collection.

The exhibit is intended to appeal to all levels of interest and education, presenting its content on different levels that include both easily identifiable highlights, and in-depth information. It will emphasize the interrelationships of historic events, and will feature the lives of ordinary people as well as prominent public figures. Environmental areas, as well as things to touch and operate, will give both children and adults a

Montana History Conference, Oct. 28-30, features Ewers, Welch, Metis fiddlers

"From the River North: The Heritage of Western Canada and the United States" is the title of the Ninth Annual Montana History Conference, which is scheduled for October 28-30 at the Rainbow Hotel in downtown Great Falls. As the conference title suggests, the theme for this year's meeting centers on the similarities in historical developments in the western U.S. and Canada, recognizing that in many respects Canadian and U.S. frontier histories are symbiotic.

Funded in part by a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, the conference is expected to attract 350 to 400 individuals during its three-day run. As in previous annual conferences, events will include panel discussions, lectures, slide presentations, workshops, banquets and addresses by nationally-known specialists in western history.

Within the Canadian-U.S. comparative theme, conference sessions will focus on the historical developments associated with the river trade on the Missouri, the changing nature of Indian cultures in the United States and Canada over the last two centuries, the homesteading frontier on the high plains of both nations, and the establishment of Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park. Historians from Canada will join their counterparts from Montana and other western states to discuss the international dimensions of similar historical patterns in both nations.

Two major programs will be presented by John C. Ewers, Senior Ethnologist emeritus at the Smithsonian Institution, and author James Welch of Missoula. Ewers, who was for many years associated with the museum of the Plains Indian in Browning, will offer an illustrated lecture at the Saturday luncheon entitled "Toward a Pictorial History of the Blackfeet Indians." In his lecture Dr. Ewers will discuss how the Blackfeet have been viewed by artists, from the earliest depictions of tribal members in the early nineteenth century to photographs taken in the twentieth century.

The featured conference speaker, James Welch, is known to Montanans as the very successful poet and author of Winter in the Blood and The Death of Jim Loney. Welch, who is currently at work on a new novel, will deliver an address at Saturday evening's banquet on the Blackfeet Indian cultures of both Canada and the United States.

Another highlight of this year's conference is bound to be the special entertainment slated for the Friday evening barbecue. For well over a century the Mitchif or Metis style of fiddling (Red River style fiddling) has been a cultural legacy handed down generation to generation by Metis fiddlers. Combining French Canadian and western fiddling techniques, the Red River style fiddlers play a unique musical repertoire that is partially inspired by a dance—the Red River jig—and today stimulates almost everyone to join in dancing to their tunes. At the Friday evening casual affair everyone will be entertained by the Metis fiddlers and the bet is that most will dance to their music.

Two other special events associated with the history conference should also be noted. The Historic Preservation Office here in the Society has organized an informal breakfast meeting for Friday morning, October 29, from 7:30 to 8:30. Everyone interested in the status of historic preservation in Montana and sharing information should plan to attend. The Montana Oral History Association will be meeting on Saturday morning, 7:30 to 8:30, with a special program on adapting oral history materials to radio broadcast, featuring Mike Korn, Montana Arts Council folklorist, and Bill Yaeger, Intermountain Network News director and experienced radio interviewer.

Conference information, including a program, reservation card and conference description, will be mailed in mid-September. All Society members in Montana will receive this mailing, other interested individuals can get registration information by contacting Jennifer Thompson, Curator of Education, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620.

. . . and special meetings

Special interest groups who want to meet during the Montana History Conference should contact Jennifer Thompson here at the Society. She states that space will be available in the Paris Gibson Square building on Thursday, October 28, in the afternoon and early evening. Meeting times for your group can be reserved through Ms. Thompson.

Curator of Collections Patty Dean hopes to hear from people interested in forming a statewide material culture study group—an information network to keep researchers aware of work going on in all disciplines. Contact her if you want to meet and discuss this during the History Conference.

---

Formal Museum . . .

more complete experience of the past.

Research, script writing, design, and construction are all to be accomplished by Society staff. The pre-construction phases will draw upon the talents of Lory Morrow, Photo Archivist; Jennifer Thompson, Curator of Education, and Brian Cockhill, State Archivist, and other staff as needed.

For the Museum program, planning, researching and installing the new exhibition will be almost a full-time job from early 1983 until the end of construction. Primary members of the exhibition team will be Steve Germann, Museum Curator, Patty Dean, Curator of Collections, Dan Tomberlin, Curator of Exhibits (who will have primary responsibility for overseeing design and installation), and our two exhibit preparators, Jim Warner and Murrill Finch.

Director Archibald offers slide show for state groups

"With these slides," Director Robert Archibald says, "I can take people 'behind the scenes' at the Society—and show them all the different kinds of work we do."

He is describing a slide show created this summer, which he will be presenting upon request to community groups around the state. For the show, photo technician John Smart shot color pictures of all our departments and of storage and work areas not open to the public.

To invite Archibald to your town, please call the Director's Office here at the Society at least one month before the preferred date. There is no charge for the presentation.

The program's purpose is to let Montanans know how the Society has developed, the many types of services available for research or education purposes, and where we are headed for the future. Appropriately, the slides open with a view of the Society's original quarters—basically a reading room in the Capitol basement—as a reminder of how much more a modern historical society does.

The Museum and the Library are two departments best known to the public. In this slide show, audiences will see what the visiting public can't: storage and cataloging operations in both departments, including conservation work. Scenes from the climate-controlled Archives show the many kinds of research materials available, including official state records, business and personal papers, photographs, and tape-recorded oral history interviews.

The Education Department's programs both in and outside the building are covered, such as tours here for school and other groups, traveling exhibits, and curriculum packets. And then there are programs that occur totally outside our building, guided tours of the Capitol and the Original Governor's Mansion.

The Historic Preservation Office's services to Montanans, our book and periodical publications, and the merchandising program's assistance to the Society are also explained.

MONTANA POST

Montana Historical Society
225 N. Roberts, Helena 59620
(406) 449-2694

ISSN 0047-7958

Written and edited by William L. Lang and Barbara C. Fifer as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

50-1-POUND
BLUE CAN BRAND
COFFEE
HILLS BROS. SAN FRANCISCO

Two "Children of Montana" pictures. Above, a 1924 shot of a homesteader's baby in home-made buggy; below, the faculty and students of St. Labre Indian school, Ashland, about 1895.

"Children of Montana" exhibit available to tour the state

What was life like for Montana children on the frontier, at the turn of the century, during the depressed 1920s? A sense of their days—through photographs and their own words—will soon be offered in the traveling exhibit, "Children of Montana: 1864-1930."

Patty Dean, Curator of Collections, created the show that public institutions can borrow, free except for transportation to the next host. Funding came from the First Bank System. The exhibit will open in October at First Bank, Helena.

The exhibit includes 50 photos from our Photo Archives, along with printed quotations from personal recollections, journals, diaries, and newspaper articles housed in our Archives. Seven sections present aspects of children's lives: Coming to Montana, Families and Faces, Sickness and Death, Religion, School, Play, and Work.

"Children of Montana" will tour from November 1982 through August 1983. To reserve it for your community, contact Jennifer Thompson, Curator of Education, and let her know the preferred month and an alternate month.

"Montanans at Work" oral history project reaches halfway point

"Montanans at Work," an oral history project, has now collected over 260 hours of tape-recorded interviews, project administrator Laurie Mercier reports. She and others are gathering the reminiscences of people who lived and worked in Montana between 1910 and 1945, primarily in the fields of mining, agriculture, and forest products.

The recordings are being deposited in our Archives along with indexes and summaries or transcriptions. When the project ends in July 1983, we hope to have about 450 interviews.

Among those recorded so far are underground miners, farmers, sawyers, ranch wives, cowboys, smelter workers, sheepherders, logging camp cooks, farm implement dealers, teachers, cattle buyers, hotel operators, waitresses, and railroad employees.

Ms. Mercier would welcome hearing from anyone who would like to be interviewed, or who can suggest someone. She can be contacted through the Society.

Butte oral histories are deposited in MHS Archives

Through arrangement with the Butte Historical Society, the MHS Archives has received copies of the more than 300 hours of taped interviews contained in the Butte Oral History Collection. The Archives has also microfilmed selected transcripts and summaries of a number of interviews. According to State Archivist Brian Cockhill, the collection covers a broad range of subjects and "reflects the social, cultural, and ethnic diversity of one of America's most vital mining camps, particularly during the period 1900-1940. For the researcher interested in the twentieth-century social history of Butte, this collection is extremely valuable, even indispensable."

Although several interviewers were involved, including Helen Bresler and Mary Murphy of the University of Montana Oral History Program/Butte Oral History Project (funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities), the late Ray Calkins of Butte conducted the majority of the interviews. According to Laurie Mercier, chief interviewer/administrator of the MHS oral history project, "Montanans at Work," Ray Calkins made an effort to interview a member of every ethnic group represented in Butte (black, Native American, Irish, Italian, Serbian, Jewish, Finnish, etc.) and representatives of as many occupations as possible (from circus clown to airplane pilot, housewife to professional woman, miner to Anaconda Company executive). "Ray Calkins was a masterful interviewer," says Ms. Mercier. "With a minimum of questions, he was able to put people at ease and get them to talk freely and in detail about their lives. Because of his skill, we have a greatly expanded view of Butte's culture in the first half of this century."

In mid-September, the Butte Historical Society will be publishing a book containing selected excerpts from Mr. Calkins' interviews.

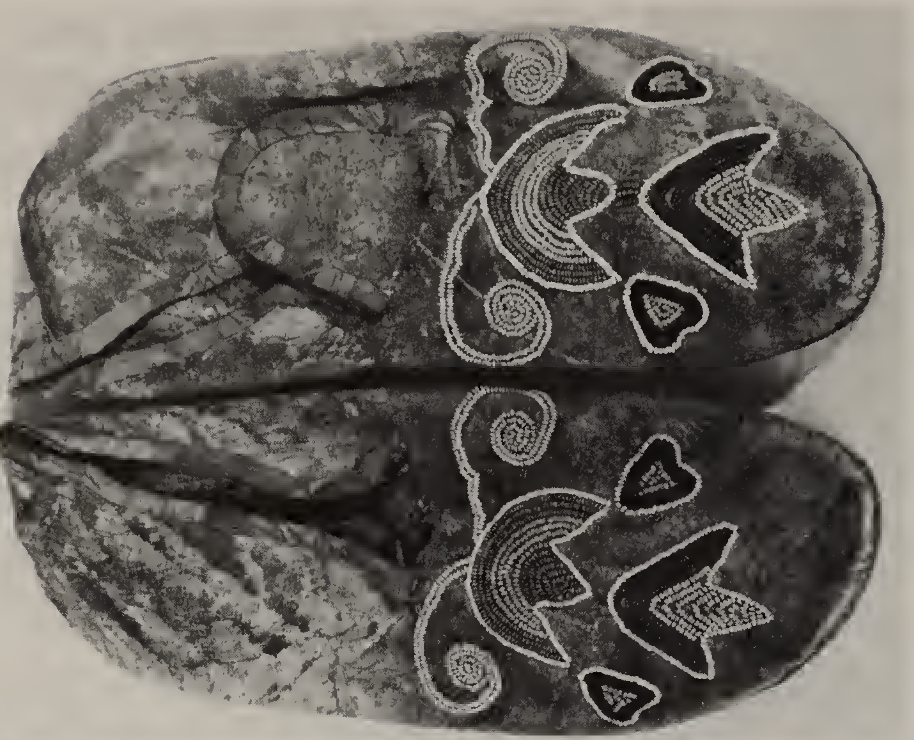
Roeder to teach Montana history course at Society

Richard B. Roeder, Professor of History at Montana State University, will teach a course here at the Society this autumn. The eight-part class, drawing from his own current research, is entitled "Topics in Recent Montana History." It will be held on Thursday evenings, 7 to 9 p.m., beginning September 23.

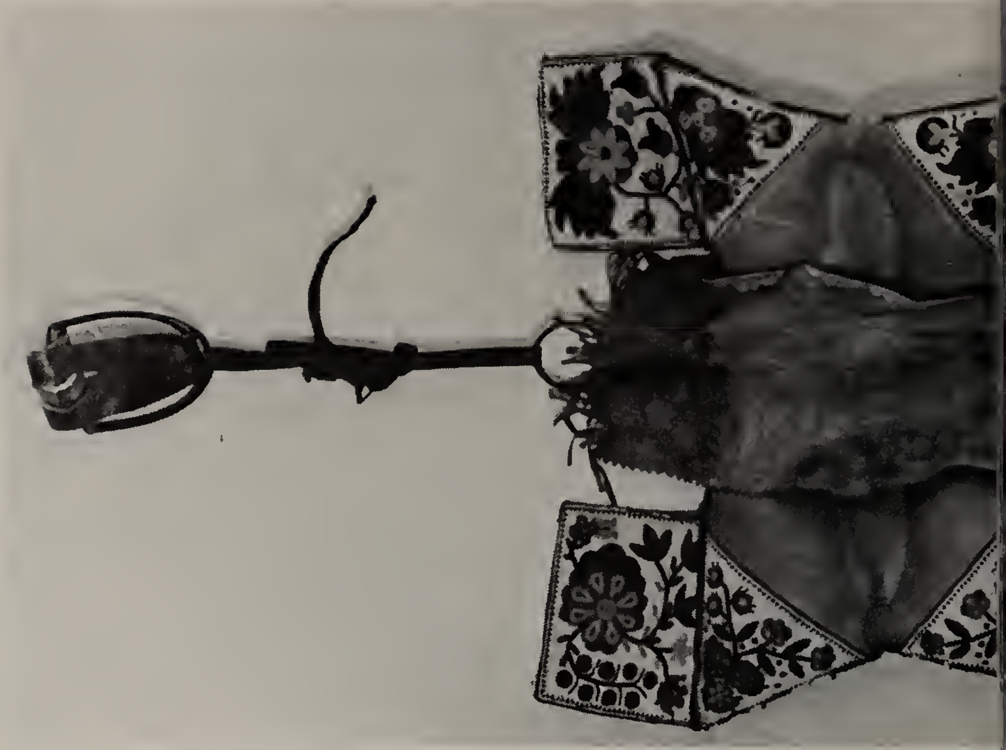
Registration fee is $35; 1.6 Continuing Education Units from MSU can be earned.

The course sections include: Reformist Tradition, Forgotten Aspects of the 1920s and 1930s, Antecedents of Contemporary Literary Renaissance, The Great Depression in Montana, Montana Native American History Since the Dawes Act, Joseph Kinsey Howard, Contemporary Literary and Cultural Renaissance, and Movement for Governmental and Constitutional Reform.

To register, contact Jennifer Thompson at the Society.



These moccasins, glass-beaded and with edges bound in cotton, were presented by Crow scout Curley to F. Jay Haynes.



The Cree pad saddle, dating from about 1870, that was owne
Larry Sweetman in 1964.

Elizabeth Ashley donated this pair of Flathead saddle decorations around 1930. Made from otter hides, backed by purple trade cloth, they are. trimmed with dentalium shells, hawk bells, cowry shells, ermine, red ribbon, German silver concho buttons, beads and human hair.

Ethnographic & costume what we have and what w

by Steve Germann, Curator

According to two recently filed consultant reports, the Museum Program of the Montana Historical Society has much to be proud of, and much to get to work on. The reports were written by Norman Feder and Joan Severa, collections consultants hired by the Society under a grant from the Institute of Museum Services, a division of the U. S. Department of Education. Mr. Feder surveyed, analyzed and commented upon our Plains Indians collections, while Mrs. Severa went through the same procedure with our clothing and textile holdings.

Norman Feder has many years of experience in research, writing and curatorial work in American Indian material culture. Among many other appointments as lecturer, editorial consultant, and guest curator, he served for twelve years as Curator of American Indian and Native Art at the Denver Art Museum.

In analyzing our collections of Indian materials, Feder pointed out both strengths and weaknesses. We have a good collection of pictographic painting on skin, cloth and paper, said Feder, but we are lacking in materials from the pre-1860 period, and are without representative collections for some of the tribes that lived in the area. For the reservation era, collections from the Blackfeet are adequate, and the collections from the Flathead and Rocky Boy are fair, he continued, while collections from the Crow are sparse and from the Northern Cheyenne almost non-existent.

Nevertheless, said Mr. Feder, the general physical condition of the collection is good, and the collection has very few objects that are without historical value. He noted some individual pieces that are important historically (or quite rare), such as a buffalo-hide tipi, and a pad saddle owned and used by Gabriel Dumont, a Metis leader in the 1885 Riel Rebellion in Canada.

Joan Se
Society of V as their Cur
many duties authentic c charter men has served a
(at Yosemit Association

Mrs. S weaknesses seems, have historical so weighted to the period
women's ga

"There and 30's," w in short sup 1940." Two it has been p been "no at up-to-date w
skirts and h

Mrs. Se storage and more interes
we immedia costumes in collections,
a representa

If you,
collections,
textiles, clot
may be use exhibit and disposing of
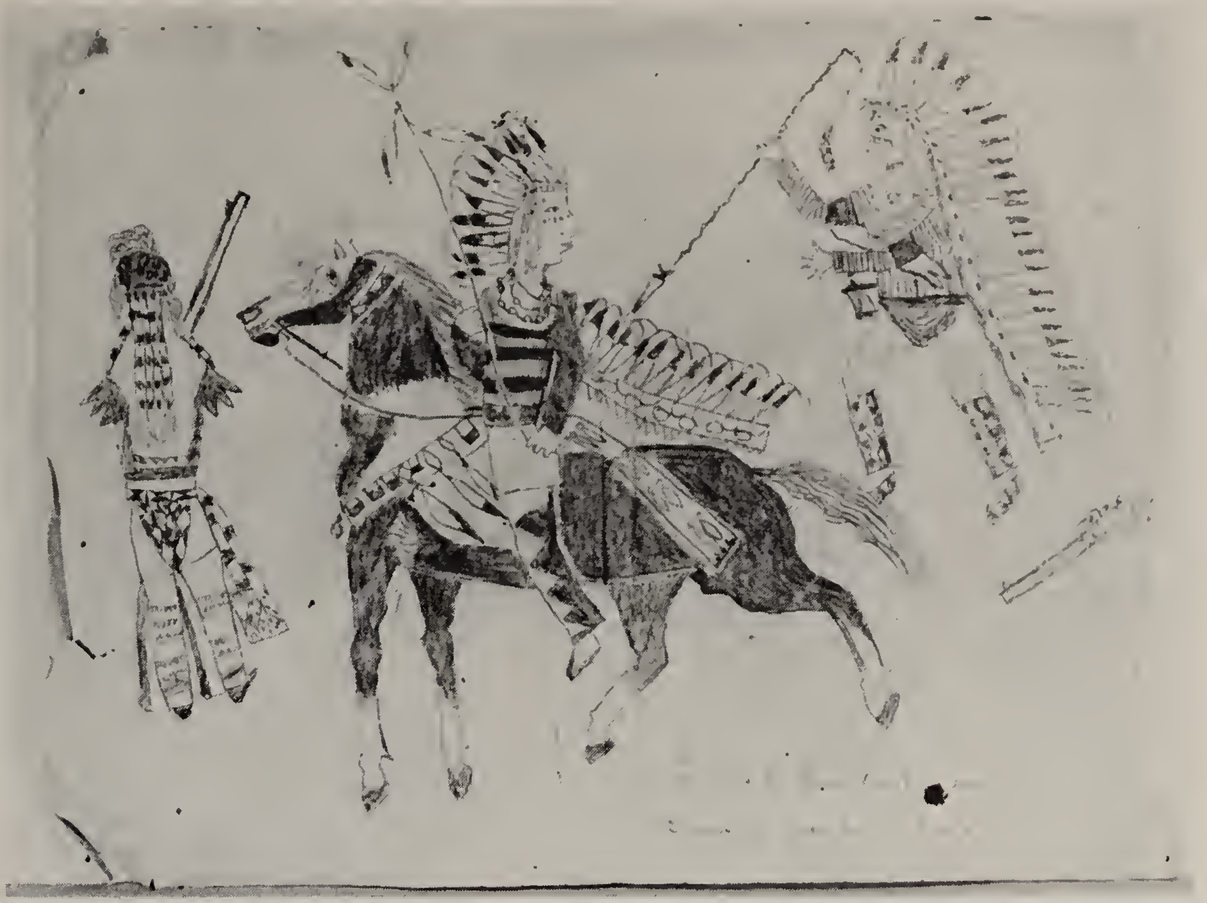
be junk at a

Gabriel Dumont and was donated by



A pictograph by Elk Head, this is labeled "Group of Gros Ventre Warriors showing paint and dress," and dates from the mid-1880s. It came here in the Wilbur F. Sanders papers.

collections:
e need to add

a, who has been with the State Historical consin for fifteen years, currently serves r of Costumes and Textiles. Among her the Society, she is responsible for the ining of historic-site interpreters. A r of the Costume Society, Mrs. Severa consultant to the National Park Service and the New York State Historical Cooperstown.

a, too, pointed out the strengths and our collections. Our costume holdings, it e generic virtues and faults of most y costume collections—they are heavily ds formal or fancy dress, cover mainly 0-1920, and are made up mostly of nts.

many good garments through the 1920's
e Severa, "but again the everyday type is
, and collecting definitely fell off after jor weaknesses of the collection are that ogether with no plan, and that there has pt to bring the collection more closely pants suits, blue jeans, or even mini-ants outfits."

a made several recommendations about cord-keeping practices, but perhaps of our readers is her recommendation that begin to actively search out and collect effort to fill in gaps in our early period ument current fashion trends, and build sampling of men's clothing.

members, can help us to build storage n't you consider doing so? If you have g, Indian artifacts, or other objects that to our Museum program—both for research purposes—think of us before
m. That "old junk in the attic" may not

Consultant Joan Severa, left, and Curator of Collections Patty Dean display two items of interest and value—for another museum's collection. The pelisse, or coat, Ms. Severa holds is of light brown silk and dates from the 1820s; Ms. Dean shows a military-uniform vest of linen and wool, worn in the Revolutionary War by Jacob Nobel. Both items are still in excellent condition, but they have nothing to do with Montana's history, and represent the problem of gathering appropriate articles for exhibit and research.

Photo from Helena Independent Record

Theater/classroom opens for many uses this fall

Floor plan for the Haynes exhibit area. Theater/classroom appears at lower right.

Exhibit preparators Murrill Finch, left, and Jim Warner at work on the theater/classroom's retractable stage.

Many of the Society's educational events will have a new home this fall when our theater/classroom opens. Located beside the Poindexter Gallery, it will also connect with the forthcoming Haynes exhibit.

A grant of $48,000 from the Burlington Northern Foundation funded the room, which was carefully designed for versatility in presenting audiovisual programs, classes, lectures, workshops, and even small gallery shows.

The theater/classroom is fitted with a projection booth housing slide and movie projectors and a stereo sound system. A retractable stage allows for use of all the floor space, and movable seating will serve audiences of up to 100 people. Track lighting and cloth wall covering were installed so that art exhibits could be hung.

Outside organizations may also utilize the theater/classroom, and should contact Jennifer Thompson for reservations.

The Haynes exhibit itself, to be complete by next August, will utilize 3800 square feet to tell of the work of F. Jay Haynes and his son Jack. It will include large-scale Northern Pacific railroad car models and Yellowstone National Park touring vehicles.

Headwaters Heritage Museum opens in former Three Forks bank building

An historic building in Three Forks is the home of the brand-new Headwaters Heritage Museum. The energetic fund-raising efforts of the Three Forks Area Historical Society, and community interest manifested in the donations and loans of artifacts, saw fruition when the museum opened in mid-July.

Joan Burwell is curator, Ruth Myers is historian, and the Board of Trustees includes: George Wilcox, president; Jo Rill Davis, Arline Finnegan, Dave Miller, Joyce Cooper, Sharon Dickman, Mildred Watson, Ralph Wilcox, and Francis Finnegan.

Erected in 1910 during Three Forks' downtown building boom, the building housed one bank until it failed in 1918, and another until its failure in 1923. Over the years, it served for various types of offices until the Security Bank moved in in 1960. Happily, when that firm left last January, it was to move into a new building.

In antique display cases from a local jewelry store, the Headwaters Heritage Museum exhibits varied artifacts from the area's past. Of especial interest is an anvil brought to the headwaters area in 1810 by trappers who briefly operated a trading post before being driven away by the Blackfeet. Also to be seen are the bell from the town's first school, a 571-piece barbed wire collection, and clothing and implements representing various aspects of daily life.

A "Music Room" exhibit includes an 1894 pump organ, a 1905 "Graphophone" and a 1920 "Grafonola," along with upholstered furniture from about 1900, and a mannequin garbed in a handmade dress from Sweden that dates from 1852.

Information on membership in the Three Forks Area Historical Society, and on donating or lending artifacts for their museum, is available from them at P.O. Box 116, Three Forks 59752.

"Footlocker exhibits" have more for teachers

Now, elementary school teachers who borrow our "footlocker exhibits" can also view a 20-minute video tape that illustrates effective ways to use the exhibits in the classroom. An outline of the voice-over narration accompanies the tape.

Jennifer Thompson, Curator of Education, produced the video tape under a grant from the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington. The footlockers themselves were prepared in 1981 with a Murdock grant.

Six different themes in Montana history are covered separately, including: Plains Indians, Frontier Military, the Fur Trade, Mining, Ranching and Cowboys, and Homesteading. Each unit includes artifacts, facsimiles, photographs, and audio tapes.

Newly added this summer are bibliographies for teachers and students, glossaries, worksheets, and a subject outline of each topic for the teacher's use.

Footlocker exhibits are free except for cost of transportation to the next scheduled school, and may be reserved by contacting Ms. Thompson.

Slide units, designed for junior and senior high classrooms and also produced with a Murdock grant, continue to be available on loan. Each school pays only the cost of mailing the slide unit to the next borrower.

A slide unit, containing 30 slides and an accompanying text, has been created for each of six topics: Native Americans Lose Their Land, Frontier Towns, Power Politics, Transportation, the Energy Industry, and the Depression in Montana.

Ed Kopac, and details from two of his photographs. Above, breaking sod on his own ranch near Hardin; below, mining a coal vein at Colstrip.

Kopac photo collection comes to MHS

Mrs. Peggy Kopac of Billings recently donated to the Society's Photo Archives the photographic collection of her late husband, Ed, a prominent Hardin-area rancher. Included in the collection are over 10,000 photos taken by Ed Kopac and his brother, Emil.

Emil Kopac, a Nebraska farmer, was a lifelong student of the history of the West. His photographs of historical markers along the Oregon Trail, historic sites (such as the Custer Battlefield), and Western landscapes reflect that deep interest. Primarily in postcard form, Emil's photographs make up the bulk of the Kopac Collection.

For those researching Montana's history in the first half of the twentieth century, the Ed Kopac portion of the collection will be of great interest. Born in Schuyler, Nebraska, in 1883, Ed Kopac came to southwestern Montana in 1925, drawn by reports of good dry-land farming and bankrolled by what he could borrow against his life insurance policy. With very little farming experience, having previously taught school, worked in the family automobile business, and operated feedlots in Nebraska, Ed took over operations at the Sorrell Horse Ranch between Custer and Hardin. Within three years, he had moved to the Wild Horse Coulee, south of Hardin, taking over Tom Campbell's Crow leases and raising and feeding hogs, sheep, and cattle in addition to running a substantial wheat farm. In 1932, with a bumper crop of 100,000 bushels of wheat, Ed was able to make a handsome profit and firmly establish himself as a successful farmer.

In addition to his agricultural activities, Ed Kopac was a professional photographer. At one time, he operated the "Ed Kopac Art Studios" in Hardin, which advertised "Colored Pictures, Enlargements . . . Movies, Historicals . . . Scenics, Cow Camps . . . Cattle, Nature's Handiwork, Indian Lore . . . Wild Life," all guaranteed "Exclusively Original." Even after he closed the "Art Studios," Ed continued to carry his Leica cameras with him wherever he traveled, taking photographs of everything that interested him. And he was a man of wide-ranging interests and insatiable curiosity.

These traits are reflected in his portion of the Kopac Collection. While a series of photos documenting large-scale Montana wheat farming (ca. 1930) is of particular interest, Ed's views of cattle ranching, logging in the Flathead, coal mining at Colstrip, farm machinery (including some implements of his own invention), people, architecture, industrial sites, Montana towns, and the natural landscape are of exceptional quality as well.

According to Lory Morrow, the Society's Photograph Curator, "Ed Kopac was an excellent documentary photographer. We know very little about his background, but his photographs are meticulously composed and seem to suggest either considerable training or a great natural talent. From an informational standpoint, his photographs document a time when farming in Montana was becoming highly mechanized, making possible the enormous grain crops which gave Ed Kopac his success. Mr. Kopac was fascinated by machines, whether they were the steam tractors of his youth, the early gasoline-driven tractors and caterpillars he utilized on his farm, a massive drag-line at Colstrip, or a biplane. At the same time, he captured the great natural beauty of Montana. We're extremely pleased to have this unique collection."

Archives receives diverse collections

The development of Havre, the betterment of McAllister, and a citizen protest in the Flathead Valley are the diverse topics covered in records recently donated to our Archives.

From Hill County Commissioner (and MHS Board of Trustees member) Toni Hagener have come long-time Havre Chamber of Commerce records. Covering the years 1927 through 1964, they "would be essential to anyone doing historical research on the business and cultural development" of the community, according to State Archivist Brian Cockhill.

The Ladies' Reading and Embroidery Circle was formed in McAllister in 1901 by 14 women. In 1930, members changed the name to The Welfare Club and entered into such projects as improvements to the local cemetery and fund-raising for the Madison Valley Hospital and charitable organizations. When it disbanded in 1970, the club created a scholarship fund for McAllister youth. Now, Doris C. Wilson has donated the records that protray the evolution and activities of this women's club.

In 1943, the Flathead Valley Citizens' Committee organized to fight a Bonneville Power Administration proposal to raise the water level of Flathead Lake. The group's secretary, the late Clara Iverson of Kalispell, preserved the Committee records. Now, her nephew, J. Michael Poston of Rockville, Maryland, has deposited these materials for the use of researchers.

¶ from the Editor's File

¶ River floaters and those interested in deeds of daring in the American West will be interested in the journey of W. E. Hermance, as reported by the Livingston Enterprise in early 1886. Hermance proposed to float the Yellowstone, Missouri, and Mississippi rivers from Livingston to New Orleans in four months in what the Enterprise described as a "light skiff." The paper reported:

> He launched his boat here Saturday, July 4th [1885] containing about 100 pounds of baggage, besides himself, with the intention of reaching his destination in four months' time. The last heard of him until recently was that he had successfully passed the various rapids of the Yellowstone, without any adventure worthy of note, and was floating down the muddy waters of the Missouri river.

The last report of Hermance's progress, the Enterprise noted, had the intrepid floater gliding past Vicksburg, Mississippi, on his way down river. The paper was sure that, although Hermance had missed his prediction by two months, he was telling tales of his adventure to "willing ears in the Crescent City." By the paper's report, he was considered to be the first man to float that distance down the three rivers, alone.

¶ Just a reminder to readers who are interested in Butte's history. The Butte History Conference, "Butte: The Urban Frontier," is scheduled for September 24-26, at Butte High School. The conference will begin Friday evening at Butte's War Bonnet Inn and reconvene Saturday and Sunday for panels, lectures, and other presentations at Butte High School. The conference is sponsored by the Butte Historical Society with a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities. For more information: Butte Historical Society, Box 3913, Butte 59701.

Haynes show schedule

"F. Jay Haynes: Fifty Views," our traveling photograph exhibit that began touring in the summer of 1981, has now been seen at 24 locations around, and outside, Montana.

The works in the exhibit represent all aspects of Haynes' career: as official photographer of both Yellowstone National Park and the Northern Pacific Railway and as a landscape artist who sold his prints to a national audience.

The 50 matted and framed photos, accompanied by printed captions, are contact prints made from Haynes' original glass plate negatives. Brochures for free distribution and paperbound catalogs to be offered for sale accompany the show.

Any public institution in Montana can borrow the exhibit at no charge except the cost of shipping one-way (out-of-state institutions pay shipping both ways).

Reserve this show for your community by contacting Jennifer Thompson here at the Society—she is now arranging exhibit dates for 1983 and 1984. Let her know your first and second choices of month.

¶ The Idaho State Historical Society in Boise is hosting and organizing two conferences on "Interpreting Local Culture and History," the first in Boise, September 24 & 25, and the second in Coeur d'Alene, November 4 & 5. The conferences, which are funded by the Association for the Humanities in Idaho, will feature forums for discussion of problems associated with interpreting local history, researching community history, and evaluating oral history materials. For more information write: Sandy Rikoon, Idaho State Historical Society, 610 N. Julia Davis Dr., Boise 83702.

¶ An item of Montana historical trivia informs us that in the political jockeying associated with Montana's drive for statehood in the late 1880s the State of Montana could have included the Idaho panhandle area. One of the strongest advocates for attaching Idaho's Coeur d'Alene district to Montana was former Montana Territorial Delegate William H. Claggett, who had moved to Idaho in the mid-1880s. In a letter to the Helena Independent in early 1886, Claggett reported on the verdict of mass gathering of miners at Coeur d'Alene who met to discuss a plan then being debated in Congress to attach Idaho to Washington Territory. As Claggett reported of the miners' meeting:

> No one wished to remain in Idaho, but when the vote was finally taken, on arising and count, only twenty-two out of at least five hundred were for Washington. All the rest voted for annexation to Montana. A majority of our people are from Montana, and all of our material interests will be best promoted by being annexed to that Territory . . . . We love granger legislation—in some other country—and we are not enamored with female suffrage, nor people who will permit or tolerate it. We propose to cut the panhandle off on the 47th parallel. All below that ought to go to Washington.

Claggett's hopes, of course, were crushed when Montana and Washington came in as states in 1889 without the Idaho panhandle attached to them, and even though woman suffrage did not come to Montana until 1914 there certainly were many Montanans who would not have welcomed Claggett's anti-feminists.

¶ The Tri-County Historical Society of Anaconda has published a booklet entitled "Marcus Daly's Anaconda." The 40-page booklet presents more than fifty historical photographs from the Tri-County Historical Society collections, with commentary by Hugh A. Campbell and accompanying sketches by Robert D. Vine. Anyone interested in purchasing the booklet should contact: Tri-County Historical Society, Anaconda, Montana, 59711.

Capitol & Mansion tours

Tours of the Capitol, the Original Governor's Mansion, and the Montana Historical Society will be offered by Society-trained guides throughout the coming school year. Reservations by teachers or organizers are required, and can be made by calling Jennifer Thompson at the Society.

To prepare students for the Capitol tour, teachers can obtain a slide and text packet that illustrates the building's history, and tells the political history leading to Montana statehood. "Using these packets," Ms. Thompson says, "teachers can ready their students for a learning trip centered on the capitol."

Each of the three tours lasts about 45 minutes. Groups no larger than 40 can best be accommodated. Reservations should be made at least two weeks in advance.

At the Original Governor's Mansion, groups of 25 (including chaperones) can be accommodated. The mansion will resume winter hours at the beginning of September, opening Tuesday through Saturday from noon to 5 p.m., with prescheduled tours available only during these hours. During January through March 1983, while the mansion is closed to the public, group tours can still be scheduled through Ms. Thompson.

Tour booklet published

With support from Gov. Ted Schwinden and funding from the state Department of Administration, the Montana Historical Society has produced a self-guiding booklet for a walking tour of the Montana Capitol. The two-color, 16-page booklet is available free of charge in the capitol Rotunda, where the tour begins and ends.

The art and architectural history are covered for each room along the tour, with a general introduction describing the building's creation. Historic photographs from our Photo Archives portray areas as they once looked.

Separate instructions, keyed to the booklet, are available for those who must use the elevators rather than the stairs.

Montana Historical Society 1865

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

Montana State Library
930 E. Lyndale
Documents Section
Helena, MT 59620

DEADHEAD

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

ARTCRAFT PRINTERS

S
978.6
H6m
V.20 #2
May-June
1982

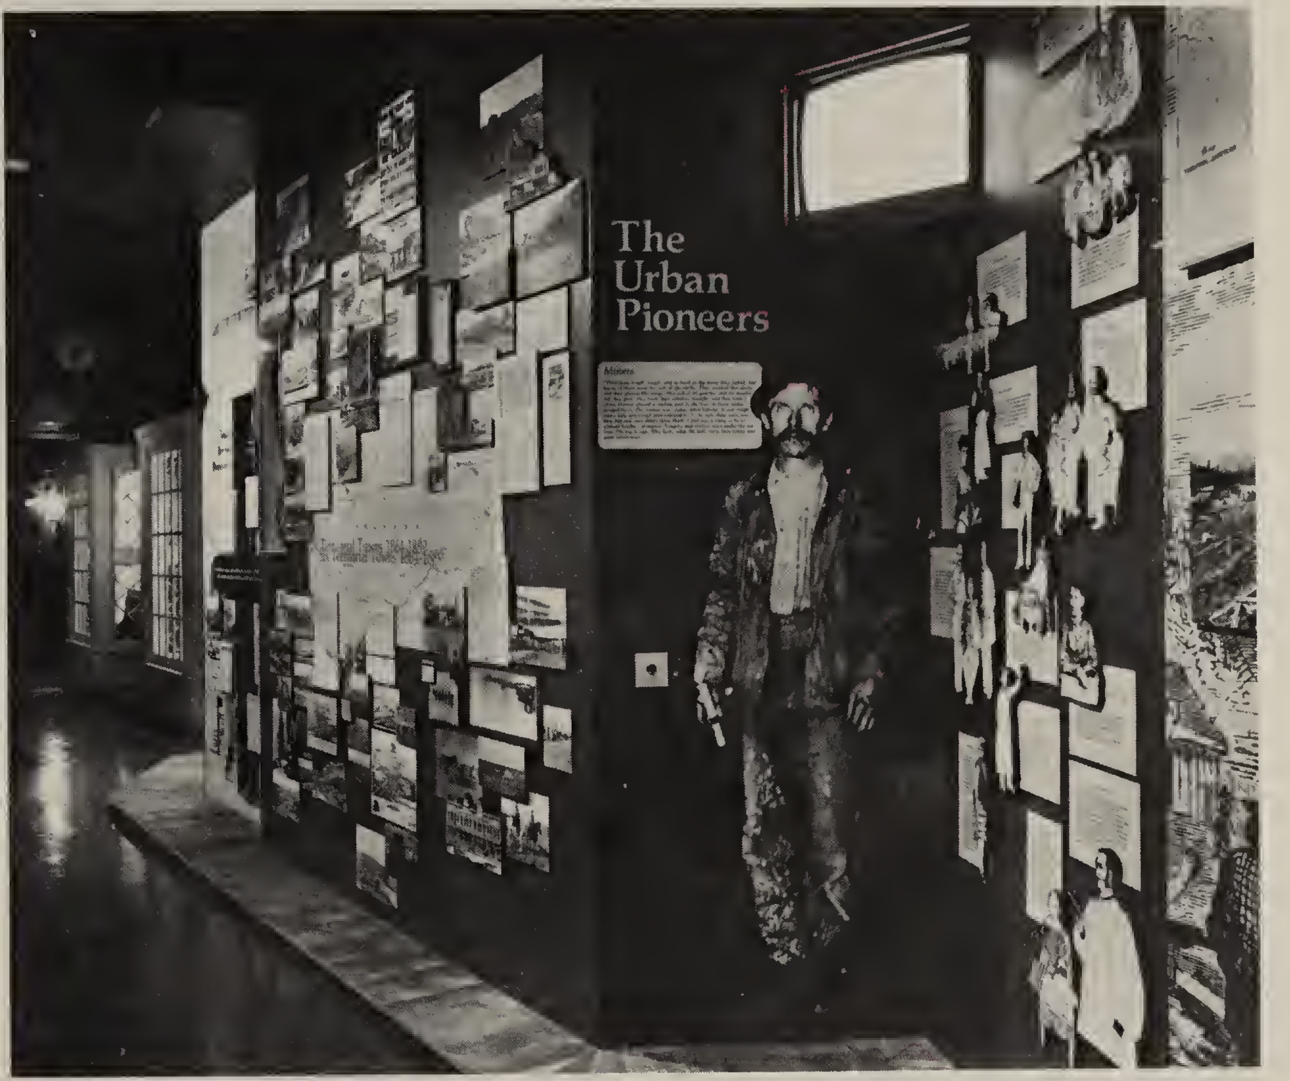
PLEASE RETURN

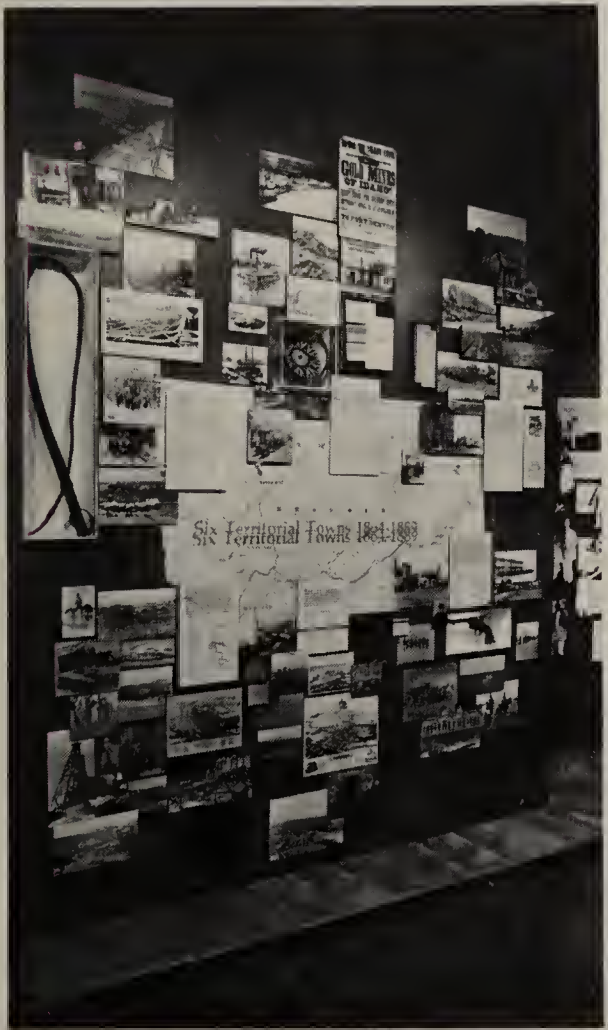
STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
June 22 1982
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
930 E Lyndale Ave.

MONTANA POST
® REGISTERED TRADEMARK
Vol. 20 No. 2 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society May-June 1982

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS
SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

"The Urban Pioneers" exhibit enhances Territory Junction





"The Urban Pioneers," a permanent exhibit introducing "Territory Junction," opened on March 15 — offering visitors a survey of several representative Montana Territory towns, and their development from the 1860s into the 1880s. In its "street" of 11 shops and offices, with saloon and jail, Territory Junction itself portrays an imaginary 1880s business district. But people are not represented in the artifact-filled reconstruction, whose dim lighting makes viewers feel they are taking a midnight stroll down the boardwalked street.

The people who would have lived among and used the artifacts that are on display are the subject of "The Urban Pioneers." In a brief videotape, dozens of period photographs show the individuals who settled in Montana Territory towns — posed formally or captured candidly, at home or on bustling streets, working or relaxing. The tape was prepared by the Film and Television Department of Montana State University, Bozeman, from the holdings of our Photo Archives.

Quotations from diaries and letters of early settlers, as well as passages from newspapers of the time, give viewers insights into life in the boisterous young settlements.

Territorial towns grew up as supply points serving various local industries, and the new exhibit offers close looks at seven representative settlements: Bozeman, Butte, Fort Benton, Glendive, Helena, Miles City and Missoula. For each, photographs, advertisements, engravings, maps, or architectural drawings give the flavor of the town's early days.

Open to the public in the summer of 1969, Territory Junction was designed by western artist, and former Museum Curator, Bob Morgan. The new "Urban Pioneers" introduction will serve to enhance its value to the thousands who visit annually.

Germann is new Museum Curator

Steve Germann joined the Historical Society staff as Museum Curator late in February. He previously was employed as Director of Education Services at Montgomery County Historical Society, Dayton, Ohio.

Germann completed an M.A. in History at Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio, in 1973, adding certification in Historical Administration in 1979. At the Montgomery County Historical Society, his work included creating and implementing a training program for guides at the Patterson Homestead, the Society's historic house museum, and increasing student visitation from zero to 5,000 annually through the introduction of active "hands-on" school programs. Germann also served as writer, editor and designer of the Society's newsletter and other publications.

A major project that Steve looks forward to here is the planned re-design of our Formal Museum, which is now three decades old. This work will follow completion of the Haynes Gallery and Auditorium, currently in the first stages of construction.

Regarding his new position, Germann feels that although he has transferred from an education department to a museum department, there will be few adjustment problems. "After all," he said, "the principles followed in the production of an exhibit are the same as those followed in the preparation of a classroom program or an historical article or book. All of these products attempt to teach us something about the past through the logical presentation of ideas and illustrations. "Of course," he laughed, "we are sometimes accused by more conservative historians of having a great many more illustrations than ideas."

Despite such criticisms, Germann feels that museum professionals should not lose sight of the fact that most people go to museums to enjoy themselves, as well as to have an educational experience. "Certainly there is an element of showmanship to exhibit work, just as there is to delivering a lecture or writing and designing a striking publication. Our job is to take solid scholarship, and a manageable number of concepts and combine them with artifacts, photographs, documents, light, color, and sound in stimulating exhibits. The result, we hope, will allow the audience to delight in, as well as learn about, the study of history or the examination of change over time.

"What makes this position doubly attractive," Germann continued, "is the opportunity to work for the primary historical collecting agency in the state. Being in the forefront, the Montana Historical Society has first chance at many important collections, and has thus been able to develop a solid, representative collection of artifacts, not only for exhibit use, but also for preservation and study purposes."

The final attraction of the Museum Curator position for Germann was the material available for collection (fascinating artifacts) and interpretation (an exciting story). "If ever a state lent itself to dramatic interpretation," Germann concluded, "Montana does." Even if exploring, trapping, lumbering, mining, and ranching weren't colorful activities, he said, "The fact that the Montana story is acted out by a diverse population against a backdrop of vast distances, huge open spaces and towering mountains would make an interesting story by itself."

MOHA produces handbook for oral historians

This spring the Montana Oral History Association, under a grant from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, sponsored eight oral history workshops across the state. Held at Anaconda and Livingston on April 16-17, Kalispell and Box Elder on April 23-24, Custer Battlefield and Roundup on May 7-8, and Glasgow and Glendive on May 21-22, the workshops drew nearly 100 participants for intensive instruction in the techniques of interviewing and the design of local oral history projects.

Montana Oral History Association oral historians staffed the workshops, which began on Friday evenings with a general session and continued through Saturday mornings and afternoons with discussions of oral history interviews, practice interviewing sessions and critiques by workshop leaders. The purpose of the workshops was to offer oral historians who are involved in local history projects the opportunity to polish their techniques and learn about the latest developments in oral history.

Of interest to oral historians throughout the state and a main feature of the workshops is the new publication: "Oral History for Montana, A Manual." Written and compiled by the Montana Oral History Association, the manual gives oral historians in the state the first practical guide to conducting oral history in Montana. The manual offers step-by-step suggestions in planning interviews and oral history projects, interviewing, and storing oral history materials. The majority of the manual is devoted to the interview process, featuring a practical guide to the do's and don'ts of oral history. There is a section on equipment, what to purchase and what to avoid, and an extensive bibliography that will be of great use to local history groups.

The Montana Oral History Association hopes that the manual is widely circulated in the state, but the available copies are limited. Anyone wanting a manual may purchase a copy for $2 by sending an order to: Oral History Office, Montana Historical Society.

Private donors assist Haynes Gallery

The Haynes Gallery, to be completed in our Museum by mid-1983, has received funds through the generosity of private donors.

Mrs Jack E. Haynes of Bozeman, who donated the massive Haynes Collection to us, has recently given $15,000 towards the permanent exhibit of art and artifacts from the Collection. Through this display, visitors will learn of the development of Yellowstone National Park and of railroads in the Northwest — and how the careers of father and son photographers F. Jay and Jack E. Haynes intertwined with these.

Because of a gift from the Burlington Northern Foundation, these visitors will also be able to sample the historic photographers through an audiovisual show. The Foundation's $48,000 will go toward building and equipping an 80-seat auditorium in the Gallery, where the Haynes slides will be shown on a regular basis.

In addition, the auditorium will enable us to offer gallery talks and other programs, and also classes for adults and children.

MONTANA POST

ISSN 0047-7958

Written and edited by William L. Lang and Barbara C. Fifer as the official newsletter of the Montana Historical Society, 225 North Roberts, Helena, Montana 59620. Contemporary photographs by John Smart, historic photographs from Montana Historical Society unless otherwise specified. Published quarterly with issues dated Feb.-March, May-June, Aug.-Sept., and Nov.-Dec. Material herein comprises news of the Montana Historical Society and its membership, and articles based on Society holdings. Permission is granted for republication of these contents, provided credit is given to the Montana Historical Society.

The title "Montana Post" is used with the permission of the Historic Landmark Society of Montana. This newsletter is not intended as a continuation of Montana's first bona fide newspaper of the same name, first published at Virginia City August 27, 1864.

Bruce L. Ennis named to Board of Trustees

Governor Ted Schwinden has named attorney Bruce L. Ennis to our Board of Trustees.

A native Montanan, Ennis completed his undergraduate and law school education at University of Montana.

He is manager and president of Meridian Land and Mineral Company in Billings, where he lives with his wife, Carolyn, who is active in historic preservation work, and their two children.

He drafted legislation for the Billings city council's creation of the Billings Townsite Historic District in 1979, and has recently supervised his company's mine permit application that included a written history of the Tongue River area, published and distributed to area residents.

SUMMER HOURS

Museum: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mon.-Fri., 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sat. & Sun., Memorial Day to Labor Day.

Library: 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mon.-Fri., Memorial Day to Labor Day.

Original Governor's Mansion: Noon to 5 p.m., Tues.-Sun., June through August.

Capitol Tours: 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m., and 4 p.m., seven days a week, June 15 through September 12.

Last Chancer Tour Train and London Double-Decker Bus: Operated by Helena Unlimited and not by the Historical Society, these may be boarded on Sixth Street beside our building. Tours begin hourly from 8:30 through 3:30 each day day, June 15 through Labor Day, alternating between the bus and train along the same route. Fee of $2.00/adult or $1.50/child is payable to the driver.

9th Montana History Conference Set for Great Falls, to be international

Plan to be in Great Falls at the Rainbow Hotel on the last weekend in October. That's where hundreds of Montana history enthusiasts will gather to attend the Ninth Annual Montana History Conference. Funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities and sponsored by the Montana Historical Society, the conference will run from Thursday evening, October 28, to a concluding banquet on Saturday night, October 30.

This year's conference will include two full days of panel discussions, lectures, workshops, slide presentations, folklore demonstrations and more that will explore the theme "From the River North: The Heritage of Western Canada and the United States," along with three banquets, award presentations, and time for everyone to share ideas and information. Conference activities will begin at Paris Gibson Square at 7:30 on Thursday evening with a reception courtesy of the Cascade County Historical Society and the American Association of University Women.

Formal conference sessions will begin Friday morning at the Rainbow Hotel with concurrent workshops. Researching Montana homesteads is the focus of one workshop, in which Jim Muhn and John Taylor of the Bureau of Land Management will discuss the use of maps, land records and artifacts in dating homesteads, while North Dakota architectural historian Kurt Schweigert will explain field inventory techniques. The second workshop, which will deal with photographs as documents, will feature photograph curators Lory Morrow from the Society and Georgeen Klassen of Calgary's Glenbow Museum discussing pitfalls and possibilities in using photographs as primary source materials. Ellen Seeley of Glacier National Park and architectural historian Jim McDonald from Missoula will explain how photographs can aid researchers in natural history and historic preservation. Society photo technician John Smart rounds out the session with some hints on how to take documentary photos.

Friday afternoon's concurrent sessions feature discussions of the history of the Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park and a look at the homestead movement in Montana and the Canadian West. Dave Walter, Society research librarian, will present a paper on the history of the Peace park with comments on his paper presented by Waterton park historian Duane Barris, College of Great Falls Professor William Furdell, and historian Hans Peterson of Northern Montana College. Noted agricultural historian Hiram Drache will join Paul A. Voisey of University of Alberta, Tom White of the James Jerome Hill Reference Library in St. Paul, and Mary Engel of Northern Montana College in a broad discussion of homestead society on the high plains, including the influence of railroad development, innovations in agricultural technology and the experiences of homestead women.

Workshops on the techniques of assessing homestead sites and abandoned buildings, and on oral history interviewing techniques, are scheduled for Saturday morning. In the homestead workshop, Alan Newell and Dan Gallacher of Historical Research Associates in Missoula, and Ian Clark of the Ministry of Alberta Culture will discuss the ways researchers can determine the significance of historic sites. Society oral historian Laurie Mercier, along with Missoula oral historian Diane Sands, will conduct the oral history workshop and explain the intracacies of interviewing, using live demonstration interviews as examples.

On Saturday afternoon one of the concurrent sessions will take up the question of how significant the border between the United States and Canada has been in Indian history. Hugh Dempsey of Glenbow Museum in Calgary, Tom Wessel of Montana State University and Bob van Gunten of the Little Shell Chippewa-Cree will discuss the influence of that international border in the histories of Blood, Blackfeet and Chippewa-Cree cultures. In the other session James Francis, author of a recent study of Fort Benton trade into Canada, Jack Lepley, historian of Fort Benton, and Canadian historian Alex Johnston will discuss the importance of Missouri River freight traffic on the development of northern Montana and southern Alberta.

James Welch, noted poet and novelist, author of The Death of Jim Loney and Winter in the Blood, is the featured speaker of the conference. He will speak at the Saturday evening banquet on Blackfeet Indian culture in Canada and the United States, which is the subject of a manuscript he is currently writing. Paul F. Sharp, President Emeritus of University of Oklahoma and author of one of the classics in western history, Whoop-Up Country, will speak at the Friday luncheon on the comparative histories of western Canada and the United States.

At Saturday's luncheon John C. Ewers, emeritus ethnologist at Smithsonian Institution and an expert on Blackfeet culture, will deliver a slide/lecture on the pictorial history of the Blackfeet people. On Friday night an informal western barbecue is planned—a time when everyone at the conference can relax and socialize—with folk music and dancing as entertainment.

In addition to these events, the Montana Preservation Network will hold a breakfast meeting at the Rainbow Hotel on Friday morning before the conference sessions begin. The Montana Oral History Association plans to hold its annual meeting during the conference, although the precise time has not yet been set.

Be sure to circle the dates on your calendar—October 28-30, 1982. More details on the conference will be forthcoming in the next issue of Montana Post and registration materials will be mailed out to Society members in September.

HERO OF THE R

edited by Gordon Brown

At the approach of the turn of the century, rail travel in Montana had become relatively safe, if not boring. The traveler stepped aboard expecting no more than summer's dust or winter's cold. Such was undoubtedly the case when, on April 9, 1895, Hugh J. Rogan made arrangements to return south to Helena from his stock farm in the Sun River country. Rogan, an Irish immigrant, had arrived in Helena in 1879 and had set up a farm nearby three years later.

Unfortunately for him, events conspired against his safe return on the Montana Central Railway that spring night. He missed the scheduled passenger train to the capital, and decided to wrangle a ride in the caboose of the ill-fated night freight rather than stay in Craig another night.

The excitement began at Silver Station, near Silver City, when the sleeping Rogan was two-thirds of the way home. The 30-car train was backed down an incline and then suddenly halted. As a result, a coupling gave way and the latter third of the train began to roll — caboose first — back towards the north, and down a grade that extended for miles.

The ensuing dramatic events are best described in Rogan's own testimony that appears in Montana Supreme Court Case #957 (Hugh J. Rogan vs. Montana Central Railway Company). The following is reproduced exactly as typed in the Supreme Court transcript (paragraphing added), now housed in the Montana Historical Society Archives.

. . . I am thirty-eight years old. My occupation is farming and vegetable raising, fruit gardening in Prickley Pear Valley, for or four and a half miles from Helena. I have been a resident of that locality since 1879.

When I was coming up from Craig, Montana, on the night of March 9, 1895, I was thrown violently from the seat that I was sitting on in the caboose, that I was laying on resting or sleeping[.] I was right in the pilot with the conductor and the brakeman, and just about four or five miles from Silver I retired and went to sleep. I never knew anything more until I was thrown violently from that seat and lit on something on the floor. As it was real dark in there — there was no light at all — I could not tell what it was.

In fact, I got up immediately and there was something up from the seat that I struck my head against and threw me back against the other side of the car, and the car was just swaying back and forth and I couldn't keep my feet, and I fell over boxes — there was two boxes in there — and went to the side again where I had been laying on the pillow that I had procured and I called out what was the matter, and there was no answer whatever, and I realized then it was a runaway, that the train was running back down the Canyon and I went to the door thinking it would be a good idea to jump off, and in opening the door the door flew back so rapidly that it struck me and threw me back on those boxes, and I lit with my back right on the edge of one of those boxes that was in the caboose.

I got on my feet again and made to go out on the platform, that is, the platform of the car that was going down the canyon, the Prickley Pear Canyon, and I reached along and got down on the lower step and prepared to jump, but it was passing at such a rapid speed that I see death was staring me right in the face if I should ever leap, and then I made up my mind that I would go back to the car and endeavor to stop the train in some way.

I went back and closed the door and when I came in the car I see then that the stove doors were open, and the car was heaving, and the coals came out on the floor. That was the first light I had seen in there. And I opened the door towards the cars which was up the canyon, so that the wind was not striking it. I took the shovel out of the coal box and I shovelled the live coals out of the car for fear that it might take fire and that I would be burned up, and then I thought it would be a good idea to put the brake on, which I did.

I took the shovel handle and twisted the shovel handle in the break [brake] — in the break in the caboose. Then I came into the caboose and went up in what I call the pilot — I don't know whether that is the proper name — it is where the conductor and breakman generally sit so they can see over the train. I went up in the pilot and just when I got in it the train made a curve and threw me back clear out of the pilot right down, and I struck my shoulder right against the opposite side of the car; and I went up again and it threw me again from the pilot — just threw me bodily from that pilot into the caboose.

I went up and endeavored to open the window and hold on — there is a slight window on top that a person I presume can get out of, but I could not get it open, and as the caboose was newly painted and had paint upon it, I just lunged through the window, which I presume the height of the glass is eighteen inches, and went on top of the caboose, and my breath was taken there so terrible that it took me quite a while to gain courage and strength to work on.

I placed my feet against the side and top and worked as carefully as I could to the end of the car on the top, and reached across and got hold of the brake and drew myself onto the first freight car from the caboose, and I watched back down the canyon to see where I could get a straight piece of road and where there would be a curve, and then I raised up on my feet and set the brake, for she was running at such a terrible speed that I looked every minute to be dashed to pieces.

Then I got on my hands and on my knees and as I quit [sic] crept along the foot board that passes along the top of the freight car, I had a hand on each side and a knee on each side and I walked on my hands and knees along that car to the next brake. I reached acrosss from between the two cars right over to the other cars, and got hold of the brake and pulled myself over and set my brake. There had been a good heavy fall of snow that night[,] we were going up the canyon and the cars were all covered with snow. And then that was the second car I put the break on.

UNAWAY TRAIN

R. H. Beckwith photo of Prickly Pear Canyon

I continued just as the first one on my hands and knees — that was on the next car — that was the third brake — then I went on the third car on my hands and knees the same, and then she passed through a big tunnel while I was on top of the car — on top of the third freight car. And I kept on until I set six brakes just that way.

One of the brakes I remember quite well came pretty near throwing me off. I went to turn the brake and the fastening that fastens the brake to the top of the car[;] as I went to turn it gave way, and the brake went right out, and then I thought I was gone between the two cars, but I got set a good hand-holt and recovered myself. I set that brake as good as I could and it was in line.

When I got six brakes set I found the train beginning to slack up, and soon it could go no further, and when the train stopped I came back to the caboose and went back through the window, the pane of glass that I had broken my way out through, and went down in the caboose, and I got tremendous sick and went out to the door and went down out of the caboose, and a few steps down to the creek, and threw myself down by the creek, and threw water on my face and head.

After I did that I came back into the caboose, and there was no lights in the caboose, all was in darkness. On the outside the lamps had all gone out. I took a lantern off the caboose and lit it and for fear of another train coming up the canyon I went down the track 170 yards and built up a kind of rock pile and put this lantern on the top, so that it would be a signal to any train that would come up on that curve.

I then got back into the caboose and remained there for the train, which I think took about two hours and a half for the engine and conductor and brakeman to get back. I think the train ran twenty or twenty-five miles before I succeeded in bringing it to a stand still. Oh, my land, she ran down that canyon at a terrible rate of speed — she must have run sixty miles an hour at least . . . No one was on board those cars with me.

Rogan had saved eighty thousand dollars worth of rolling stock — eleven heavily loaded cars and the caboose — for the railway. And, he had definitely saved his own life: the switch at Craig (only a few miles beyond) had been thrown, to send the runaway cars into the Missouri River. When the returning train crew arrived, they expected to find a total wreck.

For such exemplary actions, one might assume that the Montana Central Railway Company would have given Rogan a financial reward. Such was not the case. Instead, he received a round-trip ticket from Helena to any point between Butte and Havre. Even that was given only in response to Rogan's request for an annual pass. Stung by the apparent ungratefulness of the railroad, Rogan asked for damages for personal injuries. Rebuffed, he solicited legal council, and on February 15, 1896, arguments began in the First Judicial District Court. There Rogan demanded ten thousand dollars and court costs. On the nineteenth of June judgement was entered in accordance with the verdict, when a jury awarded Rogan one thousand dollars.

The Montana Central appealed, but the Montana Supreme Court upheld the lower court's decision. Associate Justice William H. Hunt wrote the unanimous decision that was handed down at the end of February 1898 by Chief Justice William Y. Pemberton, Associate Justice William T. Pigott and Hunt.

Although the award hardly seems just compensation, Rogan's good deed lived on after him. In his obituary four decades later, on January 13, 1936, the Helena Independent referred to him as the hero of the runaway freight train. And so he was, if a necessarily litigious one as well.

Gordon Brown is assistant archivist on the staff of the Montana Historical Society.

Original Governor's Mansion: plans and progress

Like much of Helena, the Original Governor's Mansion has been buttoned up and covered with snow for much of this winter. Inside this impressive home, however, Society staffers have spent the last few months busily preparing for the annual spring flood — of visitors.

Mary Hoffschwelle, the Mansion Curator, took advantage of January through March to continue research on the history of the house and its occupants. The result of Mary's work will be a report assessing documentary evidence about the Mansion, evaluating its present state of restoration, and outlining its future restoration, refurnishing and reinterpretation. Ms. Hoffschwelle's project, which is the first attempt to establish a complete historical record and interpretive plan for the Mansion, will include a full catalog of the Mansion's present furnishings. Researchers can use the report in the Society's Library beginning this fall.

While this behind-the-scenes effort continues, the Original Governor's Mansion's on-site interpretive staff is also gearing up for another busy spring and summer season. Guide Nan Joy can attest to the Mansion's popularity with school groups as a place where their state history classes come alive. To accommodate larger crowds this summer, the Mansion schedule will expand to include Sundays, with regular hours of noon to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday. These hours will be in effect from June 1st through August.

Mansion docents have been busy too, preparing for the tourist season. While attending April training sessions organized by Hoffschwelle, these volunteer guides discussed themes and organization for their tours and participated in demonstration tours through the house. "Sessions like these," said Ms. Hoffschwelle, "allow docents to extend their knowledge of the house by absorbing new historical data and new information about the furnishings. In addition, their practicing of tours on each other enables them to develop and refine their interpretive methods and techniques."

In the fund-raising department, the Advisory Restoration Board has been active as well. Board members planned the annual Carriage House Sale for Saturday, June 5, at the Mansion. As in the past, generous local citizens provided a great variety of items — ranging from furniture to kitchenware — for the sale. Proceeds from the Carriage House Sale are earmarked for restoration and renovation projects at the Mansion.

So, if you have not yet visited the Original Governor's Mansion, think of us when making spring and summer travel plans. If you have been on a tour recently, why not come back and see and hear the results of our winter of work? For further information, call the Montana Historical Society at 449-2694.

We need Montana county maps— can you add to the collection?

Have you been looking for an old railroad station? Or perhaps the location of a creek for your water rights? Often the best place to find this information is on old county maps. As the Library's map-cataloging project passed the half-way mark, cataloger Kathie Otto noticed one obvious trend: the Map Collection is sorely lacking in Montana county maps.

Besides railroad and creek sites, researchers find county maps useful for designating old roads and trails, ghost towns, and abandoned mines. One of the most frequent uses is locating old homesteads, because before you can obtain homestead records, you need the legal description of the homestead. Unfortunately, the lack of county maps makes answering such questions difficult.

Recently the Map Collection received a real boost when many Montana chambers of commerce responded to a plea for current local maps — and we greatly appreciate their generosity. Now we would like to send out an added plea to any of you who might have old county maps around the house, in the attic, or even in the barn. Please donate them, so future Montanans can make use of the information the maps contain. The date is not important; last year's map can be just as useful to a researcher as is one 20 or 100 years old. To donate maps, or for information, please contact the Library here at the Society.

Butte Historical Society announces planned conference on city's history

The Butte Historical Society, with support from the Montana Committee for the Humanities, Montana Power Company, and the Anaconda Company, will sponsor a conference, September 24-26, on the history of Butte at the turn of the century. Titled "Butte: The Urban Frontier," the conference will hold most of its sessions at Butte High School, with banquet meals at the War Bonnet Inn.

The conference will begin Friday evening at the War Bonnet with a banquet and lectures by geologist Hugh Dresser of Montana Tech, urban historian Elliott West of University of Arkansas, and Montana historian Michael P. Malone of Montana State University and the author of the award-winning Battle for Butte.

On Saturday, the conference will move to Butte High where speakers will address the history of mining in Butte, the history of mining technology, the movement to halt air pollution at the turn of the century, and the development of Butte's business district. In the afternoon, conference panels will take up the history of labor and politics in Butte, with speakers lecturing on such colorful figures as Burton K. Wheeler, Lewis Duncan and William Dunne.

The conference will resume on Sunday morning with several walking tours of Butte's historic districts, including mining structures, notable business blocks and Butte's historically colorful residential neighborhoods. Butte's cultural life, particularly as seen in writings about the city, will be the focus of sessions on Sunday afternoon.

It is planned that papers presented at the conference will be published in the first of a new semi-annual publication by the Butte Historical Society, with support from a grant from the Atlantic-Richfield Foundation. Brochures on the conference will be mailed out in August. For information on the conference contact: Butte Historical Society, P.O. Box 3913, Butte 59701.

Statewide guide to museums is in print

From November through February, Wanda Walker, coordinator of our museums assessment project, contacted 151 museums, art centers, and historical associations throughout Montana. The result of this telephone canvass is the first complete listing of all such groups, published in directory form. The assessment project was funded by the Montana Committee for the Humanities.

Directory entries include current addresses, telephone numbers, descriptions of collection strengths and needs, and other information. Produced in a 5½ x 8" binder, A Guide to Montana Museums, Historical Organizations, and Art Centers may be ordered for $6.50 (postage is included) from Jennifer Thompson, Curator of Education, here at the Society.

Some of the needs outlined by various groups canvassed were addressed in workshops given by the Montana Historical Society this spring at Havre, Helena, and Deer Lodge. Although funding was not available for continuing the workshop series at present, Thompson is hopeful that we will be able to offer more such workshops this fall.

MHS guides Capitol tours

The Historical Society has assumed management of tours of the Montana Capitol. One of four trained guides will be greeting visitors at the Rotunda information desk, beginning June 15, for tours at 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Each tour will last about forty-five minutes.

This schedule will be in effect seven days a week through September 12.

Larger groups should make advance arrangements with the Society. An ideal maximum group size is 40 people, according to Curator of Education Jennifer Thompson.

She announces that by fall, curriculum packets will be available on free loan to teachers planning a Capitol visit. These slide units will prepare the students for their tour.

Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past
Presents of the Past

PRESENCE OF THE PAST: Appropriate, Curious, and Rare is the major exhibit on view till October 1, showing visitors the many types of items in our collections — and how they're used in the study of history. Pictured clockwise, from top right: At the entrance, a portrait of Granville Stuart, pioneer and a founder of the Society, who hoped for a place where, he said, the "appropriate, curious and rare will be preserved." Opening night guests stand beside a complex, functional model of a three-level underground mine, built in 1895. Reconstruction of a 1930s Haynes photo and curio shop at the Canyon Hotel, Yellowstone National Park, complete with original showcases. Dan Tomberlin, Curator of Exhibits, readies a panel of military and personal handguns and rifles. Curator Steve Germann and Registrar Susan Near place a portrait among a diverse group of paintings from our collection.

Haynes
Haynes
Haynes

¶ from the Editor's File

¶ Courting and vehicles, usually associated with the advent of the automobile, has a longer history than we might suspect. Keeping both hands on the wheel was a problem in territorial Montana as this little item from the Bozeman Avant Courier in 1887 testifies.

> On Monday last, while Mr. John Luce and a lady friend were taking a ride and admiring the beauties of nature, the cutter accidentally capsized and "spilled" the occupants thereof into the snow. As the snow was soft and pleasant as a bed of roses, the pleasure seekers were not hurt, but the horses, breaking away, came up Main street at a frightful rate. As they passed the postoffice the horses turned to the right, ran up the side walk and came very near running over Mr. Norton's two little girls. Turning to the left, they ran up against a telephone pole, broke the neckyoke and whiffle-trees, which freed the horses from the cutter. Fortunately the damage to horses and cutter was light, but had the horses run ten feet farther on the side walk, Mr. Norton's little girls would have been run over and perhaps killed. We would suggest to our young men, who are in the habit of riding out with their girls, and who find it difficult to manipulate their fiery steeds with one hand, to pass the reins to the girls — it may save trouble and, possibly serious accidents.

¶ Vivian A. Paladin, for many years editor of Montana and now our editor emerita, has received another honor. Viv has been chosen by the National Academy of Western Art to be one of three judges at NAWA's annual show at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, June 11-12, 1982. Along with Edward J. Fraughton, sculptor from Jordan, Utah, and Paul Rossi of Santa Fe and former director of the Gilcrease Institute in Tulsa, Vivian will choose the gold- and silver-medal winners in oil, watercolor and sculpture categories.

¶ Researchers interested in the creation and growth of the Great Northern Railroad, the opening of the Northwest, homestead agriculture, lumbering, and dozens of other topics dealing with the economic development of the Northwest will welcome news that the James J. Hill (1838-1916) Papers are open to use at the James Jerome Hill Reference Library in St. Paul. Closed to all but a few researchers since 1916, the collection contains 420 linear feet of records. James J. Hill's letterpress books, which will remain closed for now, will soon be available once they are microfilmed. A three-roll microfilmed index to the Hill papers is available through interlibrary loan. Contact: James Jerome Hill Reference Library, 4th & Market Sts., St. Paul, Minnesota 55102.

¶ Visitors to Billings, Montana, this summer should plan to take in an important exhibit at the Yellowstone Art Center. Running from May 9 to August 1, 1982, "Montana Landscape: One Hundred Years" is a major show of 62 pieces by 32 artists, presenting views of the Montana landscape that were created between the 1830s and the 1930s. The exhibition, which is funded by the Montana Television Network, is part of this year's Billings Centennial celebration.

Virginia Heidenreich, former Curator of Education at the Yellowstone Art Center, and C. Adrian Heidenreich, Assoc. Prof. of Native American Studies at Eastern Montana College, put the exhibition together. They spent over 18 months gathering artwork from 22 different institutions and private collections. The majority of the pieces are oils or watercolors and over half of them have not been previously exhibited in Montana. Included are the works of Charles Russell, George Catlin, Karl Weimar, John Mix Stanley, Thomas Moran, Maynard Dixon, Joseph Henry Sharp, and many, many more. A 52-page fully illustrated exhibition catalog is available for $6 at the exhibit or from: Yellowstone Art Center, 401 N. 27th St., Billings 59101.

Spike Van Cleve
1912-1982

"Your words are like a warm and engaging letter, addressed to me alone. I am sure a great many Montanans and westerners will feel the same way."

So writes A. B. Guthrie, Jr., in an introduction to the new book by Spike Van Cleve, an introduction written as if a letter to the book's author. It expresses a sentiment with which many Society members will certainly agree.

Thus they will mourn the death, on April 16, of Paul Ledyard Van Cleve III — Spike to his many friends.

Last year, Society members voted Spike's 1977 book, Forty Years' Gatherin's, into the top twenty of their 100 Best Books on Montana. His new book, completed just before his death and published by Lowell Press late this May, is a companion volume of humorous and thoughtful essays on many topics: his father, horses, rodeo, winter, hospitals, and more.

The Harvard-educated dude rancher introduced and welcomed thousands to Montana over the years. He served as president of both the Dude Ranchers Association and the Northern Quarter Horse Breeders' Association, and was a Director and trustee of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame at the time of his death.

BACK ISSUES

SPECIAL OFFER — $2.50 each, any 5 for $9.50, any 10 for $18.00, postpaid

Circle your choices and return this coupon and your check to Jane Smilie, Montana Historical Society, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59620.

Spr 62
Wtr 65
Wtr 70
Spr 70
Sum 70
Aut 71
Wtr 72
Spr 72
Sum 72
Aut 72
Wtr 73
Spr 73
Sum 73
Aut 73
Wtr 74
Spr 74
Sum 74
Aut 74
Wtr 75
Spr 75
Sum 75
Wtr 76
Spr 76
Sum 76
Wtr 77
Spr 77
Sum 77
Aut 77
Wtr 78
Spr 78

(Only these issues are available at this special price)

Other back issues are available at prices from $3 to $75. Write for a complete listing.

MONTANA
THE MAGAZINE OF WESTERN HISTORY

NAME

ADDRESS

CITY STATE ZIP

Montana State Library
930 E. Lyndale
Documents Section
Helena, MT 59620

Second Class
Postage Paid at
Helena, Mont.
59601 and
Additional
Mailing Offices

DEADHEAD

Postmaster: Send address changes to Montana Historical Society, Capitol Station, Helena, MT 59620

ARTCRAFT PRINTERS

S
978.6
H6m
Nov.-Dec.
1981

PLEASE RETURN

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

MONTANA POST
® REGISTERED TRADEMARK

SHELVED WITH PERIODICALS

Vol. 19 No. 4 Official Newsletter of the Montana Historical Society November-December 1981

Three eras of communication in Montana will appear in "Presence of the Past." Resting atop a 1930s Dillon hotel switchboard is a bound copy of the first territorial newspaper (along with microfilm for modern use). Below, on desk surface, is the 1810 letter that was the first sent from Montana.

Presents of the Past
Presence of the Past

STATE DOCUMENTS COLLECTION
DEC 28 1981
MONTANA STATE LIBRARY
930 E Lyndale Ave.
Helena, Montana 59601

To some visitors who are not Society members, the Montana Historical Society is strictly a museum where they can view artifacts and art portraying our territorial and state history. Now the museum department itself—one of the six service departments that make up the Society staff—plans to rectify the problem through a major exhibit beginning in mid-January.

"Presence of the Past: Appropriate, Curious & Rare" will display seldom-seen items selected from the holdings of the Museum, Library, Archives and Photo Archives, and Historic Preservation, and explain the interpretive functions of Publications and Education.

The display, designed by Exhibits Curator Dan Tomberlin, will be in our Poindexter Gallery through September 1982, replacing the changing art shows of recent years.

Its purpose, says Director Robert Archibald, is to give the general public "a better idea of what the Society does in preserving evidence of the past and making it available to the public." Because of the items to be displayed, he adds, "visitors will be entertained while being educated about what we do here and how we go about it."

The exhibit demonstrates, in part, the Society's increased emphasis upon historical displays, and upon letting Montanans know the various kinds of information and services we offer them.

Choosing to display the "appropriate, curious and rare" allows the Museum staff to include some seldom-seen artifacts that interpretation plans and space limitations prevent from being permanently on view. Certainly one of the most curious is James H. Bradley's bullet-torn copy of the Montana Historical Society Contributions.

Because of his support of the Society, Bradley had received a presentation copy of the book, from Wilbur Fisk Sanders, when it was published in 1876. The following year, serving as a lieutenant in the 7th Infantry, Bradley was killed at the Big Hole Battle of the Nez Perce War. Years later, Granville Stuart found Bradley's copy of Contributions—bullet-pierced and battered—in a Butte bookstore and returned it to the Society. Of course, how the book was damaged is, and will continue to be, a historical mystery.

Other curiosities include examples of Victorian hair-jewelry and the remains of a cigarette smoked by Charles M. Russell in 1913 and saved by his hostess.

Items representing the rare in our collections will include the handwritten 1889 Montana state constitution, and what is probably the first letter sent from Montana. In April 1810, Pierre Menard wrote in French to his brother-in-law and employer Pierre Chouteau, reporting a Blackfeet attack on the Missouri Fur Company's small post at the Three Forks of the Missouri.

Another rarity is an Edward Curtis orotone print, copyright 1904, entitled "The Vanishing Race." It is a photographic positive printed on glass and backed by a gold wash to create subtle shading.

Among the appropriate is a copy of the first newspaper printed in Montana Territory: the August 27, 1864, Montana Post from Virginia City. Along with the actual issue will be the microfilm version that is available for use in our library.

Both one-of-a-kind, hand-drawn, and printed maps show the exploration and development of Montana through territorial and statehood days. Modern books exemplify research aids offered here for both scholarly and personal research.

A period room and architectural details from historic buildings will add to the visitor's sense of what living in Montana's proud young towns was like.

